At the meeting of the Engineering Society held during the last college hour November 4, the new club drafted a constitution. The society is represented in CAB by Richard Enos.

The society expects to receive a charter from the CAB in about two weeks, according to Paul Allen Penn, president of the group.

All student engineers who possess an Associated Student card are eligible to join the society.

Non-Veterans Desiring Christmas Post Office Work Should File Applications In Placement Office

Non-veterans who desire to work for the San Francisco Post Office during the Christmas vacation were given some good news by Joseph A. Amori, placement director at the college, last week.

He announced after consultation with John Fixa, postmaster of the San Francisco Post Office, that there was a strong possibility that a number of jobs will be opened to them after the last veteran registration this week.

The jobs open are for carriers or truck drivers. The pay is $1.65 per hour with a 10 per cent differential for night shifts.

All non-veterans interested in post office work should file their applications immediately in the placement office, Room S118, to receive consideration. Applicants must be San Francisco residents, 18 years of age, have no police records, and be physically able to carry the responsibilities of the job.

There are still a few openings for veterans in Air Mail service. All veterans interested in this specialized type of work were requested to file their applications with Amori immediately.

The Civilian Personnel Office, 5th Air Force Base Group, Travis Air Force Base, in a letter to Amori has announced there is a critical shortage of engineers working for the U. S. Air Force.

There is a need for Architectural, Civil, Electrical, Electronic, Mechanical and Structural Engineers in Alaska, Bermuda, Okinawa, Tripoli, Newfoundland, French Morocco, Saudi Arabia, Guam and Japan. Starting salaries range from $5440 a year to $8000 a year.

Employees are required to stay overseas for from one to two years. In many areas 10 to 25 per cent differential salaries are paid. Housing and transportation are furnished by the government and sometimes dependents travel with the employee.

Men's Glee Club To Sing In Concert Sunday

Members of the college Men's Glee Club will give a concert at the Lutheran Church of Our Saviour Sunday, November 20, according to Robert Morton, the club's director.

An assortment of spiritual and semi-religious songs have been selected to be sung, he said. The half-hour presentation of music by the club will be featured on the program which was planned by the members of the church's Women's Guild.

Recently elected Men's Glee Club officers for this semester are Everett Lee, president; Joseph Cauchi, librarian, and Al Camelieri, Club Activities Board representative.

3800 Request Counselling Dates

Thirty-eight hundred students have already applied for counselling appointments, which may still be made in S160, according to Waddington Blair, counselor here.

Although students are urged to keep their final appointments for the planing of spring semester programs, they may feel free to arrange private ones to discuss other personal matters any time they deem it necessary, Blair added.

If a student is still perplexed as to which major to choose, Blair declared, he should consult his counsellor about the testing services available to him.

These aptitude tests are given on a voluntary basis and the results are kept confidential in the counselling files.

"Testing can be helpful for a student who is confused, and the results may give objective information so that he can clearly decide in which field to study," Thomas Nesbitt, tester here, said recently.

In order for a student to take such a test, he must first see his counselor so that a suitable battery of tests can be selected.

General types of examinations offered include those that specialize in intelligence, scholastic, special abilities, and personality and interest inventories.

Students interested in taking these tests may inquire for additional information from their individual counsellors or with Nesbitt in Room S142.

Scholarship Donated To Women Students

A scholarship of $100 has been donated by the Women's Council of the San Francisco Real Estate Board and will be presented to women here in the field of real estate, according to Mary Golding, dean of women here.

Amelia Keane, president of the Keane Realty Company, presented a check for this amount to Miss Golding at a luncheon last week. The council hopes to make this an annual presentation, with the first award to be made at the end of the spring semester.

Kirkland's Suds In Your Eye Has Final Performances Here Friday And Saturday Nights

Final performances of the little theater production of Suds In Your Eye will be held this Friday and Saturday, November 25 and 26. Curtain time for the three-act comedy by Jack Kirkland is 8:30 p.m. Leading roles in the play are portrayed by Peggy Powell as Mrs. Feeley, the Irish woman who owns the junkyard where the action takes place. She encourages Edwina Moquin, Miss Tinkham, and Bev Bowling, Mrs. Rasmussen, to take a definite liking to beer. Mel Rasmussen, as Chinatown, plays the rambunctious young Chinese boy who has been adopted by Mrs. Feeley.

Others in the cast are Gail Spiegelman, Larry Covtello, Harry Boress, Francis Swanson, Nofie McClanahan, Carole Waugh, Aloysious Peabody, Lois Roberts, Ben Roberts, Stephanie Koppe, Ed Moran, Kay Kinsey, Jim Nichols, Gunnar Back, Carol Bristow and Berte Rieklefs.

Sets for the production were done by Ferradj Gilanfar and Ron Fromm, architecture students at the college. The junkyard effect has been carried into the theater proper. Unique features of the set are a complete wall made of beer bottles and many unusual props, outstanding of which is an eight-foot-tall wooden Indian.

Admission to the play is by Associated Student card. General admission is $1.00.

Production staff includes King Harrington, Toni Mannina, Ritch Barulich, Louis Bamberger, Ed Burbridge, Don Judge and Stan Willie.

Anderson Delegate To White House Education Meets

Oscar Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management here, will be one of 98 California delegates invited by Governor Goodwin J. Knight to represent the state at a national conference on the discussion of educational problems, scheduled to start in Washington, D. C., next Monday, November 28.

Also attending the White House conference will be such prominent San Francisco educators as Dr. Harold Spears, Superintendent of Public Schools; Bert Levit, member of the Board of Education; and Adrian Falk, former member of the board.

A California conference, held in October, was presided over by Governor Knight and had an attendance of 3,000 persons. During this conference, delegates to represent this state were selected.

Two thousands persons will gather from all sections of the United States to attempt to settle such present educational problems as the shortage of teachers and schools and the need for an increase of school maintenance and operation finances.

State representatives will be separated into groups of 10 or 15, selected on the basis of geography and background interests, to allow for a difference of points of views to be established. At the conclusion of the conference, each group will send a report to a screening committee in Washington.

The White House conference was requested by President Eisenhower early this year. Major transportation expenses of the delegates will be paid by the federal government.

Finance Officer Puts Freeze On Dramatics Fund

Because dramatics funds were frozen at the student bank last Thursday, Michael J. Griffin, drama director here, asked the Student Council for help last week.

Announcing that he was forced to use his own money to finance part of Suds In Your Eye, a play being staged at the college, Griffin said that he was informed by the bank holding the funds that Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities, had notified them not to release the money.

In the absence of Hillsman and Finance Chairman Joyce Weaver, who is in charge of the budget, Student Council asked Griffin to wait for action on the matter. The legal power to act on the issue was denied council because a quorum of 10 members was not present.

Attributing the trouble to a misunderstanding, Earl Cabrinha, Club Activities Board chairman, stated, "There may be a mixup at the bank between the Drama Club and the Drama Department."

Drama department receives a budget each semester from the Associated Students. They were granted $1,000 this semester.

The cost of drama productions depends on this budget, Griffin said.

Coach's Statement Apparently Nixes Ram-Menlo Game

By Al Moss

Any chance for a post-season football game between the high-scoring Ram eleven and the unbeaten Menlo team was apparently squelched last week with an announcement by Bo Molenda, Menlo coach, that it was the "Rose Bowl or nothing" for his Coast Conference champions.

In a comment to Al Palacio, two-year college writer for the San Francisco Examiner, Molenda went on record against any post-season contest with the exception of the Junior Rose Bowl game, to be played in Pasadena on December 10.

Menlo, with only a tie with Hartnell marring their record, is considered by some as having an outside chance for the Pasadena bid. The chance is remote, however, as Southern California boasts several unbeaten, untied teams that have met stronger opposition. The high-scoring Compton club of Coach Tay Brown appears to have the inside track, with the Tartars meeting their victims in the same Hartnell squad that tied Menlo.

A Ram-Menlo game, talked about all season as the two teams built up their fine records, was further boosted by an editorial appearing in The Guardsman last week. The two teams had met in previous years, and with the local rivalry angle present, and the fine games that have taken place in the past, the game was considered a natural.

Members of this college's athletic department have expressed regret that the Rams did not meet the Oaks this year, and preliminary questions seemed to indicate that they were in favor of an attempt to arrange such a post-season game.

The college attempted several times to schedule Menlo this year, but the Oaks apparently preferred to limit their competition to the five-team Coast Conference, generally accepted by observers as a much weaker league than the Big Eight, and to a few outside games. The Oaks' most impressive victories during their now completed season were a win over Monterey Peninsula, the second-best team in their own league, and a drubbing of Vallejo, the third-place team in the Golden Valley League.

Election Committee Is Announced

Selection in part of the Associated Student Election Committee for this semester was announced last week by Bill Chisum, Election Commissioner here.

Included on the committee are Ed Emig, Joan Finneran, Paul Hacker, Art Hardy, Ken Henry, Al Murray, Sherwin Simmons, Hal Stein and Ray Ward.

Regulations and campaign procedures were also announced by Chisum. First, in regard to posters in the two main buildings: each candidate is allowed three posters in the science building and two in Cloud Hall. Posters may be no larger than 12 by 18 inches, and all posters must be approved by the Election Committee between January 2 and 10.

Petitions for office may be obtained in the dean of men's office, S149, and the Associated Student office, S169, beginning next Monday, November 28. The AS card number of each candidate must be confirmed by Chisum. Ten signatures by AS members are needed to make the petitions valid.

A nominal fee of $1.50 must be deposited in the student bank in the student union building, for janitorial services in cleaning up after the elections and mailing of sample ballots.

Campaign expenditures may not exceed $21.50. An itemized list of past, present and proposed expenditures must be given to the Election Commissioner by Monday, January 9.

Petitions must be filed in Dean Ralph Hillsman's office, S127, between November 28 and December 16.

San Mateo Asks Megaphone Back

Missing a megaphone, the College of San Mateo notified this college last week and asked for the return of the borrowed property or an equivalent sum of cash, Dean Woods, Associated Student president here, said recently.

Pat White, secretary of the AS at San Mateo, stated that the megaphone was not returned after the half-time festivities, in a football game with the college there on November 5.

Blaming the loss on a group of students from this college, Miss White said the act could be attributed to the high spirits of the occasion. She pointed out that students from that college returned all property that they had borrowed.

Thanksgiving

Settler, Indian Peace Conference Responsible For Turkey Day Feasts

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

Once a long time ago, or so it appears to us, a bunch of white settlers and Indians stopped fighting and decided to have some kind of a banquet to celebrate the cease of their hostilities.

They went out together and hunted some wild birds to cook and eat. This took quite some doing because things were pretty rough that winter and going hungry was not unusual.

Yet, it seems that they were lucky and finally got the big dinner prepared. They all sat down to eat. Then someone got the thought, don't know for certain if it was an Indian or settler who first suggested it but it was a good idea anyway, that maybe thanks should be given for all the food that was laden on their once bare tables.

So they all formed a circle. The settlers, queerly-dressed intruders to this wild and unknown but fertile land, who were seeking something not yet tasted by their countrymen at home—freedom—stood next to the savage Indians who sought friendship and aid in combatting their foe, famine.

These intrepid white strangers had bonded together to express their gratefulness that a burning ideal had not been allowed to dwindle because of a terrible winter. Their crisis was over.

Now, some three centuries later, we still celebrate a thanksgiving. We give thanks that our crisis has not yet started.

Final Screening Of Candidates For Shrine East-West Queen Held Today In Women's Gymnasium

Screenings for the Shrine East-West Queen have been in operation for the past two days and the third and final screenings scheduled at 1 p.m. today in the women's gymnasium.

Judging these preliminaries were three students, Dean Woods, Associated Student president; Lee Carol Lombard, AS vice-president, and Bill Cirimele, Associated Men Student president. Faculty judges were Mary F. Golding, dean of women; Mrs. Laurine Bergin, chairman of the Women's Physical Education department, and Dr. Joseph M. Jacobsen, sponsor of the International Relations Club.

At the first screening the original field of candidates was cut down to 50. Yesterday it was cut still further to 25 hopefuls. Today at the final screening only 10 will survive the operation from which the five finalists, one of whom will be the queen, will be selected by a special committee.

Final judges will be the honorable Raymond J. Arata, San Francisco Municipal Court Justice; J. Eugene McAteer, member of the Board of Supervisors; Bill Coffman, managing director of the Shrine East-West Football Committee; Jack Shaw, Associated sportscaster; Miss Nerice Fugate, fashion coordinator for the House of Charni; Miss Edith Marsh, fashion coordinator for I. Magnin's; and Miss Muriel Sinclair, fashion training director for Joseph Magnin's.

Announcement of the Shrine Queen will be made at the Coronation Ball Friday night, December 9, at the Marine Memorial Club. The entire 11th floor of the building has been set aside for the affair.

The ball is only one of the many functions at which the queen will make an appearance. Also listed on her busy schedule is the Kickoff Dinner in the Civic Auditorium December 20, where she will be officially received by the Shriners, several nationally televised appearances, a visit to the Shrine Hospital during Christmas week; and the Shrine game December 31, over which she will reign.

Through two separate acts of the Student Council there will be awarded to the queen a perpetual trophy plus individual trophies for the queen and her attendants which they will be allowed to keep.

A Cappella Choir Prepares Annual Christmas Concert

Preparations are currently being made by the A Cappella Choir, the Men's Glee Club and the college band for the 21st annual Christmas concert to be presented, admission free, on Thursday, December 15, according to Flossita Badger, choir director here.

A Cappella Choir's presentation of "the kings' and shepherds' scene" from the one-act television opera, Amahl And The Night Visitors, by Menotti, will be featured. The concert includes a traditional processional with the choir singing Adeste Fideles.

Trevor Pendray, tenor and president of the choir, will sing a solo selection from The Messiah by Handel. He has previously performed at the Community Theater in Honolulu with tenor leads in South Pacific and Blossom Time.

Lost In The Night, a Finnish folk song, and The Joyous Christmas Song, a French folk song, have also been selected for the concert, Miss Badger said, adding that other soloists and musical arrangements are scheduled to be chosen this week.

A prelude of Christmas carols will be given by the college band under the direction of Meyer M. Cahn. The Men's Glee Club, directed by Robert Morton, will present a balanced selection of appropriate songs.

Prior to the Christmas Concert, the A Cappella Choir has scheduled a half-hour of selected Christmas and secular music to be given at The Emporium early in December. On Wednesday, December 14, they will present a musical program similar to the traditional Christmas Concert at the Century Club.

The annual Christmas Concert has been a traditional event at the college ever since it was first organized in 1935. "This concert is one of the highlights of the music department's activities for this year," Miss Badger said.

Scholarship Applications Due Monday

Competition among women students here for the two Denman Scholarships to be awarded this year will begin next Monday, November 28, which is the deadline for applications to be turned in to Mary Golding, dean of women.

Competition is open to women graduates of San Francisco public high schools who have completed at least 15 units of work here with a "B" average or better. Letters of application should give a complete picture of the applicant's scholarships, need and activities in school and in the community, Dean Golding said.

Each scholarship is worth $125, and will probably be awarded at Associated Women Student affair on January 8, where Barbara Batmale, president of the AWS, and her officers are planning to honor the outstanding women of the college.

The two Denman scholarships have been presented each year since 1939 by Superior Court Judge William Denman and his sister, Mary Cheatham, in memory of their father, James Denman, superintendent of San Francisco public schools from 1860 to 1861 and from 1868 to 1875.

First Shrine East-West Queen Will Be College Ambassador

WHAT could easily become one of the most important events in the college's history is now in the preliminary stages, and if the choosing of a Queen for the Shrine East-West football game is as successful as it should be, everyone concerned will benefit.

Never in its approximately 25 year history has "Football's Finest Hour" seen fit to name a queen, but this year, after long discussion, City College was honored by being selected to choose the regent.

From a completely selfish standpoint, this honor can be a great prestige builder for the college. Pasadena City College has for several years chosen the Rose Bowl Queen and her attendants, and the resulting national prominence and prestige has helped build Pasadena into a widely recognized college. Without this honor, Pasadena would never have attained its present fame.

City College of San Francisco can do the same thing. The Queen can be one of the finest ambassadors for the college that is possible. With nation-wide television and newsreel coverage and other publicity, the college, through the Queen, can be vaulted into national prominence.

There is no doubt that the publicity for the college will be beneficial. A perfect example of a beautiful ambassador is Lee Meriwether, who went from the campus to Atlantic City to become Miss America of 1955, and was the best publicity that the college could have had. There is another angle to the Queen selection, however, that cannot be ignored.

It would be the height of naivete to say that the East-West game needs a Queen to publicize it. After a reasonably modest beginning, the contest has grown to the point where the 63,000 seats of Kezar Stadium are accounted for long before any Queen could be selected.

A lovely queen and four equally attractive Princesses can do a world of good, we believe. The game certainly needs no selling, nor does it need any help in the color department, but there are social functions and colorful pre-game activities that are added to immeasurably by the presence of a beautiful regent. The Rose Bowl, for instance, would be a sellout without any sort of Queen, but the feminine touch has become part of the game and certainly would not be dispensed with now.

The Shrine game is truly Football's Finest Hour. The Shrine hospital, supported largely by funds from the game, is without a doubt one of the finest institutions of its type in the world, and there are certainly few causes more deserving of support.

It is a great honor for the college, and for the girls chosen to reign, to be connected with this worthy cause. Certainly the luster of the event will rub off, in small part, on the college, and perhaps we can, in our small way, add to the game. We urge everyone on campus to support this event, the choosing of the Queen and the game and all it stands for, to the utmost, and help to make the college a part of "Football's Finest Hour."

The Spectator — Mussolini Private Life—As Told By His Masseuse

By Don Ball

(Editor's note: Gina Malafortunata has just been released from a prison hospital where she spent several years undergoing treatment for an undisclosed disease. This is her story—roughly translated.)

DON'T let anybody fool you. Mussolini was a very kind and gracious man. As his masseuse for ten years, I, probably more than anyone else in this world, am in a position to judge this.

Everyday it was my job to come in and give Il Duce a rub-down; and a nicer down to rub you could never find. Benny, as his friends called him, was not at all overweight as he was pictured. The poor little man was the victim of an unfriendly press and horrible photography. Believe me—I should know.

Ben had only one failing: his infatuation with that nasty Clara Petacci. She just wasn't the right kind of girl for dear Benny. Why, would you believe it—she made him fix his own spaghetti in the morning—besides that she was in terrible physical shape. I shouldn't be unkind though, because she certainly got hers, but then so did Benny.

Actually Mussolini would be alive today if it wasn't for that ugly little German paperhanger. Ben didn't want to fight those wars—the poor little guy was frightened every time a bomb went off within ten feet of him.

What Benny wanted to do most was help the people. He wanted to restore the glory that was Rome's. Given the time he would have made the old coliseum gates of yesteryears look like the Mickey Mouse Club. Why he had plans for a genuine quicksand pit (with pythons around it, yet) which would have made Hollywood absolutely green with envy.

The greatest love Benny had was his love of the arts, especially dancing. He was so enamoured with the dance that he had his own private company which would come up to his room at night for special invitational performances. Lucky indeed was the man who was numbered among the select group of afficianados who viewed the entertaining and educational showings.

Photography also had a soft spot in his heart. The walls of his bed chambers were covered with many candid shots, including an exquisite candid series depicting his dancers in action.

Though it is not generally known, Benny was quite a sportsman. He particularly delighted in shooting. His skill with firearms was uncanny. In fact, he was considered the fastest man on the draw west of the Tiber. The love of pistol shooting may be ascribed to Benny's practical nature.

Another unknown thing about Il Duce was his love of children. In spite of his busy schedule, Benny managed to enrich the world to the tune of 27 children.

It was this love of young people that made Benny establish his short-lived Bambino Battalion—the group of 1500 young stalwarts who successfully held off an entire pair of American Army cooks during the battle of the little valley of Don Camillo.

The reason I come forward at this time is my desire to see a great man accorded his proper place in history. Il Duce has been the victim of many malicious lies, but when the truth is known he will go down in history with Benedict Arnold, Aaron Burr and the infamous renaissance plotter, Victor Borgia.

Shots At Ramdom

By Dolores Stoffers

IN THIS day and age of advanced sciences and pizzarias, even a kindergartener needn't be precocious to be aware of the gourmet's social code; but Glenn Allen, a student here, apparently never heard of this.

It seems Allen and friends recently invaded a large local pizzaria, and when the steaming platters were served, he asked how one went about eating pizza. Taken back, and slightly disgusted, friend answered, "Ya pick it up in yer hands, but ya don't eat the crust."

So, Allen spent the next half hour twisting his head and mouth into weird contortions, and finally emerged waving one pizza crust, clean, intact.

Friends tried to get him to throw it under the table, so that owners would not see the great sacrilege, but Glenn boy was no fool. "Ya can't kid me."

ONE STUDENT here considers that she has paid for the right of not bussing her dishes from the cafeteria for at least two months. Walked around table for a short conversation, leaving half-devoured meal and 50 cents in change on tray, she claims, when cafeteria worker grabbed tray muttering something about thanks for the tip, and ran to sanctuary in washing area, while irate student pursued.

THE LITTLE THEATER group was in a slight tizzy trying to round up a wooden cigar store-type Indian, which isn't easy to find nowadays, even in cigar stores. In most tobacco shops, it was found, the only Indians hanging around aren't wooden, and when they are, the proprietors won't let them go.

The prop was needed for the group's production of Suds In Your Eye, and time was running out, so Ted and Dorothy Friend of the Call-Bulletin came to the rescue. Combed the Bay Area for said Indian, finally came up with one from an East Bay dollar-for-dollar car lot.

FOR THE GREATER part of this semester, the campus has been plagued with intermittent roars and growls that make Phelan Avenue sound like the Belmont speedway on motorcycle night. Sport car enthusiasts point with aloof detachment to the Bertone-bodied MG whose owner went too wild with the accessories.

Pledges Give Special Thanks

Thursday is the traditional day of thanks. Some show their gratitude for the free, bountiful, and beautiful nation in which they live. But one can picture 150 City Collegians who will be thankful because their week of hell has ended.

Sunday afternoon was the beginning of pledging for the sorority neophytes. Instructions were given pertaining to dress, speech and manner.

The normal agenda for the week followed this schedule: 7:30 a.m. sharp, each pledge must check in at the cafeteria; between the hours of 8 and 9 a.m., pledges must laugh, buss dishes, sing, talk, smile, carry books, furnish and light cigarettes, and above all, attend classes.

Pledges can expect to attend a "joint" meeting-party of their sorority and a fraternity during the week.

In the Spring '53 semester, a Help Week was conducted to coincide with the traditional pledge week. During this time, pledges were expected to maintain the upkeep of the campus and sell Associated Student cards. The physical setup of this year's pledging seems to interfere with that idea.

A successful Help Week calls for complete cooperation of both sororities and fraternities. This semester, men's Hell Week precedes women's; also, three days are not enough to start a successful cleanup campaign.

Nature Removes Sun Rays In Cafeteria

Glowing sunrises from east of the student union cafeteria had been giving recent early risers who breakfast there bad mornings, according to a few complaining students on the campus.

Five huge lattices of 15 windows form the eastern wall of the new cafeteria. During the morning, between 8 and 9 a.m., these same glass-covered apertures projected powerful glaring rays. These gleams were causing unpleasantness to students who at this time are usually trying to concentrate on unfinished assignments.

As a result of these grievances, complaints came in from all quarters of the college, accompanied by elaborate schemes to remedy that scintillating difficulty. Some must have sacrificed long hours in drawing plans for the removal of the sun from the heavens.

Arrangements for the installation of large blinds to cover the windows might be considered, according to Wendell Muntz, acting chairman of the hotel and restaurant department.

Apparently, nature, who started the problem in the first place, removed the predicament in her usual dynamic manner. Cloudy, cold mornings are forecast for the rest of the year.

Cafeteria Appearance Ires H&R

THIS SCENE DEPICTS the main reason why the Club Activities Board set up a student committee for the purpose of keeping the cafeteria clean. The hotel and restaurant division and cafeteria workers have constantly set forth complaints this semester directed at the students of the college and their failure to heed the requests of the division to clear the tables when finished eating. H&R division reported that it has been necessary to employ extra help because of the situation.—Guardsman photo by Richard Brooks

Yuletide Employment Spirit

Dreamers Envision Work Fantasies And Fallacies

By Bob Kauth

Money, money and who will pay the most money—that is, for the least amount of work?

Work, work and who wants to work—that is, for the least amount of money?

This is what many (all of) prospective employees and employers are respectively dreaming to themselves as they solicit the placement office here, Room 188 in the science building, in search of the figment of their imaginations to meet the anticipated Christmas season employment boom.

As the job-seekers tramp about in search of some foolish employer, they are undoubtedly thinking: How many coffee breaks; will there be plenty of overtime with time and a half, double time, double time and a half, and triple time pay; when is lunch; are there members of the opposite gender working at this place with whom one can pass away the idle moments, minutes and maybe hours?

It has been said (by someone of some renown) that . . . "it is better to steal than to starve." No doubt, many of the job-hunters are secretly wondering just which or what is better or not better than work.

On the other hand, the potential employer is skeptical about the capabilities of the job-hunting introverts with meek personalities. And the self-assured extroverts may lead the interviewer to think, "Do they really need the job, or are they haphazardly looking because of pressure applied by father, mother or an employed spouse?

Students seeking part time employment as a combination assistant manager, dishwasher and official office pencil-sharpener are sure to be asked and must be able to answer: Are they married, single or divorced; do they smoke; have they had any pencil-sharpening experience; what is their religious preference; are they looking for work?

The trend may be toward the trained, but with the increased number of jobs available during the Yuletide season, work can be found for the gullible individual, with a pleasing personality, who is willing to put in a little more than a day's work for a day's wages.

And pray tell, foolish philanthropist, is this then the spirit of Christmas?

Enrollment Of Student Nurses Numbers 200

Five hospitals are now sending to the college's nurse training program the same number of student nurses as seven hospitals did before, about 200, according to Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction.

It has been the tradition here for Mary's Help, Franklin, Children's, Mount Zion, St. Francis, French and St. Luke's Hospitals to send student nurses for additional training in preparation for registered nursing. Last May Children's Hospital discontinued this practice and in July Franklin followed suit.

In spite of this, the number of student nurses here this fall is about 200. When all seven hospitals were sending nurses the number was about 200. Thus, only five hospitals still send the same number. If this number should increase, it may produce a little strain.

The trend toward more participation in nursing education at the college is a result of the desire of two-year colleges all over the country to help meet the need for more nurses and on the part of the student nurses to utilize every educational resource that can help them as practicing nurses.

The main objective of both the hospitals and the colleges is, of course, the preparation of graduates for registered nursing. Another objective would be giving those who want further education the advantage of high quality instruction.

When they are enrolled for a semester or more, the student-nurses have the same opportunities as any other student to participate in college policies and student government.

USF Soccer Team Overwhelms Rams, 8-2, To Capture Top Play-Off Spot; College Finishes In Third Place

By Walt Sigg

Scoring eight goals in an overwhelming display of team play and individual efforts, the University of San Francisco Dons defeated the Ram soccer team with the convincing score of 8-2 last Saturday at rain drenched Balboa Park Stadium.

This loss shattered the Rams' play-off hopes and moved them into third place in the league standings behind the undefeated Dons and the once defeated University of California Bears. UC and USF will meet in a play-off game which will decide the championship. All indications point towards a USF victory which would give the Dons the title for the eighth consecutive year.

In last Saturday's game the Rams could offer only token resistance as the ball controlling Dons demonstrated, despite the muddy field, coordinated team play coupled with effective individual dribbling. Joe Njiku-Obi, center forward and All-American prospect, tallied five goals for the Dons, and inside left Joe Ignoffo kept pace with three goals to hand the Rams their worst defeat in recent years. Antonio Quiteno and Mike Ballbrera scored one goal each to save the Rams from a shut out. Among the Ram veterans it is the consensus of opinion that the Dons have the strongest team of recent years and should be a formidable San Francisco representative in a possible contest for the national title.

After six weeks of play and going into the play-offs the NCIC standings are:

USF	6	0	0	35	8
California	5	1	0	21	9
CCSF	4	2	0	22	17

Basketball Team In Menlo Opener Here December 2

After three weeks of practice, the Ram cagers are ready to start an ambitious eight-game pre-season schedule, starting with a home game against Menlo College on Friday, December 2, at 3:30 p.m. in the men's gymnasium.

The following night, the Rams will play the USF freshman team at Kezar Pavilion starting at 6 p.m.

The basketball squad has been practicing since November 1, but it has been observed that the club has been late in rising to form.

Although Coach Sid Phelan thinks he has some good material he intimated that the team's progress has been slow to date. "So far they haven't been running the play patterns as well as I thought they would," Phelan said. However, he thinks that they will hit their stride during the holiday campaign.

Asked if he had picked his first five, Phelan said, "There's no definite first string as yet."

Phelan has been experimenting with several team combinations to date. One team has Norman King at the center slot, Clarence Grider and Fred Wilkinson at forwards, and Al Mock and Walt Morgan at guards.

He also has a quintet featuring George Campbell at center, King and Grider at the forward spots, and Mock and Al Martino playing the guard posts.

Phelan expects a lot of rebound work from King, Grider, and Leroy Thomas. John Rudometkin looks like the playmaker.

As announced by Phelan, the following is the varsity squad for the practice tilts. Centers: George Campbell, Reggie Jones and King; Forwards: Ron Booth, Dan Curley, Grider, John Lynch, Don Rothfuss, Jim Shelton, Wilkinson and Bill Wooten; Guards: Don Brooks, Jim Bryant, Rich DeConti, Doug Hom, Martino, Mock, Morgan, Jim O'Connor, Rudometkin and Lou Signer. Footballers Les Barros, John Panagakis, Ron Taylor and Thomas are expected to report for duty after the grid season ends.

All records made at a baseball stadium aren't made by the players. At Milwaukee on August 29, 1954, a crowd slightly under 46,000 ate 90,000 hot dogs, 30,000 ice cream bars and 16,000 boxes of popcorn.

New Intramural Leagues Begin

Two new leagues entered the intramural scene recently with the hotel and restaurant division and an independent league starting basketball.

The H&R section started its league on October 26. The section is split into four semesters and the results of the first games saw the 4th semester defeating the 1st, 33-25, and the 2nd beating the 3rd, 49-24.

Games are scheduled for every Wednesday night in the men's gymnasium, with a final elimination occurring on January 4.

For the first time an independent league has been started here, consisting of eight clubs. The league started with two games on November 15.

Teams in the league are the Newman, Engineer, Chinese, Filipino, Masonic, Hawaiian and International Clubs and Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity. Anyone interested in signing up should report to Ralph Hillsman in the dean of Student Activities office, Room S127.

Georgia Tech edged Cumberland in 1916 in the highest scoring collegiate game ever played, a 222-0 count.

Ramblings — Effective Line Play Key To Grid Success

By Mike Berger

SUPERIOR line charge in football begets ball control, and the outstanding work of the Ram forward wall this season has certainly been the making of the strong college records.

When the line is outplaying the opposition, that opposition isn't going to move the ball very well. This means that the club with the best line is not only going to bottle up the attack of the foe, but is going to go with the hide. In every game but one in 1955, the Rams have had ball control through superior line play. The one exception was the Stockton debacle, the results of which don't have to be retold.

The best example of ball control yet exhibited by the Ram team was in the recent West Contra Costa encounter, in which the Comets ran only 40 plays in the game as compared with the total of 90 offensive thrusts by the college.

Yards gained rushing and passing, first downs, number of pass completions and even the final score are statistics which are more often than not quite deceiving. A glance at the number of offensive plays by each team, however, nearly always is an accurate gauge as to how the game went.

* * *

A major change in the use of football personnel is in the offing . . . in the pro ranks, at least. Coach George Halas of the Chicago Bears has hit upon something regarding line play in the NFL that really makes sense. Since the men in the middle of the defensive line, namely the middle guard and the two tackles, are the biggest (remember Les Bingaman?), it just naturally follows, says Halas, to put your biggest behemoths in the middle of the offensive line. In other words, the 250-pounders now found at the tackle slots will soon be moved to guard positions. Stan Jones and Kline Gilbert, two former tackles, were the men Halas shifted to the new spot in the line, and needless to say the Bear forward seven is currently ripping all opposition apart.

With the split T being so popular in the college level of football, the off tackle shots are just as important as they ever were, but in pro ball the key blocking is done by the center and two guards, both in opening holes and in pass protection.

Les Barros, Ram Quarterback, Ends Successful Seasons

By Joe Callas

Probably the greatest quarterback in the annals of City College of San Francisco football history will play his last game in a Ram uniform this Friday at Kezar Stadium.

When Les Barros trots onto the stadium turf, he will mark finis to a fabulous two years in which he reigned over all other Big Eight Conference quarterbacks. In his freshman year at this college, the Ram signal caller gained All-Conference laurels as he led Coach Grover Klemmer's second place club to a fine 7-1-1 record.

He was named All-Conference over as fine an array of quarterbacks as the league has ever had. One of the finer signal callers, Junior Reynosa, present first stringer for College of Pacific, took a back seat to Barros when Reynosa was performing for Stockton College last year.

This season, Barros has proved to be one of the top, if not the top two-year quarterback in Northern California. He is the major candidate for All-League honors for his second consecutive season.

Before he started tossing touchdown passes for the Rams, Barros gained grid prominence at Polytechnic High School where he was San Francisco's finest quarterback in 1953, and named to the All-City team that year. He led the Parrots to the championship and came to this college with a great record which he established at Poly.

Touchdown passes continued to fly from Barros' passing arm for two Ram seasons, and in the West Contra Costa game two weeks ago, Barros personally accounted for four of the San Francisco tallies and led the Rams to their 31-13 victory over the Comets.

Although he has been contacted by some four-year colleges, Barros is undecided as to which he will attend. At the present, he ranks as one of the Pacific Coast's top quarterbacks, major four-year colleges included.

Though his career as a Ram ends Friday, Barros has two more years of collegiate competition left, and he is sure to gain added fame at the next college that is fortunate enough to have Barros engineering their grid team.

Harriers Prepared For Big Eight Meet

Today is the date of the Big Eight All-Conference meet, the meet that the cross-country team members have been preparing for all season. It will be held at Santa Rosa's course at 3:30 p.m.

The meet will be primarily a three-way battle between Modesto, Santa Rosa, and City College. Ray Hale and Don Cowles will lead Modesto against Hal Kuha of Santa Rosa in the feature battle of the afternoon. Henry Stroughter will captain the college's team of Ray Batz, Bill Tillson, Manuel Stimpson, and Talbert Webb.

Coach Ray Burkhead's hopes were dampened when Lloyd Costello, one of the top three runners from the college, dropped out, and Stroughter injured his shoulder. Stroughter is ready for today's run.

Gridders Belt Bearcubs, 24-6, But Finish Second In Big Eight As Stockton Wins Title By Tie

By Mike Berger

Whatever doubts may have been housed as to whether or not a Ram is a good mudder were dispelled on a sloppy Balboa High School "track" last Friday afternoon, as the City College Ram ran away from Santa Rosa, 24-6.

The victory reciprocated for last year's Bearcub 14-12 win, which knocked the Rams out of the Big Eight title; but once again in 1955 a single loss stands between City College and the conference championship. Stockton clinched first place on Friday with a 13-13 deadlock against Oakland. The Mustangs finished with a 6-0-1 Big Eight mark, while the second place Rams won 6 and lost one, a 24-6 decision to Stockton.

A sparse crowd that gained in stature after the high school classes were dismissed saw Grover Klemmer's charges dominate play throughout the game.

Center Bill Canihan intercepted his second pass of the season in the first quarter on the Santa Rosa 20 to set up the initial scoring play, as Rudy Lopez burst through tackle for three yards and the TD. The 6-0 count stood at halftime.

Halfback Sandy Malnick, who scampered for 81 yards in 18 carries, was the running star of the tilt, and scored the second touchdown in the latter stages of the third quarter by plunging one yard for the tally. The effort capped a 14 play, 55 yard march to a 12-0 lead.

Early in the final period, the Rams moved 45 yards in two shots to score again when Al Chatman broke over tackle, seemed to be stopped for an instant, but then squirted away for a 32-yard TD gallop.

With the game already tucked away, the college eleven moved 45 yards again, this time in six plays, to count the clincher. Les Barros climaxed a surprisingly successful passing day by tossing nine yards to end LeRoy Thomas for the last score after a fake that completely fooled the Bearcubs.

Santa Rosa pushed across its lone TD in the closing moments when Charlie McDonald ran 46 yards to the one, and scored on the next play.

Malnick was quite successful in running the 'Cub tackles, and this was due largely to some fine blocking by fullback Dick Mannini, who was leading most of these plays. As evidenced by the stats, the entire Ram line did a magnicent job, both offensively and defensively, all day.

Rams Conclude Season Against Southland Rival

Climaxing one of the most successful seasons in the history of the college, the Ram gridders meet their strong southern rivals, Los Angeles City College, this Friday at Kezar Stadium. Kickoff is 2 p.m.

This will be the 18th meeting between the two big city teams. Both have won eight of the previous games with the 1953 tilt resulting in a 19-19 tie. The Cubs haven't beaten the Rams since 1950 when they rolled up a 21-6 victory.

Coming into the San Francisco tilt, the Cubs have a 5-3-1 record, but this doesn't indicate the power of the Los Angeles team, as the three losses sustained by them have been at the hands of some of Southern California's strongest two-year clubs, Taft, Pasadena and Compton. Coach Steve Pritko has one of the strongest backfields the Cubs have had in years. Halfback George Ruddy is the top running threat. Ruddy was named All-Catholic prep while at Mt. Carmel High School under Pritko.

Also in the southlanders' backfield are halfback Dave Kanae and fullback Clarence Lofton. Quarterback Don Buford, a 5-5, 140 pound mite from Dorsey High School in Los Angeles, lends the Cub offense, which hasn't been held scoreless this year.

The Rams will be up against one of the heaviest lines they've faced all year. Pivotman Rubin McCollum is a 215 pound letterman from the 1954 club. Tackles are Larry Moncrell, a 225 pounder, and 27-year-old John Worthington, a 6-0, 245 pounder. Both are lettermen. Guards Mel Edwards and Alan Minzey are inexperienced middle men, and will have their hands full playing opposite the Rams' great guards, Willie Hudson and Stan Keith.

The local gridders will be out to duplicate their 12-0 victory over the Cubs last year. The Rams will start almost the same backfield that helped defeat Los Angeles last season. Los Barros, 1954 All-Conference quarterback and a strong candidate for the same honors this year, leads the strong Ram offensive that has shown brilliance and power in all their games but the Stockton tilt. Halfback Shirlee McCormick has proven to be one of the Big Eight's strongest runners, and will lead the Ram ground attack this Friday.

End Dick Piazza has made a strong bid for All-Conference honors with great all-around play from his flank position, and with Tom Kiefer, Bill Canihan, Jack Derian, and Ron Taylor in the Ram line, the Los Angeles linemen, although outweighing their opposition, will have a hard time handling San Francisco's forward wall.

Regular football play ends with the Los Angeles tilt, and the Rams, with only a slight chance of landing a game with undefeated Menlo College, should go down in the records as one of the greatest teams in the college's history.

The only original major league baseball team that has never won a World Series is the Philadelphia Phillies.

WAA Members Holding Elections This Week

Students belonging to the Women's Athletic Association are voting this week to change their title to Recreation Association of City College.

The WAA council members are the officers of the group and the managers of all the sports, and have been working very hard in order to get the constitution changed. The only way they can get it changed is to have two-thirds of the WAA members approve, according to Lenc Johnson, the group's adviser.

On November 8, WAA had a badminton playday with Balboa and Galileo High Schools. There were 28 students present, City College had 12 members and won 12 sets, Balboa had 8 members and won 8 sets, and Galileo

CAB Warns Clubs, Organizations Of Charter Deadline

Thirteen organizations have failed to submit constitutions to the Club Activities Board constitution reviewing committee, it was revealed at the November 10 CAB meeting.

According to the CAB parliamentarian Lawrence Lowe, the clubs will be subject to CAB disciplinary action if the constitutions are not submitted within two CAB meeting days after having received warning from the board.

Clubs and organizations that have failed to submit a constitution include the Canterbury Club, Hawaiian Club, Collegiate Christian Fellowship, Men's Glee Club, A Cappella Choir, Associated Women Students, International Relations Club, Lambda Phi, Phi Rho Pi, Phi Beta Delta, Alpha Sigma Delta and Zeta Phi Sigma.

Alpha Phi Omega fraternity and the Newman Club charters were accepted by the committee just before the first deadline. The truant organizations are scheduled to receive warnings before the next CAB meeting.

Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities and faculty adviser to the CAB, stated that "If the club is at all worthwhile, it will meet the CAB requirements."

Flower Shop Students Decorate Campus

Most of the floral decorations that have appeared on the campus recently have been done by the flower shop, a division of Ornamental Horticulture.

Harry Nelson, floriculture division instructor here, said last week that the decorations in the cafeteria for a reception last week in honor of Dr. Harold Spears, Superintendent of Schools, had been arranged by the Flower Shop.

The shop is a regular course at the college, and has just been resumed after being discontinued for two years.

Besides floral decorations, students are taught how to handle the business angle of the profession.

Ramporium Funds Aid AS Finance

A considerable portion of the Associated Student budget is derived from the Ramporium bookstore sales, according to Dick Main, Ramporium manager.

Of this semester's AS budget of $24,000, approximately $10,000 will come from Ramporium sales, he revealed.

A wide selection of textbooks is carried by the store, along with pocket literature, physical education gear, official rings and pins of the college, stationery, and hundreds of other items.

The policy of the store is to handle anything that will help students to improve their grades or that seems to be helpful in any particular study.

Main is in favor of moving the book store from its present location to a larger and more accessible location, preferably near Cloud Hall. He feels that self-service facilities should also be a must.

Brady Warns Of Penalties Which Will Be Invoked In Event Of Any Class Skipping Before Christmas

Students are warned about taking a week off from their classes here to work during the Christmas holidays, according to John J. Brady, coordinator of Student Welfare.

These would not be regarded as emergency absences, but rather as "cuts."

The attendance problem here usually becomes acute every Fall semester. This is partly due to the fact that many students believe that by saving their emergency absences (they are allowed as many in each class as there are units) during the beginning of the semester, they may later use them during the holiday season.

Students should stop to consider that a valid reason for the taking of an emergency absence may spring up at any time. If a student had already exhausted his attendance privilege, he would be forced then to drop the course, receiving a recorded "F" in that class and losing more than half a semester's work, Brady said.

First mid-term grades have been checked by the student welfare coordinator's office.

There were 572 students here whose grade point average fell below the .5 standard. These have been interviewed by Edwin Browne, dean of men, and Brady. Most of the students were merely warned of their present deficiencies and urged to bring up their grades or face disqualification. Some had remarkably poor grades and were asked to take leaves of absence.

Seventy-nine students received failing grades in physical education. "Misunderstandings regarding class enrollment caused many of these failures," Brady explained, "but students without legitimate excuses must make up these absences or leave the college."

Approximately 45 students were failing in all their courses by the first mid-term period. They were advised to take leaves of absence.

Students who refuse to take leaves of absence when requested to do so by the deans will have their registrations cancelled and will receive failing grades in all courses. Re-entrance permission, in certain cases, may be granted the following semester, Brady said.

This same procedure will also be followed in dealing with the academic and attendance records for the second mid-term period, which will end on December 2.

Former Students Now Holding High Positions In Art

Because of the professional type of art training offered students at the college, many students are now holding high positions in the field of professional art production.

Graduates of the college who are successful in this field are many.

An artist whose drawings are "front page copy" right now is Earle Tholander, staff artist on the San Francisco Examiner. Tholander is currently making on-the-spot drawings of important happenings of the Abbott trial along with sketches of the personalities involved. Many of his paintings in water color have received recognition in some of the San Francisco portrait galleries.

Professional status was reached by George Albertus as advertising artist for Roos Brothers, followed by his position as illustrating artist for Patterson, Sullivan and Hall Art Service along with a few years of teaching at the Academy of Advertising Art. Albertus is currently in New York and reports of real success there.

Another art graduate, Sidney Winchester, is now art director for the George Lithograph Company, while still two others, Joseph Addeago and Felice Quast, are design artists for the American Can Company and Granat Brothers Jewelers.

William Eckert, of the advertising art department, said recently, "It has been a great pleasure to have been associated with many fine, talented students and to have played a small part in helping them realize their ambitions. When I find them solidly entrenched in the professional art field there is a satisfaction equalled only by seeing my own son established in the professional field of his choice."

Anderson Named To Pistol Team

Announcement that Bill Anderson will fill the vacancy on the five-man Campus Police Force pistol team brought forth the fact that arrangements are still pending for a tournament with San Jose State College.

After agreeing to the meet, explained Campus Police Chief Bob Dagitz, San Jose seems reluctant to name a specific date for the match. Original arrangements were made by letter more than a month ago, and called for the meet to take place on a day to be named later.

In addition to Anderson, Dagitz, Lee Hargus, and John Burns are members of the pistol team.

Future plans of the team include starting an inter-department meet which will enable other members of the Campus Police to practice and compete with each other.

Club Cavalcade: Hell Week Ends Tonight For Fall Women Pledges

WHEN the clock strikes 12 tonight, the campus will again settle down after the hectic days of men's and women's pledge week. With the coming of the holidays, clubs are planning for many social activities.

Newly organized on campus is the Cha Cha Cha Club. First meeting of the group was held last Friday during college hour. Adviser is Franklin Sewell.

Delta Psi Omega held a business meeting Sunday at the home of Joyce Cody to discuss plans for its Christmas dinner.

Zeta Chi will meet jointly with Alpha Sigma Delta tonight at the home of Marlee Dumas.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity held its first business meeting with the pledges on last Wednesday night. A car wash was held on Saturday.

Kappa Phi sorority held a joint last night with Beta Phi Beta.

The next meeting of Collegiate Christian Fellowship will be on December 9 during college hour. Students are invited to hear Howard Schoon, the club's sponsor, speak in C221.

The Christian Science organization holds testimonial meetings on the first and third Thursdays and the second and fourth Wednesdays of every month at 3:15 p.m. at 124 Eastwood Drive.

Thanksgiving, Exams Cancel College Hours

Thanksgiving holidays, tomorrow and Friday, November 25, have cancelled the college hour for this week, according to the official college hour schedule.

College hour for the following week, on Friday, December 2, will also be curtailed, as the second mid-term examination period has been scheduled to take place that week. The Golden Slippers dance, sponsored by Beta Phi Beta fraternity, which was to have been held Friday, December 2, has also been cancelled.

The next college hour is scheduled to be held Friday, December 9. A rally is tentatively listed for that date.

Air Stewardess Film Shown Dec. 7 In Cloud Hall

All college women, especially those interested in careers as stewardesses, are invited to the movie and lecture presented by Irene Benz, graduate stewardess with United Airlines on Wednesday, December 7, in Room 246, Cloud Hall at 11 a.m.

There are no requirements for attendance at this program, which will consist of the airline stewardess training film, Scottie Wins Her Wings, and a lecture by Miss Benz. Transportation majors are especially invited, according to Joseph A. Amori, placement director here.

Prior to the lecture and film, Miss Benz will be available for personal interviews, occupational guidance and consultations. All women interested in talking with Miss Benz should report to the placement office at 11 a.m. on this day. Women interested in advance information on this career program should consult Amori in the placement office, Room 188, science building.

United Airlines is the preferred airline for graduates from the college. Since 1946, approximately 25 graduates have been successful airline stewardesses with United. Pat Nelson, Helen Haynie, Muriel Schumacher, Kay Thomson, and Pat Smith are a few of the City College graduates who are now flying on the DC-7's from coast to coast.

Student Leaders Talk At Lincoln

A new counselling technique was tried on an experimental basis last week when three students here spoke in the Lincoln High School auditorium, according to Howard Schoon, counsellor.

The officers, who gave speeches explaining and discussing the differences between high school and college, with special emphasis on the aspects of organizations and sports and social activities here, were Vic Hebert, Tookie Badillo and Joyce Weaver.

"Prime purpose of the talks was to encourage the high school sophomores to think in terms of college and to acquaint them with the advantages offered there," Schoon said.

According to a recent Iowa State study, in which a consensus of 1,078 high school seniors was taken, 79 per cent of the students had planned to go to college before their senior year, and 27 per cent had already chosen a specific college before the completion of their senior year.

Schoon, who is in charge of counselling relations with other schools here, believes that it would be extremely advantageous to contact high school students still in their sophomore year and better their understanding of the college scene.

Ushering Passes For Symphonies Available

Ushering passes to San Francisco opera and symphony performances are available to women students of the college now, according to Mary Golding, dean of women.

There are passes for six women for each of the performances, starting tomorrow evening, November 24. They should be applied for a week in advance in Miss Golding's office, S150.

The performances will take place in the Opera House, Marines' Memorial Auditorium and Civic Auditorium.

Parsis in India and Gebers of Iran are followers of religions derived from the ancient teachings of Zoroaster, also known as Zarathustra.

Soph Ball King, Queen Petitions Due December 16

Petitions for the king and queen of the sophomore ball, which will be held on Saturday, January 14, will be available here early in December and are currently required to be submitted by Friday, December 16, Bob Johnson, sophomore president, announced today.

"Clubs, fraternities and sororities here are expected each to sponsor a candidate," Johnson said, "but their backing is not necessary in order to enter the contest." Any interested and qualified sophomore (satisfactory completion of 30 units of college work) can participate. Jim Buckley was recently appointed as the chairman of the king-queen contest.

Antoinette Mannina, publicity chairman for sophomore week, and Joyce Weaver, dance bid chairman, have suggested that men and women Associated Student members be allowed one vote apiece to only be cast respectively for the king or queen.

"This procedure will more than likely be followed," Johnson said. "It will eliminate any partisan voting by fraternities and sororities for their own candidates. Thus the king and queen will be elected more on the basis of their popularities."

Buckley recently suggested that the king-queen balloting be held in conjunction with the AS elections, tentatively planned to be held on Wednesday, January 11, and Thursday, January 12. "This would increase student participation in both of the activities," Johnson explained.

WAC Movie Features College Hour Films

Beyond Tomorrow, a movie about the Women's Army Corps, will highlight a program of special interest to women students during the college film series Friday, December 9, college hour, according to Madison Devlin, instructor in audio-visual aids.

Starting time for the program is 10:40 a.m. in Room S136. Despite the rather obvious feminine interest aim of the film, everyone is welcome to come and acquaint himself with the benefits of a women's army career.

Oregon State To Host Model UN

Oregon State College will host the Model United Nations next year, according to Thomas Dutcher, faculty sponsor of Phi Eo Pi, debate society here. It will be the second year that the college has participated in the event.

The organization, composed of volunteer students, will be recruited during the Fall semester. This is necessary because of the preparation needed to attend the meeting. Vic Hebert is the student coordinator working with Dutcher.

At the conference, each college attending assumes the role of a country belonging to the United Nations. They learn all of the problems of that nation and try to solve the troubles of current issue.

AWS Holds Tea Tomorrow

Model Show Has Christmas Holly Daze As Theme

By Marion Chesder

Christmas Holly Daze, the theme chosen for this semester's Associated Women Student tea and fashion show, will be presented tomorrow in Cloud Hall, according to Barbara Batmale, president of the AWS. Fashions from the Mademoiselle Shop of Stonestown will be exhibited at 2:30 p.m. in the reading room. Marjean Bell, from John Robert Powers' Charm School, is commentator for the affair.

Shelley Bolanos and Juanita Hall, AWS corresponding and recording secretaries respectively, are co-chairmen of the invitations committee. This group has invited senior women students, assistant principals, head counsellors, and senior sponsors from 19 high schools, and all women students of the college to attend the affair. Included in the list of invitations to the San Francisco public schools are Balboa, Galileo, Jefferson, Lincoln, Lowell, Mission, Polytechnic, and Washington.

Private schools included are Immaculate Conception, Sacred Heart Convent, Mercy, Presentation, Notre Dame, St. Rose, St. Peter, Notre Dame des Victories, St. John, St. Paul and St. Vincent.

Kay Griffin, AWS vice-president, named the models chosen by her committee. They are: Barbara Arriani, non-sorority; Janice Boudriew, Agnes Chu, Marlee Dumas, Zeta Chi; Miss Hall, Lee Carol Lombard, Phi Beta Rho; Barbara Raffaelli, Dianne Scott, Delta Psi; Marilyn Sicotte, Kappa Phi; Carole Segrest, Rose Thurmon, Alpha Lambda Chi; and Gail Zeigler, Theta Tau. A three-piece combo auditioned by the entertainment committee, under the leadership of Noreen Phillips will play during the show.

Christmas fashions will be shown by means of a cycle, which will begin with sportswear, casual wear, and informal clothes that the college woman might wear during the holidays. It will be concluded with "back - to - school" clothes.

Tea will be served in the student union building following the exhibition of fashions. A committee supervised by Joyce Weaver has planned the food for this semesterly event.

The colors chosen by the decorations committee chairmen are ice blue, white, gold, and silver. Holly leaves will be arranged by students from the Flower Shop, a section of the college's horticulture division. Papier mache ornaments, snowflakes, stars, and spirals will decorate the fashion ramp.

Included on the AWS board are Patty Harris, treasurer; Marcelle Chou, historian; Louise von Emster, in charge of registration; Darlene Reitz, hostess; Miss Sicotte, programs; Barbara Poister, set-up; Joan Musatem, cleanup; Dee Noodlman and Toni Mannina, publicity; Eleanor Leeper, serving; Jean Vachon and Marion Cheader, decorations.

Redwood Ram, College Mascot, Will Soon Move To Different Site

The Redwood Ram, who has been the mascot of the college for nearly 15 years, will soon have a new home on the lawn in front of Cloud Hall overlooking the site of the proposed college stadium near the gymnasiums.

The 12,000 pound figure will be placed on a specially designed pedestal provided by the engineering department.

"An estimated cost of two-hundred dollars will be needed to pay for the relocation of the Ram," Dean Woods, Associated Student president, stated.

Club Activities Board President Earl Cabrinha asked that "all clubs and organizations join the fund raising drive since the CAB member organizations will have to pay for having the Ram moved." Cabrinha stated the reason for this was "The college and administration are too tied up in other things at present to have the Ram moved."

Ed Emig, president of Alpha Phi Omega, and Emory LeBonville, president of Alpha Sigma Delta, has been investigating the moving of the Ram since the beginning of the semester. Emig and LeBonville, both CAB representatives, together stated that the new site was chosen to prevent possible anti-Ram "War Parties" from splattering paint on the well-known college figure.

First Annual Coronation Ball At Marines' Memorial Club To Set Stage For Presentation

Presentation of the queen of the Shrine East-West game and her court will climax the first annual Coronation Ball this Friday night in the Marines' Memorial Club. The entire 11th floor of the club has been reserved for the dance. This includes a refreshment room and a lounge as well as a spacious ballroom.

Jack Fina and his orchestra will provide music for the dance, which will begin at 9 p.m. and end three hours later.

The ball will mark the first official appearance of the queen and her entourage. On December 20 they will be officially presented to the Shriners at their Kickoff Dinner. The queen will also be seen on several nationally televised programs during the holiday season. A visit by the queen to the Shrine Hospital during Christmas week is also planned.

Tickets for the Associated Student sponsored ball are currently available in several locations about the campus. In the science building both Dean Mary Golding and Dean Edwin C. Browne have tickets as does the AS office, S169. Tickets may also be purchased at the student bank in the student union building.

Price of the tickets ranges from $3 for couples presenting an AS card to $5 for couples without a card.

Located at the southwest corner of Sutter and Mason, the Marines' Memorial Club's address is 609 Sutter.

Yuletide Concert Features Choir For College Hour

Two major events are scheduled for the college hour this Friday, December 9, according to Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities here.

There will be a Yuletide concert featuring the A Cappella Choir and the Men's Glee Club of the college singing Christmas carols. Weather permitting, the rally will be held in the courtyard located in back of the science building; otherwise, it may take place either in the men's gymnasium or the auditorium, Hillsman said.

A lecture by John Ford of the British Consulate on the topic, Britain And The World Danger Spots, sponsored by Alpha Gamma Sigma Honor Society here, is also to take place during the regularly scheduled college hour. The informal conference will be in Room S100.

Don Jensen, counsellor here and sponsor of the honor society, extended an invitation to students to attend, adding, "This meeting should prove especially interesting to students concerned about present problems on foreign affairs because Mr. Ford will answer questions from the audience at the conclusion of his lecture."

21st Christmas Concert Dec. 15 At Riordan High

Riordan High School has been chosen as the site of the college's 21st annual Christmas concert, to be presented at 8 p.m. on Thursday, December 15, Flossita Badger, A Cappella Choir director, announced recently.

Presented by the music department and sponsored by the Associated Students and the Faculty Association, the traditional concert is admission free.

Officially opening the concert, the college band, directed by Meyer M. Cahn, will play a prelude of Christmas Carols. Under the direction of Robert Morton, the Men's Glee Club will sing a balanced group of appropriate Yuletide songs.

"Solos from some A Cappella Choir members will be presented," Miss Badger said. The soloists currently scheduled to sing are Louise von Emster, soprano and concert manager of the choir; Vivian Foster, soprano; Ray Hillis, base; Jane Ikehara, soprano; Trevor Pendray, tenor and choir president; Barbara Raffaelli, soprano; and Edward Williams, baritone and choir property manager.

Included among the choir's scheduled numbers are O, Holy Night, Beautiful Saviour, Lost In The Night, The Joyous Christmas Song, and Rise Up Shepherds And Follow. Accompaniments for the entire program will be played by Aileen Fealy Mullaney.

Rodolfo Castillo, advertising and commercial art student here last semester, designed the Christmas program cover. Janet Mouill and Dave Watkins, advertising and commercial art students, are currently working on a show case display for the concert, under the supervision of William Eckert, art instructor.

Prior to the traditional concert, A Cappella Choir will sing a few Christmas songs at the Associated Women Student tea and fashion show tomorrow at 3 p.m.

"A full schedule of on and off campus concerts has already been made for the 1956 spring semester," Miss Badger revealed, adding that auditioning of next semester choir members is presently being held. Appointments for auditions can be made by consulting Miss Badger in her office, which is located in Building 1 on the west campus.

Decrease In Parking Facilities Presents Large Future Problem

IN RECENT YEARS, the facilities of City College have grown and improved to a point where they now rank among the finest in the country. One problem, however, is far from solved. Parking facilities are woefully lacking on or near the campus, and it appears now as if things will get worse before they get better.

At the beginning of this semester, with more automobiles than ever being parked here by the students, only the abandoned west campus was available for student parking. Someone then commandeered the area between Phelan Avenue and the student union building, but the first heavy rain eliminated that unpaved area. Parking on other side streets, leading into Phelan or near the college, has been curtailed for various reasons.

Thus only the west campus is left, and that will soon be converted to a reservoir with no parking facilities. Where the some 1,500 cars that are now transportation for the college's students will go is a difficult question to answer.

Actually the problem is not limited to the students. Faculty parking facilities are little better, despite the circle behind Cloud Hall that is reserved for the instructors.

As it now stands, there is only the circle, the west campus and a small area behind the student union building to accommodate about 1,600 student and faculty automobiles. The major part of this will be lost to the college in the very near future. There are parking spaces on Ocean and Phelan Avenues, and the side streets, but these are sufficient in neither number nor practicality.

Obviously, something must be done, and soon. The master plan for the college calls for a parking area to be constructed in the vicinity of Hurley Village, the housing area to the north of the campus. This, however, depends on bond issues and may be delayed for some time.

We can offer only minor suggestions. Paving of the muddy area west of the student union will help, but the primary aim must be a new and sufficiently big parking lot, a lot than can be constructed only with city funds.

The college definitely needs more buildings to meet the growing student population, and a fine arts building, among others, is part of the master plan. To keep up with this progressive movement the parking facilities must be included in this building plan for the future, and we urge the use of at least part of any future funds made available for expansion for the proper parking areas that are needed for a growing college.

Ram Gridders Rate Congratulations

WE WOULD LIKE to take this opportunity to add our small praise and congratulations to the accolades being given the college's 1955 football team, one of the best in Ram history.

The ever-elusive bowl bid escaped the gridders again, but there is certainly no doubt in the minds of Ram fans that their team was one of the finest in the state and probably among the best in the nation.

It was a great team under great coaches and it compiled a great record. Having had the great pleasure of working with them, we would like to add our congratulations and thanks to as fine a group of men as ever donned cleats and pads and stepped on a football field.

Highly Original Modes Of Dress Show Inventiveness Of Students At College

Watery Calling Card Announces Winter's Arrival

By Bob O'Brien

Last week winter announced its arrival by sending a watery calling card. Once again we are amazed by the adjustability of San Franciscans, or more specifically, students at City College.

There seems to be no set mode of rain dress here. In fact, the highly original dress of some of the students is worthy of comment.

Type I. This chap chooses to ignore the whole, silly season, strolls about the campus in a cashmere sweatshirt and cords, wears open-toed huaraches, drops remarks like "Oh, is it raining? I hadn't noticed." This type usually expires of pneumonia before winter is over.

Type II. Usually a veteran, saved his poncho and combat boots, wears same to school. Delights in standing in the rain and telling how it poured in Korea, creates confusion by arriving in class late and trying to stuff rain gear in bottom of desk.

Type III. Obviously under the influence of her mother, comes to class looking like a cellophane Red Riding Hood. Has rain outfit complete with boots, etc., is too shy to take them off in public, crackles and snaps whenever she moves. Instructors love this type.

Type IV. This one has just had her hair done, and no rain clothes. She runs from building to building with a book protecting her coiffure. Emits screams as she goes, eventually falls and breaks her nose, hair looks good in emergency hospital, face permanently marred.

Type V. Sits in coffee shop waiting for rain to cease. Refuses to walk up hill while there is a chance of getting wet. When the sun finally shines, gets soaked by lawn sprinkler, decides to go home to get dry clothes, finds car stuck in mud, eventually becomes suicide prone.

J. GARNER SIGAFOOS, much-admired phrenology instructor here, models one of the rain ensembles which have been so very popular this year.

Shots At Ramdom

By Dolores Stoffers

DEAN WOODS, Associated Student president, and several other delegates from the college to the statewide student government conference held recently in Fresno, returned suspecting that hospitality should sometimes be accompanied by suspicion.

Homecoming Week, it is agreed upon by all, is a time to hiss and boo the traditional rivals and also fling open the doors of hospitality to visitors, which is exactly what Woods and company did this year when a few visitors, claiming to be from Sacramento, knocked upon the door of the AS office.

Woods, et al, welcomed them with open arms then whisked them away on a deluxe tour of the college.

So who should Woods spy at the conference but the same guests prominently and officiously waving the San Mateo banner.

THREE STUDENTS HERE are grumbling that true valor goes unrewarded. Seems they were driving hard to make an 8 a.m. class and stopped to let off a fourth passenger, when all of a sudden they noticed a citizen running like a gazelle and as if his draft board was after him. Close behind, another human form puffed, gasping, "Stop that man!"

Being civic minded, the three students abandon the car and pile upon the pursuee. Great is their pride when he turns out to be a graduate of San Quentin who has just snatched a purse in his most scholarly manner.

So they turn the cad over to the gendarmes, and prove once more that crime does not pay. But they marched away with no reward.

Meanwhile, back at the auto, a policeman was carefully writing out a parking ticket.

Attack On Pearl Harbor Recalled As 14th Anniversary Is Observed

Sunday, the Bible tells us, is a day of rest, but such was not the case 14 years ago when the ill-fated date of December 7, 1941, fell upon this day.

Early in the morning Japanese aviators were in their planes taking off from the flight decks of their carriers and maneuvering for the great assault on Pearl Harbor.

What started to be a peaceful day of rest ended in a night of shock, panic, grief, and death. The entire bay at the harbor was a mass of floating, burned out wreckage. The water, a dark, deep Pacific blue that morning, was then black with oil, and red with the blood of American seamen, some of whom never knew what hit them.

As for the tactics used in the invasion, it is believed that the Japanese approached from two directions simuleaneously, coming in three waves from opposite sides of the island. By the time the first wave of attacking planes was approaching the harbor and nearby Hickam Field, the second was already dropping bombs on Wheeler.

Attacks on each airfield were the same. Small squadrons of mustard-yellow bombers with the red spot of the rising sun on their wingtips flew in, swift and low, bombing hangers and strafing the grounded planes.

While a Japanese plane dropped a well-placed bomb on a hanger, back and forth went its followers, spraying the long rows of American fighter planes. Hangars were left in ruins, and many of our airplanes burst into flame and were lost.

At Kaneoke Airfield, the Japanese switched from a pattern of three flights of three planes each to an echelon or single file formation. They flew in low, no more than 50 feet above the water.

The Japanese had the element of surprise completely within their grasp for no one on the island had any notion that they would be the victims of one of the most cleverly devised military operations in history. Admirals and generals alike have speculated as to how the big surprise came about.

Four congressional investigations were started, and charges were made in an attempt to pin the matter on any one of several persons but no one had the proof to back the accusations.

Fourteen years later the remembrance of Pearl Harbor is a sad one indeed. There was a lesson to be learned, though not at the price that was paid. Relations between the United States and Japan are friendly now but there is still a bitterness. In some for they cannot forget the loss of loved ones at the hands of the power starved man who was responsible for their death.

Elephants Are Contagious

Andre Breton, the famous 20th century poet, is the man most often accused of having introduced surrealism into the world.

Surrealist writers sit, write, and refuse to alter their writings on the grounds that such a move would interfere with the pure act of creation. One example of this method is the proverb presented by Paul Eluard reading, "Elephants are contagious."

A great variety of content and technique may be found in surrealist painting. Salvadore Dali transforms dreams; Hans Arp carves large, smooth abstract forms; Joan Miro employs the fantastic shapes derived from ancient pottery decorations.

Dali is probably the most noted of this group, although he was denounced by other members of the surrealist family because of his tendency to commercialize on this new method in art. His Passage of Time is an example of the surrealist method of transcribing dreams.

Ram Gridders Stave Off Late Rally By Southlanders To Close Season With 20-14 Win

By Mike Berger

Concluding their most successful season since 1948, the Ram gridders withstood a fourth quarter rally to top a stubborn Los Angeles City College eleven, 20-14, on November 25 at Kezar Stadium.

Although San Francisco had much the better of the statistics, the Cubs used two long passes as a parlay to a pair of late touchdowns.

With the passing of Les Barros and the running of Mack Calhoun showing the way, the college team was in a commanding 20-0 lead early in the final period when the southland club came to life. Diminutive Don Buford, the 5-5, 137-pound Los Angeles quarterback, lofted a mighty 41-yard heave to end Jack Shelton for the score, and Dave Kanae's conversion brought the Cubs back into the ball game, 20-7.

The visitors continued their inspired play after an exchange of kicks, scoring again on a 45-yard, 5 play advance. Another Buford pass, this time for 19 yards to Carrie McKinney, moved the hide to the six, and on the succeeding play the little quarterback skirted left end for the TD. Kanae's second conversion ended scoring for the day, but it hardly seemed so after the kickoff.

Al Chatman fumbled the ball on the first scrimmage play after the bootoff, and Los Angeles recovered on the Ram 19. Chatman wasted no time in redeeming himself, however, as he intercepted a pass in the end zone on the following play, plucking the ball off with a fine diving catch over a Los Angeles receiver. The Rams then drove to the Cub 20-yard ribbon, where the game ended.

The Rams drew first blood on the initial play of the second quarter when Barros passed to Dick Piazza for the tally. Stan Keith's extra point kick made it 7-0, the count having been reached by virtue of a 90-yard march. Big play in the drive was a 64-yard pass and run from Barros to Ron Taylar, who galloped for 50 yards down the south sidelines after picking off the toss.

Los Angeles couldn't move the ball after the kickoff, and George Ruddy punted out on the San Francisco 14. This signaled another long push by the Rams, who moved the necessary 86 yards to score in 16 plays. Barros mixed the running of Chatman with key passes to LeRoy Thomas, as the college team exhibited some of the smoothest offensive play of the year.

Barros bulled into the end zone to cap the drive, and the halftime score of 14-0 was reached after Keith's conversion.

Late in the third period the Rams started another long drive, and on the first play of the fourth quarter Barros counted his second TD by sneaking over from one yard out. The push this time was 70 yards in nine smashes.

The Cubs then started their belated comeback. It was simply too little and too late, but not by far.

Coach Grover Klemmer had words of praise for the entire Ram club, calling the season "a team effort." The San Francisco head man also observed that the Angelenos were the strongest group the Rams had faced this year, and had a line equal to or perhaps better than any seen here in '55.

The outstanding point about this season's club was the fact that although there were numerous brilliant individual efforts during the schedule, it was the effective team play of the group that made the difference. Every member of the squad, according to the coaches, deserves congratulations for a job well done.

Compton College Gets Junior Rose Bowl Bid

Compton College of California, the number one two-year team in the nation, will meet Jones College of Mississippi in the 1955 Junior Rose Bowl on December 10, it was announced recently.

The Tartars of Coach Tay Brown went through their ten game schedule undefeated, and the southern team had an unblemished nine game record. Compton edged the Taft and Menlo elevens in the voting for the western bid, while Jones College won the eastern vote in competition with all the other top two-year clubs of the nation.

RAMBLINGS

By Mike Berger

JUDGING from what we've seen in the way of opposition in the Big Eight football picture this year, there just might be eight or nine Rams on any all-conference club that we'd pick.

The lone flankman who has shown well against the Rams has been Dan Delfatti of Stockton, and his performance was outstanding only on defense. From comments by outside observers, Rich Piazza looks to be a good bet for the other end slot.

Stockton has a couple of fine tackles in Art Mesistrano and Bob Denton, and quite possibly one or both of these men will be on the all-conference team.

Easily the standout pair of guards in the Big Eight this season has been Willie Hudson and Stan Keith, and it would surprise us if either is left off the first team.

The battle for the center spot shapes up between Bill Canihan of the Rams and Bob Nelson of Oakland. It is apparent that the 1-2 finishing Mustangs and Rams are going to dominate the all-star team this year. Stockton's great line, under the expert coaching of Don Campora, was the most effective in the league as a unit, although the college forward seven appeared stronger at the end, center and guard slots.

Les Barros is the closest thing to a cinch pick on the entire mythical first eleven, as the cool quarterback is head and shoulders above the rest in signal-calling and ball-handling. Barros' greatest improvement from '54 has been in passing. His throwing in the last four tilts of the year left little to be desired.

Charley Haggard of Stockton may not have done well against other competition, but the one game we saw him in he rushed for 111 yards. This brilliant effort was achieved against the otherwise strong Ram line, and certainly qualifies him for the fullback berth on the squad.

We would certainly go along with Shirlee McCormick at one halfback post. McCormick has divided his time between the fullback and halfback positions this year, and rushed for 511 yards in the 10 game season, an average of 8.52 yards per attempt. Editor Al Moss tells us that Jim Melton of Oakland was the most impressive of the Big Eight backs who faced the stubborn college line.

Soccermen Palma, Schweizer Gain All-Conference Berths

Palma was selected for the second consecutive year to the first team, while Schweizer's brilliant season performance gained him a second team berth.

Both players are veterans of last year's runner-up squad and helped the Rams finish third in the NCISC behind the champion University of San Francisco team and second place University of California. The Rams were defeated twice this season and won four. They defeated Santa Clara 10-2, San Francisco State 3-0, San Jose State 3-2, and Stanford 4-3. Their losses were at the hands of USF 8-2, and California 2-0.

The Dons won their eighth consecutive title by defeating California 4-1, in a playoff game November 15. USF's attack was led by All-Conference Joe Njoku-Obi, who set a conference scoring record of 21 goals in six league games.

Intramural Boxing Starts Tonight

Boxing, the highlight of the intramural season this semester, will begin tonight with exhibitions of the sport in each weight division. The bouts will be held in the men's gymnasium starting at 8 o'clock.

Preparations have been underway for the past few weeks as Alex Schwarz, director of intramural sports, and Roy Diederichsen, boxing coach, have conditioned all participants.

Because of injuries received in the past, it was decided to have everyone entered in the tournament well-conditioned. In the past men have come directly from other sports, and, being out of condition for boxing, ended up in bad shape.

Coach Diederichsen has been training all the participants in the past weeks and by today they will all be in fit condition. No one is allowed to enter without first going through this building-up process.

Although Pie Traynor has been voted to the Baseball Hall of Fame and is rated as one of the all-time third basemen, he led the National League in errors for five seasons.

WAA Hosts Party At Y Tomorrow

Members of the Women's Athletic Association here will have a playday tomorrow at the YWCA, according to Lene Johnson, WAA adviser.

City College's WAA members will act as the hostesses for this playday, a splash party for members of the college and any Bay Area students who wish to attend.

There will be races for all women who would like to enter, and after swimming the WAA will serve refreshments. The playday will last from 2 to 4 p.m.

Last month, on November 22, the WAA badminton members played hostess to four nurses from the University of California. The activities were held in the women's gymnasium, and refreshments were again served afterward.

On Saturday, November 19, an archery playday at West Contra Costa was held, with WAA members from City College and eight other two-year colleges attending.

Ram Cross Country Team Splits Pair

City College's cross-country schedule was extended by a week when the all-conference meet, scheduled for November 23, was postponed because of heavy rain at Santa Rosa. It was re-scheduled for December 2.

The Ram thinclads ran two meets in the interlude. On November 25 they met West Contra Costa on the Balboa Park course and defeated the Comets, 18-37, as Bill Tillson flashed home first ahead of Ray Batz and Manuel Stimpson, also of City College.

The next opponent was Balboa High School, but depth proved too much for Coach Roy Burkhead's team. Ray Batz and Henry Straughter ran 1-2 against their old alma mater, but Balboa garnered five out of the next six places to eke out a 26-29 point victory.

Mannini Great Gridiron Performer

By Al Moss

One of the finest compliments that can be paid a football player is that he is an all-out gridder, a "holler guy" who loves the game and glories in rough going and hard contact. Not every team is blessed with such a player, but the Rams are fortunate in having an outstanding example in fullback Dick Mannini.

Mannini, the 6-0, 190-pound linebuster for the college gridders, has been a much underrated and unheralded ballplayer for the past two years. Underrated and unheralded, that is, by everyone but the Ram coaching staff and opposing players and coaches.

The husky, dark-haired fullback joined the Rams last year, a veteran of the Marine Corp and a graduate of Washington High School. From the first, he was relegated to the second team, behind the brilliant and better-known Shirlee McCormick. It was simply a case of too many fullbacks as McCormick ran his way to All-Big Eight honors and Mannini was limited to spot performances.

With the addition of Mannini, the Ram backfield this year has gained not only a measure of power, but a great deal of blocking ability.

For the first nine games of the year, Mannini had fought his way to a 4.7 yards-per-carry rushing average, and has scored four touchdowns, all on the Rams' T-formation bread-and-butter play, a pitchout to the fullback sweeping end. As respectable as these marks are, they don't reveal his true value to the squad.

His running has set up several scores, and his savage blocking has continually opened large holes to help the fine City College running game click. He has proved again and again that he is probably the finest blocking back on the team, and in addition is a strong defensive linebacker. Klemmer has used Mannini for his defensive ability alone at times this season.

Perhaps his most valuable contribution is his leadership and spirit. That his fellow athletes think highly of him is evidenced by his election to the presidency of the Block SF Society. Too, his hustle is contagious, and any Ram player who doesn't put out to the fullest is in danger of a smearing, verbal or otherwise, by teammate Mannini.

Perhaps the greatest way to describe him is the way Leo Durocher, the fiery ex-New York Giants baseball manager, praises his type of good ballplayer: "He came to play."

King, Grider Star As Ram Five Tops Menlo, USF Frosh

City College's freshman-laden basketball squad, under brand new coach Sid Phelan, and sparked by Clarence Grider and veteran Norm King, got the season off to a flying start by whipping Menlo 66-58 last Friday at the men's gymnasium and then coming back to edge the University of San Francisco frosh, 42-39, the next night at Kezar Pavilion.

The Ram five will meet Napa this afternoon and the University of California Blues Friday. Both games will be in the men's gymnasium, starting at 3:30 p.m.

The season opener with the Oaks was a relatively easy one for the San Franciscans as they broke to a 9-0 lead and were never headed. With King pouring in 25 points and hitting the backboards hard, the Rams controlled the game throughout, with the exception being an eight-minute period ending the first half. Then Menlo, with big Don Kupiec and his Oak teammates controlling the rebounds, pulled to within seven points, the narrowest margin the hosts held all day.

Grider bucketed 13 points and also was strong on the rebounds, and forward Fred Wilkinson collected 10 markers. Kupiec and star guard Ken Carter garnered 20 apiece for the visitors, most of them in the second half as Phelan substituted freely.

The USF-City College clash was easily the more exciting of the two games. In a slow-starting and primarily defensive game, the Rams took a lead at 9-6, held a 23-15 bulge at halftime and built on that to start the second half. The victory appeared cinched when the college gained a 33-20 lead with some nine minutes to go.

Then, with 6-7 Jerry Robinson and forward John Cunningham grabbing off the rebounds and star guard Bud Backman starting to find the scoring range, the Don yearlings quickly narrowed the margin to 37-35.

In the waning minutes, the score was knotted several times and each team bolted into single-point leads. Finally, with less than a minute left and the Rams trailing by one point, King was fouled and sank both free throws to give his team a 40-39 edge. Al Martino's two free throws in the last two seconds were almost anticlimatic.

Grider topped all scorers with 13, while King and Wilkinson each collected 8 tallies. Besides King and Grider, Wilkinson looked sharp both offensively and defensively, and Al Mock and Walt Morgan, sharing one guard slot, performed well. The real ball-handling star was Captain Martino, whose passing and fine moves in both games appear to give the Rams an excellent playmaker for the year.

Block SF Award Banquet Dec. 13

The Block SF annual awards banquet will be held Tuesday, December 13, in the college cafeteria at 6 p.m.

Dick Mannini, president of the society, will serve as master of ceremonies and the guest speaker will be either Stanford's football coach, Chuck Taylor, or one of his assistants.

The invited guests of honor will be the block award winners, high school football and soccer coaches, and members of the press.

The Block SF most valuable player awards for football and soccer will also be announced at the dinner. A member of the Block SF will also receive an award for services rendered to the society.

Seventy blocks will be granted with 43 members of the football team, 21 soccer players, and six cross-country track partieipants receiving the honors.

Next meeting of the block society is scheduled during college hour Friday, December 16, in Room C247. Two films are scheduled to be shown.

Baseball Signups Taken In Gymnasium Tomorrow

All those interested in signing up for competition in the upcoming baseball season can do so tomorrow in Room 107 of the men's gymnasium at 3:15 p.m., Coach Bill Fischer announced recently. There will be a round-robin schedule to determine those who will make the squad.

Falling Grades Cause Expulsion Of 39 Students

Thirty-nine students at the college were expelled recently on the basis of the first mid-term grades results, according to John J. Brady, coordinator of Student Welfare.

These students, who had their registrations cancelled, received failing grades on all courses they had taken here and will be refused readmission.

The student welfare coordinator's office will commence to examine the records of the second mid-term grades today, Brady announced. As usual, students with grades below .5 will be called in to see Brady and justify themselves for their scholastic deficiency. Some will be advised to take leaves of absence, depending upon the seriousness of their cases.

Second mid-term grades serve as an indication of the cumulative achievement of a student throughout the semester, Brady said, further clarifying the question by pointing out that technically, these grades should be regarded as testimony for 12 weeks of scholastic work. There has been a trend among some instructors to compile final grades by computing the mid-term notes and the final examinations results as three individual grading periods.

A student may be expelled from the college because he is failing a required course or because he has fallen below the "C" average standard. In order to gain re-entrance in the college the following semester, the ousted student must first appeal to a Re-admissions Committee here. This committee, comprised of George F. Hutchins, Donald F. Snepp and Henry Soule, instructors at the college, discusses, reviews and sometimes accepts re-admittance requests. Students receiving "F" grades at the time they took leaves of absence must also pass close scrutiny by the committee before being allowed to re-register.

Re-admitted students must follow during the course of the semester certain stipulations previously set by the committee. Those who fail to do so will be permanently expelled from the college.

The problem of attendance has been lessened through the persevering enforcement of the regulations, Brady stated, also noting that so far only 300 students have taken leaves of absence this semester. This is a smaller percentage than those of previous semesters.

"Because students are compelled to attend classes they do better scholastic work, thereby removing their need for leaves of absence," Brady explained.

Second Midterm Grades Available Monday

Grade reports for the second midterm period will be available in the counselling office next Monday. Students interesting in finding out about their grades may consult their counsellors anytime after that date.

Because of the tremendous amount of work being carried on in the registrar's office the grades will not be available before this time.

Poll Taken By KCSF On Program Preferences

Student preference in radio listening is currently being polled by the KCSF staff of broadcasters in conjunction with tentative plans to broadcast regularly scheduled programs to the cafeteria in the student union building.

Such a schedule, if adopted, would include the broadcasting of commercial radio shows into the cafeteria between the hours of 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. Monday through Friday.

All students wshing to express an opinion as to what programs they would like to hear in this period are asked to list said programs on a slip of paper.

These listings should be delivered to Room S147, or may be given to Warren Smith, a member of the radio staff, or Henry Leff, instructor of the college radio and television department.

Date Extended For Scholarship Applications

Deadline for applications for the Denman and Chinese Club scholarships has been extended to Monday, December 12, because of the intervening Thanksgiving holidays, Mary Golding, dean of women here, announced last week.

The two Denman scholarships, each for $125, are for public high school women graduates who have completed at least one semester of B grade work here at the college. Awards will be based mainly on activities, extra-curricular and high school activities being just as important as college ones, Dean Goiding declared, with need and sufficiently high scholarship also to be considered.

Invitations to apply have been sent to women with outstanding records, but women who have not received the invitations are also invited to submit their letters of application to Dean Goiding before the deadline, as there is room for many more to apply.

Also because of the holidays, the deadline for the Chinese Club scholarships, consisting of two $50 awards, has been extended until Monday, December 12.

Drama Budget Is Finally Granted

Funds for the drama department budget have finally been unfrozen after being unavailable to the department for over a week.

Action freezing the budget came when Michael Griffin, drama instructor, failed to turn in the required list of Associated Student card numbers for the members of the cast of the department's latest effort, Suds In Your Eye.

In addition to the missing list Griffin was accused of using San Francisco State College students in his production. The accusations proved true and the cast of the play was changed midway in its run and Frank Anderson was relieved of his role. Anderson is a full time San Francisco State student although enrolled for courses here.

Christmas Rush Employs Hundreds Of College Students As Largest Season In Past Decade Approaches

Hundreds of students from the college, both men and women representing all phases of the college program, will participate in one of the largest Christmas season business booms in the past decade, according to the official records in placement service headquarters here.

Starting early in October, employers have screened, selected, trained and placed the largest total number of workers, in a wide variety of jobs, in their entire history. Jobs range from selling to truck driving to wrapping and cashiering. Government agencies have hired thousands to carry, to load, and to handle the mail, while the department stores and specialty shops have utilized thousands more to meet their needs.

While the government agencies, post offices, air mail services, railroads, and freight forwarding firms have hired males exclusively, department stores are dominated by women in sales jobs. The wages range from $1.17 in sales jobs to $1.81 an hour in freight forwarding with a 10 per cent differential for night work.

A significant trend this year is the age limits imposed on both male and female employees. Eighteen years is the minimum age in all areas of work. Most employers held out for the older and more mature worker. Also many housewives have been hired in the department stores on a part time basis to fill the needs. For the first time in the business history of San Francisco, department stores sent out special printed appeals to their customers asking them to come in for work.

There are still jobs left for those not hired as yet. Students in this category should report to the placement office in Room 188, science building, immediately.

JOE AMORI, placement director.

Semi Annual ISC Presents Will Be Held Saturday

To present the new sorority pledges to the fraternities of the college, the Inter-Sorority Council is staging its semi-annual ISC Presents this Saturday night, December 10, from 8 until 11 p.m. in the college's auditorium, according to Marilyn Euler, president of the ISC.

A fraternity brother will escort each formal-clad pledge from the stage where she will be introduced to her place in the receiving line. Approximately 100 pledges will be honored at this affair, to which the parents of the pledges are invited.

Sorority presidents voted for this college's auditorium in preference to all other places suggested because they prefer the stage in that building, which is situated on the west campus.

Lynn Leonard and his combo will provide the music for the dance following the ceremony, and women may bring their own dates if they wish.

Decorations from the Coronation Ball will adorn the auditorium. The main theme will be along the Christmas line, and Theta Tau sorority, under the presidency of Peggy Alexander, will take in hand all plans for the decorating.

The other committees and their chairmen are as follows: food, Marilyn Euler, Delta Psi; invitations, Rose Thurman, Alpha Lambda Chi; check fraternity escorts, Bobbie LeBoff, of Phi Beta Rho, and Jan Digiovanni, of Kappa Phi.

Petitions For AS Offices Available; Deadline Dec. 16

Petitions for Associated Student offices are now available, Bill Chisum, Election Commissioner here, announced last week.

The petitions are obtainable in the dean of men's office, S149, and the AS office, S169. To date, more than 25 petitions have been taken out. Deadline for the filing date is Friday, December 16, in Dean Ralph Hillsman's office, S127.

Three pictures of each candidate for the Election Committee posters must be turned in to the committee by December 16. Only 5 by 7 photos will be accepted.

Posters may not exceed 12 by 18 inches and must be approved by the Election Committee. Any infraction of this rule, Chisum stated, would result in the confiscation of the posters. No posters may be removed prior to the elections except by Election Committee members. Posters on the walls, doors or windows of buildings both on or off campus is prohibited.

Pictures of the candidates for the offices of president and vice-president should be turned in to The Guardsman, S304, by 11 a.m. Wednesday, January 4. Publicity stunts in the form of parades or speeches are allowed with the approval of Dean Hillsman.

Recruiting Drive For National Guard Here

A National Guard recruiting center will be set up tomorrow, Friday, December 9, in the patio between Cloud Hall and the science building from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m., Lieutenant Colonel Curtis O'Sullivan, commander of the 3rd Battalion 159th Infantry, announced today.

Students will be able to enlist or receive information concerning the National Guard at the recruiting table. Officer Candidate Schools are open for those qualified and interested in a 2nd Lieutenant commission.

Among advantages of membership in the National Guard are the retirement benefits, educational opportunities, promotions, substantial pay and the fulfillment of a patriotic obligations to one's country.

Council Rakes Two Budgets Over The Coals Before OK

Drawing from the Associated Student reserve fund, Student Council approved two budgets totaling $95 in a meeting last week.

Council member Wayne McFadden introduced a motion to grant $75 to the Independent Intramural Basketball League which was formed recently. In a breakdown of the budget, it was stated that $56 was to be spent for referees and $19 for trophies.

Questioning the reason for the grant, Inter-Fraternity Council President Walt Martensen asked why the intramural budget passed earlier this semester was not used to supply the funds.

Answering Martensen's question, dean of Student Activities Ralph Hillsman said the intramural budget covered interclass activities during the hours of the college. The Independent Basketball League, which is composed of clubs of the college, will meet later in the day.

Praising the new basketball league, Club Activities Board Chairman Earl Cabrinha said, "I have never seen more interest shown by students of the college than at these games which always have a large audience."

Despite the fact that some of the clubs did not have 100 per cent in membership purchase of Associated Student cards, a requirement for activities receiving a budget, the council approved the grant.

Requesting an allocation of $20, The Model United Nations Committee received their grant. The money will furnish the five dollar registration fee needed by each of the four students from the college attending the Collegiate Council for the United Nations being held in San Francisco on December 27, 28 and 29.

Taking a leave of absence from the college, Dick Kramer resigned from council last week.

Soph Ball King, Queen Applications Available Today In Science Building

Applications for the king and queen contest for the Sophomore Ball will be available today, Wednesday, through Friday, December 16, in the Associated Student office, Room 169 in the science building, Bob Johnson, sophomore president, announced today.

"Any interested and qualified student can enter the contest, which is being directed by Jim Buckley," Johnson said. In the past, clubs, fraternities and sororities here have each sponsored a candidate. Petitions can also be obtained from Lee Carol Lombard, AS vice-president; Jane Lutt, sophomore vice-president, and Buckley and Johnson.

AS members will elect the king and queen. The election is tentatively planned to be held in conjunction with the AS elections, which are scheduled for Wednesday, January 11, and Thursday, January 12.

Steve Pani and his band were recently chosen by the dance committee to play at the Sophomore Ball, which will be held on Saturday, January 14, from 9 p.m. until midnight in the Mural Room in the St. Francis Hotel, Johnson announced.

"Several dance bands and dance schedules were reviewed and considered earlier by the dance committee," Johnson said, adding that Wayne MacFadden was the committee chairman. Other committee members were Earl Cabrinha, Ed Emig, Vic Hebert, Lawrence Lowe, Mike Meyers, Al Moss and Rose Thurmond.

Arrangements for the making of danee bids for the ball will be made by Joyce Weaver and her committee. Working along with her as committee members will be Suzie Brady, Barbara Polster, Tookie Radillo, Debbie Rudser and Ellie Smith.

"Admission to the semi-formal affair will be one Associated Student card per couple or $2.50 per couple for non-AS members," Johnson said. Mike Meyers will direct the picture taking at the dance.

Another attraction of sophomore week, Monday, January 9, through Friday, January 14, will be the traditional soph-prof basketball game.

Included on the soph team are Les Barros, Foster Donahoe, Jack Egan, Jim Thomas, Jim Frank, Lawrence Lowe, Ray MacIntyre, Dick Mannini, Jack McCann, Martin Morales and Warren Rader. "They were selected for their football adaptabilities," Johnson warned.

Alex Schwarz, assistant football coach here, will captain the professor basketball squad. Barbara Battmale, AWS president, will serve as cheerleader for the professors. Mike Gilbert is planning to give a play by play broadcast of the encounter.

Diane Dawson Will Reign As Shrine Game Queen

By Denny Delman

Diane Dawson was crowned queen of the Shrine East-West football game at the Coronation Ball held last Friday night at the Marine's Memorial Club.

Selected from a group of 93 contestants, Miss Dawson and four other women students, Peggy Alexander, Jane Lutt, Margie Morec, and Eleanor Smith, will reign as the first queen and court of the 31-year-old traditional game.

Several engagements have been scheduled for the queen including a Ladies' Day Luncheon at the Palace Hotel, the Kickoff Luncheon at the Civic Auditorium, a visit to the Shrine Hospital, and television appearances, all of which will be climaxed by the game itself on December 31.

Judging throughout the contest was done on a point system. During the screenings a contestant was given one to five points for 11 separate items, walking, sitting in a chair, rising, beauty of face and figure, makeup, dress, voice, poise (assurance), sincerity, warmth and unaffectedness and personality.

At the finals, the judging was somewhat simplified. Still employing the one to five point system, the basis of the judging was condensed into three groups, beauty of face and figure, pos-

Annual Yuletide Program Tomorrow Night At Riordan

LOUISE VON EMSTER, concert manager for the college's 21st annual Christmas concert, and Barbara Raffaelli, sopranos, will sing solos during the concert which will be held tomorrow night at Riordan Auditorium.—Guardsman photo by Gehringer.

A Cappella Choir, Band, Glee Club In College Concert

Presented by the music department, the 21st annual Christmas concert will be held tomorrow at 8 p.m., admission free at Riordan High School auditorium, according to Flonsita Badger, A Cappella Choir director here.

Highlighting the program, the A Cappella Choir will present The Kings and Shepherds Scene from the one-act television opera, Amahl And The Night Visitors by Menotti, with Louise von Emster, concert manager, singing a soprano solo. "The traditional processional will be presented with the choir singing Adeste Fideles," Miss Badger said.

Featured soloists from the choir will be Trevor Pendray, tenor and choir president; and Jane Ikehara, soprano. Pendray will sing a solo selection from the Messiah by Handel. In an arrangement which includes the choir, Miss Ikehara will sing O, Holy Night.

Shorter solos will be given during some of the other choir numbers. Sopranos Patricia O'Gaffney, assistant program manager, Vivian Foster and Barbara Raffaelli will sing in the Christmas spiritual, Rise Up Shepherds And Follow. Edward Williams, baritone and the choir's property manager, will solo in Amahl And The Night Visitors. In The Beautiful Savior, by Christiansen, Ray Hillis will solo.

Other choir numbers include Lost In The Night, a Finnish folk song, and The Joyous Christmas Song, a French folk song. Accompaniments for the program will be played by Aileen Fealy Mullaney.

Officially opening the concert, the college symphonic band, under the direction of Meyer M. Cahn, will play a prelude of Christmas carols. Additional numbers by the band are Fugue in B flat minor by Bach, A Mighty Fortress Is Our God, by Luther, and The Christmas Concerto, by Coreili.

Directed by Robert Morton, the Men's Glee Club will partiepate in the concert. They are scheduled to sing O Come, O Come, Immanuel; Adoramus Te, Christe, by Palestrina; O, Little Town Of Bethlehem, by Redner; Deck The Hall, and The Boy's Dream, by Monk.

"Sponsored by the Associated Students and the Faculty Association, the admission free concert is open to the public," Miss Badger declared, adding that faculty members attending the faculty buffet supper, which will be held in the student union building prior to the concert, are invited to attend.

"This concert will conclude and highlight the music department's activities this year," Miss Badger stated. It is expected to last about an hour and a half.

CAB Takes Disciplinary Action, Discusses Relocation Of Mascot

Two member organizations of the Club Activities Board here will soon be put under special investigation and will be subject to disciplinary action by the board for failure to attend the CAB meetings regularly.

The Chinese Students Club and the Lutheran Discussion Club have failed to have a CAB representative present for the past eight and ten meetings, respectively. These absences exceed the absences of the Drama Club, which was placed on probation earlier this semester.

Another organization has been put under special investigation by the Board for failure to submit a petition, constitution and representative to the CAB. The organization, The Hi-Fi Club, is also charged with illegal use of posters and the defacement of previously posted student information.

The relocation of the Redwood Ram, mascot of the college, was at a standstill last week. Conflicting opinions of the administration and the CAB committee in charge of the relocation delayed action.

Oscar Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management, spokesman for the administration, earlier this month suggested that the Ram be placed in front of Cloud Hall, at a safe distance from the building, this being to prevent possible "war parties" of rival colleges from painting the building.

Members of the CAB committee pointed out that Cloud Hall had already suffered one paint splashing from a rival college. The investigating committee expressed the desire to see the Ram relocated on the lawn in front of the student union building.

According to an undisclosed source, if the students do not move the Ram it will probably not be moved. Emory LeBonville, co-chairman of the committee said, "It isn't fair for the CAB to voluntarily move 'college property' and then be 'told' where to place it."

The Spirit Of '56 Year's First Dance

Due for presentation as the first dance at the college for the new year will be The Spirit of '56, according to Wayne McFadden, president of the Masonic Club, sponsor of the dance. Planned for January 6, 1956, it will be held in the student union building from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight.

Lynn Leonard's band is playing that night, and appropriate dress is sport. The price for a couple with an Associated Student card is $1, or $1.25 without the card. Students wishing to attend without dates will be charged 75 cents if they have a card, and $1 if they haven't.

Officers of the Masonic Club are heading the committees for the evening. They include McFadden; Jim Webster, vice-president; Metta Webleton, women's vice-president; Gil Halstead, treasurer, and Mark Arkos, secretary.

Campus Clubs Finally Get Chance To Meet

There will be an officially scheduled college hour for club meetings this Friday, December 16, the day before the Christmas holidays commence, according to Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities here.

This will give the various campus clubs a long awaited opportunity to make final preparations for the holiday activities they are planning. Social activities here during recent college hours have been conflicting with their club meeting schedule.

Faculty Christmas Dinner Tomorrow

Instructors at the college will attend the annual faculty Christmas dinner in the student union building tomorrow at 6 p.m., Mary Jane Learnard, registrar and chairman of the faculty social committee, announced last week.

The 21st annual Christmas Concert which is co-sponsored by the Faculty Association, will be held at Riordan High School auditorium following the faculty Christmas dinner. Admission to the concert will be free.

Serving the buffet dinner will be members of the hotel and restaurant department. An attendance of 150 is expected.

Tickets are priced at two dollars for members of the faculty and one dollar for their children who are under 12 years of age. The tickets are now on sale at the information desk in the science building.

The annual faculty Christmas dinner is sponsored by the Faculty Association at the college. A part of this organization, the Faculty Social committee, is planning the dinner. The members are Mildred Barnard, Madison Devlin, Don Jensen, Eveiyn Kerkhof, John Mackey, Edward Nyiund, Naney Sparks, and co-chairmen Arlin Timberlake and Miss Learnard.

Yosemite Film Last Of This Semester

Yosemite National Park and the high Sierra, as seen by airline travelers, feature the film, Skyway to Yosemite, which is scheduled for showing during this Friday's college hour in S136, according to audio-visual aids instructor Madison Devlin.

The movie, presented by United Airlines, was photographed from the air on a plane following the regular over-the-Sierra route used by United Airlines flights to Fresno and the San Joaquin Valley from eastern points. High point of this airline travelogue is the crossing of Yosemite, where the famed features of this area will be shown to viewers in a manner seen otherwise only by travelers on United's passenger flights.

Skyway to Yosemite, which starts at 10:40 a.m. Friday, is the last in this semester's college film series.

New H&R Award To Start Here

Presentation of a plaque to the outstanding graduating student from the Hotel and Restaurant division by the Sheraton Corporation of America will inaugurate a series of semesterly awards here.

First in the nation to be graced with this honor, this college is expected to be followed by several others throughout the country.

The winning student will be chosen sometime in the latter part of next semester and in addition to receiving his own plaque, will also have his named placed on a perpetual trophy which will remain in the college.

Originator of the new award series is Russell St. John, assistant sales manager of the Sheraton-Palace Hotel, who also acts as a part-time instructor here. St. John teaches advertising and sales promotion in the H&R department.

After students and faculty members of the department have selected four candidates, the four will submit a portfolio and a personal letter stating their qualifications to the Los Angeles office of the Sheraton corporation for the final judging.

False Rumor Concerning Vet Benefits Corrected

An untrue rumor to the effect that veterans' benefits would not be paid during the Christmas vacation nearly touched off a refusal to take the vacation by a group of veterans attending the college, it was learned last week.

The veterans had planned to request that classes be available for them to attend during the holiday vacation in order to avoid deductions from their monthly subsistence checks.

Fortunately the situation has been settled to everyone's satisfaction by an announcement from the office of Robin Dunn, assistant in charge of veterans affairs, who stated that the Christmas vacation would not affect the monthly subsistence checks.

Knight Joins State Appeal For Scholarship Aids To Students

GOVERNOR GOODWIN J. KNIGHT of California has added his influence to the growing cry for more scholarships, to both public and private colleges and universities, that is being voiced by many of the state's leading educators.

In speaking to the California Press Association, Knight warned that the size of private college scholarships must be doubled or tripled if even five per cent of the state's poorer, financially speaking, students are to attend college.

Knight has hit upon one of the crying needs of the scholastic system not only in California but throughout the United States. Too many good, often brilliant students are forced to forego higher education because of a lack of funds.

The public colleges of the nation are already badly overcrowded, while some of the facilities of private institutions are virtually untouched. Knight pointed this out, and explained the state scholarship program which starts with the next scholastic year. Under the program, 640 students can "receive $600 per year to pay tuition and required fees. That is all." It is readily admitted that the primary aim of this program is to allow and encourage the otherwise financially unable student to attend a private college or university.

However, as the governor explained, "The scholarship program is a modest one when . . . viewed in the light of the fact we have 137,900 students who graduate from high school in 1959-60.

"If only five per cent of this number were qualified and needy we would need 6,895 awards instead of the 2,560 now planned."

That is the problem, simply stated. There are simply too many needy and qualified students for the small number of scholastic awards being made at the present time.

We have always felt that if any college, private or otherwise, can see fit to spend a good deal of money on athletic scholarships, it should be able to find something more for the top students who are otherwise literally barred from a college education. Athletic scholarships, if handled correctly and given only to those athletes who can also meet the scholastic standards, are certainly all right, as is anything that enables one more deserving student to receive college training.

The point is, however, that such awards are not always correctly handled, and it grieves us and many others to see good athletes with no inclination toward learning taking up the place in a university or college that should be held by a brilliant student who is perhaps less gifted physically.

The answer, of course, is not fewer athletic grants. Indeed, there should be more made available to athletes really desiring a college education. The real answer is more financial aid for needy students. students who need only money to become well-trained college graduates who will take their place as leaders in a few years.

—This is the only solution to the very real and desperate problem. Whether it comes from "old grads" or from the state or from the individual college or university, there must be more financial aid to deserving and needy students made available if the unique scholastic system of the United States is to produce the leaders of tomorrow that it must.

Faculty's Cruel Hoax Is Finally Exposed

ONE OF THE most amazing things to impressionable new students is the quick wit, the clever repartee and general cleverness of the instructors here.

Interspersing their lectures with humorous parables and sophisticated word-play, these classroom raconteurs give the more naive the impression that in order to qualify for teaching credentials a mastery of the art of the fast ad lib is a major requisite.

This semester has found the 49er football team especially ripe for jest. This is especially true of history and political science instructors, as they are often called upon to lecture on losers.

A few of the more roguish members of the faculty occasionally make deft allusions to the collegian's forbidden fruit, i. e. male-female relationships, but these are in the minority, and it is only a close listener who gets the benefit of these japes.

Until now it has been legend that certain instructors were the equal if not the better of the best the entertainment world could offer.

NOT TRUE! A little research will reveal that the student body has been hoaxed. In many cases more attention is paid in the teacher's outline to quip and timing than to the somewhat important matter of specifically related lecture data. Disillusion and a lack of faith in man all too often comes to the students who repeats an instructor's latest conundrum only to receive a rude awakening when told by another much older and wiser student, "Hey, is he still telling that one. Why, I heard that one from him two semesters ago."

What a blow. Imagine the iconoclastic feelings of the student experiencing this renaissance of scepticism toward faculty brilliance.

Many times what seems a clever joke to be repeated as an original, with no credit acknowledgment to the faculty source, is found out, leaving bruises on the student's id, almost irreparable in their consequences.

Luckily, there is a remedy. It would require complete cooperation among the faculty members, but surely they would understand that it was for the good of the student and would better aid the student in the realization of his potential as an integral part of the community.

The solution is simple: a pledge by all instructors to use a specific drollery only once every fifth semester. In this way only would the unfortunate be saved from the potential degradation they now face when caught with the teacher's quips down.

Ireland is not the only land that has no snakes. There are other snakeless regions in the world, including New Zealand and the Azores.

Shots At Ramdom

By Dolores Stoffers

NO HARM meant to the hard working publicity department, but whether they know it or not, one of the college's biggest drawing points of interest is its position on Hill 29.

Five air trainees (two from Holland, three from Turkey) visited San Francisco while on their midterm leaves from Canada where they are receiving special training. They were driving around town looking for points of interest, spied the college which one insisted was a radio station, ventured inside, and were whisked into the hands of Dean Edwin C. Browne who gave them the grand two-hour tour.

All of which gives the college another probable first: probably the first Bay Area college whose most prominent building has been mistaken for Radio City.

ALTHOUGH THE SPOT on which the Redwood Ram will rest has not yet been decided, a few students are already up in arms against the site suggested by the administration: an area between Cloud Hall and the gymnasiums and overlooking the spot where the new football field will be in five years.

Latest word has it that said students are dickering for the Ram to be placed on the hill between the student union and science buildings where "all students may view the college spirit's symbol, since they're paying for the moving of the Ram."

TWO YEARS AGO, when the west campus was still occupied, there arose from the ground a series of clouds of smoke, which, after a couple of weeks, filled the air with acrid fumes, and might have accounted for the many absences in Buildings 4, 5 and 6.

After days of running about in circles, someone finally decided to investigate, and it was found that a leak in one of the underground steam pipes was responsible (much to the dismay of many aesthetic students who had recently read Dante's Inferno).

The steampipes seem to be ailing again near Building 2, and a group of older students here are considering a pool concerning the number of days it will take this time to remedy the situation.

College Lecture Spurs Student Gold Search

Certain classes here, because of their scope, may lead students' thoughts into the realm of frightening schemes.

An example of how these turbulence generators work occurred when George Baffico, geology instructor here, revealed a seemingly harmless fact in one of his lectures.

For every 100 million parts of the world one part is gold, Baffico said, and added that this would be approximately a ratio of half an ounce of gold to every ton of matter.

No anxiety, nothing to cause a commotion about, unless the bell was ringing just as the statement was being made. Only a simple, clear geological fact. Perhaps the bell should have rung then, for it was these ensuing words that kindled the flame to fervent and wild plans in the heads of those students.

"This would mean that there are some contents of gold and valuable metals in this very hill on which the campus is situated," Baffico stated. The bell now rang, but too late to choke the message which reawakened adventurous spirits, dormanted by earlier English classes.

A gang formed and rushed down to the cafeteria, resembling bits of iron, not yet gold, being drawn by a huge magnet.

A leader was chosen. The former students and now prospective prospectors began to discuss the best methods to mine the campus grounds. But confusion soon prevailed, later dominating the group. Each had his own get-rich-quick scheme. It appeared to be an anarchy at its worst, according to the description of a political science student.

The bell rang, announcing the next class. The crowd dispersed. Fortunately for the college, this fantastic idea was quelled.

It but now remains in the annals of the afficionados of gab at the cafeteria who still whisper, over a cup of coffee, about that tumultuous day here not so long ago.

Yuletide Shopping Time Shortens

Faculty, Students To Join Last Minutemen

Some will work and some will play during the ten remaining shopping days until Christmas, but most (all) the students and faculty members here will participate in the traditional last-minute present purchasing tomfoolery.

During the Yuletide vacation from the college, Monday, December 19, 1955, through Monday, January 2, 1956, some students and faculty members will be preoccupied with employment seeking activities, skiing, studying, preparing final examination papers or discussing the what, where and when of gift possibilities.

Many will postpone their Christmas gift buying because they are too occupied with the preparations for the holiday festivities. They will be planning for a turkey or chicken or steak or an extra-large portion of hamburger for the anticipated family dinner. Others will be busy decorating the Christmas tree and hanging the to-be-stood-under mistletoe in appropriate places for the New Year's Eve celebration.

Ironically some will neglect their gift buying needs while they are delivering, stocking or clerking in a department store. Even students who masqueraded as Saint Nick for the holiday season last year have been known to do their purchasing on Christmas Eve.

As Christmas draws nearer, the shopping crowds get larger and the selection of merchandise is not as good nor are the prices any lower, but last-minute gift hunting seems to be an inherent characteristic of all men of all ages. Undoubtedly it will remain for some psychology or genetic student here to explain this self-frustrating absurdity.

Nevertheless, when the last present is bought, wrapped and presented, all will sigh with relief from their state of anxiety. And the helter-skelter of preparatory activities will be overshadowed by the spirit of Christmas and the new resolutions made and forgotten in the glory of a New Year.

On The Hollywood Road Of Fame

John Lo Coco, Former Student Here, Signs Contract With Universal

Currently trying his luck on the Hollywood road of fame is John Lo Coco, a former student at the college. After graduating last spring, Lo Coco went to Hollywood and there was introduced to Henry Wilson who suggested an acting career for him and who obtained an interview at Universal-International Studios. The studio heads immediately placed him under contract.

JOHN LO COCO, a former student here, is now at Universal International.

Wilson, the Hollywood agent who has discovered such famous personages as Jennifer Jones, Rhonda Fleming, Lana Turner, Sheri North, Race Gentry, Rock Hudson, Tab Hunter, Bob Wagner, Guy Madison, Rory Calhoun and John Smith, to name a few, has taken a great interest in Lo Coco's career along with Carol Lee, Ladd Anderson and Phyllis Gates.

Presently Lo Coco is studying at the Universal studio school and is testing for a role in a forthcoming movie.

Just recently Lo Coco was voted "Newest Upcoming Personality in Hollywood's Young Leading Man Set" by the girls from the Hollywood Studio Club. Among the show business personalities living there are Kim Novak, Miss Universe and Miss France. Six John Lo Coco fan clubs have also been started in various states.

While at the college, Lo Coco participated in student activities. After attending St. Brigid's Grammar School and Sacred Heart High School, Lo Coco came to the college in 1950. During his first semester he was president of the Newman Club. He was elected Freshman president in his second semester and served as Rally Commissioner in his third semester.

In the middle of the third semester, Lo Coco joined the Navy where he was stationed on the USS Gregory DD-802. On leaving the Navy he returned to the college and missed the Associated Student presidency in close competition with his very good friend, Bill Boldenweck.

During this last semester at the college he was appointed Finance Chairman, served as president of Beta Tau fraternity and was named Sophomore King.

The problem of finding a "Hollywood" name for Lo Coco seems apparently solved at this time. Previous choices were Rex Fuller and John La Farge, but finally after a survey was taken here by Uriel Furlong, secretary to the deans, Wilson decided that John Lo Coco would be remembered the longest by persons seeing it on the screen.

College Captures 1st Gregg Award

A group of heretofore unpublicized City College students gained national recognition by winning the first of the new Gregg "mailable transcripts" awards. These tests are taken as a monthly exercise by members of Ruth E. Gavin's stenographic classes.

Two of Miss Gavin's students won the 60/12 (dictation at 60 words a minute, transcription at not less than 12 words a minute) award: Athene Lingonis and Ruth Schilber. Four San Francisco students won the 80/15 award: Audrey Cutler, Lee Carol Lombard, Carla Holm and Sally Harmon. Majel Manning won the 100/20 award.

Miss Gavin stated that these awards are in the form of certificates from the Business Teacher, a service magazine for business educators. The magazine is published by the Gregg Division of the McGraw-Hill Book Company. All awards were based on tests published in the September issue of the magazine.

The City College students who won these awards are all enrolled in the college's secretarial training program. Successful graduates of this course receive certificates of proficiency and thereby qualify for positions as stenographers and secretaries in both business and Civil Service.

It is noteworthy that Miss Gavin has received her share of plaudits nationally. She is co-author of the Reference Manual for Stenographers and Typists, and has had various articles published on typing instruction.

Ram Cagers Whip Napa, Blues For Four Straight, Prepare For Annual Modesto Tourney

By Al Moss

City College's fast-improving cagers ran their string to four straight wins with a pair of home court victories, defeating Napa 72-49 on December 7, and whipping an injury-riddled Cal Blues five on December 9 by a final 74-68 score.

The Rams go on the road for their next games, meeting East Contra Costa today at Martinez and battling the University of California Frosh at Berkeley Friday. December 29 finds the college quintet at San Jose and they will host Marin the next day.

These four tilts will serve as warm-ups for the annual Modesto tourney, held in Modesto on January 5-7. Besides the Big Eight teams, there will be eight other squads from throughout the state. The Rams will meet Fresno, defending state and tournament champion, in the opening game, and will try to avenge last year's loss to the Fresnans in the finals of the Modesto affair.

Clarence Grider was again the big scoring gun as the Rams trounced Napa, bucketing 19 points to top the home scorers. Napa center Howard Marshall tossed in 20 points and veteran guard Nelson Gaines, an all-Northern California choice last year with the Chieftains, bucketed 19.

The game was never close after the first few minutes and Coach Sid Phelan experimented with his deep Ram squad from the start, temporarily benching first-line forward Fred Wilkinson, starting center Norm King and guard Al Martino, the squad's top playmaker.

Again it was a team effort, with every one of the 12 men who played for the Rams scoring at least two points. It was too much for Marshall and Gaines to overcome.

The Ram-Blues game may go down in history as the first game to put a University of California squad out of business. Immediately after the tilt, California Coach Pete Newell announced that the Berkeley junior varsity would disband for the season.

With injuries plaguing both the varsity and the Blues, Newell entered this game with only six men on the roster.

Grider and King again led the way for the Rams, with Kling, starting at forward with Campbell at center, garnering 18 points and Grider pouring in 14. Martino potted 10 for the hosts.

Awkward Giants Hurt By 1955-56 Basketball Rules

One of the most interesting aspects of the upcoming basketball season will be the enforcement of the new rules installed by the National Collegiate Athletic Association this year.

The one that is getting the most attention is the new 12-foot lane rule. This is aimed at giving the little man a better chance against his taller counterparts. It is also another way to try to eliminate the cheap, short basket.

Asked what he thought about the new rule, Sid Phelan, cage coach at the college, stated, "It certainly is worth a try. Something has to be done. It won't hurt the big agile man, but it will hurt the lumbering type. It used to be in college that only a center could touch the rim of the basket, but now most teams have many players who can stuff them in."

In referring to the tall players, Phelan used as illustration the case of the fabulous freshman at Kansas University, Wilt Chamberlain. Chamberlain, a seven-footer, scored 42 points against the Kansas varsity while playing under the new rule.

Another rule change coming into the cage scene is the one stating that no player can stand in one spot with the ball or dribble for more than five seconds with an opposing player guarding him. After five seconds without putting the ball in play, the official can call for a jump ball. Both of these rule changes have stirred up a considerable amount of controversy.

In a poll taken of college basketball coaches across the nation, the mentors showed their disapproval of the new rules. Nevertheless, the rules committee of the NCAA has installed the new regulations into the game and they will be used in all collegiate games throughout the United States this season.

Compton Cops The Roses, 22-13

Compton College won the 10th annual Junior Rose Bowl game from Jones College of Mississippi, 22-13, before a record game crowd of 57,132 last Saturday afternoon.

Compton took a 6-0 lead in the first quarter on a 73-yard end-around play by Charley McNeal, who was voted the most valuable player of the game. The Bobcats from the south tied it up late in the first half on a 68-yard pass play from Ken Shultey to Ronnie Williams, but on the following kickoff Tartar back Neal Wagerle scored on an 86-yard run. Compton scored again with seconds left in the half, and led, 20-6 at the intermission. Jones closed the gap to 20-13 in the third period on another scoring pass for 59 yards from Shultey to Williams, but the Compton line sewed up the game by throwing Williams for a safety late in the final quarter.

Lou Batmale To Referee Dixie Basketball Meet

Lou Batmale, dean of Semi-Professional Coast basketball official, will be one of the referees in the Dixie Classic basketball tournament at Raleigh, North Carolina, on December 27-28-29.

The annual tourney will host eight teams this year, and among the lineup of entries are highly ranked clubs. Those squads entered in competition are Oregon State, North Carolina, North Carolina State, Duke, Villanova, Minnesota, Wyoming and Wake Forest. Both the North Carolina State and Minnesota fives are in the national top 20 list.

Ram Gridders End Most Successful Season Since 1948; Bench Strength Powered Locals In Impressive Year

By Joe Callas

The gridiron curtain has fallen for the 1955 football season, and with it ends the most successful year for this college, record-wise, in eight years.

Not since the Ollie Matson-led 1948 Ram team has City College had such a great football machine. In the ten game schedule the Rams powered over nine opponents, and amassed a total of 319 points to a meager 89 by their foes.

If statistics were to prove the greatness of a team, this season's Ram eleven would go down in records as one of California's top two-year teams. The locals outplayed their opponents in every phase of grid statistics. The total offense for the year was 2,618 yards as against 1,137 for their enemies.

Leading the rushing offense was fullback Shirlee McCormick, who gained 511 yards, McCormick was closely followed by Mack Calhoun with 459 yards. The total offense leader was quarterback Les Barros, who gained 972 yards in the season.

Credit for this great team is to be divided equally among its team members, as picking one individual man would be a discredit to the other gridders who helped mold this powerful unit. Coaches Grover Kiemmer, Alex Schwarz, and Roy Burkhead were the key factors in building of the Rams.

The strength of any team lies in its reserves. It was these men who helped carry the Rams to their impressive year. There were many on this team who saw limited action but were good enough to have cracked the first team of almost any other squad in the Big Eight Conference.

This is a credit to the first team players who were good enough gridders to win the starting jobs over many fine footballers.

There are many who started as reserves but worked their way into the starting lineup. Sandy Malnick, the Rams' number halfback is one who cracked the first team with his all around play. He rated as one of the best defensive backs in the conference. Dick Mannini and Rudy Lopez were others who were able to take over starting positions in the backfield.

The Rams were loaded with good backfield performers. Little Walter Smith made up for lack of playing time with abundance of spirit, and Garlin Bluford, who at the start of the season was a weak defensive player, through hard work became one of the best defensive men on the team as well as a fine runner.

Two of the better known backs, Al Chatman and Calhoun, were a pair of halfbacks who helped carry the Rams to their impressive record.

The Ram line, one of the best in California, was paced by many standout performers, most of them rating all-conference honors.

Standouts were Willie Hudson, Bill Canihan, Stan Keith, Tom Kiefer, and Dick Piazza. All these men were top men in their positions. Other linemen who performed creditably throughout the year were Van Parish, LeRoy Thomas, Skip Wallace, Ed Plutte, Jack Derian and Bert Mondino.

Until the lone loss to Stockton, it was learned authoritatively, the Rams were the top team in consideration for the coast bid to the Junior Rose Bowl. Though beaten once, the locals still ranked as one of California's best two-year teams, and undoubtedly one of the nation's best.

Modesto Wins Big Eight Meet At Santa Rosa

By Ray MacIntyre

Modesto's cross-country runners, led by Ray Hale, in the time of 16:15, won the Big Eight Conference meet at Santa Rosa December 3.

The Pirates nosed out City College by four points as the runners from this college put together what was probably their best effort of the season. Santa Rosa was third.

Ray Batz was the college's leading runner as he garnered a third place behind Hale and Harold Kuha, the Santa Rosa track star. Had it not been for a wrong turn midway in the race, Batz could possibly have beaten Kuha for second place.

The meet included representatives from all of the colleges from the Big Eight Conference plus a few men from Hartnell of Salinas, East Contra Costa and San Jose, a total of 43 competitors.

Other members of the Ram team who placed in the three mile run were Henry Strougher, 8th; Bill Tilson, 11th; Manuel Stimpson, 12th, and Roy Buckman, 21st. All of these men received Block SF awards at the semi-annual Block SF banquet in the college cafeteria last night.

Slugfests Feature Intra Boxing

Style was lacking, but not recklessness, as caution was thrown to the winds at the intramural boxing tournament last Wednesday night at the men's gymnasium.

Richard Matsumara's TKO of Bob Siehon in 1:20 of the third round earned him the award as outstanding boxer of the night.

In the first varsity bout Frank Williams clearly defeated Mike Huffman, although there were no official decisions in either varsity match.

Bill Feagaimaaiu lost to Roger Nunez, 150-pound Far Western champ, in one of the classiest exhibitions of the evening. Other results: George Chan (120 lbs.) dec. Pete Villanueva, Dan Haniff (125 lbs.) dec. Rainaldo Mendoza, Manuel Chang (132 lbs.) dec. Charles Flores, Bob Stables (147 lbs.) dec. John Zevas, Roy Buekman and Don Lambert drew, Jim Feiler (159 lbs.) dec. Gus Davis, and Rich Clement (172 lbs.) dec. Norm Hobday.

All contestants received medals. Judges were Jack Gaddy, director of athletics here; Dick Mannini, president of the Block SF Society; and Dick Piazza, standout end on the Ram football team this year.

Ramblings

By Mike Berger

THE All-American team has lost much of its significance because of the increasing number of the mythical first elevens, and for every one of these clubs there are plenty of member players who were flops in the pro game.

Among the many quarterbacks who were All-American in college, but all nothing in the play for pay ranks are Dale Samuels of Purdue, John Rauch of Georgia, Jack Scarbath of Maryland and Don Klosterman of Loyola. All except Scarbath were outstanding passers in college, but when faced with the charges of the mammoth prolineman, these erstwhile stars decided to try their luck in another profession.

Johnny Karras was called the second Red Grange while in his days of competition at Illinois. When cutdown time came in the camp of the Chicago Cardinals, however, Karras was one of several men who packed up and went home.

Hank Lauricella of Tennessee made everybody's All-American team (there were only about 10) in 1951, but successive tryouts with the Dallas and Detroit clubs brought only a pair of pink slips.

Pat Canamella of USC was a terror in his intercollegiate days at the southland school, and with his reputation for putting star players out of commission, seemed headed for a lucrative pro career. Canamella was with Dallas for one year and the army for two. He's out of the service now, but instead of being a crack linebacker Pat is in private business. He and the Cleveland Browns parted company after a brief two week companionship.

The only reason we have for going through this flop list is to point out a farcical quality of the present-day All-American. Players selected to the top eleven of the national magazines reach that position not because they have proved their merits through an entire season, but through favorable publicity by drum-beating press relations men. Such players may deserve the honor, but it should be given on a far different basis than that which now exists. The fact that so many "All-Americans" have failed to make good in the NFL is further proof that their true talents were misjudged and probably misrepresented.

Numerous in the success column in pro ball are the unpublicized, unheralded performers. Such stars as Dan Towler, Paul Younger, Joe Perry, Emlen Tunnell, Frank Gatski, Harion Hill, Bill Johnson and Ed Sprinkle are all either small college or two-year college men who have been neglected by the press, but not by the scouts.

We share the view of those who say that the finest and most representative All-American team can be chosen from the draft lists of the NFL clubs. This would eliminate star players who don't plan on making football their career, but would give a far clearer picture of the worth of 90 per cent of the talent.

Even if this idea was never achieved, maybe the magazines would at least wait until the January issue to announce their picks. This would give them a chance to see their team players in as many as three games instead of the present total of one.

AS Office Election Petitions Due Friday; Student Council Election Committee Sworn In

Election petitions for Associated Student offices are due this Friday in Dean Ralph Hillsman's office, S127, AS Election Commissioner Bill Chisum (pictured at right), announced late last week.

Yesterday afternoon at the Student Council meeting the entire Election Committee was sworn in. The members of the committee include Ed Emig, Joan Finneran, Paul Hacker, Art Hardy, Ken Henry, Al Murray, Sherwin Simmons, Hal Stein and Ray Ward.

Highlighting election activity this week is the Inter-Fraternity Council Convention this afternoon at 3 p.m. in S136. The IFC's political action committee, headed by Walt Martinsen and including Marilyn Euler, George Kaplanis, and Bud Lithgow, will decide, with the combined forces of the IFC and the Inter-Sorority Council, the party platform and the candidates they will put forth on next January's ballot.

More About Queen For East-West Shrine Grid Game

ture and carriage, and voice and personality.

Throughout the entire contest the candidates were asked approximately four different questions. During the screenings they were asked what they thought being the Shrine Queen would mean to them.

Consensus was that being queen would be a wonderful honor and a thrilling experience. It was also described as being a privilege, and an opportunity to represent the college. Some of the candidates appeared to be impressed with the fact that the contest gave them a chance to meet new people and make new friends.

At the last judging, ten finalists were first presented in a body to the special committee. They were then ushered in one at a time and were each asked three questions: Do you believe a woman should have a career? Do you think the voting age should be changed? What is your idea of the ideal husband?

All the finalists more or less agreed that a woman should have a career. One stated that a career would depend upon the individual, and whether she wanted to be married or not. Another thought it wise to be trained for a career and be prepared if she is forced to work.

On the question of changing the voting age, three said that the age should be lowered to 18, feeling that if a man is old enough to fight he is old enough to vote. In supporting the lowered voting age for women, one contestant observed that "the woman is considered three years older anyway."

Seven of the candidates were opposed to lowering the voting age. They felt that at the age of 18 a person has not reached maturity. Some thought that the extra three years would give a youth more practical experience in becoming aware of the problems of the day.

The consensus concerning the ideal husband revealed that he should be considerate, understanding, thoughtful, kind, sincere, trustworthy, industrious, loving, ambitious, dependable, generous, have a good sense of humor and be an "average American."

Chess Tournament Won By Econ Major Here

Earl Pruner, an economics major here, won the Mechanics' Institute Centennial Chess Tournament on November 18, with the score of 11½-2½.

A graduate of Lincoln High School, Pruner allowed only five draws without loss to win out over 15 aspirants for the championship.

Lee Traner Wins Campus Police Pistol Trophy

Members of the Campus Police force held an inter-departmental pistol tournament at the San Mateo Police Range in Colma December 5, according to Campus Police Chief Bob Dagitz.

This competition helped condition the team for a meet with Sacramento last Sunday, Dagitz explained, as well as the January meet with San Jose State College.

For the inter-departmental tournament all members of the Campus Police competed in one of four classes. Winner of the tournament was Lee Traner, who headed the Master class with a score of 256 points.

In the second, Expert class, John Burns won with a score of 215; next was Bill Anderson with 214 points, and in third place was Dagitz with 201 points.

Sharpshooter, the third classification, was headed by George Rogers with 235 points and Harold Hocheet with 216.

The fourth class, Marksman, was won by Dana Christiansen with a total of 209 points, while Ronald Rainville and Bob Wittman were second and third with 202 and 197 points respectively.

Also on the agenda of the Campus Police was a dinner last Saturday night at Yamato Sukiyaki house.

Soph King-Queen Entrants Urged To Make Picture Dates By December 16

Sophomore king and queen contestants who have not received application blanks or made arrangements for having their pictures taken should leave their names and telephone numbers at the Associated Student office, room 169 in the science building, Bob Johnson, sophomore president, announced.

"Sometime during the Christmas vacation, Monday, December 19, through Monday, January 2, 1956, Jim Buckley, sophomore king-queen chairman, will contact them," Johnson said. He will arrange to have their pictures taken and receive their applications. Pictures and petitions of contestants must be submitted on or before Thursday, January 5, 1956.

"Previous winners of queen or king contests are eligible to enter," Johnson revealed, adding that the only qualification is the satisfactory completion of 30 units of college work. Although clubs, fraternities, and sororities are each expected to sponsor a candidate, their backing is not necessary. Any interested and qualified student can enter. Applications are presently available at the AS office.

Recently changed, the election of the king and queen is now scheduled to be held on Monday, January 9, and Tuesday, January 10, at the silver pole in the science building. Sophomore AS members will be allowed one vote apiece. The men will vote for the queen, and the women will vote for the king.

"This procedure will be followed," Johnson stated, "because it will eliminate any partisan voting by fraternities and sororities for their own candidates. Thus the king and queen will be elected more on the basis of popularity."

Winners of the contest will be announced at the Sophomore Ball, scheduled for the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel on Saturday, January 14, from 9 p.m. until midnight.

Peggy Alexander, president of Theta Tau sorority, will present the sophomore king with a trophy at the dance. The queen will be presented with a trophy by Bob Arago, president of Beta Tau fraternity. The trophies are annually sponsored by these organizations. In addition, Beta Tau will provide the perpetual king-queen trophy which will be displayed here.

Admission to the semi-formal affair will be one AS card per couple or $2.50 for non-AS members to be paid at the door before entering the dance.

Another attraction of sophomore week, the soph-prof basketball game, has recently been scheduled to be held on Friday, January 13, 1956. The sophomores will be out to avenge last year's 19-12 defeat.

Brian Gilbert, chairman of the soph-prof basketball committee, is preparing the sophomore squad. Alex Schwarz, assistant football coach here, will captain the professors.

Robinson Jeffers' Greek Classic Medea Opens January 6 At Little Theater; Melanie Mead In Lead

Medea, Robinson Jeffers' version of Euripides' Greek classic, will open Friday, January 6, in the Little Theater here. Other performances will be shown the following night and on January 13 and 14, according to Michael Griffin, drama director.

In the cast are Melanie Mead as Medea, Edwina Moquin as the nurse, Ben Roberts as Jason, Joe Bavaresco as Creon, Stephanie Hoppe, Carole Jean Waugh and Karen Dounille Kinsey playing the three women of Corinth, Herbert Valle as Jason's Slave, Nolle McCianahan as Aegeus, Larry Coviello as the tutor, Mike Derverte as Medea's oldest son and Tony Maguin as the younger son.

Members of the staff include Ed Burbridge, designer; Ethel Geary, production; Roy Maffei, lights; Stephanie Koppe, program; Coviello, tickets; Don Judge, stage; Peggy Powell, house; Charles Mullen, makeup; Ritch Barulich and Janet Mowil, costume design; Edwina Moquin, wardrobe mistress, and Carole Waugh, Greenroom, which is associated with the social aspects of the theater.

The play is a Greek tragedy based on an ancient myth about Jason and Medea who loves him. After killing Jason's Uncle, they go to Corinth where Jason falls in love with King Creon's daughter. Medea, in revenge, kills Creon, and at the finish her two children by Jason.

January 6, opening night, is also Faculty Night so semi-formal dress should be worn, Griffin said. Since this show's production demands need more space, the house will be limited to 76 seats. As a result the drama department must adopt a restricted policy in releasing reserved tickets. The free list is suspended for this show but Associated Student cards from the college are honored for admission.

St. Nick Spirit More Prominent Now

Mature Disbelievers Relive Past Mentally During Christmas Season

By Bob Kauth

Sometime during the holiday season, many mature disbelievers in Santa Claus will be converted as they meander around observing the Christmas festivities.

As a department store Santa is encountered, it is recalled that years ago much time was spent anticipating the arrival of Old Saint Nick and debating whether he was a reality.

From their parents the story that he was the bebearded, portly little owner of the eight tiny reindeer was blindly accepted. Supposedly, he rewarded well-behaved children with gifts of material value every Christmas.

As they matured, the first seed of skepticism was sown. Was Santa's reasoning power logical when he rewarded believers every Christmas regardless of their mischief-makings?

Upon their graduation from high school, the majority were informed by their parents that there is not a Santa Claus. Without question they had again accepted a dubious truth.

All will hear the children's laughter as they blush and shyly tell Santa their hearts' desires. The student of psychology may discern the parents who are enjoying the interview more than the child.

Continuing on their way, the philanthropist notes the skidrogue's toothless smile as he suggests that it will be a Merry Christmas. The artistically inclined will be awed by the Christmas lights and decorations in the suburban districts.

Yuletide spirit is again evident when more laughter is heard in the tenderloin district as someone does the bumps and grinds to Jingle Bells. And the churches are filled as people crowd to attend Christmas Eve services.

Looking up into the black heavens at a distant star, they are perplexed at the size and orderliness of the universe and the mystery of Santa Claus.

Does not the joy of giving exceed that of receiving? Is not the feeling of good will, which can be felt, as true and real as the flickering star, which can only be seen?

Is he then a children's Santa, or could he not be more fact than fiction? And is it not likely that Saint Niek is present every day of the year, although never so apparent as on Christmas?

Council Accepts Rally Resignation

Accepting the resignation of Rally Commissioner Tookie Radillo, the Student Council approved the nomination of Mike Gilbert for the vacated cabinet position last week.

In a statement read before the council, Miss Radillo said that, "I am not resigning because I lack interest in my job but because I want to improve my grades." She said that she is planning to attend San Francisco State College next semester.

Commenting on the resignation, Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities, remarked, "Tookie really had too much interest," and added, "She has many responsibilities at home."

Speaking to the council, Gilbert said, "As the new Rally Commissioner I will try to do as well as Miss Radillo has done."

Under new business, council member Marilyn Sicotte announced that a student at the college had brought to her attention the illegality of placing parking stickers on the left side of a windshield. The law states that only certain types of commercial vehicles can have stickers in this position.

Questioning Campus Police Chief Bob Dagitz, members of the Student Council asked if this practice could result in a traffic citation. Dagitz said it could but since many groups in the state, such as naval shipyards, require it, the possibility of a citation is small.

Bill Cirimele, Emory Lebonville Matched In AS Presidential Race

BILL CIRIMELE

CITY COLLEGE, in reality, is a community of individuals, and as such we have our problems. In order to function properly everyone should be happy and content. The only way this can be achieved is through participation, participation by each and everyone of us. Through this participation we become working members of this community and thus have a say so as to what goes on.

My goal, if I should be so honored as to be elected Associated Student President, would be successful participation by the students, because the only way a president can say that he has a successful administration is by being able to honestly state that all or the majority of the students have participated and have been well satisfied.

There are many problems to be solved at City College, and I am not going to make the assertion that all these problems can be solved, but I would do my best to see that many of these problems are solved as soon as possible.

I feel that I am well qualified to work on student problems, because I have been an active member in student government here since my first semester. The offices I held were Student Council representative, Finance Chairman, and currently Associated Men Student President. BILL CIRIMELE.

EMORY LEBONVILLE

PERHAPS YOU belong to one of the groups well represented in student government—then this doesn't concern you! But, if you are just one of the 2,400 student card holders who wonder what is going on, this will interest you.

I am running as independent candidate for Associated Student President because I feel that there should be a voice that doesn't have any axe to grind, but just wants to plead for the good of the college and all of its students.

It is my desire to assist ALL students of City College and by electing me YOUR president you will put me in a position to do so. — EMORY LEBONVILLE

H&R To Operate St. Francis Hotel

For the fifth consecutive year, selected fourth semester students of the Hotel and Restaurant Department here will take over the operation of the St. Francis Hotel for a day this Friday, January 13.

During that day, the students will have a chance to put into practice techniques learned in their daily classes, and will get an idea of what will be expected of them in their chosen vocation.

Two students each from the Engineering, Journalism, Campus Police, and Photography Departments will attend.

At 9 a.m. there will be a meeting to discuss the duties to be performed and the responsibilities involved. In the afternoon there will be an informal meeting of the students and their department heads with Dan London, manager of the St. Francis, and the other hotel executives to discuss the experiences of the day. London is the originator of the annual event.

Double College Hour This Week

Regular college hour schedules go by the board this Friday because of the double college hour necessitated by the traditional soph-prof basketball game.

Friday's college hour, the last of the semester, will begin at 9:50 a.m. and run until 11:20 a.m. There will be no more college hours because of the dead week immediately preceding the period of final examinations which close the semester. The examinations will be held between Monday, January 23, and Friday, January 27.

The next issue of The Guardsman, scheduled for next Wednesday, is the last of the semester.

Midterm recess is slated to run from Monday, January 30, to Monday, February 6.

Choir Auditions Now Being Held

Auditioning of A Cappella Choir members for the spring semester is presently being held and will continue until the end of this semester, Flossita Badger, director of the choir, said last week.

Appointments for auditions can be made by consulting Miss Badger in her office, which is located in Building 1 on the west campus. The A Cappella Choir is a two unit course and meets regularly on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m.

"All interested students are encouraged to make their appointments as soon as possible," Miss Badger said, adding that the only tangible requirement for A Cappella Choir members is the desire to sing.

A full schedule of on and off campus concerts has already been made for next semester.

The choir will also perform with the Schola Cantorum Choir from the University of San Francisco at the Opera House during the latter part of February.

Redwood Ram Now Occupies Prominent Locale

After months of discussion and worry on the part of Earl Cabrinha, Club Activities Board president, the Redwood Ram left his place of prominence or obscurity on the nearly abandonded west campus to take up a new and more prominent part of campus life in front of the new student union building.

The ton and a half statue of the Ram has been in front of Building 2 on the west campus since March 12, 1947, following earlier presentation to Archibald J. Cloud, president emeritus of the college, by the late Timothy Pflueger, designer and architect of college buildings. The Redwood Ram made his debut at the 1939 World's Fair on Treasure Island as a handicraft exhibit by Dudley C. Carter, wood sculptor. The statue was later painted red and white, the college colors.

Moving the mammoth statue presented a problem to the CAB since none of the college authorities remembered how much cement was used to anchor the statue, or in what form the cement was poured. Student engineers here estimated that the total weight of the Ram would be 2,950 pounds, providing that no additional cement other than what they had uncovered protruded into the earth.

Cabrinha finally enlisted the aid of Farnsworth and Ruggles, professional drayers, to lift the Ram from his place of obscurity and replace it in the center of the lawn in front of the student union building.

Last Tuesday, January 3, at 10 a.m., a large crane and truck accompanied by five men made the move with the avid coaching of student sidewalk supervisors, and without serious mishap.

IFC Politics End As Candidates Shun Party Aid

The Inter-Fraternity Council Political Action Committee abandoned all political participation by the IFC last week, as Emory Lebonville, its presidential candidate, announced his intentions to run independently, leaving the party with no candidates.

The IFC convention, held last month, was able to nominate only three candidates to run for Associated Student offices on the IFC ticket. This would have constituted the most incomplete slate of candidates ever sponsored by the IFC in its history.

Lebonville ran uncontested before the convention, and received its vote of confidence for the party's presidential candidacy.

Also running uncontested was George Kaplanis, who received the vote of confidence by the convention for its candidate for Associated Men Student President, and Roberta Crasnow, who received the Freshman President candidacy, although she was not present, and had not requested a petition to run for AS office. Miss Crasnow refused candidacy.

The convention further reached for candidates by nominating eligible persons, who had made their intentions to run independently known.

Reasons for the refusals of many eligible persons to run on the IFC ticket were put forth by Kaplanis in his acceptance speech. "Everyone has been saying to me that to run on the IFC ticket is the kiss of death . . . This would not be so, if the members of this convention would stick behind its candidates and form a tight unity."

If the members of the IFC would not run or vote independently, he said, the party would once again be strong.

Kaplanis was the first candidate to drop his name from the AMS race. He later submitted an election petition to run as a sophomore member of council independently.

Whether or not the IFC will continue organized political activity will be decided by the next administration of the group.

Music Department Moves Feb. 1

Because of the local Public Utilities Commission project, soon to begin in March, the music department must be moved by February 1, according to Oscar Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management here.

Although the reservoir is to be covered, the top will not be strong enough for parking, he said. A recreation center comprised of tennis courts may eventually be constructed there, Anderson hinted.

The college is trying to form a schedule with the PUC which would delay construction until the new student parking area is established.

Erection of a $50,000 parking lot between the student union building and the men's gymnasium will soon begin, according to Anderson. The building of a sunken freeway along the old railroad tracks will enable students to drive in from Ocean Avenue to park their cars.

"Our intention is to try to get as much parking space for the students as possible, thus replacing the west campus loss," Anderson said.

The new parking area will be to the right of the pathway leading down to the gymnasiums from the faculty circle in back of Cloud Hall. The area to the left is reserved for the football stadium shortly to be built there.

Reserved areas for faculty parking are those behind the student union building and the faculty circle. Approximately 200 parking permits have been issued to members of the faculty and employes of the college, according to Anderson.

31 Independent Candidates In Elections Today

By Denny Delman

With the abandonment of politics for the remainder of the semester by the Inter-Fraternity Council, Associated Student elections today and tomorrow shape up as a complete non-party contest.

An all independent ballot listing a total of 31 candidates will be presented to the voters this time with AS Presidential candidates Bill Cirimele and Emory Lebonville, who had previously received the IFC nomination, leading the field.

Another hotly contested office is that of AS Vice-President, pitting Marilyn Sicotte against Joyce Weaver. Miss Sicotte was formerly Freshman Class President and a member of the Student Council. Miss Weaver was first a member of the council and is currently the chairman of the Finance Committee.

Previously a highly contested office, the position of Associated Men Student President, is now a walkaway for lone candidate Wayne MacFadden. IFC candidate George Kaplanis, and Independent candidate Robert Frick have withdrawn.

The office of Associated Women Student President is another major office which has been ruled as a no contest post, with Independent candidate Rose Thurman the only contender.

James Buckley and Vic Hebert have opened up a two man race for the office of Sophomore Class President. Buckley up until now has been relatively unknown in student government here. Hebert, on the other hand, has been in the Student Council and is presently the Parliamentarian.

Four candidates have filed petitions for Freshman Class President. Virgil Cox, Norman Durieux, Dave Jamison and Paul Ribera are vieing for the class office.

Ten students have declared their candidacy for the seven Sophomore seats on Student Council, Bob Bliss, Marguerita Buxton, Earl Cabrinha, Percy Everhart, Kaplanis, Barbara LeBoff, Toni Mannina, Noreen Phillips, Darlene Reitz and Bill Roberts are trying for the posts.

In the race for the Freshman seats on council, nine petitions have been filed for the seven positions, Campaigning for the offices are James Carroll, Donald Frost, Louise von Emster, Virginia Hase, Jim Kennedy, Ken Metzger, Jeff Podden, Sherwin Simmons, and Metta Weddleton.

Voting will take place both days between 8 a.m. and 2 p.m. in the cafeteria, and between 8 a.m. and 3 p.m. at the silver pole in the science building, and at the entrance to the library in Cloud Hall.

College Elections Are A Vital Form Of American Government

IN A COUNTRY that has been fortunate enough to be free and democratic for nearly 200 years, as the United States has, the right of a community to choose its leaders and its laws is often taken for granted. It is a privilege and a duty that is a vital part of a free people's way of life, but it is too often unthinkingly abused or ignored altogether.

This college is, in many ways, a community within itself, and the voting power is just as important in the fair and able direction of our student government as national balloting is in the choosing of a federal government.

Just as on a national scale, the importance of voting is a vital part of college life, and just as on a national scale, this function is a neglected part of student affairs here. In the past, a turnout of 40 per cent has been considered good for Associated Student elections here.

The current AS elections are taking place here today and tomorrow. There are worthy candidates running for every office, but no matter how good these people are, they will not truly represent the student body, or even the Associated Students, if only a minority ever bother to go to the polls.

There are nearly 2,400 eligible voters here this semester. If past figures are any indication, only some 1,000 of these will vote today and tomorrow. This is a poor showing and is certainly a poor commentary on student interest in college government and affairs.

What makes the situation even more pathetic is that the non-voters, who actually constitute a majority, are the first to complain if student affairs are not run exactly to their liking. These people, who could not spare the few minutes it takes to vote, soon demand a voice in student government, even though they have done nothing to deserve any consideration.

The Associated Student card gives its holder many privileges, but this is one privilege that is at the same time a duty, and an important one. We urge every eligible voter to go to the polls and vote for the candidates he thinks will do the best job. Only in this way can each member of our little community have a real voice in his own college affairs.

The Spectator — Bold New Concepts Keep Poetry From Stagnating

By Don Ball

ONE of the strangest and most difficult to comprehend of all art forms is modern experimental poetry. Limited in publication to very small, very expensive, very shoddy little magazines called literary quarterlies, this new concept is characterized by a lack of punctuation, capitalization, and more often than not, purpose.

Luckily there occasionally appears on the horizon a bold new voice; new in concept, brave in purpose and imaginative in execution. Such a poet is a Grace de Coup who writes under the pseudonym of u. i. grilb. Miss Coup's prose works have appeared under the name of Ralph Klargue.

Shrine Hospital Visit Is Highlight Of East-West Queen's Reign

Highlight of her appearances as Queen of the Shrine East-West game was an unforgettable visit made by Diane Dawson, accompanied by Peggy Alexander, Jane Lutt, Margie Morec, and Eleanor Smith, the princesses of the Royal Court, to the Shrine Hospital last December.

Traditionally the players of both teams visit the hospital, and the children have an opportunity to see their football idols. This past year the children received an extra treat when the Shrine Queen was named for the first time in the game's history. The day before the players went to see the children, the queen along with her court made an appearance of her own, thus enlisting another contribution to help brighten the already glowing spirit within the hospital.

The charm and friendly personalities of the queen and her princesses were dominant as they were readily accepted by the children. Queen and court alike stopped at each bedside to talk and sometimes play with its occupant. Very much in demand were the autographs of Miss Dawson and her attendants.

Awed at first by the actual sight of a queen, the children later marveled at the magnificence and beauty of the robe that she wore. The robe was made of velvet, scarlet in color, trimmed with a white fur border and a jewel-decorated mantel.

Prior to her hospital visit, Miss Dawson made her first television appearance on Shopper's Matinee, one of several afternoon movietimes, where she was interviewed by hostess Evangaline Baker. That same night the queen and her court appeared on San Francisco Tonight with George Lemont substituting for the ailing Don Sherwood. Two weeks later Miss Dawson was a guest on the Frankie Albert show, one of the few sports programs televised from San Francisco.

Her final television spotlight was the day before the game when the queen and her royal court were interviewed by Sandy Spillman on the This Morning show.

Three disc jockey programs and a sports show made up the agenda for the queen's radio guest spots. First was the Nick and Noodnick show which broadcasts from Oakland on station KROW. The following week Miss Dawson shared the guest light with Tom Tannas, manager of boxer Ezzard Charles, on Ira Blue's Sports-east on KNBC.

Her last radio appearances were with disc jockeys Freddie Jorgenson and John Harvey.

'Play's The Thing'

Little Theater Gets 'New Look'

No longer will the statement, "The play's the thing," be taken as literally as before in regard to the City College Little Theater. When the lights go down for the first act of the next Little Theater production here, patrons of the theater-arts will be able to enjoy it to the fullest extent.

The previous Little Theater productions have been semi-arena style presentations with the stage and acting area extending out into the audience, thus limiting the seating capacity to 76. The interior of the Little Theater has undergone a cream colored painting, and new plush green covered chairs have been added for extra comfort of the audience.

The foyer or Green Room has been completely redecorated by several enthusiastic drama students. The newly decorated Green Room comes equipped with a smiling and gracious thespian hostess for each major performance.

The technical aspect of the Little Theater has been tremendously changed. A complete set of new lights, lighting controls and scenery has been added.

Set and costume designers, Ed Burbridge, Ritch Barulich, and Edwina Moquin, are tentatively planning further Little Theater improvements.

The thimble, called finger pot by the Germans and finger fort by the Swedes, was first used by the English sailmakers.

Limited Poll Taken Here On Music In Cafeteria

On the basis of a limited poll taken among students here, plans for the broadcasting of popular music into the cafeteria are being made by the announcing staff of the college. Problems facing the staff and college before the broadcasting can be made possible are many and varied and the objections which have been raised must be dispelled.

Main objections are, that in order to be heard, the music must be loud, and if it is played as loud as would be necessary, it would create bedlam in the cafeteria. Another question raised was what benefit would the announcing students, who present the program, get out of playing records for the students? They would gain no practical experience in their field.

The only broadcasting which students do at the moment here is the daily Campus Carrier, announcements of coming activities of the college, which is allowed just two minutes a day and, of necessity, is programmed to a captive audience.

There are several FM stations in the area which broadcast only music, with no commercials, and they could be beamed into the cafeteria also, but a juke box would do as much.

Contrasting ideas in financial support must be discussed, as must hours of broadcasting.

The announcing and engineering classes here have a small but complete studio to work with, one comparable to a studio at one of the smaller radio stations. It has facilities for recording on tape and disc, and has been the scene of many light comedy and drama productions. Students do all the work of producing these shows.

Shots At Ramdom

By Dolores Stoffers

CAMPUS clubs finally got together and paid for the transportation of the Redwood Ram from the west campus to its new site in front of the Student Union building, but it will be a wonder if they don't have to chip in for lawyers' fees, court costs, etc.

It seems that when the ram was moved, a midget size trench was left uncovered where the base of the ram once set.

Consequently: bleary-eyed student, early class, hole in ground filled with water and assorted junk, slippery edge, knee deep in mud, remorse.

IF THE STACCATO notes resounding throughout the music department seem more profuse these days, it's not completely due to technical proficiency on the part of the music students. It all came about because of the daily culprit who broke into the auditorium during the Christmas vacation, sawed off the switch to the building's heating unit, bore said switch away, leaving music students to suffer in mortal agony until situation was remedied.

AT THE UNIVERSITY of Texas, many of the women at a certain dormitory take a short cut to the campus over a rock wall that runs in front of the campus guild. Men from the campus guild have been very accommodating. Early in the Fall semester, they cleared away overhanging limbs and branches, and next attempted to start a date bureau by posting information about their eligible bachelors on a nearby tree. Currently, the men sponsored a beauty contest, which designated the winner as Miss Wall Walker of 1955.

College Enrollment

Washington High Leads Others By Contributing 537

In a recent enrollment census taken for this semester, it was disclosed that Washington High School, with 537 alumni of the total of 5,281 daytime students who are currently enrolled here, has again contributed more students than any other San Francisco public high school.

Held and conducted under the supervision of Mary Jane Learnard, registrar here, the records were taken from the registrar's office and include the students enrolled in daytime classes only.

Washington High has been the consistent leader for the last five years, with enrollment totals of: 479, Spring 1955; 432, Fall 1954; 366, Spring 1954; 349, Fall 1953; 330, Spring 1953; 310, Fall 1952; 261, Spring 1952; and 247 for the Fall semester in 1951.

Balboa is holding the second place position this semester with a total enrollment of 346 representative students. For the last three semesters Balboa has held second place with enrollment totals of: 309, Spring 1955; 277, Fall 1954; and 250 for the Spring semester in 1954.

From other San Francisco high schools the enrollment figures in numerical orders are: Lincoln, 318; Polytechnic, 285; Lowell, 271; Galileo, 269; Mission, 268; Commerce and Benjamin Franklin, 141; Gompers and O'Connell, 26; Girls High, 9, and Continuation, 6. This makes a complete total of 2,476 students from San Francisco public high schools.

Other enrollment statistics revealed that 616 students are graduates from private high schools in San Francisco. 259 are from high schools in the East Bay area, and 588 students are from other high schools in California. There are 345 students who have been graduated from foreign high schools, and 641 students who are alumni from other high schools in the United States.

"Of the 329 non-high school graduates who are attending the college, 100 of them are currently working for their high school diplomas," Miss Learnard said. Twenty-seven students have completed their high school requirements here and have been awarded diplomas from the San Francisco Unified School District.

"Before matriculating at the college, non-high school graduates who are over 21 years of age may satisfy the college's entrance requirements by successfully passing the Stanford Achievement test," Miss Learnard said.

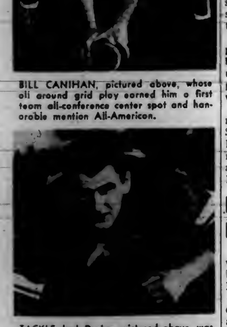
Rams Fourth In Modesto Tourney



RAM GUARDS Stan Keith (left), and Willie Hudson (right), were named to Big Eight Conference all-star team. Hudson was a unanimous first team selection, while Keith garnered a second team berth.

BILL CANIHAN, pictured above, whose all around grid play earned him a first team all-conference center spot and honorable mention All-American.

Big Eight Places Six Rams On All Conference Team

By Mike Berger

With Willie Hudson leading the voting, a total of six Rams were elected to the recently announced 1955 Big Eight All-Conference football teams.

Hudson, who was the only unanimous choice on the mythical clubs, made the first team along with center Bill Canihan, end Dick Piazza and quarterback Les Barros. Guard Stan Keith, who teamed with Hudson to form the bulwark of the college line, made second team honors with standout tackle Jack Derian.

Under Big Eight rules, a team may nominate only six of its members as all-conference candidates, so every one of the Rams chosen by Coaches Grover Klemmer, Alex Schwarz and Roy Burkhead was selected on the pair of elevens.

Barros and Hudson were both repeaters, the only repeaters, from the 1954 All-Conference team. The rugged guard drew plaudits from all observers during his two seasons as the "rock" of the Ram line, and received Junior College All-American honors this year. Barros was equally outstanding at his signal-calling post, and his improvement in 1955 over a fine 1954 performance certainly stamped him as the logical choice for the number one rating at quarterback.

Piazza earned his first team end position with a splendid all around performance throughout the season. His defensive play on the flanks rarely failed to turn in the end sweeps, and a habit of dropping the opposing quarterback on crucial plays certainly didn't hurt his top rating. Piazza lacked the towering height of most pass catchers, but his fine moves on the pass patterns more than made up for this slight disadvantage.

The fourth Ram to make the first team, center Canihan, won the post over many other fine pivotmen, including Bob Long of Stockton, Bob Nelson of Oakland and Dick Jacobson of Santa Rosa. After one season of second string work, Canihan moved into the starting job with the experience and savvy of a veteran. Although outweighed by some 20-30 pounds, the Ram center did some of his best work of the year in completely outplaying Modesto's heralded tackle, Proverb Jacobs, in a November Kezar contest.

Tackle Derian and guard Keith, two City College veterans who made the second team, perfectly complemented the excellent work of Hudson, Canihan and Piazza, and both men narrowly missed in the voting for the first team.

The first and second 1955 Big Eight All-Conference teams are as follows:

FIRST TEAM

Ends: Jim Coveney (Stockton) and Dick Piazza (CCSF).
Tackles: Art Mesistrano (Stockton), Bob Denton (Stockton) and Curtis Iankea (Santa Rosa).
Guards: Willie Hudson (CCSF) and Tom Mitchell (Stockton).
Center: Bill Canihan (CCSF).
Quarterback: Les Barros (CCSF).
Halfbacks: Ken Uselton (Santa Rosa) and Buddy Allen (Oakland).
Fullback: Les Shepard (WCC).

SECOND TEAM

Ends: Gus Dyson (WCC) and Ron Dennis (Oakland).
Tackles: Proverb Jacobs (Modesto), Sheridan Emert (WCC) and Jack Derian (CCSF).
Guards: Stan Keith (CCSF) and Gordon Winship (WCC).
Center: Dick Jacobson (Santa Rosa).
Quarterback: Bob Pringle (WCC).
Halfbacks: Roosevelt Beatty (Sacramento), Charles Brooks (Santa Rosa) and Lew Schmidt (Stockton).
Fullback: Charley Haggard (Stockton).

Hudson Receives 1955 All-American Gridiron Honors

What most observers had opined for a long time was confirmed on December 16 when Ram guard Willie Hudson was named to the junior college All-American team by the Glendale Rating Service.

By winning a berth on the first team, Hudson became the first All-American from the college since Ollie Matson and Burl Toler made it in 1948.

This highest of all football ratings climaxed a series of awards for Hudson, who also captured the San Francisco Examiner vote for the outstanding Northern California two-year college player. That honor was in addition to being the only unanimous pick on the Big Eight All-Conference club.

The 6-1, 195-pounder consistently showed the aggressive all around play which is necessary if any grid performer is to be a standout.

An awesome City College ground attack, which piled up the impressive total of 2,412 yards in the 10 game schedule, was sustained by the vicious blocking up front on the part of Hudson and his mates. In addition, opposition quarterbacks often found themselves spending a great deal of time lying flat on their backs when faced with the zealous charge of Mr. Hudson. Football experts will agree that signal callers find it extremely difficult to pass or run when in this position.

On the other hand, the vastly improved passing of Les Barros should be attributed in a considerable measure to the effectiveness of the pass protection cup, of which one Hudson was the hub.

"Rock," as he is known to his teammates, plans to attend Oregon next September, but with the new accolates on his shoulders, Hudson may receive numerous communiques from a few other NFL prep schools before long.

Intra Series Opens Baseball Practice

With round robin activities under way, the 1956 edition of the Ram baseball team opened practice last week at Balboa Field.

Coach Bill Fischer has divided 36 diamond candidates into three teams and will conduct a round robin series of nine or ten games. This will be a form of screening the players who will eventually make up the Ram roster.

Five veterans from last year's second place team will bolster the local nine. Heading the pitching staff are Ray Warman, the top Ram pitcher last year, and Larry Nissim. Other returnees are catcher Jim Poppin, All-Conference third baseman Jim Dougherty, and outfielder Don DeSurville.

Strengthening the pitching staff will be Lou Flores, a left-hander who performed for the Rams before he entered military service. Other newcomers to the team are Fred Waters of Mission, Rudy Fadeef of Balboa, Bob Bandettini of Sacred Heart and Roger Ferrari of St. Ignatius.

Anyone interested in trying out for the Ram baseball team is urged to see Fischer in the men's gymnasium and sign up.

Basketball Play Tonight

The Masonic Club and the Hawaiian Club romped to victories in the Associated Student Independent Basketball League last week, with the Masonic Club coming from behind to edge the International Relations Club, 25-20, and the Hawaiians slaughtering Aipha Phi Omega, 53-7. The Hotel and Restaurant All-Star team will meet the undefeated Filipino Club in an inter-league tilt tonight in the women's gymnasium at 7 p.m.

Cagers Beaten By Host Pirates In Semi-Finals After Double Victories; LACC Takes Title

By Al Moss

City College's unheralded cagers racked up a pair of victories before losing to Modesto and Fresno in the semi-final round to earn fourth place in the 18th Annual State Junior College Basketball Tournament at Modesto on January 5, 6 and 7.

The Rams chalked up a win over College of Sequoias, 70-64, on opening day and then came back to whip traditional rival San Mateo, 78-69, the next day. A loss to the Pirates, the favored club in the Big Eight this year, knocked the Rams from contention and an anticlimatic loss to defending tourney and state champion Fresno, 80-60, dropped the San Franciscans to fourth. Fresno was third, and Los Angeles City College, by defeating Modesto, 90-80, in the final round, took top honors.

Both the Sequoias and the San Mateo tilts were nip-and-tuck affairs with quick surges and superior board work and shooting the winning factors for the Rams. Norm King was top man for the opener, netting 19 points, while George Campbell and Al Martino shared top mark against the Bulldogs with 18 apiece.

Fresh off two wins and still unappreciated by the experts, Coach Sid Phelan's quintet was in the Modesto game most of the way, and the half-time score of 26-20 is more indicative of the closeness of the game. Shelley Palmer and all-tourney forward Milt Kane, with 25 and 22 points respectively, kept Modesto ahead for most of the game, but it was only in the closing minutes, when the Rams were forced to get the ball and often fouled in the attempt, that the Pirates opened the gap.

King again took his team's scoring honors with 16, while Dan Curley had 15. Poor free-throw shooting probably cost the Rams the game, as they missed 13 of 33 foul shots and 7 of 11 in the first half.

Fresno, led by all-tournament players Huey Davis and 6-8 Gary Aicorn, completely dominated the game as they whipped a tired Ram five. The Fresnans were never headed, although the San Franciscans, never quitting, tied the score several times. Again the scoring was balanced, with Wait Morgan and Al Mock, a stand-out during the entire tourney, each getting 12 points, King 11 and Campbell 9. Fresno's big guns, Davis with 24 and Aicorn, the all-tournament center last year, with 21, were too hot in the clutch situations to allow the Rams a lead.

Rams Rebound With Twin Wins

After suffering a pair of pre-Christmas defeats to break their win string at four, the Rams cagers bounced back to rack up big wins over San Jose, 80-47, on December 29 at San Jose, and Marin, 71-33, the next day at the men's gymnasium here.

Dan Curley, reserve forward who may have cinched a starting berth, starred in both games, scoring 20 against San Jose and holding Marin's brilliant and famous guard, Ken Leslie, to 9 markers while scoring 10 himself.

East Contra Costa and the University of California Freshman team whipped the Rams, with the Vikings topping Coach Sid Phelan's charges by a 66-60 count and the Cubs tromping the college five, 72-52.

Block SF To Elect Officers For Spring

The Block SF will meet this Friday to elect new officers for the spring semester. The election will take place in the team room at the men's gymnasium prior to the Soph-Prof basketball game.

The Annual Awards Banquet was held on December 13 at the college cafeteria and the guest speaker, Roy Hughes, athletic director and head football coach at Cal Poly, spoke to the 100 invited guests.

Chosen as most valuable athletes on their respective teams were Les Barros and Willie Hudson, football; Ray Batz, track; and Bob Palma, soccer.

RAMBLINGS

By Mike Berger

BASKETBALL '56 opens a seven week run in the Big Eight with the Rams playing the Santa Rosa quintet this evening at the men's gymnasium.

Despite a couple of pre-season losses to East Contra Costa (60-66) and the Cal Frosh (52-72), Sid Phelan's charges are coming along very well, but are rated below a loaded West Contra Costa group and the Modesto and Oakland fives in the title contention class.

The pair of losses aren't too indicative of the strength of the club, since Phelan was searching for a combo that could click at that early point in the season.

Right now six men are competing for starting jobs. The front line figures to be composed of 6-7 George Campbell at center and Norm King and Dan Curley at forwards. Al Martino, Wait Morgan and Al Mock are all-in consideration for the starting guard spots, and Curley and Morgan are also waging a close battle for the third forward slot.

Fred Wilkinson, a fine forward from St. Ignatius, is probably out for the season with an ankle injury, but forward Clarence Grider was scheduled to rejoin the team after a brief absence in time for the Modesto Tourney last weekend. Grider will definitely be seeing action today.

* * *

A drastic change in the voting for the two year All-American team should be effected if the current team is any indication of how football "experts" think. No offense to quarterback Bob Pringle of West Contra Costa, but when the Comet made honorable mention on the ciub while at the same time not even a stumble was given to Les Barros, far and away the finest signal caller in the loop last year, something is wrong somewhere.

Here again is an example of publicity rating over talent in the selection of an all-star team. It is obvious that the drum beaters were whacking away at the old tom-tom a little harder for Pringle than for Barros. We hope to see the day when the All-American teams represent exceptionally talented players and not the imaginations of publicity hounds.

Soph, Prof Cagers Clash On Friday

Creaking bones and deep sighs will echo throughout the men's gymnasium this Friday, January 13, during a double college hour, when the Soph-Prof game commences, said Brian Guilbert, chairman. The game is supposed to consist of basketball.

Franklin Sewell, political science instructor, and Dean Louis Batmale figure to be the mainstays of the Profs. Other stalwarts in the same profession will back them up to achieve a victory or a massacre.

The young blood on the Soph team will consist of such sterling players as Warren Rader, Lawrence Lowe, Jim Frank, Diek Mannini, Sam Kuhn, Jim Thomas, Les Barros, Ray McIntyre, Jack Egan, Dick Piazza and Jack McCann. Because of rules, five will play at a time.

Bob Johnson, promoter of the affair, said that the victors, if any, will receive the coveted Shaving Mug Trophy. Master of ceremonies Mike Gilbert will award the prize.

George Mikan picked off 36 rebounds for Minneapolis in a 1952 game against Philadelphia, an NBA record.

King, Queen Winners Crowned Saturday

Greek Drama Ends This Week

Melanie Mead Plays Medea In Little Theater Production; Ben Roberts Has Male Lead As Jason

Final performances of Medea, Robinson Jeffers' version of Euripides' Greek classic, will be shown in the Little Theater this Friday and Saturday, January 13 and 14. Curtain time is 8 p.m.

Melanie Mead plays Medea, the leading role in the tragedy. She is in love with Jason, Ben Roberts, who at first responds. Later, after Medea helps Jason murder his uncle and they flee to Corinth, Jason turns fickle and falls in love with King Creon's daughter. Medea, being a jealous woman, naturally wants revenge.

MELANIE MEAD

Others in the cast are Edwina Moquin as the nurse, Ed Moran as Creon, Stephanie Koppe, Carole Jean Waugh and Karen Douville Kinsey as the three women of Corinth, Herbert Valle as Jason's slave, Nofle McClanahan as Aegeus, Larry Coviello as the tutor, Mike Dervette and Tony Moquin as Medea's sons.

More space will be devoted to the acting because of an amphitheater arrangement to heighten the Greek effect. This will limit the house to 76 seats. Admission price is $1.00 or an Associated Student card, but reserved seats will be restricted, according to Michael Griffin, drama director.

Another unique feature of the show other than the amphitheater are the Greek costumes designed by Ritch Barulich and Janet Mowll. Especially noteworthy is the cloak used by Medea to burn Creon and his daughter to death.

Production staff includes Ed Burbridge, Ethel Geary, Roy Maffei, Don Judge, Larry Coviello, Stephanie Koppe, Antoinette Mannina, Peggy Powell, Charles Mullen, Edwina Moquin and Carole Waugh.

Council Grants Additional Funds To Drama Budget

With a request for an addition of $125 to the drama budget, Joyce Weaver, Finance chairman, touched off a heated argument in a Student Council meeting last week.

Representing the drama department, instructor Michael Griffin asked the council for approval of the grant because, "The need for the money arose from expenses of publicity which we did not anticipate."

Charging, "There is too much of the right hand not knowing what the left hand is doing." Associated Student Dean Woods criticized the drama department for its use of funds. He blamed the expense on the free use of money without an attempt to obtain the necessary items at cheaper prices.

Contesting the right of Woods' voicing his opinion in the matter, Information Service Chairman Lawrence Lowe said that Woods, as chairman of Student Council, must lay aside his gavel if he wanted to personally disagree with Griffin. Woods objected but later turned the gavel over to AS Vice-President Lee Carol Lombard who took charge of the meeting.

Questioning Griffin for the late request of the allocation, Miss Lombard asked, "Why didn't you come to us sooner." Griffin answered that the Christmas vacation had caused a delay.

Blaming part of the trouble on the fact that, "Earlier this semester a representative from drama explained to council the expected costs of productions. A budget to include those costs was approved and it now seems that representative was at fault," George Kaplanis, Junior Chamber of Commerce Liaison Officer, gave his view in the discussion.

He remarked that if drama had used all its funds, the group was still eligible to draw money from the publicity budget.

Antoinette Mannina, Publicity Committee chairman, stated that most of the expenses for printing and advertising needed by drama had come from the publicity allocation.

Making a motion to delay a vote on the $125 budget for further discussion at the next council meeting, Woods was found out of order since he had no right to make a motion. The budget was then passed.

Honor Society Ballots To Be Mailed Soon

Election ballots for the new officers of Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society, will be mailed to the members, according to an announcement by Shelley Balatdos, the organization's president and election committee chairman. This is due to the fact that there are no more college hour meetings scheduled this semester.

The members are expected to return their ballots before the end of the semester, sponsor Don Jensen said. Jensen also sent his congratulations to the members who received their pins at the semi-annual dinner held at Rickeys Red Chimney in Stonestown.

To become a member in good standing of Alpha Gamma Sigma, one must have obtained at least a B average and be carrying at least 15 units.

AS THE END of the semester approaches, campus clubs are going through the final whirl of meetings, social activities and projects.

New officers of the spring semester for the Hillel Foundation are Dave Novesben, president; Jerry Goldman, vice-president; Charlene Winters, secretary; Dorothy Goldman, treasurer; Barbara Gock, social chairman.

Phi Beta Rho pledges gave a dinner for their sorority sisters at the home of Sonya Cohn. A business meeting was held recently for the election of officers and pledge initiation.

Temporary officers of the Cha Cha Cha club are Bert Rodriguiz-von Schilling, president; Ann Allen, vice-president; Maria Giron-Cerna, secretary; Walt Diaz, treasurer; Gilbert Ramirez, CAB representative.

Pledges of Alpha Sigma Delta received pins at a meeting last Friday.

15 Students Gain Credit In Library

Fifteen students enrolled in Business 85 are currently receiving practical library experience while gaining credit, Irene Mensing, the college's reference librarian, stated here.

Among the students currently enrolled in Business 85 and working in the library are Kathy Childs, John Drocco, Harold Goetze, Jane Goldsberry, Bob Guinasso, Donna Hagen, Marilyn Lane, Virginia Lujan, Ruth Reagans, Dorothy Robinson, Opalina Robinson, Al Rubio, Julia Santos, Dick Schaeffer and Gim Wong.

Local Businessmen Visit Campus In Search For Engineering Talent

Thirteen business and industrial procurement officers, representing eight of the largest firms in Northern California, will visit the campus today in search of engineering talent from the college engineering department here, Joseph Amori, placement director, announced last week.

The procurement officers will convene in the student union building at 8 a.m. for breakfast and a short orientation period. The recruitment drive today will be the first large-scale operation on the campus.

College President Louis G. Conian will welcome the group during the breakfast and will introduce the representatives. William Mayo, chairman of the engineering department here, will introduce his instructors. Immediately following the breakfast and conference the group will adjourn to Cloud Hall where all prospective February and June engineering graduates will be processed for personal interviews by company representatives.

Included on the recruitment and procurement team of business and industrial leaders are the following: Sterling T. Cloughley, Administrative Assistant, Division of Highways, District IV; William Conkey, Personnel Division, Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company; James Haig, George Von Arx, and Howard Soule, Soule Steel Company; Jack Parkinson and Robert H. Thompson, University of California Radiation Laboratory; Albert J. Mel, Personnel Director, Bethlehem Steel Corporation; William Conkey, Harry C. Day, George Molart and David Solberg, Pacific Gas and Electric Company; R. Rawlins and A. W. Wohlrab, International Business Machines Corporation.

The engineering department here consists of several basic areas of study: refrigeration and steam power, electronics, and electrical, civil, mechanical, and architectural engineering. The demand for engineering graduates here far exceeds the college's supply. Both the placement service and the engineering department have standing offers for graduates, which remain unfilled.

Last year 30 men were hired from here by the telephone company. These students occupied positions in the plant areas and the commercial division of the company. E. J. O'Grady, the personnel director, in a letter to Amori stated that "the men we employed in our Plant Department are well qualified in the electrical and electronic field as a result of the training they received in your technical classes."

Some of the college graduates who were referred to in the letter are Mark Bell, advertising salesman; Harold Fritz, telephone representative; Anthony Frost, cable splicer's helper; Fred Hampton, installer; and Robert Kelleher, transmissionman.

Trophy Presentation To Take Place As Highlight Of Soph Ball Activity In St. Francis Hotel Mural Room

By Bob Kauth

Winners of the sophomore king-queen contest will be announced and crowned at the Sophomore Ball, which will be held this Saturday, January 14, from 9 p.m. until midnight in the Mural Room in the St. Francis Hotel, Bob Johnson, sophomore president, said last week.

Election of the sophomore king and queen was concluded yesterday. The balloting was open to members of the Associated Students and was held at the silver pole in the science building.

BOB JOHNSON, Sophomore Class president.

King and queen candidates and their sponsoring organizations were recently announced by Jim Buckley, chairman of the sophomore king-queen contest.

Sponsors and competing queen contestants were Marion Cheader, Theta Tau; Lois Mantel and Dot Roscoe, Phi Beta Rho; and Marilyn Sicotte and Jean Vachon from Kappa Phi.

Candidates for the king title and their sponsors were Bill Anderson, Alpha Kappa Rho; Sid Bernstein, Phi Beta Delta; Joe Canepa, Beta Phi Beta; Ray MacIntyre, Block SF; Dick Mannini and Don Wilson from Zeta Phi Sigma.

Traditional trophies, which were donated by Theta Tau sorority and Beta Tau fraternity, will be awarded to the king and queen at the ball.

The queen will receive her trophy from Bob Arago, president of Beta Tau, and the king will be presented with his trophy by Peggy Alexander, president of Theta Tau. Beta Tau will also provide the perpetual king-queen trophy, which will be displayed here.

In addition, the queen will receive a sweater, a pair of white buckskin shoes, and a fur collar which were respectively donated by Knit Kraft, 2544 Mission; Byron's Shoes, Stonestown; and Minudri Furrier, 69 West Portal Avenue. The king will be presented with a white shirt and tie, which were donated by Josephs Men's Clothing at 2376 Mission, and a pair of shoes from Florsheim Shoes, located at 756 Market Street.

"The dance will conclude and highlight the activities of sophomore week, which ends this Saturday," Johnson said, adding that all students are encouraged to come.

Steve Paul and his band will provide the music for the semi-formal affair. Admission will be one AS card per couple or $2.50 per couple for non-AS members. The tickets will be available at the door before entering the dance.

Dance bids will also be distributed by Joyce Weaver and her committee memoers, which include Suzie Brady, Barbara Poister, Tookie Radillo, Debbie Rudser and Elite Smith. Wayne MacFadden will direct the picture taking.

Also on the agenda for sophomore week is the soph-prof basketball game, which will be held this Friday, January 13, during a double college hour in the men's gymnasium. Aleg Schwarz, assistant football coach here, will captain the professors. Brian Gilbert, chairman of the soph-prof basketball committee, has prepared and selected the sophomore team.

H&R Department Receives First Sheraton Award

Recognition of the need for the proper training of young people for the industry was the motivation behind the recent inauguration by the Sheraton Corporation of America of a series of semester award plaques to be presented to outstanding hotel and restaurant students here.

The training being given H&R students at the college was brought to the attention of the Sheraton Corporation by Russell St. John, assistant sales manager of the Sheraton-Palace Hotel, who also acts as a part-time instructor of advertising and sales promotion in the H&R department here, St. John was responsible for the origination of these new awards.

Long noted in the industry for its advanced thinking and planning since its modest beginning in 1933, the Sheraton Corporation has had one of the most rapid growths in the history of the free enterprise system in the United States to become one of the largest hotel chains in the country. At present there are 32 Sheraton hotels in the United States and Canada, with the great majority located in leading cities.

"The Sheraton Corporation has always been very interested in the potential personnel from the H&R training programs of colleges and universities and more recently in the courses offered by the H&R department here in staffing their hotels," Wendell Muntz, chairman of the H&R department here, stated.

This college is the first in the nation to receive these plaques, the first of which will be awarded starting next semester. In addition to receiving a plaque, each semester's winner will have his name placed on a perpetual trophy which will remain in the college.

New Rec Group Has Awards Tea

The Recreation Association of City College of San Francisco, formerly the Women's Athletic Association, will hold an awards tea today at 3:15 p.m. in the women's gymnasium, according to Noreen Phillip, president of the organization.

Promotion of co-educational social and athletic activities will be the main purpose of the new group.

This afternoon's tea will be the final social activity of the fall semester for the WAA and the RA. New officers will be installed and awards will also be presented. All members of the new organization and the WAA are invited to attend the tea, Miss Phillip announced.

Scholarships To UC Due March 2

Applications for scholarships to the University of California are now available in Dean Mary Golding's office. They must be filled out and returned to Dean Golding before Friday, March 2.

Competition is open to undergraduates who can fulfill the requirements. The University Committee on Undergraduate Scholarships will judge the applicants according to need, scholastic ability and activities on and off the campus.

There are also a limited number of honorary awards in recognition of outstanding achievements, which give no money for those applicants who have no financial need but have maintained at least a 2.5 average.

Besides the application the following documents are expected: letters of recommendation showing character, ability and financial need, a report on the applicant from an officer authorized to represent him, a photograph, and two official, up to date transcripts of all work completed.

The same procedures as in the past will be followed throughout the registration for the coming semester, Blair said.

Students who have lost the proposed yellow program sheets may make arrangements with their counsellors to form their new programs.

Students who neglected to make counseller appointments for the planning of Spring Semester programs because they intended to transfer to another institution, and have now decided to remain here, are encouraged to consult their counsellers as soon as possible. "This would avoid much confusion during the registration period," Blair stated.

Registration for new students will be held on Wednesday, February 8.

Schedule For Night Classes Announced

The schedule for evening classes, Spring 1956, was announced last week by Edward E. Sandys, dean of General College courses here.

Monday, January 30, and Tuesday, January 31, are registration days. Monday, February 6, classes begin; Monday, February 13, a holiday, Lincoln's Birthday; Wednesday, February 22, a holiday, Washington's Birthday; Wednesday, May 30, a holiday, Memorial Day, and Thursday, June 14, last day of semester.

Registration for evening classes will be held between 7 and 10 p.m. on the days announced.

Sandys also stated that Business 165, which is not offered during the day, will be available to day students in the evenings. Students wishing to enroll should plan to see Sandys this week to make arrangements.

Subsistence Forms For Vets Due Soon

Veterans' monthly subsistence forms for January are to be filed in the Veteran's Affair Office, Room 134 of the science building, during finals' week, according to Robin Dunn, assistant in charge of Veterans Affairs.

Those veterans planning to transfer to another college for the Spring semester are warned that they must report to Dunn's office and file the necessary forms if they have not already done so.

It has been found, Dunn stated, that several veterans attending the college under the provisions of the Korean G.I. Bill of Rights (public law 550) have been found ineligible for further benefits through a misunderstanding of the regulations applying to changing of majors.

Buckley, Durieux Take Class Offices As Students Give Confidence Vote To Unopposed AMS, AWS Candidates

By Denny Delman

Bill Cirimele led the Independents to a sweeping victory at the polls last week when he defeated Emory Lebonville for the office of Associated Student President, 414 to 316.

For the first time during the period of its existence the Inter-Fraternity Council failed to run even one candidate. Its members, fearing the "kiss of death" label that was described as tagging most of its nominees, refused to accept the party's nomination and backing for a student office. Those who did receive nominations later turned them down and ran independently.

In the closest race of the campaign, with only 63 votes separating the two contenders, Joyce Weaver edged opponent Marilyn Sicotte for the office of Associated Student Vice-President, 392 to 329.

Candidates Wayne MacFadden and Rose Thurman, each running unopposed for the offices of Associated Men Student President and Associated Women Student President respectively, received an overwhelming vote of confidence from the students. MacFadden getting 608 votes and Miss Thurman receiving 562.

In a slightly one-sided contest, Jim Buckley swamped veteran opponent Vic Hebert in the race for Sophomore Presidency, downing him 420 to 265.

Norman Durieux survived a field of four to win the Freshman Class Presidency taking 208 of the 699 votes cast for that office, defeating his opponents Dave Jamison (174), Virgil Cox (167) and Paul Ribera (150).

Bill Roberts led the race for the seven Sophomore Council seats, acquiring a total of 516 votes. Fairly close to Roberts were Toni Mannina with 486, Barbara Lelloff, 482; Darlene Reitz, 467; Bob Bliss, 464; Earl Cabrinha, 459; and George Kaplanis, 453.

The two losers in the race were Noreen Philips with 431 votes and Percy Everhart with 430.

Virginia Hase captured the largest number of votes for the Freshman Council seats, amassing a total of 522 votes. Following closely behind Miss Hase were candidates Jim Kennedy with 510 votes; James Carroll with 508; Ken Metzger, 480; Louise von Emster, 454; Metta Weddleton, 427; and Jeff Podden, 412. Donald Frost and Sherwin Simmons narrowly missed being elected, receiving 399 and 391 votes respectively.

At the start of the semester there began the reconstruction of a two-party system here. The United Student Association sponsored by Mervin Slosberg, political science instructor, began to rebuild the foundation that had previously collapsed under the onslaught of the IFC. Soon after the rebuilding program had commenced, illness overtook Slosberg, forcing him to give up his sponsorship of the organization. The party collapsed again.

This put the college back on the one-party track running together with the Independents who were now stronger than ever. One IFC convention, three nominations and three withdrawals later the students had only the Independents to choose from, putting the college back to the no party systems that existed ten years ago.

Voting this semester found 758 of the eligible 2400 AS members going to the polls. Not since the Fall of 1948 when, with a total of 917 voters casting their ballots the IFC went down to its first defeat at the hands of the Student League, has the voting been near the number reached this semester.

One thousand one hundred ninety-six ballots were cast by students in the Spring semester of 1948 when the IFC first came in as a party. The all time low came in the Spring of 1952 when only 348 students went to the polls. That time the IFC was unopposed.

Activities Board Lists Candidates For New Offices

Ed Emig, James Wright, and Al Camiliara were nominated for the office of Club Activities Board President for the Spring semester at a regular meeting of the CAB held Tuesday, January 10, here.

Nominations for vice-president included Barbara Mokay and John Wright; recording secretary, Martha Lozer, Sue Harrington and Barbara Mokay; corresponding secretary, Darlene Reitz.

CAB President Earl Cabrinha announced the passing of an amendment to the CAB constitution by the Student Council.

The amendment states that "all officers of CAB must be in regular attendance in order to maintain the office."

In the closing minutes of the meeting, the Hawaiian Club was named as an officially "off campus" organization for failure to attend the CAB meetings, and Emig, chairman of the Cafeteria Clean-up committee, announced plans for a slogan contest to be held among the Associated Students.

Mike Berger Is Named Editor Of Guardsman

A recent vote of The Guardsman editorial board selected the new staff for the spring semester, shifting three members to different posts and naming three new additions to the board.

Mike Berger, formerly sports editor, was elected editor-in-chief for the new semester; Don Bail, news and feature editor in the fall, was selected as the managing editor, and Al Moss, for three semesters the editor-in-chief, was named to the sports editor post, a job he held before becoming the editor.

New editorial board members are as follows: Toni Mannina, news editor; Denny Delman, staff editor, and Bob Kauth, fpature editor.

AS Vice President Elect

Forum Seeks Staff As College Literary Magazine Begins Plans For Annual Spring Publication

Students wishing to help compile the Forum, the college's literary magazine, are invited to attend the first Forum Club meeting which will be held in Room 222 in the science building during college hour on Friday, February 17, Catherine Connolly, faculty adviser, announced yesterday.

"The editor and other members of the Forum's editorial committee will be elected early in the semester in order to facilitate publication," Miss Connolly said. Students with the urge to write and artists for illustrative drawings are especially needed. Typists and publicity agents are also necessary in order to prepare the Forum for publication.

"Depending upon the amount of time, work and copy contributed, a student can earn from one to five units of college credit," Miss Connolly said, adding that they may also enroll without credit. Enrollment is with the consent of Miss Connolly, and the conference hours are held during college hour.

Enrollment is not necessary in order to submit material for publication in the Forum, for any student who has attended the college, night or day, during the Fall semester of 1955 or will attend the Spring semester of 1956 is eligible to send in manuscripts.

"Satirical or humorous material in any form are especially encouraged," Miss Connolly said. Short stories, one-act plays, essays, criticisms, articles of current interest, poetry and light verse are published in the Forum.

Delta Psi Wins Dougherty Honor

Delta Psi won the Dougherty plaque and trophy for the sorority with the highest scholarship for the midterm period last Thursday. The award was given at a luncheon in the faculty dining room, according to Mary Golding, dean of women.

This makes four semesters in which Delta Psi has won the trophy. The only other sorority that has ever won is Theta Tau. Kappa Phi was the runner-up. The award was set up to honor Margaret Dougherty, dean of women at the college from 1937 to 1953.

Hostesses were the sorority presidents, Marilyn Euler, Delta Psi; Jan Digiovanni, Kappa Phi; Peggy Alexander, Theta Tau; Martha Dill, Zeta Chi; Bobbie Le Boff, Phi Beta Rho, and Rose Thurman, Alpha Lambda Chi.

Janet Mowll Selected As Outstanding Student

Janet Mowll was awarded the Outstanding Service Award for the Fall 1955 semester by Associated Student President Dean Woods last Friday night at the council dinner held in the Green Room of the Merchandise Mart.

Miss Mowll, since her entrance here, has donated her services in the art field, working mainly on the displays seen throughout the campus.

The award is a gold key presented each semester to the outstanding student excluding Student Council representatives, the AS President and his cabinet.

Criticism Of Elected Officers Should Be Constructive Only

ONE of the primary failings of student government, or government of any kind for that matter, comes not from the eleeted or appointed officers but from the voters who are governed by those officers.

Too often there is a tendency to criticize elected officers before giving them any semblance of a chance to prove themselves. Because a certain voter's choice was not elected, the opponent is therefore worthless and incompetent before he can start. This sort of logic is unsound and thoughtless, and hampers everyone concerned.

Even worse is the individual who doesn't vote at all, and then feels it his duty to condemn whoever gets into office, without giving anyone a chance to justify the selections. How anyone who never bothered to vote can consider it his privilege to criticize at any time has never been quite decided.

There is a time and a place for criticism, but it is certainly not now. We have just elected a fine group of Associated Student officers, and until they prove themselves, we must go with the majority and assume them to be completely competent and trustworthy.

They will prove to be just that, but criticism may still be forthcoming, and we are sure that the new officers will welcome anything of a constructive nature. If faults become evident, then they can be complained about. No one has the right to complain before there is anything to complain about.

Thus we offer congratulations to the outstanding group of newly-elected officers, and we hope that any rightful criticism forthcoming will be taken constructively. Any of the stupid and unnecessary ideas that will undoubtedly be advanced should be ignored.

Cliches Best Way Of Saying Thanks

THERE are a great many cliches that are usually avoided in the newspaper game, but in the cases of at least two of them, their very over-use proves the truth of them.

The first and more important of the two is this: No newspaper can exist without news, and thus without news sources. Without the students, instructors and administrators to tip us off to our big news breaks, and to patiently answer our innumerable questions, we would really be in deep water.

The other so-called cliche, not used often enough by anyone, is simply: Thank you very much. The entire Guardsman staff owes a great deal to a great many people. We wish that they could all be named here, but space forbids. To everyone connected with the college, both student and faculty, who has helped us so much, our warmest and sincerest thanks.

And now a final departure from newspaper policy. It has been traditional for only very good or very experienced writers to refer to themselves in the singular. I am neither very good nor very experienced, but I have something to say that can only be said in the first person.

In my too-long term as editor-in-chief of The Guardsman, the paper has been awarded the highest possible national rating, All-American, twice. It has been my great pleasure to have a fine staff, the real workers. My thanks to them all, to the ones who did my work for me and who deserve every honor possible.

My warmest thanks, too, to George Mullany, who has done so much for the journalism department and for each of our staff personally.

Last, but certainly not least, more appreciation than I can ever possibly express in words or writing to Joan Nourse, The Guardsman's adviser. When this newspaper continually is rated among the highest of its class in the nation, the credit cannot be given to one staff or one editor. I know I speak for everyone on the staff when I say a million or more thanks to Miss Nourse, our All-American adviser and friend.

Glen Eakin's Medea Art Posters Shown In Downtown Windows

Assisting in the promotion of the college's little theater production of Medea was Glen Eakin, an advertising art major here. Because the production required a special kind of art for posters, an expert in caricature drawing was needed for the job.

When Eakin heard of plans for the Greek drama he volunteered to make drawings of the actors as they rehearsed the play.

After spending three afternoons making sketches, Eakin began work on the posters. The 12 drawings depicted the most dramatic segments of the Greek classic. Prominent in most of the drawings was Melanie Mead, who played the title role of Medea.

The finished posters were done on white with the caricatures done in black. A touch of red lettering was used to give the final striking effect.

In addition to his work for the little theater, Eakin had the distinction of having his work accepted by KQED and used by that educational channel.

After completing his art courses at the college, Eakin plans to do professional art work.

Shots At Ramdom: Highlights And Trivia

By Dolores Stoffers

PERHAPS one of the most played up events of the semester was the bonfire rally, which boasted the largest attendance of any rally planned here in months.

The throng, consisting of students from neighboring high schools, a few students at the college, dogs, cats, the San Francisco Fire Department, the San Francisco Police Department, curious passers-by, and later on a volunteer bucket brigade, sat on the windward side of a wet hill, and patiently waited for the appearance of the Hi-Lo's, while the song leaders whirled and bumped and ground and whirled some more. After a few repeat performances of this, the Hi-Lo's came on stage long enough to force a couple of ditties through chattering teeth then to rush off, explaining during the exodus that they didn't know the bonfire rally was to be outdoors.

• • •

THOUGHTS OF PACKING went through the heads of a good percentage of the students as the administration tightened up on attendance and grade point averages.

The administration announced that portable buildings would be in use here by November 1, thus alleviating the overcrowded conditions.

EVERY EVENT this semester seemed to have been an excuse to hold a queen contest. Winners of the crowns were more numerous than presidents in Guatemala. As one student summed it up, "Who's queen this week?"

• • •

STUDENTS WHO LIKE to dabble in politics were able to do so, at the same time getting college credits, as the administration created a new major, community leadership. Regular committee and board meetings were given names such as club activities management, assembly and rally leadership, and student government.

Student government proved to be the greatest nemesis of the Drama Club. Funds for the department were made unavailable to them, when it was learned that Michael Griffin, drama instructor, failed to turn in the required list of AS card numbers, and that he had engaged San Francisco State College students to take part in a production. After this was remedied, and Griffin put on some of the best performances ever to come from the club while pleading before council, the department's budget was finally unfrozen.

MEMBERS OF THE GUARDSMAN staff also made print. The overzealous editor-in-chief and sports editor, while doing some on-the-spot reporting, got themselves locked in Kezar Stadium, and after hours of whining and howling, were heard by a roaming member of the police department—and two more members of the American press walked through the iron gates to freedom.

• • •

A TWO-PARTY SYSTEM in the college's politics was nearly revived when the United Students Association showed hopes of reorganizing, but the college wound up with a no-party system, when the IFC party disbanded after their candidates hollered a lot but did little about strength through unity.

LEE CAROL LOMBARD, Associated Student vice-president, and co. made news while playing a spirited duet of Chop Sticks in the student union building. During the performance, a kind one, aspiring to be a great impressario, posted the sign: "Please help these girls; music is their only means of support." Students responded with a shower of pennies. They're still counting.

The Spectator

Reading Tastes In USA Lean Toward Little Books

By Don Ball

ALONG with such growing American customs as 19-cent hamburgers and orange and/or purple cars is the trend toward condensation of novels for what the hucksters call "the busy modern reader."

Most adept practitioners of this black art is the Reader's Digest Corporation. The Pleasantville publishing house seems to have taken upon itself the Herculean task of succeeding Classic Comics as the great equalizer.

No longer will the busy modern reader be forced to struggle through as many as 200 wordy, incisive pages of Mickey Spillane's vivid prose, for soon only the GOOD parts will be published and all that boring stuff about the plot will be culled, leaving only the meat in the story.

Conversation at cocktail parties will take on a new flavor as the elbow vendors vie with one another to see who has read the most books in the fewest amount of pages.

The busy modern reader approach is a clever sales play. It implies that anyone so foolish as to read an entire uncondensed book is not only lazy, but also old-fashioned as well.

It will be interesting to see how the nursery rhymes lend themselves to condensation. Possibly they will read something like this:

Mary had a white lamb that followed her.

When Humpty fell off the wall the army couldn't fix him.

Jack Spratt and his wife stripped the bones bare.

Mother Hubbard's dog starved.

If the condensation craze is carried to its logical conclusion, the theater will undergo radical changes, too.

The following is the type of play which may supplant conventional theatrical forms: the three-act play in one. It is titled, Major Chutney's Revenge.

In the cast are Major Chutney, an English colonial official; English privates, a pretty girl, her attendants and a bad man.

The setting is India at the turn of the century; wild, primitive, a poor man's Garden of Eden. As the curtain rises we see another curtain advertising the new Reader's Digest 110-page version of War and Peace; that curtain rises and we see the set, a poor imitation of a glade in the Indian jungle.

Major: "Gad, this jungle is a crashing bore."

Private: "Yes, sir."

Major: "Do you hear something, Private?"

Private: "Yes, sir, I 'ear somethin'."

Major: "Gore blimey. Look over there." It's a pretty girl and her attendants. Pukka good stuff, 'ey what, Private?"

Private: "Yes, sir."

(Women enter. They wear sarongs. Their costumes are condensed.)

Attendants in unison: "Look at the funny men with the snakes around their legs. Ha ha."

Pretty Girl: "Those are puttees, stupid!"

Attendants: "Yes, ma'm."

(Pretty Girl walks over to Major. She pulls on his walrus mustache. They embrace. As they kiss the Bad Man enters unnoticed.)

Bad Man: "Illiiieeeeee. I will take this woman for mine own."

Major: "Just a minute, old boy. That's a bit cheeky, isn't it?"

(Bad Man whirls Kriss in the air while contemplating Major's observation. Kriss becomes entangled in vines above, Private takes puttee from leg and strangles Bad Man. Curtain lowers as man from 20th Century Fox dickers for movie rights and rest of cast joins hands to sing There Will Always Be An England.)

Unfortunately, many late-comers may be tramping in the rest of the audience leaves to read the newest 17-page novel.

Students Offered Aptitude Testing

Students here may not realize what opportunities are being missed by not signing up to take the aptitude tests made available by the counselling department.

If anyone is undecided about what profession to go into, or doesn't know for what he is best suited, he should see his counsellor immediately and arrange with the receptionist to take one of these tests in order to receive guidance in making up his mind.

The tests are divided into five types: interest inventories, academic aptitudes, mechanics, reading, and personality adjustments.

Interest inventories are tests which determine what the student likes. Mechanics tests determine if a person has mechanical ability. Reading tests tell whether he comprehends what he reads.

Personality adjustments determine if a person has the right personality for college and for associations with other persons on his own level. Thus any needed corrections of his personality are more easily accomplished.

These tests are available and recommended for all students who are undecided about what their plans are for later life, in order to narrow down the fields of interests.

To Arms Men!

Work Is A Big Problem For Lazy Student

By Bob O'Brien

TO ARMS, MEN! A new and vicious threat to our very way of life rears its ugly head. To fight this creeping horror will require a united effort.

Time was when a self-respecting college student was held in high esteem at home. Papa was happy to feed and clothe his image, and to keep him in a manner commensurate with his station in life. Mama bragged over the back fence what a smart lad Sammy was. When Sam came home for the vacation, the first thing he did was to hit the old man up for a couple of bucks and then embark upon a merry round of idle gaiety. All was as it should be.

That was before industry made such a point of hiring part-time help. Now as soon as Sammy lays down his books, Pop hands him an application blank for the post office.

This fearsome attitude has even begun to make itself apparent among veteran's wives and mothers. A friend of ours, who with his frau has been getting along nicely on his monthly pittance from the government, was practically driven from the family bomb shelter in an effort to get him to go to work. He finally beat the rap by flunking the mental test at United Parcel Service, but it was too close a call for comfort.

There is no best way to keep from being employed. When the problem confronts you, it must be met with ingenuity and vigor.

One method is to prove to your tormentors that you can make money without working for it. Try setting up a pea and shell game in the neighborhood playground. A chap we know was doing quite well picking up the kiddies' lunch money, but a couple of smart sixth graders eased two extra peas into the game and broke it up: Don't let the older fellows play.

Of course there's nothing wrong with using your college training to advantage. One of the sharper chemistry majors concocted a highly potent batch of prune whip and was doing a land office business with the local high school boys when the Alcoholic Tax Unit caught up with him. He will be missed here at the college.

These are just a few of the countless ways we can combat the black menace of labor. By using our keen, college-trained minds, we should be able to avoid the disgrace of honest effort almost indefinitely.

By the way, if anyone would like more helpful hints on avoiding gainful employment, they can call after 6 o'clock. That's the time we get home from the post office.

Rams Trounce Bearcubs, Edged By Stockton In 59-55 Thriller As Tight Big Eight Race Opens

By Al Moss and Mike Berger

City College's hot-and-cold cagers earned a split in the opening week of what promises to be a well-balanced Big Eight Conference race when they trounced Santa Rosa, 71-39, on January 11 in the men's gymnasium here and then dropped a tight decision at Stockton, 59-55, on January 13.

The loss undoubtedly hurt the Rams' chances, but not severely as six of the league's eight teams suffered at least one loss in the opening rounds.

SID PHELAN, Ram cage coach.

Although the Sid Phelan quintet exhibited their usual scoring balance, they couldn't overcome an early Stockton lead and a last-minute spree by Mustang guard Bob Cena. Cena scored the final five of his team's points by hitting on three straight foul shots to make the score 57-53 and then, after Ram Norm King had hit a follow-up, driving in for the two points that iced the game.

City College controlled the boards with their superior height, but too many in-and-out shots and tight calls hurt them. Clarence Grider topped the Rams with 14 points, Al Mock had 13 and King, who collected 19 rebounds, tanked 12 points.

With Grider, George Campbell and King sweeping the backboards clean, the Santa Rosa contest was a runaway, as the Rams built up a 40-21 lead at the half, and lengthened that margin to a 30 point spread throughout the remainder of the game.

Even a complete bench-clearing by Phelan couldn't keep the score down, as the reserves only added to the margin of victory.

This complete domination of the boards was initiated by Campbell, who started at center and tanked 13 points in addition to his strong rebounding. Grider, who entered the game late in the first half and played almost the entire final 20 minutes, shared high point honors with King at 14 markers.

The former All-City star from Lowell played what amounted to his most consistent game of the season, as his all-around performance at both the center and forward slots impressed observers.

Bill Quinn, high scoring forward for the Cubs, was held to 6 points before he fouled out, and guard Dean Morgan was high scorer for the visitors with 10 markers.

Technical Foul Gives H&R Intra Cage Win

A last-minute technical foul gave the Hotel and Restaurant All-Stars a single free throw and they sunk it to gain a 51-50 victory over the Filipino Club in an inter-league intramural basketball game on January 11 at the women's gymnasium.

The technical foul was called on an out-of-bounds play when the Filipino Club lost control of the ball with a 48-48 tie in the final 40 seconds.

Block SF Elects Smith President

Voting was held on Friday, January 13, to elect new officers of the Block SF Society for the Spring semester.

New president for the Block SF will be Walt Smith, who won by an overwhelming margin. Other Spring officers include Sandy Malnick, vice-president; John Apperson, secretary-treasurer; and Rich Max, sergeant-at-arms. Smith, Malnick and Max were members of the football team, while Apperson participated on the track team.

Fall semester President, Dick Mannini; Vice-President, Willie Hudson; Secretary-Treasurer, Rich Martucci, and Sergeant-at-Arms Kent Scovill, were congratulated on the outstanding work they did for the Block SF by sponsor Bill Fischer.

Fischer proposed that the Block SF members wear their sweaters once or twice a week in order to put the block in a more prominent position. The old jackets may be worn, but Fischer asked new members to purchase the newly adopted sweaters.

President Mannini received numerous volunteers to sell cokes at the high school basketball games here at the men's gymnasium, and then adjourned the meeting.

RAMBLINGS

Ram Cagers Profit By Extra Contests

By Mike Berger

IN THE TEAM scoring totals for the Ram cagers through their first 12 games this season is found almost an exact parallel to the corresponding period in the last campaign.

The Sid Phelan five has scored a total of 783 markers in the first dozen tilts, an average of slightly better than 65 points per performance. Last season's club scored 780 points through the same period, almost identical to this team's present record.

By yielding a total of 718 counters to opponents thus far, the '55-'56 quint is only slightly behind last season's 12-game mark of 675 points.

There is considerable hope in these comparisons, because this present team has the advantage of two extra non-conference tilts to its credit. The 1954-55 aggregation had the advantage of only five practice affairs before the rigors of the Big Eight schedule, but the current edition of the Rams has played 12 contests, including four Modesto Tourney games, before embarking on the conference slate.

Since Norm King is the only starting player back from last season, the rebuilding job before Coach Phelan needs time to assert itself. These added pre-league tests have all been important cogs in the club's development, and should prove to be a distinct asset to the final showing of the squad.

We don't know who Allan Hancock was, but he must have been from Akron, Ohio, because two-thirds of the Hancock basketball team hails from the tire capital of America. Nothing particular strange about this piece of information, except that Allan Hancock College is in Santa Maria, which is in California.

It seems that Bill Bertka, head coach of the Bulldogs, was an extremely successful high school coach in the Ohio hamlet, and when offered a position here on the coast decided that he just couldn't let all-his prize pupils drift away to be exploited by some other mentor.

Only logical thing to do was to bring 'em along to Santa Maria, and here they are, and that ain't all, because the boys are currently setting a rather warm pace by averaging over 100 points per game. Were it not for a cool spell in the first round of the Modesto fracas, according to many observers, the Hancock club would have been battling in the finals.

Maybe the Ram rooters should import USF, Dayton or some other suitable team to represent the college next year for the casaba campaign. Remember, you cringed at the idea here first.

Strong Race In Offing For Big Eight Cage Play

By Mario Cassulo

With the Big Eight basketball season in full swing and the strong and weak teams starting to take shape, the time has arrived for a close analysis of the league as a whole.

The West Contra Costa Comets reign as defending champs by virtue of their winning efforts last season. But the new season is young, and there is hope for all the league fives at the present time.

West Contra Costa: Last year the Comets, under the tutelage of Rudy Hansen, won 25 while losing only 5, and won the Big Eight title. The key men in the scheme of things for the Comets are Clyde Hardeman and Joe Dorsey.

Hardeman, who is a six footer and returning lettermen, will play one of the forwards. Dorsey (6'3"), a great rebounder, is at the center slot. J. D Banks, a mainstay last season, will rejoin the squad after the midterm break.

Modesto: Coach Leon Lafaille's club lost the Modesto Tournament to one of the best two-year college teams in the nation when they lost to Los Angeles City College by a 90 to 80 score.

During the tourney, Modesto defeated Ventura, 73-48; Bakersfield, 66-60; San Francisco, 73-58, and finished in second place.

The Pirate attack focuses on three men, forwards Milt Kane (6'4"), Dick McAnulty (6'2") and center Sheldon Palmer (6'4").

Stockton: The Mustangs, under Coach Frank Boyle, finished second in last year's Big Eight race.

In the Modesto tourney they split in two games, winning by a score of 75 to 61 against Long Beach while losing to Fresno by a score of 81 to 65.

Guard Dave Klurman, who shoots well from the outside, is the big man for the Mustangs, although he is small in size at 5'10". Bob Ghiglieri, first string center, and guard Bob Cena are also highly regarded.

Oakland: Sixth place and 18 wins and 5 losses were the result of last year's campaign for Bill Rockwell's Thunderbirds.

If Oakland does nothing else this year their season has already taken on a spotlight event. They defeated the fabulous 100 points a game team in two-year college ranks, Allan Hancock College. Oakland upset the mighty Hancock squad, 71 to 65, in the Modesto Tourney.

The Thunderbirds are small, but have good balance. Guards Sam Haggerty (5'10"), and Bob Moorehead (5'9"), and forward Hal Theus (6'3") are three of Oakland's front liners.

San Mateo: The Bulldogs won nine and lost five last year and wound up in fourth place in the Big Eight.

In the way of player personnel, the Bulldogs have Ed Fitzgerald (6'2"), a terrific jump shot man, Doug Taylor (5'11") either at forward or guard, and Lou Pucci (6'). Ron Kreiger and Vern Jimenez round out the first squad.

Sacramento: Head Coach Carl Boyer guided the Panthers to a 12 and 13 won lost record and a fourth place tie in the Big Eight race last season.

Sacramento in playing only two games didn't look very impressive. They are a small club. Ed Franklin (6'3"), playing the post, is the man the Panthers hope will lead the way to victory. Doug Pierce (5'11") guard and Ray Davis (5'11") forward help to deliver the Panther attack.

Santa Rosa: Only bright spot of the season for the Bearcubs seems to be star forward Bill Guinn. Last season's 8-18 record may be bettered, but prospects don't look good for the Cub crew.

Taking into consideration the value of the above information, this writer sees the conference race ending up in this order: City College, Modesto, West Contra Costa, Stockton, Oakland, San Mateo, Sacramento and Santa Rosa.

The Cleveland Browns have never failed to enter the championship playoff game in four years in the All America Conference and six seasons in the National Football League, a total of ten campaigns and seven championships.

Profs 17—Sophs 14

Aging Cagers Administer Hoop Lesson To Bewildered Innocents

By Don Ball

The inexorable juggernaut of the prof basketball team steamrolled its way to its eighth consecutive win last Friday; surprising no one, but bruising several.

Sailing into the second half with a comparatively comfortable 6-1 lead, they were forced to fight off a determined soph challenge which at one time had the score knotted at 10-10, before garnering the game by a 17-14 tally.

First half play was relatively uninspired; prime interest coming from speculation as to whether or not Alex Schwarz would foul out before the half ended. Benevolent officiating allowed him to play into the early portion of the second half before getting the final whistle.

Sportsman that he is, Schwarz, seemingly the sachem of the venerable faculty crew, graciously allowed himself to continue playing, saying, "If I can't play, then Thomas can't." Jim Thomas, who was high point man for the game although playing only the second half appeared to be soph spark-plug. It was deemed expedient to allow Big Alex to continue the bout.

Coming alive in the second half after going scoreless in the first, Ralph Hillsman led the prof scoring as well as setting up several other scoring plays with his sharp ball handling and passing.

The game was two minutes old before the scoreboard was lit when the Blond Achilles, Grover Klemmer, dropped a lay-up in to give the profs a 2 point lead which was never headed except briefly in the second half.

The game was unmarred by fatalities, although Dan Corsetti of the soph team was forced to exit from the tilt when his leg bone was separated from his knee bone causing a dislocation of the knee due to a lack of connection of bones and tendons.

Thomas and Hillsman, the high-point men for their squads, each collected a brace of buckets, while Thomas also garnered a pair of points via the foul shot route and Hillsman added one to his total the same way.

Other high scorers were Klemmer and Sid Phelan with four apiece. Referee Bruce Peters made his bid for fame when he was sporadically showered with pennies throughout the latter part of the game, lending an air of frivolity to an otherwise serious and dignified event.

CLINT REDUS, City College's high scoring track performer last season, is expected to return this year.

Burkhead Meets This Year's Varsity Track Men In Meeting Tomorrow

With one of the stiffest schedules in this college's history facing this year's track team, Coach Roy Burkhead is preparing to meet his prospective varsity men in a meeting to be held tomorrow at 3 p.m. in the men's gymnasium.

Hurdle and dash man Clint Redus is expected to return to bolster the team, while long distance runner Roy Batz is another performer expected to return. Redus smashed the City College high and low hurdle records last season, and came within one-tenth of a second of tying the 100-yard dash record for the Big Eight Conference.

Batz ran third in the recent All-Northern California cross country run while leading the Rams to a second place finish.

Burkhead plans to keep 40 men on this year's varsity team, and from it he hopes to mold a strong team to cope with the extremely tough schedule ahead.

Season schedule follows:

March 17: City College, Oakland, California Frosh at University of California.

March 24: City College, San Mateo, Santa Rosa at Santa Rosa.

April 7: City College, West Contra Costa, Stanford Frosh at Stanford.

April 13: City College, Stockton, Sacramento at Sacramento.

April 20: City College, West Contra Costa, Modesto at Modesto.

April 28: Big Eight Conference Meet at Sacramento.

Signups For Tennis In Men's Gym; All Team Berths Open

Signups for the tennis team are currently being taken by Coach Roy Diederichsen in the men's gymnasium, and the court mentor points out that all positions on the team are still open for competition.

Final positions for the conference matches will be determined by inter-team matches and competition with local high school squads. Conference play starts on March 2 and ends on May 4 with the championships.

Big Eight schedule is as follows: March 2, at Sacramento; March 9, San Mateo, here; March 16, West Contra Costa; March 23, at Stockton; April 6, Modesto, here; April 13, Oakland, here; April 27, at Santa Rosa; and May 4-5, league championships at Stockton.

All home matches for the Rams will be played at the Golden Gate Park courts, and will start at 2 p.m.

Candy was passed for two members of the sorority announcing their engagements. The two are Martha Dill, the sorority's president and Nancy Orr. Installation of the new officers and the pinning of pledges will take place on Thursday, January 26.

Alpha Gamma Sigma Candidates Are Named

Election ballots for the spring '56 officers of Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society on campus, will be mailed to the members, according to an announcement by Shelly Bolanos, present president and election committee chairman.

Candidates for president are Dave Baar and Jack Loscutoff; for vice-president, Martha Lozar and Carol Tanning.

The members are expected to return their ballots before the end of the semester, sponsor Don Jensen said.

Drama Budget Cut From $125 To $6 For Medea Costs

Reconsidering the $125 drama budget approved two weeks ago, Student Council amended the grant and passed the new allocation for $6 in a meeting last week.

Lee Carol Lombard, Associated Student vice-president, asked the council to reconsider the budget because, "All the money that has been spent by the drama department for publicity will be reimbursed by the Publicity Committee."

Representing drama, Ritch Barulich said, "We were forced to use $70.88 from our budget for advertising because the Publicity Committee refused to pay it." This amount, in addition to $49 for programs for the little theater production of Medea, will be reimbursed to drama. The $6 grant was approved for miscellaneous items.

Reporting on a pair of shoes stolen from a display case in the science building, Associated Men Student President Bob Johnson told the Student Council that no trace of the shoes had been found. They were donated by the Florsheim Shoe store located at 756 Market Street and were to be given to the sophomore King. Johnson said that a new pair of shoes could be purchased at cost to replace those stolen on January 11.

Requesting that council approve a donation for $25, Councilman Bob Bliss asked for a contribution on behalf of the AS to be given to the March of Dimes drive which started here yesterday. The donation was granted after Finance Chairman Joyce Weaver announced that because of financial obligations a larger amount could not be given.

Two letters, to be signed by all the council members, were drafted last week and are going to be sent to Mayor George Christopher and to John J. Ferdon, president of the board of supervisors, congratulating them on their victories and giving best wishes for their term of office. The suggestion for the letters was made by George Kaplanis, councilman.

Vandalism Hits Music Building

Reports of vandalism on the west campus during the Christmas holidays and the weekend of January 6 were bared last week by Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management here.

Hardest hit by the vandal wave was the music building which had an electrical switch sawed off causing classes there to be held under slightly freezing conditions. Because of the incident materials have been moved elsewhere.

Another theft, this time by a student here, was that of a typewriter taken from one of the main buildings. The student was apprehended within the hour when he tried to pawn it at a downtown pawnshop, and is now awaiting trial.

This action has resulted in the student's dismissal from the college. After Anderson pointed out the foolishness on the part of the student he added that "because of his actions the student has jeopardized his career."

Anderson re-emphasized a standing rule here that students are "forbidden by the administration to move equipment from room to room without written permission."

Sophomore Week Committee

H&R Students Related To Hotel Men; Operation St. Francis Termed 'Wonderful Opportunity'

Included in the 140 students benefiting from the nationally recognized hotel and restaurant program at the college are four students related to prominent hotel men.

Majoring in hotel management here is Tommy Dupar, son of Frank Dupar, the president of the St. Francis Hotel Co. The third semester student here learned of the college's hotel and restaurant program from students who had graduated from the college. Serving in the Housekeeping department at last Friday's Operation St. Francis, Dupar regarded the experience as "A wonderful opportunity to work with people in the field."

Bob Snider, a sophomore at the college, is related by marriage to the late Harvey M. Toy, the originator of one of the largest scholarships for the hotel and restaurant department.

With the recommendations of the Toy family, Snider enrolled at the college because the hotel and restaurant management course offered here is considered one of the most reputable in the country.

Serving in the publicity department last Friday at the St. Francis Hotel, Snider commented on the wonderful gesture of the hotel to enable students to observe the theories which are studied here being put into practice.

Kiyoshi Kobayashi, a first semester student from Japan, is the son of the owner of Tokyo's most famous hotels, the Marunochi and the Mayflower. While working at another of Tokyo's renowned hotels, the Imperial, Kobayashi heard about the specialized courses at the college in hotel and restaurant, later completing his courses. Kobayashi plans to go to Cornell University.

Upon his return to Tokyo, Kobayashi plans to put into practice the hotel management courses he has studied. Working in the mail department at the St. Francis Friday, Kobayashi expressed it as a wonderful experience to see behind the scenes of the world famous hotel.

Tom Gowman, a freshman here, is the son of the former owner of the Commodore Hotel in Los Angeles, the Gowman Hotel and the Earl Hotel in Seattle. The retired hotel magnate is also a past president of the American Hotel Association.

Liberal Trade-In On Texts At Ramporium

Ramporium, the student store, is now accepting text-books for a liberal trade-in value.

Dick Main, book store manager, urges students to turn in their books as soon as possible, and no later than the final day of this semester, Friday, January 27.

The time schedule for next semester will be on sale at the Ramporium during final examination week. Having a time schedule before registration starts is advantageous, because it will save a student about an hour in scheduling his program during registration, Main declared.

Regular hours will be observed during finals week, January 23 to January 27, both by the cafeteria and the Ramporium.

Theta Tau Scholarship

The alumnae of Theta Tau sorority presented a scholarship of $25 and an Associated Student card to Therese Brychta last week.

Miss Brychta is a third semester student majoring in education. She was a member of The Guardsman staff for two semesters and was previously a resident of Montana.

Model UN Sign-up Ends January 27 For Spring Meet

The 6th Model United Nations of the Pacific West will hold this year's conference at Corvallis, Oregon, on April 4-7, according to Vic Hebert.

Hebert, who is on the debate committee, will also be one of the students representing the college at the meeting in Corvallis, the site of Oregon State College.

Any student who would like to attend the conference as an active participant is requested to sign up by Friday, January 27, at the Associated Student office.

The only requirements are as follows: genuine interest and knowledge in the UN and world affairs, good grades, and speaking ability.

All students who are interested and who meet the requirements will be welcomed by the UN committee.

Usual Hours During Finals In Library

During the final examination week starting next Monday, the college's library will be open as usual from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., according to Irene Mensing, the college's reference librarian.

Although books may be taken out during this week, they may be kept only overnight. This is to accommodate all students who may need books or magazines to assist them in their finals, Miss Mensing stated.

In ancient Rome, geese were used as we use watch dogs today. Any disturbance or the approach of a stranger caused them to honk loudly.

Women Take Advantage Of Leap Year

Girls Get Chance Of A Lifetime As AWS Sponsors Sadie Hawkins Turnabout Dance This Friday

For the first time in the college's 20-year-old history, the Associated Women Students will hold a Leap Year Dance. The affair will be held this Friday, March 2, from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight in the student union building, according to Rose Thuman, AWS president.

Campus dress has been determined as appropriate attire for the dance, Miss Thurman added.

Distribution of tickets for the "girl-ask-boy" affair will begin today. AWS committee members are in charge of distribution. Women and their escorts will be admitted at the door with presentation of an AS card.

Music for the Sadie Hawkins type dance is being donated by Local No. 6 of the American Federation of Musicians, A. F. of L., through a grant from the Music Performance Trust Funds of the Recording Industries.

The Music Performance Trust Funds are an extension of a program of public service originated by the Recording and Transcription Fund of the American Federation of Musicians, A. F. of L., James C. Petrillo, president.

Committee chairmen for the turnabout dance appointed by Miss Thurman are Janice Ruhland, who is in charge of tickets; Anita Garrett, who is handling publicity for the affair; Diane Oliver is in charge of decorations; Darlene Reitz heads the refreshment committee for the dance, and Wilmette Tollefson is planning all the entertainment to be presented. The entertainment will consist of musical numbers presented by AWS members.

Couples only will be admitted to the dance, Miss Thurman added, and students coming stag will not be admitted. Miss Thurman urged all women to attend this once-in-four-year dance.

Pre-Registration Starts March 7 For Next Semester

Pre-registration appointments for next semester programs will start on Wednesday, March 7, at the counselling office, S160, counsellor Waddington Blair stated recently.

"Early registration appointments are due to students' changing of programs and majors, the added counselling chores that summer session, again scheduled here this year, bears, and the larger high school enrollment," Blair said.

Registration will be based on the numbering system inaugurated a year ago, and priority in registering will be on a first come, first served basis.

Students failing to keep appointments will have to make new appointments and ordinarily receive later registration numbers.

As a student makes his appointment, he will receive a proposed program sheet indicating the date and hour of the appointment. The student may plan his future program on this sample sheet before the appointment date.

"By preparing this sheet in advance of the appointment date, more time will be available during the interview for a student and his counsellor to discuss other matters that may be of interest and concern to the student," Blair explained.

AS Card Sales Hit New Record

Associated Student card sales as of Thursday, February 23, reached $6,900, the two-thirds mark of the $10,000 goal, Chairman Dave Jamison announced recently.

"Card sales, in comparison with any other recent semester at this time, have reached their highest peak," Jamison remarked. "Though there is an added enrollment of students this semester, the percentage of cards sold is still greater than in the past," he added.

The sales contest between the Associated Women and Associated Men students, which began February 20, will extend to this Friday, March 2, with a trophy being awarded to the student selling the most cards.

Jamison corrected the erroneous idea that the west campus would not be used for parking this semester, and declared that all AS card holders would be able to take advantage of the available parking space.

Other benefits include admission or reduced rates to most student activities, special discounts as enumerated on the back of AS cards, and eligibility to run for office in student government.

Students wishing to purchase cards may do so at the Associated Student office, the student bank, or during lunch hour at the cafeteria.

March 28 Deadline For Dropping Courses Here

Students wishing to drop a course have until Wednesday, March 28, to do so, stated John Brady, coordinator of student welfare. The March 28 date occurs approximately 12 days after the first midterm period ends.

Brady stressed that the college's regulations will be strictly adhered to and students may not drop courses because of failure to attend classes.

Set procedure is to notify the student's counselor, who will outline steps as to officially dropping the course. February 17 was the last day to add a course or make a change in class sections.

$169 Donated To March Of Dimes

Students and faculty members here contributed $169.69 to the March of Dimes this year, according to Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities, who directed the drive for dimes on the campus.

Although $25 was donated to the drive by the Associated Students after receiving the approval of the Student Council, the major amount was received by voluntary individual contributions.

A letter of thanks was recently received by Hillsman from D. V. Nicholson, campaign director for the March of Dimes. Nicholson expressed his appreciation for the solicitations of the fraternities, sororities, faculty members, and the student body as a whole.

Jim Wright, vice-president of the Club Activities Board, served as finance chairman. Al Camalari collected from the clubs; Ed Emig, CAB president, handled campus collections, and Sherwin Simmons collected from fraternities and sororities. Ken Henry and Janette Murphy also served as collectors.

Rigid Enforcement Of Parking Rules Now In Practice

Rigid law enforcement is being practiced on the campus by the new campus police force, Lee Hargus, chief and Campus Police Liaison officer to the Associated Students, announced last week.

Since last Thursday, Hargus and his staff, composed of 29 patrolmen, have been giving out citations to motorists who park their cars on the west campus without permits.

Student parking on campus is restricted to the west campus parking lot, by permit only, and to areas around the men's and women's gymnasiums. Faculty parking zones are located on the road behind Cloud Hall and the area behind the student union building.

Students parking without permit in the west campus parking lot or in the faculty parking area will be subject to a $2 fine, Hargus said, payable to the San Francisco Clerk of the Municipal Court, not the college.

To get a permit, a student must present his driver's license, car registration card, and Associated Student card to the officer in charge in Room C120. The office will be open from 9 to 10 a.m. and 1 to 2 p.m.

These men are also responsible for directing traffic on campus, keeping order at all AS activities, and giving citations to motorists for violation of any traffic law, Hargus explained.

AMS Schedules 3 Major Events

Three main events will form the center of the Associated Men Student activities for this semester, according to Wayne McFadden, AMS president here.

A basketball tournament consisting of three competing leagues has been formed by the AMS. These leagues are composed of the Intra-Fraternity Council, the Independents and the Hotel and Restaurant groups.

Two major functions scheduled on the AMS social calendar are a smoker featuring a boxing match to which students' fathers will be invited and the traditional Mardi Gras festivities. These events will take place on May 9 and May 18 respectively.

Suggestion boxes are to be established around the campus to determine what the majority of the AMS members prefer and advocate in the manner of social events.

Election of officers to fill the posts of AMS treasurer, secretary and committee heads are currently taking place, McFadden added.

Castlewood Country Club Is Site Of Intercollegiate Soph Hop For Nineteen Colleges

The annual intercollegiate Soph Hop, sponsored by the sophomore classes of 19 San Francisco and Bay Area colleges and universities, is to be held next Saturday, March 3, at the Castlewood Country Club in Pleasanton, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., according to Jim Buckley, sophomore class president here.

Featured event of the evening will be the crowning of the "Inter-Collegiate Soph Doll" from a group of sophomore women representing the sponsoring institutions. This year, Sandy Martinsen, a graduate of Balboa High school and a third semester student here whose major is Business Administration, will represent City College in this contest. She is 18 years old, stands 5 feet 3 inches tall and weighs 120 pounds.

SANDY MARTINSEN, this year's Soph Doll.

Bids are now on sale at the Associated Student office, the cafeteria, or from Buckley. They are two dollars per couple. The sponsoring colleges include City College, East and West Contra Costa Colleges, College of the Marin, San Francisco State, University of San Francisco, College of the Pacific, San Jose State, Stanford and California.

Since there are a limited number of bids for each college, and it proves to be one of the biggest dances of the year, it is recommended that anyone interested in going should get the bid at the earliest possible time to insure admission.

Last year Myrna Taylor represented City College in this contest and out of a field of seven contestants, finished in second place. But since this year there are 19 schools it could be much more difficult to win the contest, Buckley said.

ISC Affairs Open March 18 With Joint Rush Tea

Inter-Sorority Council's rushing affairs will soon be getting underway, Dean Mary Golding stated last week. Getting the semester off to its start will be a joint rushing tea Sunday, March 18, a formal affair that will be held at Laurel Hall, 2676 California Street, from 2 to 5 p.m., Dean Golding noted.

Registration for all women's rushing affairs will take place in the Dean of Women's office next week, March 5, 6 and 7, Miss Golding further stated that rushing events give the new women students an opportunity to get acquainted with the sororities and the sorority members a chance to know the new women.

Following the formal tea, each sorority will hold a coke party. The time and date of the affairs are March 20, 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., Delta Psi; 8 to 10 p.m., Alpha Lambda Chi; March 22, 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., Kappa Phi; 8 to 10 p.m., Theta Tau; March 27, 6:30 to 8 p.m., Phi Beta Rho; 8 to 10 p.m., Zeta Chi.

Dinners given by each sorority will be after the coke parties on April 3 for Delta Phi; April 4, Alpha Lambda Chi; April 5, Kappa Phi; April 7, Theta Tau, while on April 8, Phi Beta Rho will have a noon affair and Zeta Chi will hold an evening affair.

Barbara Batmale, president of the ISC and other ISC members Bobbie LeBoff, Toni Mannina, Gail Ziegler, Rose Thurman, and Ellie Benner, are currently planning all the rushing affairs, presents and the ISC Ball, which will be held May 5 at the Palace Hotel.

Rally Friday In Student Union For Modesto-Ram Tilt

A Modesto-Ram basketball rally will be held in the student union building's cafeteria this Friday to build up spirit for the big game to be played the same night at 8 p.m. in the men's gymnasium, Mike Gilbert, rally commissioner, announced last week.

To induce more students to attend the college's basketball games and support the team coached by Sid Phelan, Gilbert said, is the purpose of the rally.

More rallies are being planned by the Rally Committee, which is composed to date this semester of 22 students. The members are as follows: Mike Gilbert, rally commissioner; Ginny Hase, assistant rally commissioner; Diane Dawson, secretary; Gary Greenberg, treasurer; Desha Williams, sergeant-at-arms; and Sam Frazelin, yell leader. Committee chairman are John Zevas, Guardsman distribution; Dee Nooiman, publicity; Donna Puccinelli, posters; and Carol Olson, entertainment. Other members of the Rally Committee include Ann Allen, Audrey Bocek, William Chisum, Joetta Colwell, Anatolia Guerra, Darlene Johnson, Marilyn Lane, Paula Moore, Debora Rudser, Walter Smith, Jr., Wilmette Tollefsen and Abigale Ver Hulst.

Besides the obvious function of the Rally Committee, its members also are responsible for the distribution of The Guardsman. Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities here, sponsors the committee, which meets Mondays and Wednesdays at 2 p.m., and is a one unit course called Recreational Leadership G8.

Deadline Near For Forum Contributions

Forum, City College's annual Spring publication of student talent in writing and art, is again seeking material for its 1956 issue, with the deadline tentatively set for April 2.

Catherine Connolly, the faculty adviser of Forum, states that short stores, essays, poetry and writings in satirical-humorous vein can now be offered for consideration for publication. Contributors are not limited in the amount of material submitted.

Requests are also made for staff assistants and management of Forum, and Miss Connolly extended an invitation to all those interesting in typing, selling advertisement space, or working in any business capacity for the publication to apply for such positions.

The magazine is directed by a group of approximately 20 members known as the Forum Board.

Benefit From College Activity Is Not Just A One-Way Street

A JOB of no mean proportions lies before the newly elected Associated Student officers this semester, but it is up to the students themselves to make something or nothing out of the next three and one half months.

Nobody going to college has a right to expect anything more than he puts into that school. The mere fact that City College of San Francisco requires fewer personal ties of its students does not change this fact. Those who had doubts are learning now that regardless of college, the A's and B's don't appear on the final grade reports unless the amount of work necessary for these grades is met.

By the same token, don't expect anything out of the ordinary from this college unless you are willing to contribute some sort of effort on its behalf. Support of the athletic teams or participation and planning in social and student government affairs are both excellent ways to contribute to the college, but these categories don't fall into the interests of everyone.

The way all, regardless of interest, can affirm their support of City College and its Associated Student government is through the purchase of an AS card. Funds derived from AS card sales are distributed to every on-campus activity throughout the semester, and all those who invest the $5 price of one card are sure to receive many times the value of that bill in return through support of their chosen activity by the AS funds.

Recent additions to the campus, including the George D. Smith Student Union Building and Cloud Hall; plus the expected additions of a Fine Arts Building and a new football stadium, are all expressions of faith in the future greatness of this college. An apathetic student body is the surest way to destroy confidence and replace it with disgust.

All the good steps that have been made through student enthusiasm can be ruined by enough lackadaisical people who look upon the two-year college as nothing more than a stopover between high school and a four-year university.

What such people completely overlook is this fact: Since the grades at the two-year college count just as much, then so should the student activities that seem so important in later college life.

Don't let the misleading conceptions of the value of the two-year college dull the desire to make something of your semesters here.

It would say a great deal for City College, and all two-year colleges, if everyone would take advantage of the opportunities offered here, and make sure that the countless students who follow will continue to have these advantages. All this can be made possible, of course, with your purchase of an Associated Student card.

The Spectator — Passion For Confession Proves Financially OK

By Don Ball

TWO of America's more famous ladies, one an expatriate, the other the daughter of a former president, have recently chosen to bare their innermost secrets.

The women: the Duchess of Windsor, nee Wallis Simpson, and Margaret Truman, first mother; profit.

Having serialized that which had previously been closeted deep in their heart, they have exposed their private lives to the eyes of prying millions, or at least those who can take their orbs off the latest on Grace Kelly. Miss Kelly, who ineidentally is of THE Philadelphia Kellys, is planning to marry a foreigner of some kind and this annoys not only the country's isolationists, but also the guys who like skinny girls. But I digress.

The Duchess, who previously had met her husband-to-be during a whirlwind tour of the leading hide-outs of Europe, says she was "unprepared" and "unarmed" for the abdication of her ever-loving spouse, which paved the way for their marriage. For those who don't remember, the Duchess would have been the Queen of England if she hadn't gone and gotten a divorce. On second thought, it was several divorces.

It will make interesting copy indeed if the Duchess tells some of her husband's crocheting secrets. The Duke is still a king when it comes to a hook stitch.

Lovely Margaret, on the other hand, has never known the bonds of marriage. The confines of domestic bliss have never been hers.

She confides that she figured there was little possibility of any action as long as she was getting her mail at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue. The villains in her eyes, being everpresent secret-service men.

"Returning from a date to a setting such as that," says Margaret, "there is not much you can do except shake hands, and that's no way to get engaged." At least that's what she thinks.

Demurely, she blushingly admits that, "As anybody who can read English must know, the press (and I don't know how many of the general public) yearned to get me married, or at least engaged, while I was in the White House."

Oddly enough, Miss Truman makes no mention of what has kept her from marrying since she left the presidential mansion, although she does coyly mention that her mother has been fearful she would marry an actor.

Ernie Nevers, the famed fullback from Stanford, once scored six touchdowns and kicked four extra points for the Chicago Cardinals in a 1929 game with the Chicago Bears for a total of 40 points scored, a pro football record that still stands.

New Celestial Globe For Astronomy Classes Aids Students' Strained Eyes

Unpurchasable Sphere Built By Physics Prof

Thanks to the efforts of James Ripley, physics instructor, and Louis Berman, astronomy instructor here, students in Astronomy 1A will have an easier time learning the fundamentals of the Solar System.

Up to this semester, students being lectured about the location of the stars on the celestial sphere had to squint their eyes and hope for the best as they looked at a model about a foot in diameter. From the back of the class this can look very small. A few small details could be missed—such as what it is all about.

For the uninitiated, the celestial sphere contains many of the same markings and measurements that we use here on earth, only they are projected into space. The sphere has a horizon, and poles and meridians. It also has an equator.

To get a clearer picture of it just imagine a globe that has nothing left but a rod representing the equator and another one representing the prime meridian. Finally one more circular rod at a 45 degree angle to the equator which represents the horizon. In other words a skeleton of the earth. Just project that image into space and you have a celestial sphere.

Now that you are confused, we'll tell you why they have such a system, and why it is important to learn if astronomy appeals to you.

The chief reason for its existence is that the positions of the stars are easy to find by using this system.

Well anyway, Dr. Berman, finding it difficult to convey his instructions on the subject because of the display's small size, decided to build a larger one. This is where Ripley came in.

Ripley, using the campus physics laboratory, took some brass and a few other things and built one in about a month. The main reason for this is that you can't buy one on the outside.

Making the sphere about three feet in diameter and giving the various brass rods different colors will save students' eyes in the future, as well as teach them something. One of the features of the sphere is that the stand it is on has wheels and can be moved to any part of the classroom with ease.

With this acquisition, Dr. Berman is now looking forward to better things. Someday he hopes to get a refracting telescope which would be installed in the dome on top of the science building. That was the original purpose of the dome, but lack of funds has prevented it from being used for this purpose. It is now being used as a planetarium.

Anyway, Dr. Berman has his large celestial sphere.

LOUIS BERMAN familiarizes Astronomy students with the location of stars and constellations. Intra-solar communication is pending, and intra-galactic travel an eventual possibility, announces Berman, who believes man's entry into space will be as great a step as his original emigration.

Gals Get Chance With Extra Day

Beware—all men on campus, for this is the year for which thousands of women have been waiting for. Lasso in one hand and fishnet in the other, the average female is out "to get a man" this year, and it may be you.

This state of affairs arises from the seemingly innocent placement of an extra day on the calendar every four years. Innocent enough, some women take this quite seriously, and even you may be proposed to this year.

To show the innocence of the origin of Leap Year, it was discovered that every four years an extra day needed to be added to the calendar to allow the earth to make its complete yearly revolution. Nothing about marriage was even said. Somewhere along the way someone came up with the idea and Leap Year has found the women "leapin to get a man."

The women at the college, being no different than the average female, have also followed in the Leap Year fad. This Friday, March 2, a Leap Year dance will be held by the Associated Women Students.

Look out, fellas—it's a girl-ask-boy affair. This year the dragnet is out and cosmetics, new Fords, finery, and various other "trapping" equipment may be seen about the campus. Beware of women. On the other hand you just might enjoy being trapped after all.

Times Like This Try Men's Souls

As If They Need It—The Women Get Some Sage Leap Year Advice

Leap Year is upon us today. We feel duty bound to report this to all interested parties as a public service. Mr. Webster informs us that Leap Year is a year having 366 days. A year is a Leap Year if its number can be divided exactly by four, except years that fall at the end of a century, which must be exactly divisible by four hundred. The years 1944 and 2000 are Leap Years, 1900 and 1943 are not.

This information is dandy to have, but we are primarily interested in what Leap Year means to our fellow men and women here at the college.

Our human relations editor, Miss Abbigail Birdsong, has been swamped with letters from students who are having trouble adjusting to this very special year. Miss Birdsong has kindly consented to have a few of these letters reprinted.

Q. Dear Abby Birdsong: My best girl friend and I have been spending Leap Year chasing the same boy. We finally caught him and thought our troubles were over. We asked him to take his choice, but he says he likes us both the same. We are sick of this and want him to go steady with one of us. What can we do, Abby?

A. Have you ever considered moving to Short Creek?

Q. Dear Abby Birdsong: All my friends tell me that I am very cute and look just like Marilyn Monroe. Ever since Leap Year started I have been trying to catch a man but they just don't notice me. What can I do to become popular?—Sultry Siren.

A. Dear Sultry Siren: Yours is a very serious problem, but as long as you look so much like Marilyn Monroe I suggest that you follow in her footsteps, and you know how SHE got popular!

Q. Dear Abby Birdsong: I caught my man at last. He is cute as he can be but there is something wrong. I pick him up in my new Lancia Roadster, drive out to Inspiration Point, turn off the engine, throw the keys out the window, take off my ear rings, then turn and give him my most seductive look. All he does is sit there. What else can I do, Abby?—MM.

A. Dear MM: Try checking to see if he's breathing.

Letters to the Editor

"Ah, ye knights of the pen," sad saeks and philanthropists, gentlemen and rowdies, democrats and republicans, take note:

The Guardsman believes that as Kim Novak has more appeal than Marilyn Monroe, The Ram's Horn has more reader appeal than The Search For Bridey Murphy or Why Johnny Can't Read. Therefore, suggestions, questions, doubts, complaints, and even approvals from readers will be printed here.

Although the editor assumes the responsibility for shortening lengthy material, the general thought content will not be changed. The writer's name will be withheld upon request, but it must be known to the editor.

Letters may be left in the science building, with the telephone operator or at The Guardsman office, Room 304. The deadline for contributions is 11 a.m. each Wednesday.

Shots At Ramdom

By Bob Kauth

AS THE FACE upon the ballroom floor winked at him it said, "Leap Year or no Leap Year, this is the 20th century, and you had better ask her to dance." Unusual though it may seem, it might be noted this Leap Year that it was not uncommon for the women to ask the men to dance in 17th century France, while Lord Chesterfield was the epitome of etiquette in England. If he did not care to dance about like a butterfly, books on The Rules of Civility advised that it is better to be exposed to a little confusion . . . "than to be suspected of declining them in contempt."

Aristotle and Homer both respected dancing to some extent, but an attractive blonde must have derided Cicero's dancing ability, for he was no terpsichorean. He says, "No man who is sober dances, unless he is out of his mind."

Although it is surprising today, the waltz was frowned upon in the United States as late as 1836. Eliza Farrar, the author of The Young Lady's Friend, described the waltz as a dance of . . . "too loose character" and cautioned "unmarried" ladies against it.

Social dancing was so popular by 1923 that Emily Post found it necessary to write an article giving pointers on How To Walk Across The Ballroom. Today it is fitting for every co-ed to imitate the Marilyn Monroe slithery bounce, and every "Chesterfieldian" should be a dream-like dancer, even to the cha cha.

Cagers' Home Supremacy, Balanced Attack Good For 7-3 League Mark, Third Place

By Al Moss

With the second round of Big Eight Conference basketball play halfway over, only an early upset loss to Stockton has kept the Rams from definite contention as they jumped to third in the league race, behind leader West Contra Costa and Modesto.

The number three spot has the San Franciscans still in the race, but only a fortunate combination of circumstances can boost them to the title, or even a share of it.

The Ram cagers continued their complete supremacy on their home court and, for awhile, a certain ineptness on the road. After the opening 71-39 win over Santa Rosa and the 59-55 loss at Stockton, the Ram quintet returned home to trample Sacramento, 77-37. Dan Curley, Norm King, George Campbell and Al Martino shared honors in the balanced attack, netting 12 points apiece.

A jaunt to Richmond cost the Rams their second league defeat as they dropped a close one to West Contra Costa, 66-54, on January 20. The hot Comets, paced by jump-shooting forward Clyde Hardeman's 27 points, were pressed until the final four minutes, when they pulled away from a 50-50 tie to rack up the win. Walt Morgan bucketed 18 for the losers, while Martino had 11.

A pair of home-court victories raised the Ram mark to 4-2 as they edged Oakland, 56-51, and trounced San Mateo, 72-50. The Oakland tilt was a key win for the Sid Phelan-coached hosts, for it left the hot-and-cold but ever-dangerous Thunderbirds with four losses that all but knocked them out of the race. Oakland's Hal Theus, the league's champion high-jumper, topped all scorers with 21 points, while Clarence Grider, Norm King and George Campbell hit 16, 11 and 10 respectively for the Rams. The San Mateo Bulldogs, missing their absent first-string guards, offered little resistance in the two-man San Francisco scoring show. Grider hit for 23 points while King bucketed 22.

Against Modesto, the Rams played about as good a losing game as a team can play before failing to the Pirates, 85-74, on February 7 at Modesto. Despite the Modestan's home-court advantage and a troublesome clock, the Rams stayed right in the game until the final seconds. Al Mock opened up in the scoring column for the first time with 22 points, while Morgan hit 17, King 14 and Martino 12, but it wasn't enough to overcome the Buccaneers' fabulous Milt Kane, the league's leading scorer, who dropped in 35 points, including 17 free throws.

With three losses already on the books against them, Phelan's five smacked three of the loop's comparatively weak teams to open the second half of play. Santa Rosa, unseasonably hot and with their home crowd supporting them, played it to the hilt before dropping a 75-71 decision to the Rams on February 10. The Bearcubs, with the entire first team hitting in double figures, were in the game until the end, but a 29-point outburst by King and a 12-point second-half splurge by Grider were too much. Grider wound up with 16 for the Rams and Mock had 10.

Stockton, who boasted the San Franciscans as one of their two victims, had no such luck on the Ram court, and although Phelan flooded the floor with reserves the final score still read 81-68 for the hosts. Mock scored 19, all in the first half, Grider had 16, Campbell bucketed 12 and Martino garnered 11 in the attack, while John Rudometkin did a fine defensive job on Stockton's sharp-shooting Dave Klurman, holding him to four points in the first half. Klurman opened upon the reserves in the second half, scoring the rest of his game-high 25 points when his team was already far behind.

The Rams made it two routs in a row over Sacramento, topping the Panthers 79-67 on February 17 at Sacramento. The final score wasn't indicative of the Rams' supremacy, as they led 41-29 at halftime, and even conservative Coach Phelan admitted that his team "could have won by much more." Mock, the hottest scorer on the club recently, hit for 19 points again, while Grider and King each had 17 and Campbell 11.

Speed DeConti, 5-6 Ram guard, collected six free throws in a two-minute interval while putting on a dribbling exhibition that drew cheers from even the partisan Sacramento fans. Ray Davis, the Panthers' top shooter and scorer, nailed 21 points but could hit on only 8 of 28 field goal attempts for a sub-par percentage.

The one practice tilt for the Rams found them coming from a nine point halftime deficit to battle on even terms before dropping a 63-61 match to the Stanford Frosh at Stanford on February 18. Grider hit 21 and Mock 17 to lead the visitors, while John Pflueger had 17 for the Papoose five.

Redus Tops Track Practice Turnout

With Clint Redus impressively topping a list of returning lettermen, and several outstanding newcomers gracing the roster, Coach Roy Burkhead's Ram track team has opened practice and looks forward to the Big Eight season and the defense of their Northern California championship.

Redus was a consistent triple-winner last year while competing in the low and high hurdles and the 100 and 220 yard dashes. He captured the high hurdles in the excellent time of :14.6 in the state two-year college meet at Modesto, and wound up high-point man for the meet as the Rams took a third place.

The Rams should field more than a representative team again this year, although Ray MacIntyre and Jack Egan, the other point-makers in the state meet, have been lost. Top name among the freshmen is Roosevelt Taylor, :10.0 sprinter from Polytechnic, but as of now Taylor has not turned out for the Riordan track practice sessions.

Another top newcomer is LeRoy Thomas, 6-4 high jumper who played end for the Ram football team in the fall. With Thomas and Kevin O'Sullivan, a 6-2 leaper from Riordan, the San Franciscans figure to score in that event.

Other newcomers who could help the team include Ron Anderson of Washington and Ken Richter of Polytechnic, a pair of 2:00 880 men; Ray Batz and Lloyd Costello, distance runners who competed for Burkhead's cross-country team last semester; Ben Walker (Pasadena) and Roy Collins (Lowell) in the pole vault; and George Jones, a high hurdler from San Lorenzo.

Burkhead's thinclads hold their daily workouts at Riordan's fine practice track, although recent showers have forced the tracksters into the men's gymnasium.

Baseballers Open Season Against SI

The Ram baseball team will host the Saint Ignatius Varsity at Balboa Field in a practice game this afternoon.

The team started practice in early December and have a number of practice games scheduled in order to get ready for their first league encounter against Sacramento on March 24. Coach Bill Fischer stated that the practice games give the players more of an opportunity to show their ability. Practices, thus far, have included batting drills and intra-squad and practice games to get the players in shape.

Balboa Park will be used as the team's home field, and Fischer believes this to be advantageous to both the team and spectators.

"Last year, many fans wouldn't normally attend home games because of the distance to Big Rec diamond in Golden Gate Park," remarked Fischer. "Now there is but a short walk to the diamond."

Prospects who have shown promise include infielders Glen Bukowatz, Russ Fadeef, Blair LeMire, Willie Cooper, John McCarthy, and Roger Ferrari; outfielders Fred Waters and Bob Bandettini, and pitchers Fred Glosser and Ron Castro. Returning lettermen are Ken Dito, Larry Nissim, Ray Warman, Jim Poppin and Lou Flores.

Fischer indicated that no position is a certainty yet and practice games would determine the starting nine.

In 1955, the Ram nine lost to West Contra Costa, 17-5, in a play-off game, giving the Big Eight Championship to the Comets.

Other practice games this week find the Rams on the road against USF Frosh (March 1), East Contra Costa (March 2), Santa Clara (March 3), and Cal JV's (March 6).

Ramblings

By Al Moss

STOMACH trouble has done what no Big Eight Conference lineman could ever do—put Jerry Landi, one of the finest tackles ever to play in the league, flat on his back.

Landi is now in Letterman General Hospital, seriously ill with a stomach tumor, but, having had the pleasure of working with Jerry when he was an all-star coach in the then Big Seven in 1953, we can't bet against him. Too often have opposing linemen temporarily blocked him out to then find him recover and break up the play.

Now illness has put a sustaining block on Jerry. With a tough opponent like that, it takes a little longer to get back into the play, but a fighter like Jerry Landi is a cinch for all-star honors in this league too.

Hearts and flowers and sympathy would be wasted on Jerry. He was big and tough and he gave no quarter on the football field, and a man doesn't lose any of those qualities. So Jerry, you're down but you're not out, and we just want you to know that you have 6,000 and more teammates pulling for you in this battle, and that many fans who are waiting to see you in action for the Rams again next year.

This year's edition of the City College basketball team has displayed two assets almost foreign to the other clubs in the tough Big Eight, and these two factors have made the team the contender it is.

The Rams, under freshman coach Sid Phelan, have first displayed a stout defense in a league that seems more and more offense-minded. While some of the teams have reached the 100 mark in a single game, and although the individual scoring record for a single game has been broken twice this season, first with 42 and then with 44 points, the San Franciscans have allowed only slightly over 50 points per game, and a good 50 less than the number two defensive club in the circuit.

The other asset is offensive balance. Phelan is faced with a problem that every coach would gladly share—he simply has too many good ball-players. The loss of a forward like Fred Wilkinson, a first stringer who suffered an ankle injury early in the season and is out for the year, could ruin many chubs. Now Phelan can choose only from the following men, with their highest single game point totals in parentheses, for his first string:

Norm King (29), Clarence Grider (23), Al Mock (22), Dan Curley (20), George Campbell (18), Al Martino (18), Walter Morgan (18), and John Rudometkin (10). Rudometkin sounds like a scoring midget in that group, but the veteran playmaker has more important things to do than shoot and leaves the pointmaking to the others. Phelan readily admits that Rudometkin was sorely missed against Modesto, when a death in the family kept him out of action, and his teammates agree that he might have been the difference in the 83-74 loss on the Modestans' court.

Add to this group such men as Rich DeConti, Lou Signer, Don Rothfuss, Ron Booth and Jim Bryant, players who could make first club with many of the two-year college teams in Northern California, and you have a real bench.

Tennis Squad Opens League Play Friday

Coach Roy Diederichsen's Ram tennis squad opens its Big Eight Conference stand Friday, March 2, when they meet Sacramento at Golden Gate Park.

With only one returning letterman, Don Mays, on the team, Diederichsen expects to open with a team of Mays, number one; Joe Souza, a transfer from Sacramento, number two; Paul Fischer from Lincoln, number three; Schir Azirpey, originally from Iran, number four; and Jean Cacas, number five.

Alternates are Hugh Aanonsen from Washington; Richard Tseng, originally from Siam, and Maurice Lehmus.

College Five Fights For Title At San Mateo Tonight, Faces Pirates Friday In Final Conference Game

Still a contender in the tight Big Eight Conference race, Coach Sid Phelan's defensive-minded Rams tangle with San Mateo on the Bulldog court tonight and meet rugged Modesto in the league finale on Friday evening in the men's gymnasium. Game time is 8 p.m.

The Friday night tilt could be the decider. Modesto, tough anywhere and brutal on their home court, handed the Rams an 83-74 loss at Modesto in the first round, and the San Franciscans will be out to achieve several things in the return bout. A Ram win would keep them in contention, could finish the Pirates' hopes, and would be sweet revenge for the earlier beating.

MILT KANE, Modesto scoring ace who has averaged nearly 30 points a game and holds the Big Eight game mark of 44, leads his team against the Rams Friday night.

Although the visiting Buccaneers have several top-noteh ballplayers, it's generally conceded that the team to stop Milt Kane will stop Modesto. So far no one has.

Kane, averaging nearly 30 points a game in league play, is the Modestans' top rebounder and team leader, and earlier in the year set the Big Eight scoring mark by tanking 44 points against Santa Rosa. Easily the loop-leader in pointmaking, he shattered the Modesto seasonal scoring record early in the league campaign. In the Modesto loss at Oakland, the 6-4 forward, thought to be primarily a home-court star, garnered 35 of his team's 74 points before fouling out.

After Kane, whom several loop mentors agree is the outstanding player in the Big Eight, the other Buccaneers suffer by comparison. Diek McAnulty, an inspirational leader, can also score on occasion, and center Shelly Palmer, a two-handed set shot artist from New York, can open up the defense with the long ones.

In answer to Kane and company, the Rams will offer a home-court advantage that, while not as powerful as that of the Pirates, should be worth the generally conceded 10 points. Too, the San Franciscans can offer the stoutest defense in the league, with their one big lapse being the aforementioned 83 run up by the Pirates.

Individually, the hosts will depend primarily on Norm King, Clarence Grider and Al Mock for the big point production. King, also one of the Big Eight's top rebounders, is a consistent scorer with his jump shot, and canned 29 points at Santa Rosa. Grider's top mark came against San Mateo in the Rams' 72-50 win, when he bucketed 23, while Mock, the hottest scorer on the team in recent games, snagged 22 against Modesto and bucketed 19 in a first-half-only appearance against Stockton.

In tonight's tilt at San Mateo, the Bulldogs will have the home-court advantage and the revenge motive going for them. The second-division San Mateans depend primarily on lean Ned Fitzgerald, a 20-point man with a dangerous jump shot, and Lou Pucci, the other forward, who is also a dangerous scorer.

Cagers Slaughter Comets, Drop Key Fray To Oakland

By Al Moss

After putting on their best show of the season to whip league-leading West Contra Costa, 87-56, on February 21 on the San Francisco court, the Ram basketballers dropped a 54-52 squeaker at Oakland on February 24 to knock them from anything but mathematical contention for the Big Eight title.

A practice game saw the Sid Phelan five lose their second straight close one at Stanford on February 23 as the Braves downed the Rams, 56-51. Clarence Grider bagged 21 for high point honors.

The Rams maintained their undefeated mark on their home court as they completely dominated the Comets. The 87 point mark was the top offensive total of the year for the San Franciscans, and the Contra Costa 56 points emphasized the Rams' league-leading defense.

Norman King, the high-jumping forward, bucketed 22 points and grabbed off an equal number of rebounds for the Rams, and Grider tanked 19 markers. Clyde Hardeman, number two league scorer, hit 28 for the Comets but most of his points came against the reserves when the game was out of reach for his team.

Contra Costa was never in the battle from the opening Ram bucket to the final free throw, after the gun, by Jim Bryant. Phelan began mass substitutions early in the second half and Comet Coach Rudy Hansen, conceding his club's second loop defeat, soon followed suit.

Just as the win over Contra Costa had kept the Rams in contention, the loss to Oakland put them out of it. The game was even closer than the two-point margin of 54-52 make as the teams battled to a 24-24 halftime draw and kept up the see-saw pace until the end.

Grider was the show for the Rams, and even the dubious Thunderbird fans had to admit it. The packed gymnasium saw the 6-4 Ram forward score 18 points, the game high, and collect 15 rebounds, one more than Oakland's Hal Theus, the circuit's best board man.

King also showed well, scoring only 12 but holding Theus, with a 20 points-per-game average, to 13, but Jim Wallace's surprise 15 points proved the difference for Oakland as the Rams dropped their fourth league match.

35 Prep Athletes Boost Ram Hopes

The athletic future of the college continues on the upswing as some 35 highly-rated high school athletes have enrolled here and are looking forward to their first taste of collegiate competition.

Led by Roosevelt Taylor (Polytechnic), Ron Anderson (Washington), Roy Collins, (Lowell) and Bob Guddee (St. Ignatius), all track stars, the new men figure to get off to a good start. Taylor, timed in :10.0 for the 100-yard dash, could help the college tracksters if he changes his decision to bypass the track season.

A list of new athletes who have enrolled this semester is as follows:

Track: Ron Anderson, 880, (Washington); Roy Collins, pole vault (Lowell); Bob Guddee (St. Ignatius); George Jones, high hurdles (San Lorenzo); Kevin O'Sullivan, high jump (Riordan); Ken Richter, 880 (Polytechnic); Roosevelt Taylor, sprints (Polytechnic); Ben Walker, pole vault (Pasadena).

Baseball: Bob Bandettini, infield (Sacred Heart); Glenn Buckowatz, infield (Balboa); Ron Castro, outfield (Mission); Roger Ferrari, first base (St. Ignatius); Fred Glosser, pitcher (Lincoln); Blair LeMire, infield (Polytechnic); Bob Simlin, infielder (Mission); Fred Waters, outfield (Mission); and Bud Williams, infield (Balboa).

Football: John Broucaret, center (Lowell); Dan Kirby, quarterback (Balboa); Joe Miles, tackle (Mission); Al Perini, end (Polytechnic); Bill Rathbun, fullback (Balboa); Roosevelt Taylor, halfback (Polytechnic); Dave Tyree, halfback (Balboa); Hank Venturoni, guard (Polytechnic).

Council Grants $200 To School In Columbia, Refuses Drama Department Request For Funds

By Bob O'Brien

Associated Student President Bill Cirimele sailed through his initial Student Council meetings with a skill and poise that promise to make for utmost efficiency in that body. Beginning with the council's first meeting on February 9, his guiding touch was evident as they moved through the crush of business with speed seldom seen in student government.

The first order of business was the granting of various budget requests from campus activities. Phi Rho Pi was awarded $141 as a partial budget. The Freshman Class followed with a request for a complete budget of $412. The council requested a breakdown of requested funds. This was provided, and the budget was passed unanimously. Still in a generous mood, the council found favor with a request for an executive budget of $1,753.30; Dean Mary Golding, $25; and Administration, $150.

One of the more noteworthy grants made by the council was $200 given in the name of the Associated Students to the Columbia School Project. This money will be used in the re-construction of the Public School at Columbia Mining Camp, Columbia, located in Sonora County, is a mining camp rich in California history, and is now in the process of being restored in a State Park. There was some opposition on the council as to the amount to be given, but the motion was carried, eight to two.

Somewhat of a parliamentary snarl resulted when Jim Carroll, Freshman member of council, moved to have the Finance Chairman report the financial balance on hand at each meeting. Jim Kennedy seconded the motion. In the discussion that followed, Finance Chairman Emory Lebonville pleaded that this was impossible. Carroll withdrew his motion and Kennedy withdrew his second. All present breathed a sigh of relief.

Earl Cabrinha tendered his resignation from council in a letter read before the council, Robert Bliss moved to accept the resignation and Bill Roberts seconded the motion. The motion was passed unanimously. Those nominated were Percy Everhart, Norrine Phillips, Don Terry and Tom Seversen.

It was here that things began to get confused. Ken Metzger moved to close the nominations permanently. The motion was seconded. Bliss moved to amend the motion to read "to be opened next Tuesday." That motion was seconded. The amendment was passed and the main motion was passed.

In its last meeting, the council moved to donate $50 to the Olympic Fund. In the discussion that followed, members expressed the thought that the college would receive as much good publicity from the donation to the Olympic Fund as it would from the Columbia School Project.

The Drama Department ran into stormy weather when it attempted to submit a partial budget of $150 for its forthcoming play, Lute Song. The suddenly economy - conscious council disapproved the request, eight to two. The council approved a motion to invite drama instructor Michael Griffin to attend the next meeting to better explain his department's needs.

Miss SF Entrants Wanted

LEE MERIWETHER, last year's winner of the Misses San Francisco, California and Americo titles and a former drama major here.

Interviews Now Available For All Contestants

Young unmarried women, 18 to 28, who are high school graduates with at least six months residence in San Francisco are eligible for participation in the Miss San Francisco contest to be held later this semester, George Kaplanis, SF Junior Chamber of Commerce representative for the college, announced last week.

Last year several women students here with excellent chances of winning the title, feared too high a degree of competition and eliminated themselves by allowing this fear to squelch any ideas they might have had for participating in the annual affair, Kaplanis declared.

Being a professional model, or something comparable, does not give a contestant a claim on the title. Proof of this came in June of 1954 when Lee Meriwether, a City College coed and not a model, captured the Miss San Francisco crown and then went on to win the Miss California and Miss America contests.

The emphasis this year, according to Kaplanis, is being placed on encouraging wider participation. The number of entrants increased last year, but there were still only 58 participants in 1955.

Women who are interested in entering the affair should apply to Kaplanis for an interview or leave a message in the Associated Student office, S169. Those who sign up will need a five by seven glossy photograph of themselves, which should be given to Kaplanis during the interview.

The contest is being sponsored by the Public Relations Committee of the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Store's Routine Reaches Normalcy; Main Lists Ramporium Supplies, Tells Students Of Book Treatment

With the initial rush on new books and supplies over, Dick Main, the Ramporium's manager, and his staff have quieted to a routine of usual semester activities.

The Ramporium, located in the student union building adjacent to the snack bar, is open from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily and sells, along with books and supplies, physical education equipment, drafting tools, stationery and all supplies and equipment needed for classroom requirements at the college.

The store is a non-profit organization and is staffed largely by members of the student body when extra help is required. Main urged that all students patronize the Ramporium as sales receipts are allotted to Associated Student activities.

Along with new supplies, used books are handled in limited quantities. The used books are purchased at the termination of a semester, provided the book is in good condition and required for courses offered the following semester.

Main advised that names written in ink in texts as an owner identification mark does not devalue the text for resale. He also suggested students further identify their texts by placing some form of mark elsewhere in the book, known only to the owner, as a guard against theft.

As a further protection to the students against the resale of stolen goods, the Ramporium does not offer refunds on texts unless accompanied by a "Drop Slip" from the student, officially indicating that the student is no longer enrolled in the course and has a legitimate excuse for refund of original purchase price.

The Ramporium offers the sale of books other than texts or required reading. These are presented in inexpensive paper-bound editions, priced from 25 cents to $1.00, including such opportunities for leisure reading as The Caine Mutiny, Moby Dick, Ballet in America, along with reprints of good poetry, literature, and science texts.

Traditional Club Day Set March 9

Final performances of the college little theater production of Lute Song, ancient Chinese classic, will be Friday and Saturday evenings, March 9 and 10, at 8 p.m., according to Michael Griffin, drama instructor here and director of the play.

Griffin declared that Lute Song has long been known as the Chinese equivalent of Hamlet.

"It was first presented at the Imperial Court of Peking in 1404," he stated.

IFC Smoker Starts Rushing For Men Students Thursday

All male students are invited to attend the semi-annual Inter-Fraternity Council Smoker which will be held tomorrow at the student union coffee shop, starting at 7:30 p.m., Bob Tucker, IFC president, announced recently.

To acquaint men students here with the many different fraternities on campus is the purpose for the smoker, Tucker said. Different fraternity booths will be set up for the occasion and representative members will be on hand to explain their fraternities' functions and merits and to take applications for membership.

For entertainment, there will be movies of the highlights of last year's NCAA basketball games and some of this year's games in which the University of San Francisco Dons set a new record in consecutive wins for major colleges. There will also be refreshments served.

Tucker has hopes for a large turnout, although in past years the attendance has never been over 100.

Frosh Class To Hold Dance At Fairmont

Plans for the Frosh Ball, to be given the theme of Silver Serenade, were announced this week by Norman Durieux, freshman class president.

It will be held on Saturday, March 24, in the Terrace Room of the Fairmont Hotel from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. The music will be by Stephen Paul and his orchestra.

Procedure For H&R Award Vote Set

Students and faculty of the Hotel and Restaurant Department will vote on Monday and Tuesday, March 26 and 27, for three fourth-semester student candidates for the newly initiated, but highly coveted Sheraton-Palace Award, according to Wendell Muntz, chairman of the H&R Department.

Only second, third and fourth semester students and full-time instructors will be asked to cast their ballots. Part-time instructors and first semester students will not vote, since it is felt that they are not familiar enough with the eligible fourth semester students to evaluate their qualifications for the award.

Upon being picked as candidates for the award, the three students will each compose a letter, stating his qualifications for the award, and why he feels he should be selected.

This letter, together with suitable information on file in the H&R Department and a picture of the student, will be forwarded to Wesley Hadden, the west coast sales manager of the Sheraton Corporation of America. A special corporation committee will then make the final selection of the winner.

This method of selection was worked out by Muntz and Russell St. John, assistant sales manager of the Sheraton-Palace Hotel, who also acts as a part-time instructor here. It was felt that this method was the most impartial one possible and would eliminate personal feelings on the part of the faculty and students as would be the case if the final selection was left to them.

A plaque will be awarded to the winner. Also, his name will be placed on a perpetual plaque. Muntz feels that this new award provides great possibilities for H&R students.

"It seems to me," Muntz commented, "that since the Sheraton Corporation has indicated their interest in this program and in the graduates, the three who are nominated and, of course, the one who is finally selected as the winner might be given serious consideration for possible employment opportunities after graduation in June."

Club Exhibits, Dance Highlights Of CAB Day During College Hour Friday

Accomplishments Of Organizations Will Be Displayed

Club Activities Day is scheduled for this Friday, March 9, during college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m., Chairman Jim Wright stated last week.

Approximately 35 tables will be set up between the science building and Cloud Hall to display the exhibits submitted by clubs, organizations, sororities and fraternities, in order to acquaint the students with these organizations.

The day's events will begin during college hour and continue throughout the day, terminating in a dance in the cafeteria from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight.

Wright stated that the purpose of the CAB Day is "to familiarize new and returning students with the purposes and accomplishments of the organizations on campus and to provide them with an opportunity to apply for membership in an organization of their choice."

President of the CAB, Ed Emig, urged all students to take advantage of this day because there is at least one organization that should appeal to each person, he believes.

The CAB officers for the spring semester in addition to Emig are vice-president, Jim Wright; recording secretary, Martha Lozar; corresponding secretary, Georgia Eastridge.

Summer Session Starts At College On June 25

Enrollment for 1956 summer sessions here will begin on Friday, May 25, according to Lloyd Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction.

University parallel courses are being offered in business, biology, criminology, mathematics, engineering, and English. Courses are scheduled for six week sessions, beginning June 25, and finishing August 3.

There is no enrollment fee for the courses offered. Courses will run from one to two hours a day per course. Enrollment is expected to reach approximately 900. The student body is expected to be composed of recent high school graduates and regularly enrolled City College students.

Further details and instructions concerning the hours, schedule, and courses offered will be announced before the date of registration.

Enrollment Goes 58 Students Over Last Fall's High

Spring 1956 semester enrollment figures at City College show a total of 6,605 students, an increase of 58 over last semester, of which 1,355 are registered in the evening division, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

These figures show a loss in registration of only one student in the day classes as compared to a like period last fall when the enrollment was 6,547 with 1,296 in evening classes.

Evening registration, Miss Learnard stated, is at a capacity with an increase of 59 students reported over the fall semester of 1955. The reason for the nearly constant enrollment, Miss Learnard reported, is that a shortage of instructors in the evening division exists. Many evening class applicants were turned away this year because of the shortage, Miss Learnard added.

President Louis G. Conlan and his administrative staff estimate a possible enrollment at the college of 10,000 by 1960. An outline of building requirements for the college for immediate and long range planning has been set.

These plans include classrooms, a student union building, and modernization of the present science building, a fine arts classroom building, which will house an auditorium, improvement of roadways, including parking facilities, a stadium and expansion of present gymnasiums are also included in the master plan.

Laurel Hall To Be Scene Of ISC Tea

Laurel Hall, 2676 California, will be the site of the Joint Inter-Sorority Council tea from 2 to 5 p.m., Sunday, March 18, Dean Mary Golding recently announced.

All women students who have signed up for rushing events will be entertained in the Laurel Hall lounge, which is decorated in a Chinese motif, Miss Golding added. The tea itself will be centered around a table decorated with daffodils and spring flowers.

The dress for those who are rushing will be suits, hats and gloves. The sorority sisters will wear formals and will spend the afternoon getting acquainted with the new rushees.

All rushees will go through a receiving line and greet Dean Golding, and sorority sponsors and presidents.

Helping Barbara Batmale, ISC president, with the planning are ISC members Toni Mannina, Gail Ziegler, Barbara LeBoff, Ellie Benner, and Rose Thurman. Dean Golding further stated.

St. Patrick's Day Is Theme Of Dance Climaxing CAB Day

Saint Patrick's Day, theme of this semester's traditional dance climaxing the activities of the Club Activities Board Club Day, will be held in the student union building this Friday evening, March 9, from 9 until 12 midnight, Jim Wright, Club Day chairman, announced recently.

Those attending will dance to the music of Stephen Paul and his orchestra, Wright said.

Admission to the dance is by Associated Student card, Wright said, or $1.00 with registration card. Guests, accompanied by an AS member or registration card holder, will also be required to pay $1.00, Wright added.

Sub-committee chairman, Metta Weddleton, decorations, and Dwane Shippey, refreshments, are working with their committee members on the dance. Committee members working on the dance include Anne Smith, Paula Villa, Norman Durieux, Debbie Rudser, Carolyn Barbero, Joyce Weaver, Eleanor Smith, Al Mowry, Erickson Sinkkonen and John Dudley.

This is a stag dance and sport clothes will be the proper attire, Wright stated.

Filipino Club Gets Date As Zeta Phi Drops Dance

With the cancellation of the Friday, March 16, date for their dance, Zeta Phi Sigma fraternity left the date open on the social calendar.

The date was immediately requested by the Filipino Club, and it was granted because it is at the end of the first midterm period and a big turnout can be expected.

The change of dates was announced last week at a Social Committee meeting and at Club Activities Board where it was hoped all the clubs and organizations would be aware of the change that had taken place.

Spring AS Sales Reach Total Only $110 Shy Of 1955

A total of 1,540 Associated Student cards have been sold as of Wednesday, February 29, and chairman Dave Jamison believes that the goal of 2,000 will soon be reached.

"Comparison of card sales still surpass former recent semester totals at this time," Jamison remarked.

As an indication of current rate of sales, Jamison cited the entire 1955 spring semester totals reached $7,810 with 1,382 cards sold, while the present amount of $7,700 falls shy only $110 or 22 cards.

Though the usual Associated Men Student - Associated Women Student contest ended last Friday, with trophies being awarded to highest card sellers, and the perpetual trophy going to the highest team, Jamison noted that sales will continue until the end of the semester.

The AMS team led by President Wayne McFadden, and included Sam Franzella, Al Moss, Bob Frick, Bill Roberts, George Kaplanis, Ed Dollard and Al Mowry. The team selling for AWS President Rose Thurman consister of Georgia Eastridge, Delores Beccaria, Margaret Bordiaga, Darlene Reitz, Sally Mierson, Elle Smith, and Ginny Hase.

Non-card holders found out today that issues of The Guardsman were only being distributed to Associated Student members.

Negative Approach To Parking Decreases Value Of AS Cards

DESPITE the fact that the west campus parking lot has a limited time left to serve the needs of Associated Student members, little or no protection is being given the hundreds of autos which now use the area.

Countless persons are now free to roam the parking lot, sometimes tampering with and damaging automobiles parked there.

One of the main inducements for the purchase of an Associated Student card, namely that only AS members can park on west campus, is fast being discredited and lowered in value because virtually no active enforcement of this program is being carried out.

Numerous unauthorized cars are constantly parking in this lot, gambling against the possibility of being tagged by the campus police.

If there were an arrangement whereby there could be guards at the entrance and exit to the area, such persons could not even gamble on parking there because the margin for success would be gone. The mere fact that offenders are given tickets, for the most part, does not change the overcrowded situation which they cause. As we see it, only sufficient patrolling of the entrance and exit areas will achieve the solution to this aspect of the overall problem.

We do not intend to accuse any school or group of people of guilt in the matter of tampering with and damaging cars parked in the west campus lot, but since this unhealthy situation exists the best solution rests on firm preventive measures.

These measures lie in the hands of the campus police. It is their duty not only to deal with breakers of the law, but to protect those who operate within its limits. To allow vandals to continue with this damaging work is to fail an obligation to the Associated Students.

Patrolling of the gates to the parking lot is one key to the solution of this problem, but a further extension of this process is also indicated. It is essential that the area bordering on the open field located north of the lot must be kept watch on, for it is through this stretch of ground that the parking area is most accessible from the outside.

In addition to the considerable amount of damage inflicted on automobiles in the west campus, an alarming degree of destruction has been done in the west campus building area, now abandoned. Nearly every window in the numerous buildings in the area has been broken by rock throwers, and in some instances chairs have been shoved through the windows and out onto the ground below. The interior of these enclosures is no pretty sight, either, with broken woodwork and general disorder being the rule rather than the exception.

We have become convinced, therefore, that until the west campus has been entirely abandoned by the college, it is the obligation and duty of the campus police force to combat, perhaps in the manner described above, the amount of vandalism which is now going on in that area.

Through the posting of officers at the entrance and exit, only AS members will be afforded the privilege of west campus parking, and through additional patrolling of the grounds, the unnecessary destruction now occurring will be stopped.

Shots At Ramdom

By Bob Kauth

ALTHOUGH Sinclair Lewis is noted for Arrowsmith, Babbitt, Dodsworth and Main Street, another one of his works, A Work Of Art, should be recommended and is a must for all students of literature.

It is the story of two brothers and materialistic and idealistic natures. Ora, who is a dreamer and philanderer, decided in his early youth to be a successful author. He reads most of the "great works of art" including Homer, Dante and Goethe. He believes himself to be an idealist and has a contemptuous attitude toward anyone who is not literally inclined.

Myron wants to become a successful hotel manager. He has great respect for Ora's fluent vocabulary and believes him to be God's gift to the world of literature. Myron does not read any of the great works of art, nor does he know what materialism and idealism are. But he does read all the books he can find on hotel management and in every manner tries to prepare himself to meet his eventual goal.

Working his way up from a bellhop, Myron becomes one of the most prominent hotel managers in the country. Now Ora, who is as unsuccessful as last week's column (Shots, that is) is being supported by his nonintellectual brother. But Myron is as doomed to fail as Adam was, for he truly is the idealist to the extreme. He does not recognize reality and soon loses all.

After writing a successful novel, Ora's materialistic motives come to light as he moves to Hollywood and leaves Myron to his own destiny.

The novel concludes with Ora, the true materialist, financially successful but doomed to a life of frustration. And Myron, the idealist who has never opened a novel, with peace of mind beginning to rebuild his shattered financial status.

* * *

ONE MATERIALIST, who is apparent as a run in milady's nylon, is enrolled this semester in the creative writing class, which as a rule is composed of only idealists, dreamers, and would-be - do - nothings. When questioned as to why they wanted to write, some of the excuses given were a need to express the inner-self; a desire to be creative, and an attraction to the interesting, amusing life of an author. But when questioned, Mr. Materialism was so foolishly naive and thus honest enough to reply, "To make money."

Harvard Reading Series

Time Is Cut On Reading Material By Use Of Visual Training Aids

College students here are only too well aware of the extensive scholastic material they have to cover each semester, but do they realize that they can cut their present studying time in half and still maintain high grades.

This can be achieved by increasing one's reading velocity.

The Harvard Reading Film Series, conducted under the supervision of Grace Brown, English instructor here, have helped some students who were previously retarded in their reading to reach a reading speed of 600 words per minute.

First, a student is shown films which are actual excerpts from reading material of an average scope, so arranged as to exercise the eye and accustom it to concentrate on small sections of a passage.

This is done by showing only a section of the material on the screen at a time. These continue to flash rapidly on until the material in question has been covered. Thus the viewer is trained to grasp parts in a passage instead of just reading each word individually.

The films are so designed as to start with 180 words per minute and gradually work their way up to 700 words per minute.

At the conclusion of the film, the reader is given a comprehension quiz, consisting of questions about the material just read.

Suggestions for study skills and individual reading diagnosis are given to all students upon request. These have been extremely helpful to students in increasing their reading speed and efficiency, Mrs. Brown has said.

Tea, Fortune Cakes Served At Lute Song

In an effort to present the classics to the students of the college and for the enjoyment of the general public, the little theater here is producing Lute Song, the third in a series of classics, the other two being Oscar Wilde's The Importance of Being Earnest, and Medea, the Greek drama by Euripides.

The play was written by Kao-Tong-Kia and was presented for the first time at the Imperial Court of Peking in the year 1404.

Lute Song, or "Pi-Pa-Ki," was produced by the Chinese Opera House in San Francisco's own Chinatown by Will Irwin, who was moved to collaborate with Sidney Howard on a translation and adaptation for the American stage.

The play, set in the convention of the ancient Chinese theater, features one basic set for the changes of scene. As in the true tradition of the Chinese theater, set changes and needed property are carried nonchalantly on the stage right before the audience.

In keeping with the mood of the classic, the little theater group serves tea imported from China and fortune cakes made in Chinatown after each presentation.

The Spectator

Spectator Not Hooked; Golden Arm No Kicks

By Don Ball

PERHAPS one of the most over-rated movies playing in American theaters today is the much-heralded Man With The Golden Arm, featuring Frank Sinatra.

The picture has been the subject of a hard-sell campaign which has received added impetus through the film's rejection by those who enforce the Hollywood production code.

Reason for the disapproval: the plot deals primarily with a narcotics addict, his return to the habit and his eventual shaking of the habit for the second time.

Rejection per se of the film because the narcotics subject violates the production code seems rather silly in view of the growing national problem which drugs and their use present.

On a recent radio program, Otto Preminger, the director of Golden Arm, defended his picture against a panel of other film magnates and he seemed to make sense, although whether or not he was right in making the film in defiance of the code rather than trying to get the code altered is another matter.

Probably the most concrete result of the program was to make more people aware that Preminger had ignored the code again, just as he did with The Moon Is Blue.

A taboo picture is good box office, e.g. The Moon picture, which set records, and Golden Arm seems to be no exception. The picture is drawing large crowds, and now Sinatra is being boomed for an Academy Award.

Chances are that Sinatra may get the Oscar. The part is a good one, and he is on camera almost constantly.

The question is whether Sinatra's performance is the best by a male actor this year, for that is what the award signifies. When looked at objectively this is doubtful, but all too many persons seem to get tangled in considerations about his being a singer and, therefore, an actor secondly.

In this the critics are right, but that still doesn't alter the fact that the Oscar goes to the BEST performance by a male actor, regardless of whether he is a singer, butcher or actor first of all.

It is unfortunate that more people didn't see Bad Day At Black Rock. Possibly they were scared away by the title, which admittedly sounds like a horse opera. In this film Spencer Tracy gave what was possibly the best characterization of his career. It was relatively unpublicized, though, and Tracy will probably run out of the money.

Over - loving Sinatra in the Golden Arm is Eleanor Parker, who plays his wife. As the wheelchair-ridden and shrewish wife of an addict, Miss Parker becomes loathsome to the viewer, so convincing is her portrayal.

Technically the film is excellent, especially interesting being the frequent use of jazz in the score, for which Shorty Rodger's Giants take credit, and an unusual handling of the ordinarily tedious film credits.

As for Sinatra and the picture itself, they seem destined to receive an undeserved amount of praise for proving only that a man can get hooked and still kick the monkey off his back in only 90 minutes.

The Bohemian

Student Fools Dad, Self To Support Hidden Vice

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

SEATED at one of the outdoor bistros in Paris we find a foreign student. He is writing, as curious strollers observe, a letter. From time to time he pauses, stares thoughtfully at his sole companion, a half-filled glass, as if to consult it.

Voila! Being constantly interested in comprehending the temperaments of these brilliant aliens, we will spy on the contents of this missive:

"Father, I am slowly forming the opinion that the world consists of hypocrites and that the vanguard of this disease that contaminates all is snobbism.

"These victims of their own egotism exhaust their funds and suffer humiliations to attain the satisfaction, if one can call it that, of playing second fiddle to groups of social prestige.

"Indeed, they prefer to rank low in a superior group than to lead in one of their own standing. Socially, a snob wishes to become a personnlity, not have one.

"The snob knows little or nothing of the aesthetic values in art. He admires only the age and the signature of a painting. Were he to mistake a print of a famous painting for that of an original, he would praise it for its quality and beauty only until someone informed him of his misinterpretation.

"So is he in his regard for good literature. The only enjoyment he derives from it is the satisfaction of knowing that he is reading a great author's works.

"This is why the true and unknown artist must not conform to a society of snobs.

"What comes as a shock to me, Father, is that the students themselves are not immune from the malady of snobbism.

"For example, there is a current fad among some students here to consider the drinking of absinthe as being chic, the 'right thing,' because many noteworthy intellectuals have destroyed themselves on this habit-forming alcoholic drink.

"Fear not, Father, for I have not been enticed into this harmful phase of snobbism.

"But, Father, in answer to your last letter of denial, I can but reiterate my plea. I must make you understand that it is imperative, not only for the sake of my very existence but for the sake of art itself, that you send me $100 immediately."

Concluding these lines, the youth contemplates for an instant the gaiety of life parading before him on the boulevards. Then he clandestinely, as if committing a sin, takes a slp from his glass.

He places the glass before him. Seeing that it is empty, he turns and with a gesture exclaims,

"Garcon, un autre Absinthe . . ."

Clint Redus Tops Returning Track Veterans As Cindermen Face Tough Fight In Race For Championship

With only seven veterans returning to help his thinclads defend their Northern California championship, Ram track Coach Ray Burkhead faces a grand rebuilding job if his charges are to be a threat in the Big Eight Conference this season.

Top problems at the moment appear to be in the sprints and the weight events. Topping the returnees is Clint Redus, who could be the league's top sprinter if he weren't so valuable in the hurdles. Redus will probably run in either the 100-yard dash or the 220, but it's unlikely he'll compete in both events in the same meet, and behind him the ranks are currently thin.

ROY BURKHEAD

The discus and shot put offer a different type of problem. Three of the seven returning tracksters, six of whom are from last year's team, are weight men, but Jack Egan, the only consistent point-maker in the events last year, is gone. Frank Carroll now appears the best bet. Bob Atkins and Jimmy Smith, both with the squad last year, may develop this time behind Carroll.

Strong point at the moment appears to be the 440-yard run, where lettermen Denny Moorhead, from last year's squad; Les Anderson, a letter winner with Burkhead in 1953; and Myron Zimmerman, who turned out here last year but could not compete because of an injury, top the list. In addition, these men figure to see action in the mile relay.

The long distance events could be point-getters for the Rams this year. Bill Tillson, a letterman, will go in the 880 and mile, and Ray Batz, named the most valuable man on last season's cross-country team, and Lloyd Costello will go in the mile and two-mile grinds. Newcomers Ron Anderson and Ken Richter, both of whom have toured the half mile in two minutes flat, will also help.

In the high and low hurdles the Rams can count on a pair of firsts, barring major upsets. The reason is Redus.

In last year's State Meet, the Ram ace won the high sticks in :14.6, excellent time, and beat the Californin record-holder to do it. In the lows, Redus was nosed out by inches and took second to a new state record.

Field events offer another problem, and again newcomers will be counted on heavily. The high jump appears strong, with LeRoy Thomas, whose best is 6-4, and Kevin O'Sullivan, with a 6-2 leap, the top men. Both are out for the first time.

Ram hopes have been hurt already by injuries and ineligibilities, and Burkhead is still taking sign-ups at the men's gymnasium or at the practice sessions, weather permitting, at Riordan field.

Golf Team Meets Menlo This Friday

Last practice match before the March 16 league opener against West Contra Costa finds the golf team meeting Menlo on Friday, March 9, Coach Grover Klemmer stated last week.

Klemmer has expressed a dire need for two more linksmen who can shoot at least in the low-90's or high 80's. Men interested may sign-up with Klemmer in the men's gymnasium.

At present the team consists of Malcolm Brock, Gil Brunk, and Frank Hubert, leaving two positions open to make the usual squad of five.

On Friday, March 16, the regular season opens with a match against West Contra Costa, followed by Santa Rosa Friday, March 23. April 6 sees the team playing Oakland, followed by Sacramento on April 13, San Mateo on April 17, Stockton on April 20, and the end of the regular season on May 4 against Modesto.

Practice games on March 2 and March 5 found the golfers meeting East Contra Costa and S. F. State, respectively. Scores were unavailable at press time.

Ram Horsehiders Impress Fischer After First Cuts

First cuts of the season were announced last Monday by baseball Coach Bill Fischer. The 12 players who were dropped will be able to gain added experience by playing on the junior varsity team, coached by Sid Phelan.

Though the first paring of the roster was originally scheduled for February 20, the weather and condition of the diamond had hampered Fischer from choosing among the players until now.

The team has lost a number of games, but the coach is most concerned about finding out which players are the best, and not winning practice games. "The team will change from week to week until the nine best men are found," Fischer stated.

Pitching is considered 50 per cent of the team, and Fischer was particularly impressed by the efforts of Ray Warman, Fred Glosser and Larry Nissim.

The Ram team's first opponents will be S. F. State and St. Mary's College next week at the home grounds of the respective opposing teams. The State game begins at 3:30 p.m., while the St. Mary's game will start at 3 p.m.

Intra Program Held In Classes

Coach Jack Gaddy, new director of the intra-mural sports program here, has announced that he will continue along the same line as his predecessor, Alex Schwarz. The only change will be the limiting of competition to class time only.

In previous years the champions of each class period would play off until a college champion team was determined, but Gaddy stated that due to the fact that many of the men involved worked after classes it is hard to get a college champion. He also said that it would be too much to try to get the participants taken out of classes for the playoff games.

The games will be set up with each instructor's class playing a round robin schedule and then playing off against the other classes at that same hour.

Anyone taking physical education will participate in the intramural program. Only men that have received Block SF awards are exempt from participating. The competition will be held in touch football, softball and basketball.

Speed Of DeConti, Signer Cuts Rivals To Size

In the current basketball era, where big men often completely dominate the game, it is a distinct pleasure to watch little men, basketball-wise, take some of the glory away from their taller teammates.

The Rams are fortunate in having two such players on this year's squad. Rich DeConti and Lou Signer, both standing 5-8, are little men in a physical sense only, for both have contributed a great deal in skill and morale to the Ram five.

DeConti, probably the flashier of the two, started his basketball career at St. Ignatius High School before entering the Army. After his service hitch, he enrolled here and cracked the varsity.

DeConti's forte is his ball-handling and his unbelievable driving shots. Although his teammates may exaggerate when they credit him with "the fastest hands in America," he does move quickly and gets not only his fantastic shots but a good number of free throws besides.

Signer, a freshman here who made the team directly out of Riordan, is, if possible, even faster on a straight-away than DeConti, has a deadly set shot and is a top-notch defensive player.

SPEED DeCONTI AND LOU SIGNER, the colorfully attired pair of Ram watchdown guards, have proved to be not only outstanding ball-handlers and shooters but real crowd-pleasers as well. DeConti, with his unbelievable driving shots and fancy dribbling, and Signer, with his outside shooting and aggressive defensive play, have used their somewhat sparse playing time to win over both home and road fans with colorful play.

Kane Held To Three Points In 68-49 League Finale Win Over Modesto; San Mateans Also Trounced, 82-75

By Mike Berger and Al Moss

A fiery Ram team easily handled Modesto, 68-49, at the college gymnasium last Friday night, limiting the record Big Eight scorer, Milt Kane, to a puny three-point total and tying the Pirates for second place in final conference standings.

Superlative defensive play by Norm King and John Rudometkin, plus a domination of the boards by King, Clarence Grider and George Campbell, made the victory doubly sweet for the college five, who had been beaten by the Pirates, and numerous other elements in Modesto, earlier in the season.

It was the work of King and Rudometkin that held Kane to his pitiful total, and it was the 21 points of King and the 19 markers for Grider that paved the way to victory. Al Mock contributed another fine game, adding to a team performance that surpassed, defensively, even the overwhelming win over West Contra Costa just 10 days before.

Forward Vic DiGiovanni tanked 17 points to lead the visitors' vain efforts.

After the Rams had rung up eight points to start the tilt, the Pirates finally connected for a pair of free throws, but the inspired San Franciscans soon built up a 23-4 lead after ten minutes had elapsed. There were seven minutes to go in the first half when the lid over the basket opened long enough for the first field goal for Modesto. The Rams had a fat 33-11 lead at the intermission.

The college five maintained a 30-point bulge for most of the second half, and when it became apparent that it simply wasn't the Pirates' night Coach Leon Lafolie removed the first team, and both coaches substituted freely thereafter.

The San Mateo tilt was a contest only for the first ten minutes. From then until the end, the superior Ram height was the telling difference, as they held a 7 to 12 point lead until the final 82-75 count.

With the homestanding Bulldogs fighting for an upset in the early stages, it was big Campbell, the Rams' 6-6 center, who kept his club from falling too far behind. Campbell picked up 10 points and snatched 13 rebounds in the first half, and that, combined with Grider's 11 points, gave the visitors a 37-31 halftime bulge.

The Rams' five double figure scorers for the game were Grider, 19; Campbell and King, 14; Mock, 16, and Dan Curley, 11, but one of the high marks in the college win was the defensive work of Lou Signer, 5-6 guard. Lou Pucci, San Mateo forward, topped all scorers with 21 points.

Sid Phelan's charges rounded out a satisfying season with the last pair of wins, ending conference play with a 10-4 mark and an overall season record of 18-10.

Ramblings

By Al Moss

EACH season the basketball coaches of the Big Eight Conference choose, by an intricate method, the official all-league team, a paper quintet that supposedly includes the top five players in the loop.

This is not an argument for or against the selection of such a team. It does seem, however, that any coach, in the midst of even a dull game, is too busy picking out the mistakes, weaknesses and strengths of his own squad and living and dying with his players to mentally examine the all-star merits of opposing players.

Unfortunately, or perhaps fortunately, there isn't at present any better method handy for choosing this traditional squad. Thus the coaches are welcome to the task, but there is an opening for reckless columnists to second-guess and beat the mentors to the punch with a mythical squad. Our choices:

Forward—Milt Kane, Modesto
Forward—Norm King, CCSF
Center—Hal Theus, Oakland
Guard—Clyde Hardeman, WCC
Guards—Dave Klurman, Stockton

The second team:

Forward—Ned Fitzgerald, San Mateo
Forward—Ray Davis, Sacramento
Center—Clarence Grider, CCSF
Guard—Sam Haggerty, Oakland
Guard—Jim Guinn, Santa Rosa

There should be no question about Kane, Hardeman and Klurman, currently the three league scorers. Kane, in our opinion and that of most of the circuit's coaches, is the outstanding player by far of the Big Eight. He has a variety of shots, is a strong rebounder and is more than adequate on defense. The 6-4 Modestan oozes confidence, and without his 30 some points a game, the Pirates would be nowhere near contention.

Hardeman and Klurman, the two little (5-11) men on the squad, are deadly jump shooters and good drivers. Theus, also primarily a jump shooter, is one of the two finest rebounders in the league.

The Rams' own King is, in our opinion, an often underrated player. Only Theus can even touch him as a rebounder, and his jump shot is at times as dangerous as any in the league.

Main competition on the official list will probably come from Guinn and Davis. Both are high scorers, and as such rate second team mention here, but both are far from complete ballplayers. Neither can rebound with King, and both, being their team's top shooters, score by bombarding the bucket with shots, and their percentages are not as high as could be desired.

Fitzgerald, a skinny 6-2 shooter with the familiar jump shot, is a hustler on the boards, although not exceptionally strong, and a dangerous scorer. Haggerty is as fine a playmaker and all-around player as anyone in the league, and his 34 point performance earlier this year proves he can score, but too many low-point performances have regrettably forced him to second team behind sharpshooting Klurman and Hardeman.

Grider has been one of the most controversial players in the league. In our opinion, he has the natural ability to rate close to Kane, but the 6-4 Ram forward-center was hampered early in the league season by illness, and his job at Modesto, probably his only poor performance under normal conditions of the year, has relegated him to second line.

Net League Opens Locally March 2

The 1956 edition of the college tennis team opened its league season against Sacramento March 2 on the Golden Gate Park Courts. Sacramento represented the first real test for what Coach Roy Diederichsen believes could develop into one of the best teams ever to wear the colors of the college.

With players like Don Mays, returning from the service; Joe Souza, transfer from Sacramento; Paul Fisher, Lincoln, and Hugh Annonsen, Washington, forming the backbone, the Rams appear to have a strong chance of bringing back the Big Eight title.

In the first action of the season, the Rams were blanked by Stanford, 8-0, in matches held at Palo Alto on February 28. Dave Nelson of the Indians won the top match of the afternoon from Mays of City College, 4-6, 6-3, 6-1.

The complete varsity tennis schedule:

March 9, at San Mateo; March 16, at West Contra Costa; March 23, Stockton at Golden Gate Park; April 6, at Modesto; April 13, Oakland at Golden Gate Park; April 27, Santa Rosa at Golden Gate Park; May 4-5, Conference Championships at Stockton; May 11-12, North Section Championships at Golden Gate Park; May 18-19, State Championships.

Heads Of AMS Functions Named By McFadden

Officers and committee heads to represent and administer the Associated Men Student organization this semester have been selected and are now official, according to Wayne McFadden, AMS president.

The newly appointed AMS officers are as follows: vice-president, Dave Jamison; treasurer, Sherwin Simmons, and secretary, James Carroll.

Committee chairmen appointed to take charge in handling the three main functions planned by the AMS include the following:

For the May 8 AMS smoker: Sam Franzella, entertainment; Robert Frick, publicity; Al Mowry, refreshments, and Dwane Shippey, clean-up.

The traditional Mardi Gras, annually presented under the direction of the AMS, will be celebrated this May under a new name, tentatively set as the Phelan Festival. James Phelan was a former senator of California and mayor of San Francisco.

The bazaars and booths for the festival, which were usually placed along the west campus, will be erected near the student union building, McFadden said.

Those in charge of the traditional Mardi Gras preparations include Bill Roberts, King and Queen Contest; Ed Dollard, bazaar and booths; George Kaplanis, parade; Bill Chisum, dance; Denny Deiman and Maurice Paszkiewicz, publicity, and Al Tanner as clean-up committee chairman.

Conducting the affairs of the AMS Basketball League Awards Dinner are Al Moss and Robert Tucker. They represent the Independents and Inter-Fraternity Council respectively.

AMS suggestion boxes have been established throughout the campus so that a criterion may be determined as to what the students desire and recommend in the way of social events or general policy of the organization.

This affords the students an opportunity to participate in choosing the name for the Mardi Gras festivities. Mimeographed sheets have been sent to the various campus clubs to achieve the same purpose, McFadden stated.

President Conlan

Conlan Returns From Convention In Atlantic City

Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, recently returned from Atlantic City, where he attended the national convention of the American Association of School Administrators which was held last month.

Theme of the 82nd annual convention was Education, A Key To Lasting Peace. Dr. Conlan, who attended the convention with Dr. Harold Spears, Superintendent of San Francisco Schools, spoke in high praise of the convention and described the address of Carlos P. Romulo, Philippine Ambassador to the United States, on America's Stake In Asia, as one of the addresses that pointed up the general theme of the meeting.

Before traveling to Atlantic City, Dr. Conlan stopped in New York to inspect the facilities and observe the program of the Bronx School of Science. He reported that the high school is a high designed for students who intend to make science their career or academic following. According to Dr. Conlan, the school is comprised of the more talented high school students in the Bronx. Dr. Conlan showed a great deal of interest in the project, although he made no comment other than the visit was "worth while."

Registration For Miss SF Contest Begins March 15

By Denny Deiman

Twenty-five women here have entered their names as candidates for the Miss San Francisco crown, George Kaplanis, SF Junior Chamber of Commerce liaison officer for the college, reported last week.

Also reported by Kaplanis were the items the judges would use as a basis for judging entrants. These include intellect, personality, talent and appearance in a bathing suit.

The talent phase of the contest will be a three minute display of any one of the following: reading of a dramatic part, singing, dancing, dress designing or some other form of comparable ability.

For those contenders who are not astute in any of the specified talents, a three minute speech concerning their plans for the future may be given.

Official registration for the contest begins Thursday, March 15, and Kaplanis has asked for complete participation by the women at this college.

Because of the active interest the college has shown toward the affair's success, several favorable comments from the contest's sponsor, the Public Relations Board of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, have been received, according to Kaplanis.

The requirements, as previously stated, ask that only unmarried high school graduates between the ages of 18 and 28 enter the contest. In addition, six months' residence in San Francisco is required, but if the woman has been a student at the college for at least one semester, she is eligible for the contest regardless of her length of residence.

Applicants should see Kaplanis for an interview in his office, located in Bungalow 2, at the hours of 9 a.m. or 11 a.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays, and at 9 a.m. or 1 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Chief Hargus Lists Campus Parking Regulations, Fines

The number of parking permits issued to students reached 900 last week, with more applications coming in, according to Lee Hargus, chief and Campus Police liaison officer to the Associated Students.

Every student who wants to park his car in the west campus parking lot is asked to get a permit from the campus police office, Room C120. One should present his driver's license, car registration card, and Associated Student card to the officer in charge to get a parking permit.

Student parking on campus is restricted to the west campus parking lot, by permit only, and to areas around the men's and women's gymnasiums. Faculty parking areas are located on the road behind Cloud Hall and the area behind the student union building.

Students parking without permits in the west campus parking zone or in the faculty parking zone will be subject to a $2 fine, Hargus warned.

Certain other areas on campus are restricted for parking under special circumstances. They are as follows: red zones indicate no stopping; yellow zone, stopping only for loading or unloading passengers or freight; white zone, loading and unloading of passengers only; green zone, 10 -minutes parking only.

Fines for violation of these regulations are: $5 for red zone parking, double parking, yellow zone parking, improper parking on a grade and parking by a fire hydrant; $2 for parking in a white zone, green zone, municipal or county property. All of these fines are payable to the clerk of the San Francisco Municipal Court, not the college, Hargus explained.

Friday Last Day To File Grad Petitions

Last day to file petition to graduate at the college's annual commencement in June is Friday, March 9, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar here, announced last week.

The petitions will be reviewed and acceptance will depend on mid-term and final grades. The first mid-term period ends the following Friday, March 16.

Eight Budgets Passed; Drama's Allotment Cut By Council As Finances Occupy Week's Meets

The appearance of Michael Griffin, drama instructor here, at the meeting of the Student Council last week headed up the news emanating from that body during their sixth and seventh meetings of the semester.

Griffin was called up to justify the little theater request for a budget of $2,730 to operate for the rest of the semester year. He told the council that not only was the money asked for deserved, but that every semester he was forced to spend his personal funds to make ends meet. Griffin further stated that he had originally requested $2,730, and that this amount was what would be required to run the drama program. In answer to a question, Finance Chairman Emory Lebonville defended his estimate of Griffin's budget, claiming that the amount called for originally was excessive. Final action by the council awarded drama $1,180.

The Associated Women Students also ran into trouble with their request for funds. Lebonville presented a modified request for $442 to be allotted the AWS. Rose Thurman, AWS president, complained that it would be impossible to carry out her planned activities with that amount of money. She pointed out that the AWS was obligated to entertain visiting high school representatives at a tea, and that under her present budget it would be difficult to pay for the refreshments. Bill Roberts moved to amend the budget to read $512, the amount first called for. This was seconded. Joyce Weaver, vice president of the Associated Students, attacked the council for what she termed "disgraceful lack of confidence in their finance chairman." The motion was finally tabled until Lebonville could get together with Miss Thurman to better understand the AWS needs.

Other requests brought before the council included: a request for $187 from the rally committee, passed; $410, commencement budget, passed; $610, controller, passed; $573.90, varsity basketball, passed; $200, junior varsity basketball, passed; $1,000, varsity baseball, passed, and The Guardsman, $3,702, passed.

The Associated Men Student budget, cut by Lebonville from $777 to $539, was tabled by the council after a long discussion pertaining to the merits of using an outside band in preference to the college band. Bill Roberts stated that an outside name band was needed to draw people to the annual Mardi Gras celebration.

DICK MEISTER, former editor of The Guardsman, who was recently elected to the same position on the Stanford Daily.

Former Guardsman Chief Elected As Editor At Stanford

Dick Meister, former editor-in-chief of The Guardsman, has been elected to a similar job with the Stanford Daily for the current volume.

In addition, several other former members of The Guardsman's editorial board were recently appointed to editorial positions on the newspapers of four-year colleges or universities.

Meister, who headed the staff here in the fall semester of 1955 and again in the following semester, held the position of associate editor at Stanford last quarter.

The new Stanford Daily chief was graduated from this college in June 1954, a member of Alpha Gamma Sigma honor society. Meister entered Stanford the following semester and served one quarter as a reporter before moving into the associate editor's position. In May of 1955 he was awarded a $500 scholarship by the Bay Area chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, national men's professional journalism fraternity.

Shirley Murphy, who served as managing editor of The Guardsman in fall of 1953 and as associate editor in spring of 1954, was appointed managing editor of the Daily Californian at University of California for the spring 1956 semester. Miss Murphy also held the publicity director's job while attending this college.

Joining her on the Californian staff are Bev Swope, managing editor of The Guardsman in spring 1955, and Emil Portale, sports reporter here at the same time, who have been named reporter and senior sports reporter, respectively.

Carol Fisher, assistant managing editor here in spring semester, 1955, was recently named to the managing editor's job at San Francisco State. Fred Fukuchi, sports editor of The Guardsman in spring 1952 is now serving as news editor of The Daily Evergreen at Washington State College.

College Represents Chile At Yearly Model UN Convention Held In Oregon

City College again this year will participate at the yearly Model United Nations convention being held at Corvallis, Oregon, April 4 through 6, according to Thomas Dutcher, debate coach here and college representative to the Model UN Association.

Each member college is assigned a country that is a member of the UN, to be represented at the convention. College representatives here will represent the South American country of Chile.

This is the second year the college has been included in this association of the world's nations, Dutcher commented, and he added that it is the desire of this college to exchange ideas and methods of governmental practices with the exchange country.

Students representing the college at the convention will be chosen on their interest, ability, and willingness to make the Model UN a success, he added.

The UN Association at Corvallis is a replica of the United Nations Organization, whose headquarters are in New York City. The Model UN Association strives toward the same goals, namely, better understanding between the peoples and nations of the world.

An estimated 400 delegates are expected to attend the convention.

Pre-Registration Opens Today

Pre-registration appointments for next semester's programs will start at 8 p.m., today, at the counselling office, S160, counsellor Waddington Blair stated last week.

Blair remarked that concentrated efforts have been made to eliminate the long lines which filled the corridors during the first pre-registration day last semester, and the process should be expedited this year.

Registration is based on a numbering system entitling low numbered registrants to priority in appointment dates.

To acquire this number, students must either keep scheduled appointments, or prior to the time of the appointment, cancel it and make a new one through the counselling office. Students failing to follow this procedure may have to forfeit this number and accept one for a later registration hour.

By filling out proposed program sheets early the interview will be hastened and more time allowed for discussion.

AMS Card Sales Winner

DAVE JAMISON, Associated Student card sales chairman, presents the Associated Men Student trophy to this semester's leading AMS card salesman, Bill Roberts.

Over-all winner in the AMS-AWS competition was Darlene Reitz. Sales by contestants have not been announced, although a total card sales figure of $7845 was reached as of March 8.

Miss Reitz's victory shattered the three straight win skein that the AMS had, leaving the six round series split at three apiece.

Paced by Emily Hardy's double triumph, the AWS jumped into a commanding lead only to be tied by the AMS, which followed the women's twin killing with one of their own. The AMS then forged into the lead with a victory lost semester, only to see their slim lead wiped out by Miss Reitz.—Guardsman photo by Dave Gehringer.

Regional Meeting At Sacramento For Student Leaders

Twenty-seven student government leaders, headed by Associated Student President Bill Cirimele, will attend the Northern Section, California Junior College Student Government Association regional conference at Sacramento this Saturday, March 17.

Each semester, regional meetings are held by Northern, Central and Southern sections as a preliminary to the state conference. Problems of student government, athletics, campus organizations and other phases of student affairs are discussed in workshops, and a general assembly is held to act on workshop findings.

Most of the two-year colleges in the state belong to their regional organizations, and some 22 colleges are expected to send varying numbers of representatives to Sacramento.

Representing this college at the conference will be:

Filipino Club Presents End-Of-Midterm Dance

The Filipino Club here will hold a dance in the student union building this Friday from 9 p.m. to 12 p.m., Virgilio Bugayong, club president, recently announced.

Music will be provided by Dick Sallsman and his orchestra.

Appropriate dress for the occasion will be campus clothes, Bugayong said, and admission will be 75 cents with Associated Student card, and $1.25 without.

Summer Course Programming To Start March 19

Summer session here for 1956 will commence June 25 and extend to August 3, with a pre-registration program set from next Monday, March 19, to June 8, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar here, announced recently.

University parallel courses in business, biology, mathematics, engineering and English will be among those offered at the six week session. Classes will meet one or two hours daily during morning hours from Monday through Friday with no fee being charged for attendance.

The student body of the summer sessions is expected to reach an approximate total of 900 students seeking extra credit. It is estimated that the majority of these students will be comprised of recent high school graduates and regularly enrolled City College students.

One of the primary reasons for the extra sessions is to allow the numerous veterans attending here to continue their studies without interruptions in their GI Bill payments.

March 28 Last Day For Dropping Courses

Students desiring to drop a course have until Wednesday, March 28, to do so, John Brady, coordinator of Student Welfare here, announced recently.

"Students disqualified from class by attendance regulations will not be able to drop the course and students cannot take a leave of absence to make up for this deficiency," Brady stated.

By notifying their counsellor, the student will receive instructions as to the procedure for dropping a course.

Tentative Deadline For Contributions To Forum April 2

Deadline for short stories, poems, critiques, essays and any form of creative writing to be considered for publication in the coming issue of Forum, is set tentatively for Monday, April 2, Catherine Connolly, Forum faculty adviser, stated last week.

Forum is an annual City College publication consisting solely of creative literary work by students of the college. It is in its 20th year of publication this year.

Miss Connolly said that all students are encouraged to submit unlimited amounts of work for publication. There's a need for more essays, criticisms, and plays in the satirical-humor vein, she said.

Potential contributors are reminded that manuscripts should be on 8½ by 11 inch typing paper. Work should be double-spaced and may be submitted to Miss Connolly or to any member of the Forum Club.

"Everyone, regardless of his ability, is welcome to attend the meetings of the Forum Club, which are held during Friday college hours in C222," Miss Connolly said. The topics discussed during the meeting include publication proceedures, contributions to be used, and publicity campaigns.

Forum usually comes out about the last week in May or the first week in June, and is distributed upon request to all members of the Associated Students, and to those without AS cards for a charge of 50 cents per copy.

Along with Miss Connolly, faculty advisers for Forum this semester include James Billwiler, Samuel Duff, William Eckert, and Dorothy Mercer. Miss Mercer was the first adviser to Forum, whose early issues were mimeographed. At present, Forum is published by multilith process.

Campus Police Lose First Match

Campus Police pistol team had its first match against the San Jose pistol team Saturday evening, March 2, at San Jose State College and lost the match by a 90 point margin, according to Lee Hargus, captain of the pistol team and chief of the Campus Police here.

On the following day, March 3, the team went to the Oakland Pistol Club to compete in the National Pistol Match. Hargus won the first place medal and trophy, and Lee Trainer won the two first place medals there.

The college pistol team is composed of Hargus, captain; Bill Anderson, Dean Howard, Trainer, George Rodgers, and Fred Fitzgerald, criminology and pistol instructor here.

Midterms To Cancel College Hour

There will be no college hour this Friday because of midterm week, Ralph O. Hillsman, assistant dean of Student Activities here, announced yesterday.

Last Friday, March 9, was the last day for filing petitions for graduation for the spring, 1956, semester. Anyone who did not file his petition at this time cannot be guaranteed his degree this year, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar here.

Petitions can be filed at later dates, but this is no guarantee of receiving a diploma, Miss Learnard stressed.

Midterm grades are to be given out by the individual instructor, and not by the counselling department. If for some reason grades are unobtainable from instructors, then students can consult their counsellor, Miss Learnard added.

Club meetings will be held during the next college hour on Friday, March 23, and most campus organizations will meet at that time. Also scheduled for next Friday is the faculty-student coffee hour.

Another college hour activity on March 23 will be the presentation of a film, Weather, Breath Of Life, in Room 136 of the science building. This film shows how weathermen make their predictions and why they often go wrong. Also, the structure of clouds and the effects of the wind on the weather will be explained.

ISC Tea, First Rushing Affair Scheduled Next Sunday; Laurel Hall Is Site For Chinese Setting

First women's rushing affair of the semester, the joint Inter-Sorority Council tea, is scheduled this Sunday, March 18, from 2 to 5 p.m., at Laurel Hall, 2676 California, Mary Golding, dean of women here, announced last week. The tea was held at Laurel Hall last semester and proved to be quite successful. The setting of a Chinese motif is the background chosen for this affair.

Sunday will be the first opportunity for the sorority sisters to meet their prospective pledges, Dean Golding stated.

The receiving line will consist of Dean Golding and each sorority's sponsor, president, vice-president, and pledge mistresses.

Greeting the rushees will be Carolyn Riedeman, sponsor; Rose Thurman, president; Darlene Reitz, vice-president; and Kay Griffin, pledge mistress of Alpha Lambda Chi.

BARBARA BATMALE, Inter-Sorority Council president.

Martha Scott, sponsor; Ellie Benner, president; Louise von Emster, vice-president; and Jane Goldsberry, pledge mistress of Delta Psi; Anka Perisich, sponsor; Barbara Batmale, president; Ginger Mallaby, vice-president; and Jean Vachon, pledge mistress of Kappa Phi.

Evelyn Kerkhof, sponsor; Bobbie LeBoff, president; Terry Ortner, vice-president; and Margie Scheller, pledge mistress of Phi Beta Rho; Gertrude Norgard, sponsor; Gail Ziegler, president; Darlene Stewart, vice-president; and Pat Frodsham, pledge mistress of Theta Tau.

Ruth Inskipp, sponsor; Toni Mannina, president; Barbara Polster, vice-president; and Anne Smith, pledge mistress of Zeta Chi.

The dress for those rushing will be suits, heels, hats and gloves. The sorority sisters will be dressed in formals for this affair, Dean Golding said.

Barbara Batmale, president of the ISC, and her committee have been working on plans for this and other rushing affairs. Other ISC members include Toni Mannina, Zeta Chi; Bobbie LeBoff, Phi Beta Rho; Gail Ziegler, Theta Tau; Rose Thurman, Alpha Lambda Chi; and Ellie Benner of Delta Psi.

Dean Golding said that some women possibly didn't get a chance to sign up to go through rushing. Those who didn't can still sign up for rushing in Dean Golding's office.

Club Board Votes For College Band At Spring Festival

The Club Activities Board voted last week 23 to 10 in favor of using the 15 piece college dance band at the heretofore nameless festival, previously known as the Mardi Gras, and annually sponsored by the Associated Men Students, according to Emory Lebonville, Associated Student finance chairman here.

It was agreed that the 15 piece college band is to receive a minimum of 50 per cent of the gate receipts at the dance, Lebonville added.

Although the dance may be held in the student union building, there is some discussion as to whether the bazaar and booths, traditionally characterizing the festival, will be erected here. "They may either be set up in the men's gymnasium or at the Cow Palace," Wayne McFadden, AMS president, recently stated.

Popular opinion of the students at the college will be influential in determining the name of the festival. Suggestion boxes to that effect have already been established in the central parts of the campus grounds.

Students may check the title to their liking on a list, ranging in variation from the "Phelan Festival" to "City College Clambake," and place their ballots in one of the boxes located near the Silver Pole, the flagpole in the courtyard, in the cafeteria, men's gymnasium and in the library.

Clarence Watson has been named to take charge of the H&R league in the basketball tournament, also sponsored by the AMS this semester. He will represent the group at the Awards Dinner honoring the winning league leader of the tournament of league champions.

Applications For Summer Work Now Being Made

With 25 employees already listed for summer jobs, the college placement service announced this week that all students interested in summer work, either in San Francisco or out of town, should file their applications immediately for consideration, according to Joe Amori, placement director here.

Resorts, government agencies, public and private camps head the list of job opportunities this year. The job openings are to be found in a wide variety of activities and extend from Oregon in the north to Mexico in the south. Judging from the list of jobs, wages and salaries will top last year's by about 10 per cent.

As in the past, there is a larger demand for men workers than for women. Still, there are many job opportunities for trained women.

Particularly needed are women applicants who have some knowledge of food service and those with clerical skills. The more mature worker is preferred to the younger one. Men who have some knowledge and training in food preparation are especially desired. These jobs pay from $250-$400 per month and include board and room for the entire period of employment.

All applicants should begin immediately to obtain references in order to have them on hand for a personal interview, Amori said. These should be procured from past employers, counsellors and administrators.

Vandalism On Campus Reflects On College And Student Body

IF THERE is anything that is degrading to the reputation of any college it is vandalism, and though it was mentioned in this space last week there is yet another aspect to this problem which has not been discussed.

In this case, the acts of vandalism concerning stealing, not merely victimizing students of this college but students of the high schools as well.

Various personal belongings of basektball players performing at the college gymnasium have been stolen while the owners were playing on the court above the dressing room where the very theft was taking place.

Three incidents of this kind involved two-year college players, once with a member of the Ram basketball team and twice with members of visiting Big Eight Conference clubs.

At least one other case involving high school players who had personal belongings stolen during a game have been cited, and indeed others on a smaller level have undoubtedly taken place.

The most recent theft took place during the Modesto basketball game on March 2. One of the visiting Pirate players had a diamond ring and a wallet stolen from his locker, and as yet the thief has not been caught, and there is little chance that he will be.

To a certain extent, the player was at fault, for he failed to register his valuables, but the fact that the temptation to steal is present is reason enough to try to correct the situation.

The entrances to the gymnasium, besides the one entrance where spectators may get in, have all been locked during these basketball games, but obviously some further action is necessary.

It seems that only physical guarding of entrances from the playing area to the locker rooms can solve this problem.

The basketball season at the college may be over for this season, but the fact that these vandals have been able to get away with their thefts makes it imperative that measures to stop their action be worked out in advance of next season.

In addition to the personal loss to persons involved in these unfortunate cases, the possibility of liability for losses on the part of the Associated Students is raised.

Although no action has been taken in this regard as yet, it now is more than obvious that this vandalism is reflecting on the Associated Students.

It is up to persons in authority to see that such acts, which damage not only the AS but the college as a whole, be completely eliminated.

Emotional Expression Plus Freedom

Paper Cup Display Pattern Teaches Architectural Strength And Design

By Charles Clausen

Paper cups arranged in assorted patterns and supporting different sized slabs of wood were on display in Room 207 in Cloud Hall for the last two weeks.

Part of the display of the architecture department, and created by students in that department, the cups are capable of supporting up to 150 pounds of weight.

The architectonic (definition: showing design) pedestal display shown in the picture at right was built by Dan Worrall. It will hold up to 30 pounds of weight. The steer's skull is an added attraction for the artistically inclined.

More interesting than the display, which includes contributions from the photography department, is the reason for doing it.

Initiative and a free mind are the objects of the work, although some of the work is outlined in advance by instructors. Through these projects, a student learns to express himself in various ways.

On exhibition besides the cups are many examples of emotional action. To do this, a student takes any objects found on the campus and arranges them in any pattern he desires.

Others take paper and through any process that comes to their minds make various patterns. Some put the paper over rough surfaces and rub a pencil over it to transfer the markings.

Photographs of buildings and trees, emphasizing the lines and contours, are the contribution of the photography department.

These projects not only are a means of emotional expression, but teach students to use their initiative in the choice of materials and the different uses of any one object.

One illustration is that of the cups, where the students not only sees them as drinking utensils but as the supporting factor in the construction of a coffee table. Not only is it practical because of the weight it can bear, but it is also decorative.

In the end, the result is safer construction, as all of the objects constructed are tested for their specific purpose. The tables with underpinnings of paper cups will be tested with various weights to see if they meet the calculated requirement.

To be a successful architect, a student must have all of the factors involved in these projects instilled in him at the beginning. He must have emotional action, and a free mind.

The Bohemian

By Maurice Pasztkiewicz

THEY sat there side by side in the compartment; both were gazing out the window, watching the countryside roll by at a rapid pace. Sometimes their eyes would meet, only to turn aside quickly with a gesture signifying embarrassment.

Yet, one of them was in a talkative mood. He was stout and had a jovial face. By his manner one could clearly tell that he came from the South.

He unfastened his pack, unbuttoned his shirt collar and tried to make himself as comfortable as possible on the hard, wooden seat. Once having attained a suitable position, he searched for a small bag, found it and began to go through the rituals of rolling a cigarette.

"Do you want to smoke?" he said, surprising his companion.

"No thanks," was the answer that came from the youth, sitting in an awkward position in the tight room.

At this, the fat man lit his cigarette and started smoking. The puffs of smoke filled the room with a dense atmosphere. He became uneasy. He was unaccustomed to this silence, especially on long train rides. Again he spoke, this time with a serious air.

"What's the matter, young fellow; are you frightened?" he intimately asked.

The other man was silent for a moment and then said, "What makes you say that? I have nothing to fear for myself. To me it doesn't matter one way or the other. I have had many glimpses of death in my life."

"No offense meant," said the Southerner apologetically. "I just thought that you looked a little worried, that's all."

"But I do worry about my mother," the other hastily interrupted. "If anything should happen to me on this journey, she would be all alone on the farm."

"Why did you come with us then; they only took volunteers, didn't they?" the older man queried in an overly dramatic expression of sympathy.

"For the same reason you did," he said, commencing to breathe deeply. "They killed my brothers, sisters and father during the Civil War. For this we seek revenge by fighting someone else's war in a cold, foreign country."

"Perhaps even to die there," the bitter youngster added in a whisper.

With this he reached for the switch and turned off the lights. But dawn had already come. And the early morning rays shone into the train compartment, disturbing the rest of two Spanish soldiers on their way to the Communist front.

One-Stop Cure All Could Solve Guilt Complex, Trim Shaggy Head

By Bob O'Brien

The age of the barber is nigh; exit Dr. Freud, enter Just Plain Bill, the real head of the head department.

The barbers, we are informed, have just raised their prices to $1.75 per head. This should rank them with the Cadillac salesmen and the stock promoters as far as earning power is concerned. The only fault that we find with this setup is the very way they run their business. Instead of the old striped pole, we would like to see a new style of advertising. "Problems solved while you have your haircut."

After all, who knows more about life than a barber. If the men in white would only exploit their knowledge of people, they could drive the psychiatrists to the barber colleges.

Just Plain Bill has been doing this sort of thing for years with a success that would make a Hollywood wigpicker blush. The public might complain about paying $1.75 for a plain haircut, but a shop advertising complete skull service would enjoy great success.

In practice it would work like this: man enters barber shop, the decor is subdued, there are couches strewn about. He sinks into the nearest one and is approached by the barber.

"How's the guilt complex today, Mr. Smith?"

"Pretty good, Charlie. Clip it short on top, leave the sideburns alone."

"Anything else you'd like today, Mr. Smith?"

"Yes, Charlie, I wish you'd try to straighten me out on the way I feel toward the wife and kids."

"Sure thing, Mr. Smith, I'll take care of it while I shave your neck."

And so it would go. Every person leaving the shop would walk with head held high. And the head he would be holding? That would be in perfect shape, both inside and out. Freshly serviced, so to speak, ready to face the world with perfect assurance for two more weeks.

The reader may well ask, "What is to become of the psychiatrists?"

We can foresee some small resistance on their part; after all, they have a pretty soft racket as it stands now. They will fight the movement for awhile, even try inducements to keep their old patients from leaving. They may run ads in the papers: "Dr. Birdsong, the friendly credit psychiatrist.

Irish Don Green; Welcome Spring

Spring comes a little earlier to the Irish as they adorn the green characterizing St. Patrick's Day.

On this Saturday, Irishmen all over the world will pay zealous tribute to their patron saint by participating in parades and other manifestations of festivity.

Actually, little known fact and much legend evolves around this saint who lived in Ireland some seven centuries ago. With the founding of missionaries and the organization of Christian societies, St. Patrick was instrumental in keeping his country in touch with western Europe and in spreading the faith, still so fervent in the Ireland of today.

Among his other deeds, Patrick is reputed to have driven the terrible "snakes" from his native island. Perhaps this has a connection with the British naming the apostle Sueat (warlike).

But why the wearing of green on this somewhat solemn day, the naive ones ask while rummaging through their wardrobes?

The shamrocks are green, aren't they? And everyone knows they grow in the green valleys of Eire. Anyway, St. Patrick used four leaf clovers as his symbol. Thus stems the tradition, as old grandmother used to say.

So without more ado, let's join the Irish in celebrating their day, and you'd better be wearing green while doing it.

Santee's Ouster Right Under Existing Rules

By Don Ball

A GREAT hue and cry has been raised of late over the suspension of miler Wes Santee.

Opponents of the move argue that: 1. he wasn't the only one whose expenses were out of line, and 2. why him, since he was our best in the mile.

It would seem that whether or not he was only one of many, the fact remains that he admittedly broke the rules. The justness of the rules is not the issue. As long as they are in force, it's up to Santee to abide with them as long as he wants to remain an amateur.

There is injustice it is true, but saying that Santee isn't the only one is in essence a blanket excuse for all other violators.

The real injustice is not to Santee, rather it is to the thousands of athletes who abide by a set of rules which force them to go to great expense in order to remain amateur.

These men, some of whom have competed against Santee, have accepted the rules and run against Santee while he excreised his name-value by demanding a cut under the table.

Complaining that Santee is our best miler and, therefore, should receive some sort of special dispensation is as absurd as offering pro-basketballer George Mikan a berth on the Olympic team because he's a great hook shot artist.

The rule solution to the Santee case is the solution to one of the major problems facing amateur athletics. The solution: change the rules which Santee violated and others observe at great difficulty and expense to themselves.

America's simon-pure stand on amateurism in athletics, altruistic as it may be, is somewhat out of step with that of the rest of the world in view of the fact that almost all other nations subsidize their athletes.

The idea of government subsidization of American athletes is somewhat distasteful, but so is their present plight of having to rely on charity.

Shots At Ramdom

By Bob Kauth

POOR Danny Dapper! At the hands of a local instructor, his ego was stretched as the truth often is, beyond recognition and repair, according to Mrs. Dapper.

As his elbow slipped from the desk, Danny was shocked into a complete state of consciousness in time to hear his instructor announce, "The 'intelligentsia' is composed of you college students."

No sooner did the period close, than he confronted the instructor and asked, "Am I intelligent?"

After rapping her "slightly" upon the shoulder, she turned and Danny said, "I was thinking, Doctor."

"That is good, Mr. Dapper."

"Might I be a member of the intelligentsia' also, too, as you said college students are, maybe—huh?"

She nodded her head, Danny reports.

Arriving home, he rushed to tell his Mrs. the good news and in an offhanded manner declared, "The instructor said today that I had brains.

"Don't be funny," Danny warned, "or you're going to get shipped back to L.A. Anyone can get passing grades if they study, but how many of those guys could get the grades that I do without opening a book?"

"OK, maybe you are a genius," the Mrs. finally replied, "but that still is no reason for leaving your comic books scattered about."

Latest reports reveal that now all Danny's hats are too small, and the Mrs. thinks, "Instructors, like teeth, can be replaced!"

LEAP YEAR PROSPECTS for the sugar or spice, this may be debatable but unfortunately it is not discernible, members of the college are, again unfortunately, very good, according to this semester's enrollment statistics, which reveal that the women are outnumbered by almost three to one. There are 3,762 men and only 1,488 women currently enrolled as daytime students.

Modesto Editor Doth Protest Too Much

RAMBLINGS

By Al Moss

Probe Should Start In 'All-American City'

COLLEGE newspaper editors have been known to put the proverbial foot in the mouth more than once before, but Howard Emerson, the self-styled crusading editor of The Modesto Collegian, has really outdone himself.

In the February 24 issue of The Collegian, Emerson uses his editorial prerogative to attack Big Eight Conference basketball officiating, at least such officiating as is found in games lost by Modesto. Coming from any other college in the league, such remarks would be in incredibly poor taste. Coming from Modesto, they are merely laughable.

The editorial reads, in part: "There was and could be no excuse for the conduct of the Oakland officials. What defeated our team was not a mistaken call at a crucial moment—something which could be understood—but out and out bias and incompetence on the part of the referees, the kind of thing that casts shadows of doubt not only on them, but on the game itself and the school that sponsors it."

Assuming that editor Emerson saw the game in question (played at Oakland, of course), which is doubtful, this is still an unfounded and impertinent piece of amateurish journalism that offers a wonderful example of the "pot calling the kettle black."

Modesto has been notorious for years among opposing Big Eight Conference coaches and teams for the incompetence and favoritism shown by the officials there. Pirate players and coaches get away with murder on their home court, and it is notable that in at least four instances this year, the top scorers of visiting teams have fouled out, often on calls that were highly disputable, to say the least.

The Ram-Modesto game offers a shining example. In six previous conference games, one Ram player had fouled out. At Modesto, Norm King and Clarence Grider, the team's leading scorers, each picked up five personals, and when Al Martino was unlucky enough to start scoring in the second half, the officials took care of him, too.

Milt Kane, Modesto's great hometown hero, who can do no wrong in the Pirates' stronghold, bulled his way to 17 free throws. During all this action on the floor the Modesto timer got so excited that he allowed the clock to run during three last-quarter timeouts, eating up time that could have been valuable to the visiting Rams.

The San Franciscans lost that game, 83-74 (they won a later game, 68-47, in a contest more indicative of the difference between the two teams) and thus proved a premise that other visitors to Modesto have found to be true: The visiting team is simply not allowed to win, if it can be prevented in ANY manner.

Such procedure is not unusual, nor is it limited to City College. Each visiting team receives the same treatment, and with the rabid fans, who do indeed support their team to the fullest, yelling as they do, a complaining coach or player nearly invites free transportation out of "the All-American City" via rail (not steel) with tar and feathers to boot.

And so, editor Emerson, we offer this: What defeated your team was not "a mistaken call at a crucial moment," nor was it "out and out bias and incompetence on the part of the officials." It was a better team, and the sooner you and your fans and your players realize this and stop crying about the numerous losses that, in your eyes, were caused by everything but a better team, the sooner Modesto will command the respect that its otherwise talented teams and rabid fans deserve.

On one point, however, we agree with the aforementioned editorial. Editor Emerson ends with this thought: "——. If such conduct as theirs (the officials') is allowed to continue, we may be sure that more serious charges will be brought. The Big Eight Conference cannot condone any more of this partiality. In our opinion, a complete investigation of the officials should be made without delay."

We agree whole-heartedly, just as we're sure everyone in the Big Eight does. We suggest, however, that editor Emerson and his cohorts look in their own backyard before screaming for an investigation. It just could be that the Pirates' den has some buried skeletons that are better left uninvestigated.

New Hurlers Boost Coach Fischer's Confidence; Ram Horsehiders Prepare For Opening League Game March 24

By Lou Lucia

Though the batting and fielding of this year's baseball team is comparable to that of the 1955 squad, Coach Bill Fischer states that the pitching appears to be stronger.

Fischer believes he has an efficient pitching staff in left-handers Fred Glosser, Ray Warman and Ron Castro; right-hander Larry Nissim, and reliefer Bob Bandettini.

BILL FISCHER, Ram baseball coach, pins high hope on his predominately left-handed pitching staff, as his team seeks to better last year's second place finish.

So far the pitchers have only worked three or four innings at a time, but from now on Fischer plans to have the hurlers throw the entire nine innings when possible and practical. The limited amount of pitching, necessary for early conditioning, has had a bearing in the losses to Washington High and Santa Clara, Fischer remarked.

Players instrumental in wins over Saint Ignatius, USF, and East Contra Costa have been rewarded by temporary starting berths.

For practice games, Fischer has used the following line-up:

Fred Waters, CF
Blaire LeMire, SS
Roger Ferrari, 1B
Ken Dito, C
Jim Poppin, RF
John McCarthy, 2B
Glen Bukowatz, 3B
Lou Flores, LF

Fischer emphasized that this was still an exploratory phase, and the line-up would be juggled several times before the first league game on March 24.

"A true indication of a player's batting prowess can only be determined by the number of at bats, approximately 30 or more attempts," Fischer commented. For this reason he postponed the first cut from March 5 to March 12.

The cautious coach spent last week surveying the players as they participated in intra-squad games, to make sure that any promising players have not been overlooked.

Netmen Matched With WCC Friday

With one league meet already behind them, the college tennis team will travel to Richmond to meet West Contra Costa on Friday, March 16.

Considering steady improvement, Coach Roy Diederichsen believes the net team could prove outstanding. Don Mays, the only returning lettermen, continues to spark the squad in practice. At this point the first four on the tennis ladder are Mays, Joe Souza, Paul Fischer and Dedric Azar-Farr.

The scheduled opener with Sacramento on March 2 was forfeited to the Ram team, Sacramento, a weak sister in the loop in past years, declined to enter a team into league play, feeling that they could not give adequate competition.

Results of the Big Eight match against San Mateo on March 9 were unavailable at press time.

According to all reports, the circuit seems to be more competitive than in the past, and San Mateo, West Contra Costa, Stockton and Modesto appear to be strong contenders.

On March 23 the team will play host to the Stockton netters.

Intramural Sports Competition Begins

Intramural competition in basketball and football has already started for this semester, Jack Gaddy, new director of intramural sports, said this week.

All of the teams will be composed of regular physical education students. Each class will be separated into different teams and they will play against each other.

Near the end of the semester, the winner of each class will meet the other hour champs, and then the two top teams will meet in the finals to determine the champions.

Later in the semester, a boxing tournament will be held. Anyone may enter and there will be events in all weight classes.

RA Schedules An Extensive Co-Ed Sports Program

With a change of name in the governing organization, a great deal of attention is being given to the co-educational sports program here, according to Lene Johnson, adviser to the newly-named Recreation Association.

The new title was chosen at the end of last semester, and replaces Women's Athletic Association.

Some of the co-ed activities students will be able to take advantage of are volleyball at 2 p.m., on Friday; archery on Friday morning; ice skating for beginners at 1 p.m., on Tuesday; intermediate ice skating at 1:30 p.m. on Thursday; tennis at 2 p.m. on Monday; badminton on Friday during college hour and at 3 p.m. on Tuesday; fencing at 11 a.m. on Friday; modern dancing at 3 p.m. on Wednesday; folk dancing and golf at 2 p.m. on Wednesday.

The only requirement to take part in any of these activities is signing up in the women's gymnasium, Mrs. Johnson added.

A faculty member is in charge of each activity. A manager will be chosen from each group and will have a seat on the RA Council. The RA Council's job is to plan sport days with other two-year colleges, Mrs. Johnson said.

The two worst defeats in Rose Bowl history were suffered by Stanford and USC to Michigan by the same score of 49-0 in the years of 1902 and 1948.

Tracksters Face Oakland Saturday For Conference Opener At Berkeley In Triangular Meet Including Cal Frosh

Moving immediately into the Big Eight Conference race with only a few weeks of damp-weather workouts behind them, the Ram tracksters take on Oakland and the University of California Frosh at Berkeley this Saturday, March 17. Field events start at 1:30, with the opening mile run beginning at 2 p.m.

The dual meet with Oakland is the score that counts. If the Rams hope to stay in the conference round-robin title race, they must get off on the right foot, but Oakland, largely an unknown quantity, could gum up the works.

It's the Cal Frosh that is the real target for the Rams. The Bear Cubs were one of two teams to whip the San Franciscans last year, as the Rams went on to Big Eight and Northern California championships. Revenge would be sweet.

The Monte Upshaw - Don Bowden - Leamon King combination that led the Cal win last year has moved up to the varsity, but there are plenty of top-notch yearlings to fill their shoes.

Top individual battle figures to be in the high jump. Oakland sports Hal Theus, their top performer, in the event, and the lanky basketball player has a best mark of 6-4, the Big Eight record. California will pin their high-jump hopes on Dick Dailey, who recorded a high school leap of 6-7 and figures to improve. The Rams offer LeRoy Thomas, another 6-4 jumper, and basketballer Norman King, with a 6-2 jump to his credit. Early season form may cut down on the marks.

Another battle could develop in the 100-yard dash, where conference champ Clint Redus of the Rams will take time out from his great hurdling efforts to match his :09.6 century against Berkeley's Al Kellogg, who has a :09.9 effort. Kellogg won't have to face such stiff competition as he goes in the 220 with a fine :21.2 mark and enters the 440 with his best of :49.7.

Others who look like winners for the Bear yearlings are Mike Baxter, a 47-foot shot-putter, and Jay Howard, last year's Alameda County Athletic League discus champ.

The Rams, of course, will once again be led by Redus. The husky sophomore set four City College records in his first year as a Ram, and should improve on those marks this year.

The Cal Frosh meet would normally offer a good testing ground, but with the Oakland Thunderbirds in the affair the Rams must go for every point and cannot experiment as much as might be desired.

The remainder of the Ram track schedule is as follows:

March 24, San Francisco and San Mateo at Santa Rosa; March 31, at San Francisco State; April 7, San Francisco and West Contra Costa at Stanford Frosh; April 13, San Francisco and Stockton at Sacramento; April 20, San Francisco and West Contra Costa at Modesto; April 28, at University of San Francisco.

May 5, Big Eight Conference Meet at Sacramento; May 12, West Coast Relays at Fresno; May 19, Northern California Meet at Santa Rosa; May 26, State Meet at Modesto with California Relays.

Intra Basketball Under AMS Rule For First Time

For the first time in recent semesters, all of the intramural basketball league teams are under the auspices of Associated Men Students, headed by AMS President Wayne McFadden.

The three leagues are the Inter-Fraternity, the Hotel and Restaurant, and the Independent. Taking charge of important data for the running of the leagues are Bob Tucker for the IFC, and Al Moss for the Independents. Clarence Watson heads the H&R League.

Inaugurated last year, the Independent League enters under the AMS for the first time this semester.

At the end of the league finals, the three champion teams will meet in two playoff games to determine the championship.

Teams in the independent league include Chinese Club, Newman Club, International Relations Club, Alpha Phi Omega, Filipino Club, Alpha Delta Epsilon, and The Guardsman.

The IFC League consists of Alpha Sigma Delta, Beta Phi Beta, Beta Tau, Gamma Phi Ypsilon, Kappa Rho, Lambda Phi, Phi Beta Delta, Tau Chi Sigma and Zeta Phi Sigma.

In the first week of action in the independent league the Chinese Club, led by former varsity star Doug Hom, defeated the Alpha Delta Epsilon quintet; Lou Lucia, Don Baff and Jerry Cassidy of The Guardsman pressed the Newman Club into defeat; and the International Relations Club edged the highly rated Filipino Club

Golf Season Opens For Rams Friday

This Friday, March 16, the Ram golf team will meet West Contra Costa at Richmond in the opening match of the Big Eight season.

Coach Grover Klemmer believes that all the teams in the conference will be tough, but he rates San Mateo as the one to beat.

The remainder of the schedule is as follows: March 23, Santa Rosa, here; March 26, at Marin; April 6, Oakland, here; April 13, at Stockton; April 20, Stockton, here; April 27, at San Mateo; May 4, at Modesto; May 11-12, Big Eight Tournament at Modesto and May 14, State Tournament at Bakersfield.

Home matches for the college team will be held at Harding Park.

Spirit And Humor Marks Of Block SF President

WALTER SMITH, Block SF president and assistant yell leader, packs good nature, respected administrative skill and college spirit into his modest 5-3.

Walter Smith, new president of the Block SF and one of the real characters of the campus, has now earned the chance to show to everyone the leadership ability and spirit that for two years has made him respected and liked by everyone in the athletic department.

Smith first attracted attention by turning out for football in 1954. Merely turning out was enough, since he stands only 5-3 and cla... to weigh a solid but nevertheless football-light 150 pounds. When he turned out again in 1955, a veteran of some playing time the previous season, he gained even more attention by making the traveling squad, no easy job in competition with an array of fine running backs.

Ram football Coach Grover Klemmer has nothing but praise for his midget halfback. Following the last football season, he said: "Walter is hampered by his lack of size, but there isn't a harder worker or a better hustler on the team." Other coaches echoed his praise.

This love of hard work, along with his easy-going and fun-loving nature, made the little halfback the willing object of numerous jokes by his football teammates, some of them a foot taller and 100 pounds heavier than Smith. Threats to sell him to Disneyland on a game trip to Santa Ana and other similar gags proved the players' liking for him, and the jokes were replaced with cheers of encouragement whenever Smith entered the game. These shouts came often, as he played in every 1955 Ram game but one.

To show that they respected him as well as liked him, his mates in the Block SF Society, with the willing approval of sponsor Bill Fischer, elected Smith their president at the beginning of this semester. In addition, his continued appearance at games involving Ram teams and his vociferous spirit was recently put to good use and he was named an assistant yell leader.

Smith came here from Jack Yates High School in Houston, Texas. Everything grows big in Texas, they claim, and Walter Smith is big in heart and humor—everything but body. Texas' loss is City College's gain.

Miss SF Contest Registration Starts Tomorrow As Twelve Names Approved For Affair

Official registration by contestants for the annual Miss San Francisco Contest begins tomorrow, George Kaplanis, SF Junior Chamber of Commerce liaison officer, announced last week.

To date, several women here have been approved by the Dean of Women's office for eligibility in the affair.

These names, submitted by Kaplanis to Dean Mary Golding, include Pat Chapman, Diane Dawson, Marlee Dumas, Sally Fulcks, Eleanor Gandut, Pat Hamil, Lynn Johnson, Melanie Mead, Shirley Siequist, Betty Terra, Jackie Toegefer, and Jean Vachon.

Kaplanis and the Public Relations Committee of the Junior Chamber of Commerce are stressing participation by the women students of the college on a large scale.

Women who are unmarried, high school graduates, between the ages of 18 and 28 in attendance here for at least one semester, or have six months residence in San Francisco, are eligible to try for the crown.

Intellect, personality, talent, and appearance in a bathing suit will be the basis for judging.

On the talent side of the contest, contenders will be required to perform for three minutes displaying one of the following: reading of a dramatic part, singing, dancing, dress designing, or some other display of talent.

A three minute speech, telling of future plans, will be accepted by the judges for those contestants who are unable to produce the specified talent.

Applicants may see Kaplanis Tuesdays and Thursdays at 9 and 11 a.m., and Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. in the Associated Student office.

'Guardsman To AS' Motion Passed In Debate By Council

By Bob O'Brien

In a move that caught most observers completely by surprise, the Student Council moved last week to restrict Guardsman circulation to holders of Associated Student cards.

As an experiment, the March 7 issue of the paper was distributed in this manner. At the council meeting, Rally Committee Chairman Mike Gilbert, who is responsible for distribution of The Guardsman, reported that his committee had found the new method unworkable. Despite his negative report, the council moved to make The Guardsman the sole property of AS members. George Kaplanis stated that those who do not have AS cards should not be entitled to the paper until the card holders are supplied with copies. In the vote that followed, only Ginny Hase, a member of the Rally Committee, voted against the motion.

The council also got into the hassel over where the Mardi Gras Festival would be held. In a session marked by argument and raised voices, Wayne McFadden, Associated Men Student president, suggested that the Cow Palace annex be considered as a possible site. As he attempted to illustrate the advantages of the proposed site, he was interrupted by questions from members of the council several times.

In one heated exchange, Kaplanis stated that he was in favor of keeping with the traditions of the college. He pointed out that if the Cow Palace were used, the Mardi Gras would fall on the same night that the Roller Derby appeared there. Even though there are two buildings which are not connected, Kaplanis expressed fear that an undesirable element would be attracted to the festival.

Sophomore Council member Bill Roberts retorted that Kaplanis was only stating his own opinion. Sophomore President Jim Buckley came to the aid of Kaplanis when he stated that he, too, was in favor of holding the Mardi Gras in its traditional location if at all possible.

Several council members expressed interest in whether the Cow Palace prices were prohibitive. McFadden replied that he felt it would cost no more to hold the affair at the Geneva Avenue location. Bill Roberts made a motion to accept the Cow Palace as their choice. A vote was taken and the motion passed, with Kaplanis abstaining.

The Campus Police were next to take the floor. Police Chief Lee Hargus, who is also the department's representative at the council, took exception to a Guardsman editorial concerning parking on the west campus.

In answer to several questions, Hargus said that he does not have enough men to patrol the west campus area on a full-time basis.

Brady Points With Pride To Gains Made By Student Government Here

In an address before the Student Council, John J. Brady, coordinator of Student Welfare here, pointed with pride to the tremendous gains that student government has made here in ten years.

Brady recalled that when he was appointed dean of Student Activities and adviser to the council shortly after World War II ended, there were not always regular meetings of the body. He said that ten years ago the budget was made up by the controller and a civil service clerk. To have the council vote on the budget was only a formality. Brady pointed out that the Associated Men Students, Associated Women Students, and various other student organizations did not develop major activities until after 1946.

He recalled that there was little interest shown at that time in the council, either by the officers or the students. In closing, Brady said that the reason the student government program was revitalized to surpass its pre-war activity was so that meetings such as the one he was attending would result.

Brady was promoted to the position of dean of Semiprofessional Courses in 1949, then was named to his present position in 1954, succeeding Dr. F. Grant Marsh, who retired.

New Sheraton-Palace Award Will Be Presented To Outstanding H&R Fourth-Semester College Students

Some outstanding Hotel and Restaurant Department student here will be the recipient of the Sheraton Award Plaque next month in the first presentation of this newly inaugurated series.

At a formal ceremony, Wendell Muntz, chairman of the H&R Department, accepted the first plaque on behalf of his department from George Thomas Cullen, general manager of the Sheraton-Palace Hotel. Russell St. John, assistant sales manager at the Sheraton-Palace and a part-time H&R instructor here, was the originator of the award.

Students and faculty members of the H&R Department will cast their ballots on Monday and Tuesday, March 26 and 27, for three fourth-semester student candidates for the award.

Each of the three candidates will then compose a letter, stating in it his qualifications. He will forward it, together with suitable information on file in the department and a picture of himself, to the Sheraton Corporation of America.

A corporation committee devised especially for the purpose will then make the final selection of the winner.

Besides receiving a plaque, the winning student will have his name placed on a perpetual plaque which will remain in the college.

Faculty Entertains Students In Coffee Hour On March 23

All students of the college are invited to a faculty-student coffee hour, which will be held on Friday, March 23, during college hour, Jules Fraden, chairman of the faculty association Faculty-Student Relations committees, announced recently.

Coffee and refreshments will be served in the open courtyard between Cloud Hall and the science building, Fraden said.

This event is being planned by the Faculty-Student Relations Committee of the college Faculty Association. Instructors who are members of the committee are as follows: Fraden, chairman, John Fawcett, Mary Golding, Lene Johnson, James McConnell, Alvin McMillan, Valerie Meehan, Wendell Muntz, Maurice Power, Martha Scott, Douglas Soule, and William Richardson.

The coffee hour has become a tradition each semester since its inception several years ago. Its purpose is to help faculty and students to become better acquainted through an informal, social event.

Debaters Tie Utah At Oregon Meet

City College debaters took part in a debate tournament held at Linfield College, McMinnville, Oregon, March 1-3.

"The college did very well in the debate," Debate Coach Tom Dutcher stated, "by losing for third place with the University of Utah." This college was one of only five two-year colleges in attendance.

This college was represented by Pat Mahoney, Vic Hebert, Claus Arons and Andy Schneider. The team of Schneider and Arons earned the tie with Utah and also took the tournament record with ten decisions in their favor while losing only two. In an over-all field of 84 contestants, Hebert placed seventh in individual debate competition.

This college's record for the entire tournament was 21 wins and 7 losses. Hebert and Mahoney came in second as a team with 11 wins and 5 losses.

New Choir Officers

A Cappella Choir members recently elected new officers for the organization. Those elected to lead the college choir are Alex Bagwell, president; Patricia O'Gaffney, vice-president; Joyce Preston, secretary, and Marilyn Strafford and Oscar Preston, librarians. Property managers of the choir are David Dahl and Manuel Stimpson. Jean Taylor is the Club Activities Board representative. Flossita Badger is choir director and instructor of music here.

Freshman Dance Theme Is Chosen

With the theme Silver Serenade, the Frosh Ball will be held on Saturday, March 24, in the Terrace Room of the Fairmont Hotel from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., according to Norman Durieux, freshman class president.

Music will be provided by Stephen Paul and his orchestra.

Admission will be free with an Associated Student card. A tentative price of $2.50 has been set as the admission for those without a card.

Appropriate attire for the occasion will be suits for men and cocktail dresses for the women.

In addition to the freshman class officers named last week, two secretaries who are usually appointed by the freshman class president, have not been announced as yet, but they are expected to be picked soon.

Summer Field Course For Forestry Majors

Students who plan to enter the University of California this fall as juniors in the School of Forestry must take a field practice course this summer, according to Waddington Blair, counselor here.

Without this summer course, students miss one whole year of work.

Students who will enroll in this practice course must file three applications by tomorrow, March 15. One is to be filed with the School of Forestry, another for the field application course, and a third with the University of California Director of Admissions.

The ten-week summer course is held at Camp Califorest, situated in the heart of the Sierra. Students enrolled in this course live all summer in the forest. Here they are able to apply all their "book-learning." They survey the forest, learn to cruise timber, study the principles of fire-fighting and on occasion are called to help suppress an actual fire.

Justice Can't Survive Minus Press Freedom

By Don Ball

NINETEEN years ago the American Bar Association adopted Canon 35, prohibiting cameras from courtrooms while in session.

With 14 states adopting the ABA rule and the bar associations of another dozen states approving the ban, it soon became an unwritten law over most of the land.

Time and time again court decisions upheld the rulings, to the point where last year the U. S. Supreme Court refused to even taken under consideration an appeal by the Cleveland Press, when photographers of that paper were held in contempt of court for taking pictures during a trial.

An evaluation of the situation by Attorney General Herbert Brownell caused some quarters to ask for a re-appraisal of the situation. Brownell pointed out that at the time Canon 35 was inaugurated, photography was far different from now. Flash bulbs were a thing of the future and its forerunner, the flash pan, was admittedly dangerous as well as distracting. Not only were lighting techniques different, but cameras themselves have undergone great change from their then cumbersome design to their present compact size.

Taking heed of Brownell's advice, Colorado became the first to repeal the ABA-sponsored ruling. After a fortnight of intensive study, the Colorado Supreme Court unanimously gave the right of control over photographers to individual judicial discretion.

Not only were the newspapers the beneficiaries of the court's decision, but also television, an inconceivability when Canon 35 first limited freedom of the press.

One restriction upon the cameramen: no pictures of witnesses or jurors may be taken without their permission.

Other states might well follow Colorado's example, for the courts must reconcile freedom of the press with the administration of justice and without one, the other is hollow.

Placement Service Seeks Models For GM Motorama

Working with the Kudner Agency, Inc., of New York City, the college placement service is currently recruiting, screening, and selecting models and attendants for the General Motors Motorama which begins in San Francisco this Saturday, March 24, and continues to Tuesday, April 3, Joseph A. Amori, placement director, revealed recently.

While City College students have been utilized by the Motorama in the past, this is the first year that a demand was made on the placement service for models. Working closely with directors of the Kudner Agency, Inc., Amori has combed the campus for outstanding applicants for the modeling positions, which pay $50 per day to the co-eds chosen.

A complete listing will be made prior to the show. In addition the more qualified applicants are desired for the attendants positions. Tall and attractive women with training and experience in public contact work are especially desired, Amori said. These jobs pay from $1.50 per hour and up.

Requests are still being made for applicants wishing summer jobs in the large resorts in California, Oregon, and Wyoming, according to Amori.

Even though several group meetings and conferences have been held for summer jobs during the past two weeks, Amori is anxious to see more qualified applicants for a long list of job opportunities at Yosemite Park, Crater Lake and Jackson Hole, Wyoming.

All employers are demanding complete sets of references from past employers and college counsellors. In addition, all applicants must have a personal data and a rating sheet. Both the rating and the data sheets are available at the placement service, Room S187.

Coffee Hour Friday For Students, Profs

A Faculty-Student coffee hour will take place this Friday during college hour, Jules Fraden, chairman of the Faculty Association faculty-student relations committee, announced recently.

It will be held in the open courtyard between Cloud Hall and the science building, and Fraden said coffee and refreshments will be served.

Instructors who are members of the committee are as follows: Fraden, chairman, John Fawcett, Mary Golding, Lene Johnson, James McConnell, Alva McMillan, Valerie Meehan, Wendell Muntz, Maurice Power, Martha Scott, Douglas Soule, and William Richardson.

This event has become a tradition each semester since its inception several years ago. Its purpose is to help faculty and students to become better acquainted through an informal social event.

Appropriate attire for the occasion will be suits for men and cocktail dresses for the women.

Officers of the class are Durieux, president; Dee Noodlman, vice-president; Bill McCormick, treasurer; Vera Mann, corresponding secretary; and Carol Azenberg, recording secretary.

Class sponsors are Harry Frostuck, Frances Lloyd, John Elsworthy, W. Rollin Hanson and Edward Jarson.

The committee in charge of the dance is composed of Gary Stymmel, Sherwin Simmons, Lenore Fitzgerald, Sandy Stergewald, Louise von Emster, Sam Franzella, Anne Smith, Paula Villa, Jim Carrol, Jim Kennedy, Ken Mezther, Elvera Steiner, Stuart Davis and Bob Tucker.

The first freshman dance ever held by the college's freshmen took place Friday afternoon, May 15, 1936, and it began at 2:30 p.m. It was called the Frosh Sprawl, and the principal feature of the dance, according to the class officers, was that it was entirely stag.

Music for the affair was furnished by Lou Wirgler's dance band, which was claimed to be very popular on the University of California campus.

Darlene Reitz Is Top Card Seller; AWS Beats AMS

Darlene Reitz broke the monopoly the Associated Men Student card sales team had maintained during the past three semesters of Associated Student card sales competition by topping her nearest competitor by 18 sales.

Miss Reitz sold a total of 45 cards to win the trophy for individual card sales, as runner-up Bill Roberts led the Associated Men Students with 27 sales and also received a trophy.

The Associated Women Students won the perpetual team trophy by selling 109 cards to the men's total of 80. The winning team consisted of Miss Reitz, Georgia Eastridge, Margaret Bordiaga, Dee Baccaria, Sally Morson, Shirley Vickroy, Ginny Hase, Diane Soo Hoo, Ellie Smith, and Pat Egan.

Awards were presented by AS Card Sales Chairman Dave Jamison at a rally on March 2.

Jamison stated that total card sales to date have reached the 1,700 mark. This leaves the goal of 2,000 short by 300 sales.

Browne Announces Retirement Plans; 21 Years As Dean

Edwin C. Browne, dean of men here, last week announced his plan to retire, effective next June 30.

In retiring two years ahead of schedule, "While I'm still able to walk out of here and before I have to be carried out," Dean Browne takes advantage of the recently passed state retirement law.

The Dean, who will be 63 years old this month, has served 35 years in the field of education in various administrative capacities. His career started in 1917, when he was for a year the Vice-Principal of Jefferson Intermediate School in Santa Barbara, Calif. In 1920 he became Supervisor of Schools in Rogue River, Oregon, a position he held for three years before returning to California.

His first position with the college was that of Assistant Dean of Men, which he held for two years before his promotion to Dean. Since that time he has remained on in the same capacity, except for a period of service as Director of Personnel for the city public schools.

Parliamentarian Election Monopolzies Meeting

By Denny Delman

One hour and forty-five minutes into the afternoon session of the Northern Section, California Junior College Student Government Association conference, held at Sacramento last Saturday, March 17, the election of a parliamentarian, having monopolized the the business of the day, was finally accomplished.

After the introducory speeches in the first session, College of San Mateo moved that the election of a parliamentarian be postponed until the afternoon session. The motion passed, 15 to 1 with three abstentions.

At the outset of the second session a motion by Modesto to suspend the orders of the day in view of a San Mateo resolution calling for an alternate parliamentarian, was passed.

ASSOCIATED STUDENT President Bill Cirimele, who led the college's delegation to the northern regional conference of the California Junior College Student Government Association last Saturday in Sacramento.

When questioned as to the reason for such a resolution it was pointed out, though not too clearly, that because of the limited facilities at Catalina for the state conference there was a possibility that only official delegates (parliamentarian excluded) would be allowed to attend.

This then necessitated the election of an alternate parliamentarian, who would be an official delegate and thus be able to serve as the parliamentarian in the event that the regular parliamentarian would not be allowed to attend.

When the explanation was finally made, 45 minutes into the session, the resolution was passed unanimously.

Of the six candidates up for the post, Joe Henderson of Vallejo was finally elected by three votes.

On the third ballot of the election for alternate parliamentarian, Henderson was again elected after the Menlo delegation became time conscious and withdrew its candidate's name.

Within 15 minutes of the election six college delegations, including the City College group, had withdrawn from the conference.

Following the mass evacuation at 5 p.m. the rest of the resolutions were passed. One such resolution was proposed by college Publicity Chairman Paul Girard and College of Marin newspaper Editor Conrad Mueller asking that at last one representative be well versed in the problems, policies and needs of his publication.

This resolution, originally brought up in the publications workshop, was defeated after much irrelevant discussion.

By 5 p.m. the time weary delegates had passed three more resolutions pushed through the assembly with very little opposition.

'Guardsman To AS' Distribution Gets First Test Today

After an unavoidable runoff of 800 extra copies of The Guardsman ruined the proposed test of "The Guardsman for Associated Students only" plan last week, today will present the first real test for the idea, and AS officers predict a more successful distribution.

An attempt to distribute The Guardsman to members of the AS met with little apparent success after being tried for the past two weeks.

Last week's test was ruined by the extra runoff, as 2,500 copies were printed instead of the scheduled 1,700. Approximately 1,000 copies of the campus newspaper were distributed to members of the Associated Students, although distribution was hampered by lack of manpower as supplied by the Rally Committee, who normally handle distribution of the publication.

The plan, tried several times before, was inaugurated by AS President Bill Cirimele as a spur of the moment idea on March 7. The 2,500 copies of The Guardsman, at that time the normal circulation, piled up in the AS office with only Cirimele doing much in the way of distribution.

The idea was brought before the Student Council on Thursday, March 8, to be acted upon officially. Despite protests by the Rally Committee, who had decided at their meeting the previous afternoon that they would refuse to handle The Guardsman on the AS card only basis, a motion was passed to that effect.

Reconsidering their original stand, the Rally Committee offered to handle distribution for Wednesday, March 14. Again the group was short-handed, and the results at first appeared discouraging. It was then discovered that 2,500 copies had been run instead of the ordered 1,700 planned for AS members only.

Consequently, there were over 1,000 copies of the newspaper left, and on Thursday, March 15, these extra papers were given to any student desiring one. Cirimele stressed that this would not be the case in the future, as the run will definitely be cut to 1,700 and these are expected to cover only AS card holders and outside commitments.

The cut in the number of copies, if continued for the remainder of the 14 issues this semester, would reduce the required Guardsman budget from $3,702.26 to $3,454.92, a difference of $247.34.

May Festival Booth Petitions Due April 2

Campus organizations wishing to participate in the May Festival parade and booths are urged to file their petitions no later than Monday, April 2. Deadline for king and queen contest petitions is April 20, according to Wayne McFadden, Associated Men Student president here.

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

Any further comments on this, or any other college subject, should be handed in to The Guardsman office, S-304, not later than 11 a.m. Wednesdays. Names will be withheld upon request, but the writer must be known to the Editor.)

● Rank Injustice

Editor, The Guardsman:

When I attempted to pick up my copy of The Guardsman last week I was asked to show my student body card. I inquired as to the reason and was told that only members of the Associated Students were entitled to copies of the paper. This fact was borne out when friends informed me that they had been told the same thing.

I have never written a letter to this or any other publication, but the rank injustice of this newest action of the student council forces me to reply.

If this institution stands for nothing else, it should stand for enlightenment. Even the credo over the entrance proclaims "The Truth Shall Make You Free." Mr. Cirimele and the rest of his . . . crew should feel quite proud of themselves in making that credo a lie. They have effectively strangled the principal method of disseminating information at City College.

I need not mention the many possible reasons for a student not having an AS card. To add to this list of reasons, both financial and practical, I suggest that there are people who would not want to become associated with a group that stands for cheap, petty politics. By their action, the council has placed themselves in this category.

Those of us who have taken no interest in past elections of student officers should be more careful in the future.

As for myself, I'll remember this particular action of the council and will govern myself accordingly at the next election.

An AS Card Holder.

● Action Backed

Editor, The Guardsman:

Controversy arising over the recent Student Council decision to limit distribution of The Guardsman to members of the Associated Students reflect the disputes that have developed consistently throughout the history of the AS organization each time it has developed any benefit exclusively for its members.

Particularly in such matters as parking privileges, social activities, and athletic participation, the question of eligibility of non-members to participate in AS activites has been brought up again and again, most often by those who, although they do not choose to become members of the AS, feel that they nonetheless should be allowed to play a part in these activities, because they, (the students and the activities) are "part of the school."

Admittedly, such activities add much to the process of gaining an education, and as such, are not only permitted but encouraged by the college administration and the school department. But they are still supplemental to the academic process and must be financed by sources other than the school department budget. Consequently, there must be an organization not only to plan and direct activities but to arrange for their financial support. At City College this is done by the Associated Students.

It is true that many of these activities are closely aligned with regular academic work, but it is also true that if the activities were done away with, the academic program would continue. There are no activities supported by the AS that, by their abolishment, would prevent any student at the college from obtaining the education he came here for.

This holds true for The Guardsman as much as for parking facilities, the football and debating teams, and the CAB dance.

While The Guardsman is unquestionably very useful as practical experience for journalism students, to the members of the student body as a whole it is merely a convenience. The information in its pages could for the most part be collected by the individual student for himself.

If I could go to the Dean's office weekly to find out if there were a college hour scheduled, if there were any changes in parking or attendance regulations, or to inquire if there were any scholarships available.

He could then drop by the placement office to inquire about summer or part time employment, and if he were a veteran, he might drop by the Veteran's Affairs office once a week to see if there were any late regulations with which to comply.

If he were socially inclined, he could stop in at the AS office to check on any impending dances or rallies that might interest him.

A short stroll down to the men's gym would allow him to check athletic schedules and results. But why should he go to all the trouble when The Guardsman does all the leg work and makes a complete report each Wednesday?

Unfortunately, newspaper production costs being what they are these days, someone has to pay the cost of this service. Therefore, the AS has allocated $3,454 this semester for the support of The Guardsman. This money came entirely from the dues paid by those who joined the AS.

Why, then would those who did not care to help support this service (among the many benefits of membership) expect to share it equally with those who did?

Would these same people expect to use the facilities of the Elks or Moose Clubs without becoming members? Would they expect medical care from Kaiser or Blue Cross without paying the dues paid by all other patients? Why, then, should they expect to benefit by a service supported by their fellow students without helping to provide that support?

Student newspapers in almost every college and university in the country are wholly supported financially by the student organization. City College boasts one of the finest student newspapers produced in a two-year college in the United States, as attested to by the number of top ratings it has won in national competition.

Student support is necessary to continue this record, and it would not seem unjust to limit its circulation to those who contribute to that support.

City College is one of the few colleges in the Bay Area where membership in the AS is not a requirement of registration. Students are free to make a choice as to whether to join the AS.

Aside from any other considera-

Motorists Seek Ways To Beat Un-Beatable Meters

By Lou Lucia

Parking problems have the local government officials in a quandary, and the motorists are seeking new methods to outsmart the law.

The case of "Immovable Sam" is a prize example.

While standing in an interminable line to pay a parking ticket, "Immovable Sam" realizes his 40 minutes of parking time have elapsed. He rushes outside and backs his car two feet so that the white chalk mark left by the patrolman is hidden under the fender. A devilish grin depicts the measure of appreciation Sam has of his ingenuity.

Meanwhile, the policeman, lying in a prone position under the two rear wheels, grimaces and adds more notes to his little black book. Undoubtedly, the rookie policeman is worried about what detergent his wife is going to use to get the tread marks off his new uniform.

On his second attempt, Sam, the conscientious objector, decides to use a damp rag to remove the chalk. He bends over and starts his tedious task. All goes well, until his disposition is shaken by a passing auto. Of course, he had read in the Automobile Code that a driver hitting the rear end of another was at fault, but does that apply to automobiles only?

Eventually, Sam finds a solution. When parking next to a bona-fide parking meter, a jammed toothpick in said meter would allow for all day parking.

The eagle-eyed "Sergeant Friday" spotted the enterprising lawbreaker and asked for an explanation. Confronted by this turn of events, Sam, the erstwhile parker, could not really believe he was an authentic "Parking Meter Cheater."

"Friday" in all solemnity states, "You really can beat the parking meter system."

"How's that?"

"Put a nickel in."

Glances At The College Bulletin Board

Opportunists Spend Leisure Time Viewing Fortunes In Posted Cards

As a student leaves the science building by the south side exit, seeking the freshness of spring weather or a few relaxing hours of chatter at the fountain, he should throw a cursory glance at the bulletin board.

"Ye olde bulletin board," as this place where fortunes can be made on the turn of a card is called by our somewhat more permanent class of students here, has become a sort of an institution within an institution.

It also gives the philanthropist, a species almost as extinct as the Dodo bird these days, a good chance to meddle in other people's affairs. He does this by taking it to mind that he must telephone and offer lucrative sums for the merchandise on sale. The student is tempted and sells his prized possessions. But he later repents and inevitably falls into a state devoid of interest.

No longer can he point with pride at a posted white card, deformed by some not yet decipherable calligraphy, and say to his companion, "Hey, look buddy, MY card."

The bulletin board is comprised of three sections. These are the for sale, the lost, and found and the miscellaneous.

Anything within the bounds of discretion may be included under the miscellaneous category, provided that the notices are written on standard sized cards, which may be obtained from the telephone operator.

Those in the know of such matters recommend that the way to attract casual pedestrians, whom the optimist classifies as being prospective buyers, is to arrange these advertising cards artistically. But regulations disagree with these modernistic concepts by restricting the cards to the bulletin board only.

Shots At Ramdom

By Bob Kauth

SPRING, like a sorority pledge trying to do the sugar-foot to a tango during Hell Week, waltzed her way into the office early yesterday morning.

After removing her raincoat, she pranced over to Dapper Dan, who was looking for material for this week's column, and in his ear whispered that there will be no more rain around here for a while.

Because the Editor-In-Chief was busy reading a book entitled What To Editorialize In Order To Increase Reader Appeal, he did not receive the full benefit of Spring as she approached.

She requested a short article to be written, announcing her arrival and stating that she usually visits in the United States during March, April, and May every year. But the Editor would not be influenced by her charms, for without lifting his head he replied, "Write a letter to The Guardsman."

"Which all goes to prove," Danny says, "that editors are harder to please than women, and women are as reliable as the weather."

QUEEN OF THE CHINESE New Year's celebration in this Year-of-the-Monkey was Estelle Dong. Although you could never tell at a dance, Esteile was not selected according to the "American way" of judging beauty contests. The "sam choon sze duck" system was used. This is an ancient Chinese custom of choosing a wife on the basis of her . . . "obedience, virtue, and domestic" qualities, which although unusual, is as good an idea as giving up cigarets and should be used more often.

But this is not the end of the story, for Estelle was scheduled to be introduced during the intermission of the little theater's presentation of Lute Song. Although she was there, the master-of-ceremonies did not present her nor recognize her . . . "because she wore glasses."

It was suggested that he should have looked for some of the qualifications necessary for an American beauty queen. No doubt, she then would not have been overlooked.

SHORT CUT TO SUCCESS: One student has picked up some advertising techniques here, if nothing else. Announcing his books for sale on the bulletin board he wrote, "Get A's in those courses like the present owner did by studying the parts underlined in pencil."

MAN OF MANY WORDS: Vic Hebert won the Alumni Speech Contest here last semester for his lengthy appraisal of a newspaper editorial. His comment? "Thanks!"

The Bohemian

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

LATE afternoon announced its arrival to the men inside the cafe by casting ominous figures about the walls within. Usually these uninvited guests came unnoticed, being only silent auditors to the passionate discussions going on there.

The cafe was known as "Lugar de Esperanza." It was appropriately named, for, with its familiar sounds of grouped students debating and openly expressing their opinions on theories of government, the cafe was truly a place of hope. These uncensored emissions from within were the susurrations of freedom, not yet stifled.

Three men sat huddled together in a corner of the room, using the shadows now as a shield against a society from which they were outcast.

"I fear that nothing will come of these actions," one of the old men said, shrugging his shoulders to emphasize hopelessness and continuing, "the students will only succeed in getting their skulls busted, while we, the instigators, will pay the penalty of . . ." He paused, shook his head and reproachfully added, "I warned you that the time was not yet ripe to stir up trouble. The people will not be convinced—inspired to rebel over such an insignificant affair."

"The people," the second man interjected with scorn, "are never fully conscious of their rights. They are so busy following the regularity of a society, of earning a living, that they blindly abide to all sorts of despotism."

The other man was sitting in silence, but now he began speaking, drawing out his words carefully as does a dying man who is alarmed lest his last utterings be misunderstood.

"You are right. Humanity must rely on students to fight for its freedoms. With their learning and constant searching for truth throughout the centuries, the students have made their universities a camp, in the surrounding battlefield of demagogery, invulnerable to the bondage of ideals. They are the guards of freedom. When they see it violated, students hasten to act, guiding the masses on the way to its restoration.

"These present tumults will at least show the world that students here also revolt against intolerable suppressions of their rights for self government."

Cars screeched to a halt outside the cafe. Armed, uniformed men got out and rushed in, surrounding the three men. They were under arrest. The insurrections had been crushed.

The man who had spoken last got up, reached out with a trembling hand and downed his glass of sherry wine. He then regained his composure and slowly walked out.

As he was being shoved into the car, he took a last look at the cafe and with a bitter tone said, "They'll be changing the name of that place soon enough."

Stephen Paul Dance Band To Play At Freshman Ball

By Antoinette Mannina

Reaching new heights in the local music field is Stephen Paul, 23-year-old pre-dental major here.

A second semester student, Paul first became interested in music at the age of 5 when he started taking accordion lessons. By the time he was 14, Paul had organized his first band.

STEPHEN PAUL, a pre-dental student here in his second semester, calls his band Personality In Music. —Guardsman photo by Dang.

While attending Mission High School, Paul and his orchestra, Personality In Music, began playing for the dances there. By 1950 their popularity had increased, and they played for dances for the public schools in San Francisco.

Paul entered the college last fall and played for the Sophomore Ball, which was immediately followed by the Holy Day Dance and the CAB dance. The next engagement at the college for which he will play is the Freshman Ball this Saturday, March 24.

Although music is Paul's first love, and he would like to make a career of it, he feels that a college education will give him something to fall back on in the event he is not successful in this field.

In organizing Personality In Music, it was Paul's idea not only to present the very finest in danceable music but a dance band pleasing to look at, pleasing to the ear, and most important, pleasing to dance to.

Proposed Boxing Tourney In Doubt

It was announced last week that it is very doubtful at present whether the proposed City College of San Francisco boxing tournament, scheduled for Friday and Saturday nights, will be held this semester.

The tournament, originally proposed to be held at the men's gymnasium here, will probably not take place, according to Roy Diederichsen, boxing coach at the college. Main reason given by Diederichsen for this was that of eight Bay Area colleges polled by the college boxing mentor, only two answered favorably.

Of the duo of teams which answered his queries in the affirmative, Diederichsen reports that one squad agreed to send but two members, while the others promised to send seven boxers. This left the proposed tourney with far too few colleges represented, and with not enough participants, Diederichsen added.

There is a possibility that an intramural boxing tourney will be held in conjunction with the Associated Men Students' smoker on May 9.

RAMBLINGS

By Al Moss

ONE of the most ambitious and worthy undertakings of the Associated Men Students in recent years is the current triangular, round-robin basketball league, an affair that is reaching many heretofore uninterested in student activities.

Combined under the auspices of the AMS for the first time, the Independent League, the Inter-Fraternity League, and the Hotel and Restaurant League offer a chance to participate in extra-curricular activities to some 200 men here, many of whom take little if any part in other student activities.

The fraternity loop is a long-standing institution, while the other pair began operation last semester, but this is the first time around with all three under the AMS banner. The brand of basketball played is often less than skillful, but the main idea is for everyone to have fun. In this, the program is a tremendous success.

Wayne McFadden, AMS president and co-ordinator of the program; Dave Tucker, IFC president in charge of his group's league; Clarence Watson, the H&R association president, and all the others involved in the forming and handling of the three circuits should be congratulated, as should Rich DeConti and the other referees who have kept the games in the fun class and out of the battle phase.

Incidentally, there are rumors that the women, never to be outdone, are considering a similar arrangement with possible leagues in basketball, volleyball and some other sports. Rose Thurman, Associated Women Student president, and Barbara Batmale, president of the Inter-Sorority Council, seem to be the main instigators to date, and support of the idea is growing. More power to them.

Los Angeles City College had their 34-game winning streak snapped by an unfortunate 81-78 upset loss to Fresno in the recent State championship tournament, and in this case the better team may easily have been eliminated in the first round.

The winning Los Angeles Harbor five is undoubtedly a good one, but the City College Beareubs boasted one of the finest squads in the nation, and had the misfortune to suffer their only loss at a most inopportune time. We had the pleasure of watching the Bearcub quintet as they won the Modesto Tournament in January, beating among others the Fresno team that knocked them out of the State tourney.

With such as Bob Laemmle, a 6-4 center from Paris, France, and Mack Taylor, 6-1 forward with as beautiful a scoring touch as any coach could hope for, leading the way, the Cubs could tromp any two-year college case team in the country on a given day. Unfortunately, March 8, the date of the Fresno game, was not that given day.

We offer condolences to our old football rival, Los Angeles City College. They were the closest thing to University of San Francisco that Southern California could produce, and they deserved better than a first round loss.

Footballer Boyd Takes On Duties As Athletic Head

Dale Boyd, a center on last year's football team, has been appointed Men's Athletic Commissioner for the spring semester and is currently working with Associated Men Students' President Wayne McFadden on the AMS basketball league.

His varied duties include: publicizing the major sports and assisting the varsity coaches, assuring that announcements are made via the communication system, and representing the individual student activities at the Student Council.

He also coordinates campus sports, keeps records of all men receiving block awards and sees that they are presented with them.

Boyd previously attended Polytechnic High School, where he received honorable mention on the All-City team for his football ability and also handled the job of athletic manager.

Ram Golfers Open Home Season At Harding Park

Opening home match of the season pits the Ram golfers against Santa Rosa at Harding Park this Friday, March 23, and after this encounter the teams travels across the Bay to meet the Marin squad on Monday, March 26.

Coach Grover Klemmer believes that individuals are improving steadily, even though team scores have not been as good as desired.

The team opened their Big Eight schedule with a contest against West Contra Costa last Friday.

Bronko Nagurski made All-American at Minnesota at both tackle and fullback.

Horsehiders Travel To Sacramento For Conference Opener

Big Eight Conference opener for the baseball team finds the Ram nine traveling to Sacramento to meet the Sacramento Panthers this Saturday, March 24.

Coach Bill Fischer stated that results of last week's practice games would determine the starting pitcher and opening line-up.

The hitting consistency of Ken Dito, Blair LeMire, John McCarthy and Jim Poppin have been instrumental in practice game wins, Fischer said.

Infield positions are being contested for by third basemen Bob Bandettini and Glenn Bukowatz; second basemen Russ Fadeef and John McCarthy; and first basemen Roger Ferrari and Pete Nielsen.

Observers seem to believe in the old sports adage that the previous year's winner is the team to beat.

West Contra Costa's defending champions could possibly field an all veteran team and still have players left over. The battery of pitcher Ron Roe and catcher Doyle Williams appears to be one of the best in the league. Roe was picked on the Big Eight all star team and Williams received second team votes last year.

At Stockton, Coach Don Hall described his 1956 squad as a team with high potential. He describes his outfield of Bud MacDonald, Jerry Marquis and Charlie Horton as the finest outfield the Mustangs have ever had. Four returning lettermen also bolster the pitching staff.

Modesto appears weak defensively, if the nine errors in the San Jose game are any indication. After the 15-4 first game loss, Roger Gray pitched a one-hit game to lead the Pirates to victory in the nightcap.

In two recent eight inning games the Rams beat the California JV's 9-2 and tied the Stanford JV's at 6-6.

John McCarthy and Fred Waters collected a single and triple apiece in the California game, while Larry Nissim pitched a five-hitter for the victory. As Nissim struck out six and held the bats of the opposition in check, John McCarthy knocked four runs across the plate with his timely blows.

Standouts in the Stanford game were Bob Bandettini and Blair LeMire who garnered two hits apiece. Starting pitcher Fred Glosser allowed only four hits in his six-inning stint, but the eight walks he allowed led to his replacement. Ron Castro relieved in the seventh inning and permitted the tying run to score, but struck out the side in the eighth to preserve the tie.

The Rams lost to San Francisco State on March 13 by a 7-5 score. With two outs in the ninth inning a 400 foot homerun was surrendered by pitcher Nissim. The State team collected nine hits and made four errors while the Rams collected five hits and made two errors. Blair LeMire collected two of the five hits, and Fischer is impressed by his fielding and hitting ability.

Fischer reported that Fred Waters, who started most of the practice games in centerfield, has left college.

Bulldogs Toppled By Ram Netmen

In the first Big Eight meet of the season on March 9, Don Mays and Pete Schwartz paced the tennis team in an upset victory over San Mateo by a 4-3 score.

This Friday the tennis team will play host to the Stockton netters at Golden Gate Park. Little is known of the quality of the Mustang team, although Coach Roy Diederichsen expects a battle.

Mays took the first and feature match from San Mateo's Milton Fung, 6-2, 6-2, while Schwartz tipped his opponent in three sets, 6-2, 4-6, 7-5. These victories combined with wins by Paul Fischer and the doubles team were enough to give the netters their winning margin.

Diederichsen believes that Modesto (2-0) and San Mateo (1-1) are the teams to beat for the conference crown, and that the April 6 match at Modesto could determine the Ram team's chances for the crown.

Duo Coach

ROY DIEDERICHSEN, head tennis coach here, doubles as boxing coach and director of the intra-mural boxing tournament. An all-sport man at San Jose State, Diederichsen also handles the soccer team in the fall.

Zimmerman Holds Off Final Drive In Deciding Relay As Rams Edge Frosh, Rout Oaks

By Al Moss

Myron Zimmerman stood off a stretch effort by Cal's Stuart Gould to win the mile relay, the final event for the Rams and give them a last-ditch 70¼-68¾ over the Bear Frosh at Berkeley last Saturday, March 17.

Oakland had 13 points in the triangular meet, and the San Franciscans dumped the Thunderbirds in a Big Eight Conference dual meet, 96-25.

The Rams meet Santa Rosa and San Mateo at Santa Rosa this Saturday, March 24, as they continue a tough Big Eight schedule. The San Mateans are normally one of the league's weak sisters, but the hosting Bearcubs are another story. Led by defending conference 440 champion Hosea Harper, who also anchors their record-holding relay team, the Santa Rosans figure to be one of the league's contenders.

Clint Redus, the spectacularly reliable Ram sprinter-hurdler, took his usual three events, nipping Bear Al Kellog in the 100 in :09.9, taking the high hurdles in :15.2 and capturing the low hurdles in a relatively slow and unpressed :24.7.

Zimmerman, who had been beaten by Gould in the open 440, was given a lead by his three mates, Ron Anderson, Dennis Moorhead and Rich Martucci, and turned on the speed in the stretch to edge Gould by some five yards.

Other top performances included Frosh Dick Dailey's 6-4¾ high jump, a new California Freshman record; Ram Lloyd Castello's 10:24.3 effort in the two mile; and Frank Carroll's 133-2 discus toss, which gave the City College weight man a second behind Cal's Don Dirienzo, who won the event by 4½ inches.

Tie For Lead In Independent Cage; Tau Chi Tops IFC

In what promises to develop into a tight two-team race, the Independent Basketball League wound up the first two weeks of play with The Guardsman and the Chinese Club each racking up two wins to share the lead. Tau Chi Sigma leads the Inter-Fraternity League with a similar 2-0 record.

The Independent League boasts one other undefeated club, the Royalaires. This club, replacing the Hawaiian Club in loop play, drew a first round bye and then whipped Alpha Delta Epsilon, 28-19.

Other second-round Independent play found the Chineso Club winning a 2-0 default victory over Alpha Phi Omega and The Guardsman staging a second-half comeback to top Filipino Club, 42-36.

With no games scheduled last week because of midterm examinations, play resumes tonight at the men's gymnasium with the Chinese Club meeting the Royalaires and the Newman Club taking on International Relations Club.

In the fraternity circuit, Tau Chi Sigma's pair of wins gives them a half-game edge over Zeta Phi Sigma, Beta Tau and Phi Beta Delta, all with 1-0 records. The IFC Smoker on March 8 and last week's examinations cancelled games, and play goes tomorrow night with Alpha Kappa Rho and Zeta Phi Sigma at 7:45 p.m., and leader Tau Chi Sigma opposing Gamma Phi Epsilon at 8:30.

The Hotel and Restaurant loop, the third AMS-sponsored league, is in the middle of a six-team race, with the winner to engage in a playoff involving the Independent and IFC winners at the end of the seasons.

Ex-City College Hoop Aces Share In High Honors With Coast's Top Teams

With the close of basketball season throughout the Bay Area, the number of ex-Ram cage stars who have done their share for other clubs this year is as high as ever.

Dave Davis, the most recent of the City College court stars, was also the most highly-rated in the past season. The 6-4 forward, who nailed All-Big Eight honors with the Rams in 1955, took over a first-string berth with College of Pacific from the beginning of the season.

Sharing honors with heralded teammate John Thomas, Davis finished among the top five scorers in the California Basketball Association, and was named to honorable mention all-league honors by the coaches of the CBA. Many felt that his scoring and rebounding rated him higher mention, but with such as All-Americans Bill Russell and K. C. Jones of the University of San Francisco in the same circuit, even being mentioned was no mean feat.

Davis' top splurge came in a league match against Pepperdine, when he bucketed 42 points to set a CBA single-game high. His 17 field goals and those 17 made in only 24 shots from time to time, he never approached his early efficiency.

Niemann was a top scorer and rebounder for the Rams before entering the Army, and the 6-4 forward-center was heavily counted on by the Spartans this year.

Theopolis Dunn, the first line center for the City College quintet in 1954 and 1955, earned a job with the top five at Cal Poly this year, and his scoring and rebounding were a definite asset to his club. Joining him at Cal Poly was Flemen Hardy, another two-year Ram veteran, who also impressed the San Luis Obispo coaching staff until the 6-2 jumper broke a finger on the backboard and injured his other hand in a printing press accident.

The Dons' reputation is based upon their outstanding bench, among other things, and Baxter is an important part of this bench. USF Coach Phil Woolpert was more than eager to obtain Baxter's service and burned up the telephone wires when several other universities expressed interest in the Ram star upon his graduation from this college.

Still another former City College star might have won honors in the CBA, but an injury kept Fred Niemann from individual stardom and San Jose State from a higher spot in their league race. After topping the Spartans in scoring and rebounding in early season games, Niemann, the floor leader for Coach Walt McPherson, suffered a leg injury. Although his name later appeared in the lineup from time to time, he never approached his early efficiency.

Connoisseur Duncan Hines In Recent H&R Department Visit

By Elmer Gentry

Duncan Hines, famous connoisseur of fine food, was a visitor to the Hotel and Restaurant Department here last week, during his stay in San Francisco.

Accompanied by his wife and Bob Grison, local restaurant owner, Hines was personally conducted on a tour of the H&R Department by Wendell Muntz, department chairman. On numerous occasions during the tour, Hines expressed his approval of the department.

Keen interest in H&R training programs of the type being given here prompted Hines' visit.

A specially prepared luncheon was served to the noted gourmet in the faculty dining room following the tour.

Travelers throughout the country have depended on his judgment for many years, and a Hines Approval Sticker on a restaurant window marks the establishment as one of quality.

Traveling Incognito, Hines makes his approval of restaurants on the basis of food, service, and cleanliness. He has published travel guides with a list of the approved restaurants to aid travelers in their selection.

On his person, Hines carried a small portion of his famous watch collection. Among his many unusual timepieces is one which will chime the hour and the minutes and another which shows the local time and that of several major cities of foreign countries.

AGS Sponsors 2nd Talk Friday

Second in the lecture series sponsored by Alpha Gamma Sigma is a lecture on the Middle East crisis which will be given this Friday at 12 p.m. in Room S136, Donald Jensen, lecture sponsor, announced last week.

The speaker will he Dr. Cecil Osborne, who has traveled extensively throughout the Arab world.

Arab students of the college have asked for this lecture to present their viewpoint on the Middle East situation in repudiation of the views which were presented at a similar lecture on the same subject on March 2.

Another event scheduled for college hour this Friday is a film entitled Weather, Breath Of Life," which will be presented by the audio-visual department in Room S136 at 10:30 a.m., according to Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor here. The film will be shown only once.

Both Sides Offer Heated Debate On Guardsman Distribution Issue

tions, this also includes the choice to receive or not to receive The Guardsman.

George Kaplanis,
Student Councilman

• • • •

• Wants Vet Action

Editor, The Guardsman:

What's going on around this school? I don't have a student body card because I can't afford one. I read the paper not to find out about the Associated Students, but to get information on the institution itself. Now they tell me that to get the paper I've got to join the AS.

I was in the army for two lousy years, and they told me that I was there so that such democratic institutions as college papers could continue to be printed.

If the veterans in this school don't get up on their hind legs and scream, they're nuts. With a little help we can make that bunch of budding Fascists on the council run for cover.

If Cirimele and Kaplanis were as smart as they think they are, they would rescind their action before the roof falls in.

• AS Members Only

Editor, The Guardsman:

It has been called to my attention that there is a dispute concerning whether issues of The Guardsman should be given to all students or just those holding Associated Student cards.

The view of my committee concerning this matter is that AS members, and only members should be allowed the privilege of receiving a copy of The Guardsman. We believe that students willing to support the activities of the school by becoming a member should be allowed primary consideration in all student activities, of which The Guardsman is a part.

The Guardsman is maintained by funds allocated to them by the Associated Student Council. Therefore, every person who has paid the five dollars membership is in a sense purchasing a subscription to the paper along with the right to take an active part in AS social activities.

I feel that it is not right for a member of the AS to take on the additional burden of maintaining a subscription to The Guardsman for those who are not AS members and do not contribute to the activities of the AS.

Dave Jamison,
AS Card Sales Chairman

• Paradoxical Decision

Editor, The Guardsman:

The recent decision by the AS council to restrict the distribution of The Guardsman to AS card holders appears to be paradoxical and absolutely without purpose.

It is the duty of the council to interest as many students as possible in the activities of the Associated Students, and the best publicity the AS could possibly have is The Guardsman.

This publication repeatedly carries stories and announcements of coming events, such as dances, rallies and games, all of which play a large role in college activities.

Such events are generally free to AS card holders, and create a strong inducement to non-card holders to buy cards in order to participate in college activities.

It seems to me, therefore, that by restricting the distribution of The Guardsman, the people responsible for this action are defeating their own purpose, the purpose of gaining wider participation in the activities of this college.

I would like to suggest that the council reverse its decision and continue free distribution of The Guardsman.

The free publicity which the Associated Students will receive as a result of this action will, in the long run, be more valuable than the money saved by printing only a limited number of papers for distribution among AS card holders only.

Walter Sigg,
AS Card Holder

• • • •

• Motion Denounced

Editor, The Guardsman:

It has been suggested by the student council that from now on The Guardsman will be distributed only to those who are fortunate enough to have an Associated Student card.

In all due respect to the council, I think this motion stinks!

Ever since I enrolled here, I have been swarmed with invitations to buy an AS card. Up to this point, I have graciously refused on the assumption that there is no rule that one must buy an AS card to attend classes here.

It seems now that I was either misinformed or else things have taken a drastic change since the time of that ruling. It has gotten to the point now where a student is definitely hampered in his pursuit of knowledge if he doesn't have an AS card.

The privileges that one expects upon entering this college are now cut off from those who aren't Associated Student members.

City College is supported by the taxpayers, and the student body is comprised largely of the sons and daughters of these same taxpayers. This college is a part of our great free school system, and there is no reason why we should be forced to pay this extra fee, which actually takes the form of an extra tax.

Many of the students are here to take advantage of this free schooling, which their parents have already paid for through taxation. It seems unfair that they are denied further participation in college activities unless a further "tax" is paid.

The Guardsman is written and printed for the benefit and enjoyment of the student body as a whole. Why, therefore, should there be restrictions as to what segment of this student body should be allowed to receive the paper.

To sum up my feelings, I think that since the taxpayers have paid for the services of this college, their children should not be further pressed upon for the simple privilege of receiving the college paper.

Phillips Fills Vacant Council Seat; Lebonville, Hargus Tangle Over $257 Cut In Campus Police Budget Request

Police Chief Lee Hargus flatly stated that he could not operate on the proposed budget for his department, as the campus police and Finance Chairman Emory Lebonville tangled briefly at last Thursday's meeting of the Student Council.

The question of uniforms was raised, as Lebonville attempted to justify a $257.50 cut that he had made in the police budget. In answer to a query from a council member, Hargus said that he now had 30 men on the force and that he had only 24 uniforms. The bulk of his budget request was to provide for these needed uniforms.

Hargus was asked what had happened to the leather jackets that had been purchased in the past by the campus police. Hargus replied that the campus police had never lost any equipment.

Lebonville defended his actions by saying that he had to make cuts from somebody's budget. He said, that "It would be nice if we could give everybody the amount that they requested, but it is just not possible." The council finally acted to table the motion until the request can receive further study.

The council also moved to fill the vacant Sophomore Council seat when George Kaplanis moved to nominate Al Moss for the post. Earlier the council had accepted the nomination of Norrine Phillips for the same position. Jim Carroll moved to close nominations. In the election that followed, Miss Phillips defeated Moss and was seated on the council.

The college band came in for its share of Lebonville's duties as Finance Chairman when he recommended that their budget request be trimmed from $495 to $195. Kaplanis asked if the band had requested money to repair their bass drum. Lebonville replied that they had. Kaplanis stated that since the band would not march in college functions he did not see why they needed new uniforms. Lebonville said he had cut this portion of their budget completely. A motion to allocate $195 to the band was passed.

In further action, the council acted to award the Associated Men Students $514; Model UN, $493; Forum, $400; Handbook, $600, and Publicity, $970.

H&R Students To Take April Trip

Eight graduating Hotel and Restaurant students will be chosen again this year for the annual spring trip to Southern California, which will take place from April 3 to April 10, Wendell Muntz, department chairman, announced recently.

This is one of the most sought-after honors that an H&R student can achieve, and competition will be high, Muntz said.

The winning students will be selected on the basis of class work, leadership, and ability by a vote of the students and faculty of the department.

During the all-expense-paid California trip, which is sponsored by a number of San Francisco hotels, interesting and educational tours will be scheduled all along the way.

"This is an unusual opportunity for those students who are selected," Muntz commented, adding, "It provides valuable information and knowledge which they can use upon entering the industry."

Overnight stops enroute will be made at several hotels. The hotels selected are Casa Munras in Monterey, The Carillo in Santa Barbara, The Hollywood Plaza in Hollywood, The Statler in Los Angeles, The Desert Inn in Palm Springs, The Biltmore in Los Angeles, and The Californian Hotel in Fresno.

Drop Course Deadline

Any student wishing to drop a course must do so no later than Wednesday, March 28. The deadline is 12 days after the end of the first midterm period.

According to college regulations, no student may drop a class because of failure of attendance.

Those planning to drop a course should notify their counsellors at once, and he will outline the procedure.

Denman Award Applications Due

Denman Scholarship applications must be submitted to Mary Golding, dean of women, whose office is located in Room S149, by Monday, March 26.

This scholarship of $125 is awarded annually to two women student here who have maintained a 2.0 grade point average (B) and are graduates of a San Francisco public high school. The Denman Scholarship was established by Judge William Denman and Mary Cheatham, his sister, in memory of their father, James Denman, a former superintendent of San Francisco Public Schools.

Members of the Denman Award Committee this semester include Louis Conlan, president of the college; Lloyd Luckmann, coordinator of Instruction; Archibald Cloud, president emeritus of the college; and Dean Golding. The award will be presented at the Prep Day luncheon on Thursday, May 10.

Students applying for the Dr. A. J. Cloud Scholarship, The Square and Circle Scholarship, Chinese Students' Club Scholarship and the Graduating Class Scholarship must have their petitions submitted by Monday, April 16, Dean Golding announced.

Letters should be addressed to Edwin C. Browne, dean of men, or Dean Golding. The awards are scheduled to be presented during the pre-commencement assembly in June.

Committee Appeal Made

In an attempt to promote greater college spirit, the Rally Committee here made an appeal recently to all creative-minded students to submit to them some new college songs and yells.

Mike Gilbert, committee chairman, stated that short yells and songs for college games are in demand, since it is felt that with them, an improved college rooting section will result.

Stevenson Loss May Mean Split In South

By Don Ball

THEY went to the polls in Minnesota last week: not to praise Adlai Stevenson, but to bury him.

And bury him they did. With the aid of Estes Kefauver, the political future of Stevenson was drawn, quartered and neatly put away to take its place in the archives; a thing of record, but no longer important.

Along with Stevenson went the strongest hope the Democrats have been able to produce in their growing fight against disunity in the face of growing southern unrest over the segregation issue.

Minnesota was the real proving ground. Stevenson hadn't looked good in New Hampshire, but he hadn't campaigned personally in that state. Kefauver, buoyed by his New England triumph, swept into Minnesota, supposedly a Stevenson stronghold, and waged a folksy, hand-shaking type of appeal which snatched the primary right out from under the noses of the liberal farm-labor bloc which previously reigned supreme in the lake state.

Thinking the farm-labor machine his, Stevenson had indiscreetly offered up the observation that he would be disappointed if he got less than 60 per cent of the Democratic vote.

For Stevenson, who had talked of withdrawing his candidacy if he lost Minnesota's primary, the grapes were indeed sour as he announced that he would just fight harder.

With Stevenson fighting harder, but then so do drowning men, Kefauver looks better than at any time since he went into the '52 convention with a bag full of primary victories, only to see the big city machines swing the nomination to Stevenson after the Tennesseean had led on the first two ballots.

Kefauver may not get the south, his stand on segregation is untenable in that area, but there is some question as to whether any Democrat is going to get Dixie support.

The south might have gone for Stevenson, his liberal internal policy is not to their liking, but his moderation stand on segregation might have satisfied them where the immoderate Kefauver's does not.

Possibly the most perplexing question is what the south will do if Kefauver gets the nomination as appears likely at this time.

The Southern manifesto has shown that the south means business and will fight segregation and its proponents down to the wire. Their next job will be to find a man to run for president on their platform.

It's a good bet that the south won't get Lyndon Johnson, the senate majority leader, and Texas Democrat. He's too good a party man in spite of what his own views on the recent court decision may be.

J. Strom Thurmond, who showed an ability to win a lot of votes as the Dixiecrat nominee in the '48 elections, may be just the man the south wants. South Carolinan Thurmond is the only man ever to win a major election in his or any other state as a write-in candidate.

Since Eisenhower is now an announced candidate, the Chicago convention is the one to watch. It will probably see the nomination of Kefauver and a party split which may prove to be irreconcilable, for the south is traditionally Democratic only because it is traditionally anti-Republican.

Mobile X-Ray Unit Here Next Week

Mobile X-ray units from the city health department will be sent to the college next week to provide free chest X-rays.

On Monday and Tuesday, April 2 and 3, men physical education students will have their chests X-rayed; on Wednesday and Thursday, April 4 and 5, the women students will receive X-rays, and on Friday, April 6, all remaining students plus faculty and civil service employees will have their examinations.

The unit will be located in the gymnasium area Monday through Thursday, and will shift to the area north of the student union building on Friday.

Shrew Rehearsal Cancels One-Acts In Little Theater

Three one-act student-directed plays scheduled for April 6 and 7 have been cancelled by the college little theater.

The change was made in order to give more rehearsal time to the next production. The Taming Of The Shrew, which will be presented on April 20, 21, 24, 27 and 28. The comedy is tentatively set to be presented on April 26 also, Michael Griffin, director, stated last week.

Cast in the major roles of the William Shakespeare comedy are Stan Weston as Petruchio; Stephanie Koppe and Edwina Moquin as Katherina; Jeanne Graham and Carole Waugh as Bianca; Bob Phalen as Baptisti; Herbert Valle as Lucentio; Crockett McClanahan as Hortensio; Virgil Cox as Tranio; Peggy Powell as Biondello; Mel Rasmussen as Grumio; Paul Morales as Curtis; Peggy Barton as the widow; and Melanie Mead as the tailor.

Curtain time for the play, set in Padua, Italy, is 8:30 p.m. Admission is by the presentation of an Associated Student card. General admission is $1.

A visitor to little theater last week during Taming Of The Shrew rehearsal was Russell Nype, star of the comedy hit, Anniversary Waltz, now at the Alcazar. The show, in its 20th week of performance, has broken a 30-year record in San Francisco.

Nype spent two hours discussing and answering questions about his Broadway career. He told of his debut in Call Me Madam. The next day the New York Times stated, "A Star Is Born."

After speaking informally with the group, he willingly posed for pictures with the cast. The drama students were grateful to Russell St. John of the Hotel and Restaurant department, who brought Nype to the college, Griffin said.

Women Represent College At Annual GM Motor Show

With 15 women occupying key positions at the show, the college is well represented this year at the General Motors Annual Motorama, which opened last Saturday and will close Sunday, April 1.

Led by Melanie Mead, runner-up for the title of Miss San Francisco last year, the group of women will include Dee Noodlman, Carol Olsen, Virginia Hase as coin girls; Marilyn Sicotte, Sharon Morrill, Anita Gray in the Engineering Department; Anne Canelios, Jane Lutt, Sandy Kechler in the Research Department; Marilyn Gregory and Marilyn Euler in the Electronic Kitchen, and Carmen Arellane and Mary Fleming in the information booth.

Five of the young women are veterans of past Motoramas, having worked for the General Motors organization during the 1954 and 1955 shows. In the past Anne Canelios, Jane Lutt, Mary Fleming, Marilyn Sicotte and Carol Olsen have all worked on various jobs in previous shows.

Arthur Beswick, personnel director for the Motorama, has worked very closely with Joseph A. Amori of the placement service here in the final selections. Beswick, who was pleased with the final selections, was quoted as saying, "This is the finest group of young women I've seen on this tour of five large cities in the United States."

The finalists were selected from 30 applicants, and will receive $1.70 per hour, a raise of 25 cents over last year. The jobs last for ten straight days, six and one-half hours per day.

Amori stated also that applications were still being received for summer jobs and the sooner that they are in the better the chance for employment this summer.

May Festival Preparations Begin As Organizations Here Check Site

May Festival preparations are under way, as representatives from the various organizations here gave an affirmative nod after inspecting the facilities for the erection of booths at the Cow Palace, according to Wayne McFadden, Associated Men Student president.

With the cooperation of the administration, the AMS has definitely decided to hold the festival at the Cow Palace, Parade floats and booths will go under a western style theme.

There has been some difficulty as to whether the college band will be able to play at the festival, McFadden said, because the musician's union insists that the band receive union wages.

McFadden reminded that the deadline for king and queen petitions is Friday, April 20, and that clubs wishing to participate in the May Festival should be prepared to make a $5 deposit.

If the current controversy over whether copies of The Guardsman should be distributed to Associated Student cardholders continues, McFadden stated, there is some possibility that the AMS will have an election to find a popular criterion on the issue.

City College students interested in having their short stories, essays, plays, reviews, criticisms, poetry and articles of current interest published in Forum, are urged to submit their creative efforts to Catherine Connolly, faculty adviser to Forum, by next Monday, April 2.

Students are reminded that no limits are set as to amount or kind any one student can submit, as long as contributions are in by the deadline.

Potential contributors are requested to submit material on regulation 8½ by 11 inch plain typing paper. Work should be typed on one side of each page only, in clear, double spaced copy. Margins should be approximately 1½ inches.

Forum sells for 50 cents or can be obtained without charge upon presentation of Associated Student cards.

The Forum Board meets every Friday during college hour in C222. Everyone in the student body plus faculty members is invited to attend these meetings. The mechanics, advertising, criticism and procedures of the 1956 publication are a few of the subjects discussed.

A request has been made by the Forum staff for assistance by anyone interested in the business end of the magazine. Persons with ability in typing, advertising, reviewing, magazine organization or any phase of the mechanical end of the publication are particularly needed.

Forum will celebrate its 20th year of publication this spring. The committee this year includes Annette Legras, Jack Loseutoff, and Ed Emig.

2 Miss SF Entries Register In Annual Summer Pageantry

Two candidates for the Miss San Francisco crown were officially registered with Bud Landen, public relations man for the Bank of America and publicity chairman of the contest, George Kaplanis, Junior Chamber of Commerce liaison officer, announced last week.

Shirley Stortz, an 18-year-old freshman majoring in dental assisting, and Margie Schellar, also 18, a language major, were the first candidates from the college to be officially entered in the contest.

Both Landen and Kaplanis along with Charlie Stewart, General Chairman of the pageant, expect a greater turnout this year than in the past, even topping last year's high of 54 contestants.

Committee feelings concerning this college's participation in the contest have indicated that the committee is hoping for a large turnout and that it is looking to the college for many entries in view of "the talent walking its halls," Kaplanis said.

Unmarried women, 18 to 28, and high school graduates, with six months residence in San Francisco, or in their second semester here should see Kaplanis for interviews on Mon-

Claim For Veteran Checks Due April 4

Applications for March subsistence checks must be filled out in the Office of Veteran's Affairs beginning tomorrow, and before Wednesday, April 4. It is necessary for veterans to file during this period in order to receive their checks promptly.

There will be two breaks in subsistence during the summer session. No money will be received for the period between the finish of the regular semester, June 15, and the start of the summer session, June 25.

Likewise, no payments will be made for the period starting August 3, the end of the summer session, and ending September 14, the beginning of the fall semester.

College To Represent Chile At Oregon State College Meet

Seven student delegates were chosen last week to represent the college at the Model United Nations conference to be held at Oregon State College April 3-8, Thomas Dutcher, faculty adviser, said this week.

The seven delegates are Don Ball, Phil Braveran, Jim Carroll, Vie Hebert, Bill Whitney, Barbara Polster and Al Moss. Arnold Mentz is an alternate.

Dutcher said that the group expects to leave Tuesday, April 3. Funds for the trip were allotted by the Student Council last week.

Every college participating in the Model UN meeting represents a certain country. At the meeting, the delegates act and think as if they were actually representing that country.

City College will represent Chile this year and try to govern themselves according to the pattern of that country's economic and political views.

Broken up into the different council segments, just like the real organization, current problems will be on the agenda. The Security Council will take up the peaceful uses of atomic energy, reductions of armed forces, and the Arab-Israeli issue.

Economic development and human rights will be discussed by the Economic and Social Councils. The Trusteeship Council will take up the question of West New Guinea and Somaliland.

The General Assembly will consist of three committees. The first committee will be the political and security, which will talk on the Korean and Algerian situation. Economic and Financial, the second committee, will set up hypothetical programs of technical assistance.

Safety and international relations will be discussed by the Social, Humanitarian and Cultural Committee.

The Legacy Of A Non Voting AS: Lost Political Freedom

IT IS NEVER too early in the semester to remind the Associated Student card holders that the right to vote in their election, as in any election, is not one to be neglected and is never one to be disregarded.

Throughout history is indelibly recorded the fate of those peoples who struggled for freedom and then, after reaching their goal, turned their backs on the things they had sought, simply through indifference toward its further progress.

It would be melodramatic to say that the finger of doom will point at all those AS members who neglect their right to vote in this semester's elections, but it would be ridiculous to state that a certain measure of political freedom would not be lost if the AS members turn away from what is their right and their duty.

Many students in many previous semesters here have worked toward the strengthening of college student government. The results of their combined efforts can best be seen in the fine representation of this college at the state and regional student government conferences, held each year.

As long as the practical experience in student government affairs is available, the college's representation at these conferences, and similar meetings, will continue to be impressive and constructive showings.

This practical experience in student government is obtained through participation in Student Council business, which involves the distribution of AS funds to nearly every on-campus organization.

It is this fact that should make it imperative that all AS members support the kind of leadership they want in this regard through the use of their right to vote. Every AS member has a stake in its future, and the future of his chosen activity. By conscientious handling of his voting power, he can help to direct that future.

Only through student interest, the vital factor involved, has student government here, or at any other college, been able to remain comparatively independent, free to direct its own affairs and free to progress.

Should student interest in this vital portion of college life falter, however, it can be taken only as a sign that the students are either unwilling or unable to govern themselves.

Only an Associated Student organization that takes an active interest in student affairs can assure the continuance of this college's good record in that field.

All these inter-related factors of student government and student activities make the vote in the coming election all the more important, for voting will not only continue healthy student government, but will select the proper leadership to further guide this element along its path to maturity.

Shots At Random

By Bob Kauth

"YOU don't go to Purgatory," says Bridey Murphy, who claims to have lived in Ireland from 1789 until 1864 and then meandered about in the astral world until reincarnated as Ruth Mills, a "life-of-the-party" type girl.

Mory Bernstein, author of The Search For Bridey Murphy, was a firm disbeliever in reincarnation, but some of the facts, which neither maps nor atlases disclose but were revealed by Bridey, have proved to be true.

After her death, Bridey, like the other astral inhabitants, journeyed about . . . "in one place that is all spread out." They could see, speak and hear but not smell, touch, or feel the temperature changes. Life is better and fuller on earth, Bridey says.

Because they are continually journeying, lengthy conversations are impossible. Then again . . . "you just have no time," and . . . "there's nothing important." Bridey tried to speak with the living, but unfortunately . . . "they wont listen."

Finally reincarnated in Iowa as Ruth Mills, who later married and became the "vivacious" Ruth Simmons. Bridey was discovered by Bernstein, an amateur hypnotist, while Ruth was in a hypnotic trance. Bridey speaks with an Irish brogue, does some Irish jigs, and has an uncanny knowledge of Ireland and its folklore. All this Ruth could not know, because many of the facts were unknown to most history authorities, and she . . . "does not even own a library card."

Of course, Bridey is not the first one to be reincarnated. Although she may not be as "vivacious" as Bridey, Helene Smith, a Swiss girl who is the subject of several books, while in a hypnotic trance claimed to have lived twice before.

Under the name of Simandine, she was the daughter of an Arab chief some 500 years ago. As Simandine, she could speak some Hindu and could write in perfect Arabic script. Research verified many of the facts which she revealed, but "more elaborate research" indicated that much of this material was picked up by the "subconscious mind."

While in hypnotic trances, Helene also made trips to Mars. She described the Martian houses, scenery, people and customs. Unfortunately, the Martian written and spoken by Helene was quite different from that of the wife of an orthodox clergyman, Mrs. Snead, who too made frequent visits to Mars—and Jupiter.

Then again, there was a woman who, when possessed by a "learned devil," could speak in Latin, Greek and Hebrew, which were all unknown to the woman. She was not the "life-of-the-party" type girl.

Extensive research disclosed that as a child she was cared for by a pastor, who until late into the night would read aloud to himself works of Latin, Greek and Hebrew. The pastor was being quoted by the "learned devil" verbatim.

Thus it may be true that perception without awareness by the subconscious mind is not uncommon, hypnotic subjects are no more truthful than a few policemen and some newspaper reporters, and the devil is a better plagiarist than would-be columnists.

Yet, who can scorn the facts revealed by Bridey, which undoubtedly were revealed not for materialistic reasons but to enlighten us proletarians? So doubt, it is not unlikely that this reporter, who is as honest as anyone else who has not had the occasion to be dishonest, may be the reincarnated personage of Aristotle or Tolstoy but not Hemingway.

Campus Carrier Trys To Overcome Drawbacks; Radio-TV Students Get Professional Training At KQED

By Elmer Gentry

Bong! Bong! Bong! Bong! These four varied-pitched chime notes are a familiar sound to the students and faculty here every morning, since everyone is aware that they precede the Daily Campus Carrier.

These announcements are a function of the Radio and Television Department, which is headed by Henry Leff.

Certain problems confront this department in their presentation of the Campus Carrier. Each classroom speaker has its own volumn control, and at present the speakers aren't synchronized. As a result, the volume from classroom to classroom varies.

Recently the department has been considering the question of playing music and making announcements through speakers in the student union cafeteria during noontime. The idea, however, has certain drawbacks. In order to make the announcements audible in a large area, such as the cafeteria, the volume would have to be quite loud. This would interfere with individual conversation.

Students from the Radio and Television Department spend one night a week at Station KQED, receiving experience in all phases of station operation.

City College was the pioneer of Radio and Television courses in San Francisco colleges and now offers some six different courses in this field, including radio and television announcing, producing, and script writing.

In 1952 and 1953, the department also pioneered the idea in this city of audience - participation television classes. Two courses were given on Station KPIX for a half hour a week.

Many former students of this department are now working in the field, such as Roy Storey, who announced the San Francisco 49ers professional football games last year, and Lee Ann Meriwether, former Miss America who is now working on the Today program with Dave Garroway.

Doubting Thomases Outwitted By Fast Feminine Action

Are college students as a whole exceptionally skeptical? Next to one of the counters in the student bookstore recently was a dollar bill lying on the floor.

It was observed by at least 50 students during the half hour or more that it lay there before finally being picked up.

From those who left it there came some interesting and varied comments, such as, "Must be an early April Fool joke." "There's probably a string on it," "I'll bet you it's glued to the floor," and "Those darn psychology majors and their experiments!"

At this point, many people are probably wondering why this reporter didn't pick up the bill.

At first, after seeing the incident and noting the students' reactions, he was kept busy jotting down notes, being an avid member of the fourth-estate.

Then, while putting away his pad and pencil and preparing to get the dollar, a feminine, gum-chewing freshman, who was strolling by with a girl friend, spied the crushed currency.

She snatched it up and shrieked, "Look, Myrtle, a whole dollar! This must be my lucky day!"

People just don't realize what a reporter has to sacrifice sometimes to get a story.

The Bohemian Staff Bids Adieu To A Good Will Ambassador

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

DEATH came suddenly, struck and left us with the tragic loss of our friend and fellow journalist, Mitsuya (Jimmie) Ohno, member of the Editorial Board of The Guardsman. Jimmie, age 22, died prematurely on Saturday, March 17, victim of an unusually rare ailment which damages the body tissues.

One does not necessarily have to charge on the battlefield to face death heroically. An individual who, although he has felt death's pressure upon him continues to face it unflinchingly, fighting alone against its terrible [illegible] and finally accepts the verdict with bravery, can well share glory with the soldier, lying dead from an unexpectant wound.

A native of Tokyo, Jimmie had come to this country in 1954 on a student visa. He immediately enrolled here and began to make scholastic preparations for a career toward which he truly aspired, that of being a foreign correspondent.

Jimmie's main interests centered around journalism, and he worked hard at it, as the result of his progress proved. He was an above average student.

While studying at Meguru, an American high school in Japan, Jimmie had set foundations for acquiring fluency in English and knowledge of the American way of life. But it was not by mastering the language that Jimmie attained such a popularity among his fellow students in a foreign country.

"Jimmie Ohno was one of the group of foreign students who will be remembered as a person who asked first, 'What can I do for this college?' rather than what can it do for me. All of his acts seemed to be guided by this principle," George Mullany, journalism instructor here, said this of Ohno.

He played an active part in student affairs here by being a devoted member of the [illegible] Relations Club. During this semester, he had been Social Committee Chairman and Historian of the club. Jimmie was also chairman of the Japanese group who won an award for the best performance at the International Fair of 1952.

"Jimmie soon became an ambassador of good-will from Japan and by his work and participation here, he has probably done more to better Japanese - American relations than some men with that purpose in mind were able to achieve," Joseph Jacobsen, his counsellor and IRC adviser said.

It is not easy to bid farewell to a comrade for whom one has felt deep affection, to be satisfied only with memories of him.

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

• Guardsman For AS Use

Editor, The Guardsman:

An open letter to the Associated Students of the City College of San Francisco:

I would now like to answer the charges that were leveled against myself and the Student Council, with reference to the restriction of The Guardsman to Associated Student members only. In the last edition there were several letters opposing the distribution of The Guardsman to Associated Student card holders only.

A remark was made that a person reads the paper to learn things about the college and not about the Associated Students. In answer to this I will say that The Guardsman is issued primarily for the use of the Associated Students. This paper concerns information of the activities of the Associated Students. If some of us feel we do not want to be a part of this organization in any size, shape or form, then we should not ask for any benefits from this organization. In the past and in the present it is the few who are supporting the many.

We have a lot of freeloaders who are trying to take advantage of the benefits of an AS card, without having to purchase one. Our Guardsman is solely supported by the money from AS cards. The cost for maintaining a paper at this college averages $3,451 a semester. We of the Student Council feel it only fair that the paper be given to the people who have had enough loyalty to this college to join the Associated Students and help finance the program here at City College.

We also feel justified in passing such a motion because we wanted to show our appreciation to the people who have seen fit to help and back the Associated Students.

A statement was made that the Student Council made a lie out of the credo, "The Truth Shall Make You Free." I don't see how anyone can say that the Student Council has made a lie out of our credo, "The Truth Shall Make You Free." Is a person being honest when he takes something that doesn't belong to him? We are only trying to give the Associated Students their just and fair treatment. For this, should the Student Council be crucified and sworn against?

I think there were quite a few rash statements made against the Student Council, the Associated Students, and myself. I would like to defend the Council and myself on some of these false things that were said about us. I would like to assure the Associated Students that we, the members of the Student Council, are far from being fascists. I don't think that the person who wrote this did so with a clear mind. I think he let his emotions get the better of him. I can't possibly see how a veteran who fought to keep [illegible] and throw around statements describing people as fascists, only because they are trying to help the people who belong to the organization that they have sworn to lend and represent honestly and faithfully.

We, the members of the Student Council, have nothing but sincere loyalty to the Associated Students.

Bill Cirimele, AS President.

Mock Unanimous All-Conference Choice

Ram Guard Joins Kane, Hardeman, Dorsey And Haggerty On Coaches' Big Eight Conference Star Squad

Al Mock, smooth Ram set-shooting guard, was a unanimous choice for the Big Eight All-Conference basketball team, selected by the league's coaches and announced recently by Dr. Harold Taggart, conference commissioner.

He joins Milt Kane, Modesto's great forward and top scorer in the loop, and West Contra Costa's Clyde Hardeman as unanimous choices of seven coaches under the unique system for choosing the all-star squad. Others named to the first team were center Joe Dorsey of West Contra Costa and guard Sam Haggerty of Oakland.

Second team choices were: forwards Dave Klurman, Stockton, and Ned Fitzgerald, San Mateo; center Hal Theus, Oakland; and guards Jim Colvin, West Contra Costa, and Doug Larson, Santa Rosa.

The all-league five was chosen on an all-opponent basis. Each of the loop's eight coaches submitted the names of three of his own players he thought worthy of honors. A list of these players was compiled and sent back to the coaches, who then chose an all-opponent first and second team, disregarding his own men, from the list. Forwards had to be listed as forwards, centers as centers and guards as guards, so there could be no juggling of positions to give any one man a better chance for selection. Players receiving most votes were placed on the all-star team, and seven votes thus constituted unanimous choice.

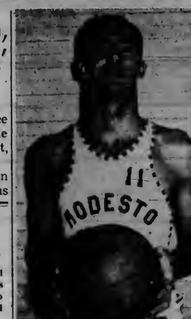
Mock, who occasionally played forward in Coach Sid Phelan's scheme of things, was slow getting started as a scorer, but blossomed out in the second half of the round-robin league schedule. His high mark, scorewise, came against Modesto on the Pirate court. With the pressure on, Mock hit for 22 points, but couldn't pull it out for his mates as the Rams lost, 83-74.

He finished with 154 points in 14 games for an 11.0 conference average.

The all-star team was topped by Milt Kane, the Modesto gunner who broke all league scoring records. Generally accepted as the finest all-around player in the league, and probably in Northern California, Kane rolled up 354 points for a fabulous 25.4 average, and hicketed 44 points again Santa Rosa for a new single game mark. His only poor game came in the season finale, when the Rams' Norm King held him to 3 points. In addition, he was his club's top rebounder and floor leader.

Hardeman, the Comet jump-shooter, was not far behind Kane as a scorer and actually outshot the Modesto ace on field goals. Although not a strong rebounder, Hardeman killed off many teams with his hot scoring streaks and was largely responsible for his squad's championship showing.

Haggerty, playmaker and number two scorer for the Thunderbirds, wound up tenth in the conference in scoring and is probably the top defensive man named to the squad. His 13.6 average isn't entirely indicative of his scoring skill, and his top night as a shooter found him with 34 points.



Probably the top surprise on the team is Dorsey, the West Contra Costa center. The tallest man on his team at 6-3 and a strong board man Dorsey was undoubtedly valuable as he chipped in 13 points a game, but observers had virtually conceded first club honors to Theus, the Thunderbird ace who average 19 points a game and was the top two-year college rebounder in the nation.

The Chicago White Sox have not won an American League pennant since 1919, the year of the Black Sox scandal.

Modesto Cage Mentor Leon Lafaille Resigns

Leon Lafaille, head basketball coach at Modesto, has resigned as cage mentor to devote more time to other aspects of his job as a physical education instructor.—

Lafaille has coached at Modesto since 1947, with a two year break in 1949-50 when he served as a director of the Modesto city educational athletic department. His best season was the 1953-54 round, when his quintet won the conference title.

MILT KANE, Modesto's shooting ace who set two individual league scoring records, topped the Big Eight all-star team as another unanimous choice. Kane has been described by Leon Lafaille, retiring Modesto coach, as the greatest player he has ever coached.

RAMBLINGS

By Al Moss

(Editor's Note: This is the first in a series of two articles dealing with the present set of amateur rules governing athletics in this country.)

ONE of the greatest differences between the many participant sports now being played in the United States lies in the rules regarding amateur status, and this great difference, something that should not exist, could ruin many of the amateur sports for both participants and spectators.

In some sports, the rules are perhaps too lax, and definitely should be tightened. In others, ridiculously harsh and unfair laws are forced on the would-be amateur athlete, and often lead to under-the-table rule-breaking that may or may not be detected.

Each of these cases is lamentable, but the real evil lies in neither. The worst of the so-called amateur standards are those that fluctuate according to the will of a single man or group of men who set themselves up, by one method or another, as dictators in that particular sport.

In the first case, thnt of too loose rules or enforcement of rules, there are many examples. Although college football, as only one of these examples, is not nearly as black as some would paint it, there is undoubtedly flouting of the laws regarding extra benefits by some colleges to outstanding football players. If the majority of the coaches, the ones who should decide, consider the rules fair, they should be strictly enforced. If not, they should be changed right now.

Tennis is the worst example of unfair and stupidly rigid rules. The United States Lawn Tennis Association heads have set themselves up as the gods of the sport, and consider it their personal duty to keep the amateur netters of the nation from even associating with professionals.

The rather stupid line of reasoning is that professionalism is evil, and even any contact with one of that low class could soil the simon-pure amateur. Competition against a professional or publishing of any article concerning tennis is enough to cost one his amateur standing.

Perhaps the best, or should it be worst, example of the last case, that of arbitrary rulings, may be found in track and the governing Amateur Athletic Union.

Next week, the pros and cons of AAU procedure, some pertinent examples and quotes and a possible solution will be discussed in this space.

Football Schedule For '56 Announced

A nine game 1956 football season schedule, with home games again scheduled for Kezar Stadium, was recently announced by Grover Klemmer, head football coach here.

One date has yet to be filled, but negotiations are reportedly underway to fill the September 21 open date.

The college eleven is tentatively set to open the season with three road games, two of them conference affairs, before engaging in their first Big Eight game at home.

At least two of the upcoming games should prove to be interesting battles. If last year's performances can be taken as any indication. It was Stockton that de-railed the Rams' Junior Rose Bowl hopes in a Kezar tilt last season, and another home game against Modesto provided fireworks in the form of a free-for-all toward the end of the uneven battle.

The schedule is as follows: Sept. 28, at LACC; Oct. 5, at Santa Rosa; Oct. 12, at Stockton; Oct. 19, Oakland, here (8 p.m.); Oct. 26, Sacramento, here (2:30 p.m.); Nov. 2, at Modesto; Nov. 9, San Mateo, here (2:30 p.m.), and Nov. 16, West Contra Costa, here (2:30 p.m.).

Baseballers Beat Panthers Twice In League Opener

By Lou Lucia

Two late inning rallies provided the margin of victory as the baseball team twice downed Sacramento in a double-header by scores of 10-8 and 10-7, last Saturday, March 24, at Sacramento.

The team travels to Alameda on Tuesday, April 3, to meet the Alameda Naval Air Station nine in a practice tilt.

Jim Poppin took a fast lead in individual runs batted in by knocking seven runners across the plate.

With two out and the score tied at 7-7 in the top of the eighth of the first game, Bob Bandettini collected his third hit in five trips. Ken Dito singled between third and short, and Poppin lined a baseshit to center, scoring Bandettini. Blair LeMire tripled to left center, scoring two more. Fred Glosser outlasted three Panther pitchers to gain credit for the victory.

In the second game, the Rams had 13 walks and seven singles, Poppin garnering three hits for three RBI's and centerfielder Ron Castro walking four times while scoring three runs.

Bandettini relieved starter Larry Nissim with one out in the second inning, allowed only five hits, no earned runs, and struck out two to become the winning pitcher.

Three victories against formidable foes highlighted the baseball action for the week of March 12 to 19.

In a loosely played game the Rams collected 14 runs on the same number of hits to outscore St. Mary's, 14-11. Stocky catcher Ken Dito led the hitting attack with three hits out of five at bats. Roger Ferrari's two singles and Fred Glosser's two doubles were also invaluable in the hi spirge.

Pitchers Glosser, Larry Nissim, and Bob Bandettini collaborated to hold the Presidio team to only three hits and a 6-3 victory. Shortstop Blair LeMire and First Baseman Roger Ferrari clouted home runs during the contest.

Ray Warman took complete control in the East Contra Costa game, allowing only five hits, striking out four and walking none, for a 7-2 victory. Ferrari continued his torrid batting pace with two more hits in three at bats.

Redus Triple Winner As Thinclads Easily Whip Santa Rosa, Bulldogs To Remain Unbeaten In Big Eight

By Al Moss

Coach Roy Burkhead's Ram tracksters showed too much too often for a suddenly undermanned Santa Rosa team as they trampled the Bearcubs, 92-48, in a triangular Big Eight Conference meet at Santa Rosa last Saturday, March 24.

San Mateo, with only some 15 men on the squad, took 11 points, The Rams raised their league mark to 3-0 by taking a pair of dual meets from Santa Rosa, 78-44, and from the Bulldogs, 114-7.

The hosting Cubs lost a large part of their team, Rosea Harper by name, in a freak accident in the open 440, the second event. Bolting from the blocks on a false start, Harper caught his spikes, stumbled, and smashed his shoulder against a pipe, dislocating the shoulder. The mishap probably cost the Cubs points in the 440, as the Rams swept the first three places in the event, and Santa Rosa failed to enter a relay team at all.

As tough a blow as it was to Santa Rosa, it made little difference in the final outcome. With Clint Redus winning his usual three events, the San Franciscans made it evident from the very beginning that they were out for an easy win. Redus took the 100 yard dash in a slow :10.5, captured the high hurdles in :15.5 and took the altitude-related 180 yard dash in :18.5.

Other outstanding performers for the Rams included Lloyd Castello, who captured the mile and two mile; George Jones, who took second in the high hurdles and won the lows.

Tracksters Square Off With Gators In Saturday Meet

Stepping into four-year college competition with little apparent change in class, Coach Roy Burkhead's Ram tracksters square off against San Francisco State's varsity thinclads this Saturday, March 31, at 3 p.m. in Cox Stadium on the State College campus.

Although the Gators have the extra two years' experience in some cases, the Rams, now rated by observers as one of the stronger teams in the tough Big Eight Conference, should give their hosts a bad time.

The hosting Stnters will be led by sprinter Oreese Elmore. A three-year veteran, Elmore has been a consistent winner in the 100 and 220, and should be the toughest competition yet faced by Clint Redus of the Rams in the 100. Both have registered times under :10.0 this year.

The Gators, stocked with some of Burkhead's former charges, could make things tough for the present City College thinclads. One tough race figures to be the open 440, where Coach Terrell Moss, who also gains points in the 220 regularly, will battle several good Ram quarter-milers, foremost among them Myron Zimmerman.

Another battle shapes up in the discus, where Frank Carroll, barely edged in the Cal Frosh meet and improving all the time, meets Walt Rillet, former Ram football and track star. Rillet will also top the Gator shot putters, while the Rams offer Fred Barden as their number one man with the 16 pound ball.

One event where the Rams seem to have a definite edge is in the high jump, where LeRoy Thomas, Kevin O'Sullivan and Norm King give Burkhead's charges a four-way threat in the event. The Staters on the other hand are feeling the loss of little Johnny Mathis, the 5-7 jumper who last year cleared 6-6, and this time around do not figure to offer much in the high leap.

Others who have shown well for the Rams in the opening meets are Ron Anderson and Les Andersen in the half mile, Lloyd Castello in the long distance runs, George Jones in the hurdles and Bob Guddee and Albert Hardy in the broad jump. These men figure to be the top point-makers this Saturday, as Burkhead preps his charges for the triangular affair with Stanford Frosh and West Contra Costa on April 7.

Boxing Tourney Included In Intramural Meeting

A boxing tournament, starting May 9, will be included in the intramural program, boxing coach Roy Diederichsen announced recently.

Diederichsen said there will be a novice tournament besides the experienced boxers taking part in varsity competition. Events will be held in all weight divisions.

Coach Sid Phelan has started an intramural tennis tournament, being held in the elementary tennis division now. The winners of matches will continue up the ladder until a class champ is determined. As the tennis players receive added experience, a doubles tournament will be added.

Tennis Team Beats West Contra Costa

Continuing on their winning ways, the tennis team trounced West Contra Costa 7-0 on Friday, March 16, on the loser's home court.

Last Friday, March 23, saw the tennis team meeting Stockton at Golden Gate Park.

Don Mays led the victory by defeating Richard Johnson, 6-2, 6-4. Shir Azar-Pey blanked Bill Tarleton, 6-0, 6-0, and Pete Schwartz defeated George Canter, 6-1, 6-2. Other singles matches saw Jack Kletzman beating Gary Will, 6-4, 7-5, and Hugh Annonsen defeating Don Orten, 6-0, 6-1.

In the doubles, Mays and Annonsen joined to defeat Johnson and Canta, 6-2, 7-5, and Azar-Pey and Fischer trounced Will and Orten, 6-0, 6-0.

Coach Roy Diederichsen said that Schwartz and Kletzman have shown the most improvement since the beginning of the season and that he expects them to contribute many more victories.

Ram Golfers Beaten In Conference Start

Opening their Big Eight conference on Friday, March 16, the golf team was defeated by West Contrn Costa 9-6 at the Richmond Golf Course.

Low man for the team was Norm Denardi, who shot an 80. His score was unofficial because he was ineligible, having signed up only a week ago. He was eligible for the next match against Santa Rosa at Harding golf course on March 23.

Point makers for the team were Gil Brunk, who shot an 86, and Don McDowell, who had an 82. Other scores made were 84 for Frank Hubert and Bob Zimmerman's 89.

The score would have been closer if Denardi had been eligible. Coach Grover Klemmer said, and he should help the team in the future.

Joe Fulks of the Philadelphia pro basketball team poured through 27 field goals in a 1949 game against Indianapolis.

One Side Offers Heated Views On Guardsman Distribution Issue

ruling concerning distribution of the college paper.

It seems like the restriction of the paper to the AS card holder only has stirred up a controversy. If we look at the facts of the case perhaps a solution will be apparent.

Fact 1: The Guardsman publication will cost $3,454.92 this semester. All of this money comes directly from AS card sales. Therefore, holders of an AS card are entitled to a free Guardsman.

Fact 2: By not publishing 800 extra copies for the next 14 issues, a total of 11,200 copies not published, a saving of $247.34 is realized. This saving breaks down to $.0217 a copy.

Fact 3: That NON-AS card holders do wish to read The Guardsman and have a perfect right to read The Guardsman.

The solution to the whole mess is obvious. Give AS card holders a free paper, and charge non-AS card holders 2 cents a copy for their Guardsman. By this method everybody is paying for the paper and no one is getting something for nothing.

Jim Wright.

• City Pays Nothing

Editor, The Guardsman:

First off I want to say that I am proud to sign this letter.

Let us not forget that The Guardsman is the official publication of the Associated Students of City College of San Francisco. It is operated only because the Associated Students foot the bill. It would be a different matter if the Unified School District of San Francisco subsidized this paper and if it were the college paper, but it is not.

To say that it is unjust not to distribute this paper to everyone because it is the "principal method of disseminating information" is not only silly it is absurd. It is like saying that the Chronicle and the Examiner should give their papers away for nothing because they contain the news of the day. Someone has to pay for the printing, the work that goes into making it possible, and in this ease it is the Associated Students exclusively. The city pays for nothing.

As for the argument of the non-AS member, City College is supported by the taxpayers. Your gripe is not with the Student Council but the city and the taxpayers. I agree that it is unfair to limit the privileges that one expects to receive at college. But what are the things that are the inherent right of every student? Free dances? Free this, free that? OK, all well and good, but who is to pay for it? If there is no set-up for the source of funds that is needed and a group of students are willing to pay for these rights why should they have to be burdened with the financial bonds of paying the way for everyone. This is not what the Associated Student set-up is for.

Council Member.

• To Brother Veteran

Editor, The Guardsman:

I must admit that the Wednesday issue of The Guardsman moved about the campus like wild fire. I am most happy that the "new interest" instilled by the paper brought about this student action.

I saw many non-AS card holders eagerly awaiting for a "used" copy so that they too could read The Guardsman.

A few points I would like to point out to the people who wrote letters, but did not have the stamania to release their names.

To my Brother Veteran, let me assure you I am not a Fascist. I too am in dire need of funds. But, I believe we receive $110.00 per month to pay for school expenses (public law 550) our AS card comes out of that money plus our books.

As for information regarding the institution itself I refer you to Dean J. Brady, Dean of Student Welfare. I will not oblige you by running for cover.

Upon checking the official records of the school I find at this time that one Walter Sigg is not an AS card holder as he so stated in the Wednesday issue of The Guardsman. He assured me that he will buy one as soon as he can.

To the non-AS holder, yes, the tax payers support the college but they do not support the AS association. The Guardsman received $3,454 to put out fourteen issues. This money had to come from some place. It came from the students who felt it important enough to pay $5.00 to belong to the AS students.

The council chambers are open to all students who want to be heard. The meetings take place on Tuesday and Thursday from twelve to one. If any students are in disagreeance with the actions of student council I believe all of you to come before the right body of people, the Student Council and voice your opinion.

"The Truth Shall Make You Free"

Student Councilman.

• Truth Of Crux

Editor, The Guardsman:

Re: Letter of the AS Card-Holder:

Petty politics! If it takes petty politics to awaken you out of your Rip Van Winkle slumber, then I am glad that you feel that this is the ease. But if you will brush the cobwebs out of your sleepy eyes you will see the definite advantages that are finally being offered to you. "The Truth Shall Make You Free" and it will if only you seek it out.

It is you that pays for this paper, not the city taxpayer. If you are content to pay the way of a few freeloaders, then it is for you to voice that opinion. But if you feel that this is run by a bunch of petty politicians, then it is time for you to get these freeloaders together and get the city to foot the bill for a paper that can be given out free.

The truth of the crux is that this is a paper for people such as yourself. You have payed for the right and now you cry that you want to cut your own benfiets. One of the main contentions of not buying an AS card is that there are no benefits. This is now an exclusive benefit for people such as yourself. The Associated Students go to the trouble of collecting information and publishing it so that students, like yourself who have subscribed to the AS. Why should you pay for these other people. It is for the city to provide for the non-AS members. Not people as yourself. This is not a charitable organization.

• Sorry For Freeloader

Editor, The Guardsman:

A question to students who are in opposition to the passing out of The Guardsman only to AS card holders.

Why is it that some students are so filled with the "whatever you get I should get too" idea? So many people are afraid to get out and earn what they receive.

The facts show, and everyone of you will have to admit, that The Guardsman is solely supported by funds collected from STUDENTS who buy AS cards. Pray tell, why do you students who don't have enough interest to buy an AS card feel that you have earned the right to receive The Guardsman?

I bet not many of you realize why our AS President, Bill Cirimele, took this action, Bill did this because AS card holders were complaining that anyone and everyone was grabbing a paper and they could not get hold of one.

Why don't all of you stop for one minute and use the brains you were born with? If you do this all of you should come to the conclusion that it is only fair that those, and only those, who pay for The Guardsman should receive a copy. This is the only right and fair way.

For those of you who still feel you should receive a copy of The Guardsman, even though you don't support it, I can only say I feel very sorry for you and only wonder if you will go through the rest of your life as a freeloader.

Joyce Weaver,
AS Vice-President.

• Council Decision OK

Editor, The Guardsman:

Reading The Guardsman last week, I was quite disappointed to see all the opposition offered against the ruling that the Student Council passed for the distribution of The Guardsman.

Being that The Guardsman is a paper in such high standing, I believe that we can compare this paper to that of our local papers. To obtain the right to have your own copy of the local paper delivered to your home, you must purchase a subscription. If one day you were on your way home from work and you find that your paper had been delivered to your neighbor, and when you try to redeem it, he put up opposition and stated "This paper is put out to inform the public and we are all one of the same neighborhood so why can't I steal the paper you paid for." There is the same situation in this school, and the students who do not hold AS cards are in the true sense of the word stealing the paper from their fellow students who paid for the right to receive it.

Yes, it is true that the credo over the entrance proclaims "The Truth Shall Make You Free" and it is only true and just that the people who subscribe to The Guardsman shall have the right to receive it.

And if everyone would admit the truth to himself, it would leave him free from all doubt whether or not the Student Council made the right decision concerning the distribution of The Guardsman to only those who support it.

Jim Buckley,
Sophomore President.

• Reply To Sigg

Editor, The Guardsman:

Re: "Paradoxical Decision":

At this time we would like to reply to Walter Sigg's letter. To him it seems paradoxical and absolutely without purpose that the Associated Students' paper be limited to Associated Students.

We would like to point out to him that, even though it is the duty of council to interest as many students as possible in the activities of the Associated Students, there is one setback, funds to do these things. The AS does not receive any funds other than from the Associated Students. It is council's job to govern the expenditure of the funds entrusted to them by the Associated Students.

To continuinlly use these funds on non-AS members is not fair to the AS card holders. Approximately $1,000 is spent in a semester's time on the publicity budget alone.

We would like to point out also these four points:

1. Free publicity—there is no free publicity—it costs the Associated Students even to let you, a non-AS member, voice your opinion in the AS paper.

2. Guardsman is the best publicity —and we already spend $1,000—there must be a limit to the funds.

3. Strong inducement to attend the affairs and limiting of the AS paper will be one of the greatest inducements to join the AS.

4. Dances and college activities—this cannot long continue if the expenses are doled out to the non-AS members. To cut the expenses of the freeloaders will make it possible to put more money into the AS activities.

In conclusion, we would like to point that even though your letter has many fine points, the detriments outweigh these points.

Jim Carroll, Council Member.
Emory Lebonville, Finance Chairman.
Marilyn Sicotte,
State Information Chairman.

• 5c Fine For This Vet

Editor, The Guardsman:

I'm a married veteran; and proud of the fact that even so, I am a member of the Associated Students of City College of San Francisco. Sure it cost me five dollars to join, but I never thought that such an investment was so much.

This so-called Veteran wants to know what is going around this school, and even I, who doesn't take a real active interest in politics can tell him. For once the AS Card is beginning to mean something. The freeloaders are feeling the pinch on their tight little pocket books. This is, and I quote the Banner head of the paper, the "Official Publication of the Associated Students of City College of San Francisco." I think that if he will look up what the AS is, he will find that it is an organization of AS card holders.

I don't know if I am ... in suggesting such a thing, but why can't council look into the matter of charging something to the members that are not in the AS. If $5.00 is too much, maybe a nickel a week would be fine for this "veteran."

Like Mr. Kaplanis, whom the other veteran refers to as "the budding Fascist," said, "Why, then would those who did not care to help support this service . . . expect to share it equally with those who did."

6 Budgets Get Green Light As Student Council Financial Grants Approach Twenty Thousand Mark

By Elmer Gentry

With the passage of the final six budget requests at last week's meetings, the Student Council diminished the Associated Student reserve fund to the small sum of $322.

These six allotments brought the total budget allocations to date to a total of $18,678.

The most discussion concerning these requests centered on the one submitted by the Campus Police department. Police Chief Lee Hargus had asked for $628.90 for his department. Finance Chairman Emory Lebonville recommended that the council allot only $371.40.

After asking for and receiving a breakdown of the police budget, a council member queried Hargus as to the reason for his request for six additional uniforms. "Because we have 30 men this semester, and only 24 uniforms," was the answer.

Then after being asked by another council member why he couldn't just let the new members of the department use the older officers' uniforms, Hargus replied wryly that this would not work too well.

When asked if he could manage on the lower budget, Hargus resignedly replied that he guessed he would have to if that was the only amount available to him. The budget was then passed.

The other five budget grants were as follows: the tennis team asked for $482.52 and got $350; the golf team requested $544.50 and received $350; the track team asked for $1,916.40 and received $1,223.40; the men's glee club requested $275 and got $200; and the A Cappella Choir asked for $400 and received $275.

AS Receives Percentage Of Ramporium Profits

For the last five years the Ramporium, the college book store, has been serving the students and presenting the Associated Students with a percentage of the profits which are used for AS activities, according to Dick Main, Ramporium manager.

The Ramporium was first established on June 10, 1950. Formerly located in the old west campus, it is now permanently situated in the student union building. It is managed by the associated student organization and is controlled by the Unified School District of San Francisco, Main observed.

The book store got its start with a $1,300 loan, but progressing in sales, the debt was paid back in October, 1950.

Card Sales At $7970; Goal Near Says Jamison

Total sales of Associated Student cards have reached the $7,970 mark, or 1,594 cards, according to reports from the student bank.

This leaves the $10,000 goal set by Chairman Dave Jamison short by $2,230, or 406 cards.

Sale of AS cards will last until the end of the semester, and cards may be purchased at the student bank or the Associated Student office, Bungalow 2.

Only Two Holidays Left Until Summer Vacation

Students here have only two more extra days for leisure left in the spring semester, according to Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities.

Only Friday, March 30 (Good Friday) and Wednesday, May 30 (Memorial Day), remain on the semester schedule as holidays. The Easter-Good Friday holiday is only one day this year, as compared to the three day holiday in past years.

GUARDSMAN CIRCULATION DROPS

In the first test of "The Guardsman to AS members only" idea, held last week, approximately 300 copies of the publication were left over from the original press run of 1,700.

AS President Bill Cirimele stated that although he was not displeased with this showing, he nevertheless felt that the full efficiency of the plan has not been achieved.

Because 200 copies were for Guardsman use, and an additional 100 issues were circulated to the faculty, only 1,100 were left for AS distribution.

Weekend Meetings Highlight Affairs Of Campus Clubs

By Joyce Weaver

MOST of the activities this past week took place over the weekend following midterm week.

The Engineering Society held its semesterly Get-Acquainted luncheon at the home of past president Paul Allen Penn. The event was enjoyed by all who attended. Anyone interested in the society's activities is welcome. Meetings are held in Room S214 during college hour.

Beta Phi Beta fraternity held its first affair on Sunday. The group was addressed by Associated Student President Bill Cirimele, and Freshman President Norman Durieux. Also present were Dean Ralph Hillsman and Arline Timberlake, who were introduced by the fraternity president, Paul Ribera.

Holding a very successful first pledge affair was Tau Chi Sigma fraternity. Steak, potatoes, peas, ice cream and coffee were on the menu. Special guests were Dean Hillsman and Robin Cresci, faculty adviser.

Because of the temporary withdrawal from college of Al Mowry, pledge master of Alpha Phi Omega, John Dudley was appointed by the Executive Committee to fill the vacancy. APO will hold a smoker next Thursday at 7:30 at 1735 - 34th Ave. Members have asked that it be announced that Alpha Phi Omega is a service society and not an honor society.

Zeta Chi sorority is currently making plans for the May Festival booth and float. They also chose Paula Villa, Margie Brown, and Wynelle McCarthy to take part in the May Festival Queen contest.

Prospective pledges were introduced to the brothers and alumni of Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity at their first affair last week.

2 Documentaries At Newman Club

Two documentary films will be featured at a special Holy Week meeting of the Newman Club tonight in St. Emydius Hall at 8 o'clock, Warren White, club sponsor, revealed last week.

The first film, Cruelfixion, its theme and variations, is a study of the crucifixion by three masters of Flemish altar painting. Verdi's Requiem and works by Baeh will compose the musical score of the picture.

Hieronymous Bosch's Three Painting, the second film, is a study of Borsch's adoration of the kings and the mocking of Christ. The musical background will come from works by Franz Liszt.

In 1951 at the Venice Film Festival, the American documentary, Cruelfixion, was a prize winner.

In addition to the films, a discussion of rituals and liturgy of Holy Week and their importance to the layman will be discussed.

White invited all students interested to attend the meeting, St. Emydius Hall is located on Jules Avenue just above Demontford, a block and a half from Ocean Avenue.

Stalin Topples As Red Chiefs Run For Cover

By Don Ball

FAR from the rubber stamp rituals that they ordinarily are, the most recent Communist Party Congress have found the followers of Moscow generating a new activity in the party which seems to be leaving some of the most faithful the dizziest.

The sudden vilification of J. Stalin, the Babe Ruth of Communism, has left party members the world over confused, and often in somewhat indelicate situations.

French Communist Jaques Ducios and Italian Palmiro Togliatti had built national parties almost entirely on the dynamic figure of Stalin. Young Italian reds brightened walls throughout their country with mottos reading, "The Mustache is coming."

Party leaders outside of Russia were confronted by the rather ironic taunt of turncoat. Perhaps Red China knew best. Communist chieftain in the country, Mao Tse-Chung, who oftimes fancied himself Stalin's younger brother, merely clamped a news blackout to preclude the Chinese hearing of the unfortunate death which had befallen the Stalin myth.

Actually, the non-Russian communist leaders had an easier time of it than some Russians. The Georgians, who feel an especial kinship with the late premier, have been extremely unrestive, until at this writing their largest university had been closed in what seems only the beginning of a monumental job of iconoclasm.

It would appear that the present attempt to discredit Stalin is strictly an all or nothing affair. Stalin is a legend in his homeland, and it will be difficult to change completely the affections of the people.

The most telling charge, only one of many in recent days, accuses Stalin of murdering 5,000 red army officers during 1941.

It is direct accusations which, while the most telling, are also the ones which are causing the most unrest within Russia herself. If Nikita Krushchev and company succeed in completely defacing Stalin's memory, they will have strengthened their own position in Russia immeasurably.

If they fail—the attempted shattering of the Stalin myth may in time trigger the downfall of the present tyranny in Russia.

Guardsman-To-AS-Only Fails In Fourth Try

Attempted distribution of The Guardsman to Associated Student card holders here has failed for the fourth straight week, and a proposed shift in responsibility of distribution is not expected to change things.

Beginning with the issue of March 7, a hastily-conceived plan to give a copy of the campus newspaper only on presentation of an AS card has been tried. Each week, for one reason or another, the plan has seen several hundred copies of The Guardsman left in the AS office, and at other distribution points.

Last, week, with approximately 1,400 copies of the paper available to the Associated Students, there were 591 copies undistributed.

The Rally Committee has, through last week, been in charge of handing out the newspaper. After an early-semester refusal to handle this, the committee relented under Student Council pressure and agreed to take care of distribution each Wednesday.

Each week the Rally Committee has been undermanned, and claims to have too few persons available to handle the large and complicated task of validating an AS card as each of the 1,400 copies of The Guardsman is handed out. This failure was further blamed on the lack of cooperation of the council members in helping with distribution.

Bill Cirimele, AS president here, has consistently blamed the failure of the plan on the lack of cooperation from the Rally Committee and others involved in distribution.

The Student Council, at Cirimele's suggestion, took the matter of distribution out of the Rally Committee's hands at their meeting last Thursday, March 29. Cirimele announced that, in the future, a new and unknown women's service sorority, Gamma Sigma Sigma, would handle the distribution. Success or failure of the new group as distributors should be decided this morning.

Finance Chairman

EMORY LEBONVILLE submitted the final budget of the semester to bring the total expenditures to $18,678.

Council Assigns Distribution To Service Sorority

Spirited debate, centering around the controversial issue of limited Guardsman distribution, highlighted Student Council meetings last week.

Rally Committee member Joetta Colwell announced that the committee was having difficulty with distribution of The Guardsman, primarily because it was understaffed for this job. Miss Colwell also stated that a service sorority, Gamma Gamma Sig-ma, had volunteered to take over, and asked that the Rally Committee be relieved of this function.

AS President Bill Cirimele remarked that the sorority would take over the distribution this week on a trial basis.

A council member, Louise von Emster, brought up the idea of selling extra copies of The Guardsman, after Miss Colwell stated that there were approximately 600 copies left over last week. Miss von Emster proposed that the extras he sold at five cents a copy.

It was then decided to hold up discussion of the proposal until a Publications Board meeting could be arranged.

Bill Chisum asked that extra copies of the Student Council minutes be distributed to students who don't attend the council. A motion was made, but then tabled.

Dave Jamison, AS card sales chairman, announced that total card sales have reached 1,672, totaling $8,361.

It was announced that the deiegates for the upcoming Catalina Conference will be as follows: Bill Cirimele, Joyce Weaver, Marilyn Sicotte, Emory Lebonville, George Kaplanis, and Wayne McFadden. Rose Thurman and Jim Buckley were designated as alternates.

AMS Votes This Week On Guardsman Issue

Is The Guardsman to be restricted only to Associated Student cardholders, or should all the students have receive equal distribution of the paper?

This is the question that Associated Men Students will face when they go to the polls today, tomorrow and Friday.

Because of the current controversy regarding The Guardsman distribution, Wayne McFadden, AMS president, is conducting a poll among his members to reveal their personal criterion on the issue.

Upon reaching its conclusion, the AMS will present its recommendation, based on the results of the poll, to the Student Council.

Polls have been set up at the cafeteria, Silver Pole and the library. McFadden urged all AMS members to vote.

Forum Contribution Deadline Re-set To Next Monday; Present Emphasis On Poetry Brings Requests For Prose

Deadline date for contributions to be considered for the Spring 1956 publication of Forum has been re-set from April 2 to next Monday, April 9, Catherine Connolly, faculty adviser to the magazine, stated recently.

Forum, the college's annual publication of creative efforts by students in poetry, prose, critiques, short plays, stories and articles of current interest, has advanced its deadline date to facilitate more contributions.

All material may be submitted to Miss Connolly, faculty members of the English department, or any member of the Forum board.

Creative efforts in writing have been considerable, so far, with an emphasis placed on poetic material. It was urged that more contributions be forwarded in prose, short-short stories, plays, and critiques.

Forum celebrates its 20th year of publication this spring. Jack Loscutof as editor, Annette Legras as art editor, and Ed Emig as business manager comprise the 1956 spring staff.

Contributors are again reminded that material should be submitted on regulation 8½ by 11 inch plain typing paper and should be typed on one side of the paper only, in clear, doublespaced copy. Margins should be approximately 1½ inches.

Forum board will continue to meet in C222 every college hour. Everyone in the student body plus faculty members is invited to attend. Mechanics, advertising and publishing procedures of the pending issue are discussed.

A request still stands to anyone interested in typing, advertising, reviewing or magazine organization to assist in making the forthcoming publication possible.

Buckley Announces Class Meeting Friday To Talk Over Soph Week Plans

A meeting of all Sophomores who are interested in helping lay plans for Sophomore Week, May 28 through June 2, is scheduled for this Friday, April 6, during college hour in Bungalaw 2, Jim Buekley, sophomore president, announced this week.

The Sophomore Ball will be held in the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel on Saturday, June 2, from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. Appropriate dress for the affair is presently scheduled to be semi-formal. The band as yet hasn't been decided upon, but a few have submitted hids and one will be chosen soon, according to Buekley.

Prior to the dance, Associated Student members will elect a sophomore king and qeen to reign at the ball. Someone is needed to aet as chairman of this commitee, Buekley said.

Another attraction of Sophomore Week will be the soph-prof softball game on June 1.

Model UN Conference Opens At Corvallis Today; Seven Students Represent College

Registration for the Model United Nations Conference, being held in Corvallis, Oregon, began today with this college being represented by seven delegates.

The delegates — Don Ball, Phil Braverman, Jim Carroll, Vic Hebert, Al Moss, Barbara Polster and Bill Whitney—left San Francisco yesterday morning with faculty adviser Thomas Dutcher via the Shasta Daylight. The group arrived in Corvallis yesterday evening.

Registration will take up most of today, as colleges and universities from all over the Western United States, Alaska and Hawaii are entering delegations. Committee meetings will be held tomorrow and Friday and the General Assembly will take place Saturday. All such meetings will be held on the campus of Oregon State College, the hosting college.

Assignments to the particular committees were made last week by Hebert, delegation chairman. Ball and Braverman were assigned to the Political and Security group. Whitney is on the Economic and Financial Committee, Carroll will be the delegate in the Trusteeship Council, and Miss Polster will be the delegate to the Social, Humanitarian and Cultural Committee. Moss will represent the college in the Ad-Hoc Political Committee. Ball will also act as press representative.

This college will represent Chile, and as such will attempt to face the problems posed as Chile would, with that country's point of view and probable reaction to each situation as it arises.

Top issues facing the Sixth Annual Session of the Model UN will include the problem of racial discrimination in South Africa, the dispute over Cyprus, and problems in the Near East. This college, as Chile, has already sent two questions to the Model International Court, the primary one being dispute over certain sections of Antartica. The argument with Great Britain is tentatively over 27 degrees of territory to the south of Chile.

Entry List For Miss SF Pageant Increased To Five

Four more women here were registered in the San Francisco Room of the Fairmont Hotel last Saturday for the 1956 Miss SF contest giving the college a total of five official candidates vieing for the heralded title.

In addition to Margie Scheller, the first title-seeker to enter the contest, the list now includes Diane Dawson, Marlee Dumas, Gale Fletcher, and Shirley Stortz. Photographer George Brooke was also on hand for bathing suit and other publicity shots of the girls.

Unmarried women, 18 to 28, who are high school graduates with six months residence in San Francisco or have completed one semester here should see George Kaplanis, Junior Chamber of Commerce Liaison Officer, in his office in Bungalow 2 on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays at 9 a.m. or 1 p.m. or on Tuesdays or Thursdays at 9 or 11 a.m.—

The deadline date for registration is Saturday, April 28.

Although beauty is an essential part of the contest, equal stress is being placed on talent, personality and intelject. A letter to Kaplanis from Contestant Chairman Joseph Mignola indicated that the contest is conducted each year "to select the girl who is most truly representative of San Francisco's womanhood."

Many valuable prizes will be awarded the winner, including a scholarship and a wardrobe. In addition to the prizes, the winner will represent the city in the state finals at Santa Cruz for the Miss California crown.

In the last few years two women who won the contest have become worthy of mention. Sue Fetz, 1953 winner, has become a top flight San Francisco model, and Lee Merriwether, 1954 winner from City College, went on to win the state finals and then reach the heights of Miss America and is now appearing as the feminine star of Dave Garroway's Today show on NBC.

Miss Meriwether has lately been working at the Actor's Studio in New York. This studio has turned out stars like Marlon Brando, 1954 Academy Award winner, and the late James Dean.

Newman Club Starlight Dance To Be Held Friday

Starlight is the theme chosen by the Newman Club for its spring semester dance, scheduied this Friday night, April 6, from 9 p.m. to midnight in St. Emydius Hall at Jules and de Montfort Streets.

Ben Leonard and his orchestra will provide the music for the evening. The bids are $1.00 stag, and $1.25 per couple. Bids may be purchased at the door or the student bank. Appropriate dress for the dance is sport. Vasco Biganiari, the club president, announced.

Carolyn Barbaro, vice-president; Marie Casey, recording secretary; Christa Herbon, corresponding secretary; Don Ghosti, treasurer, and Milt Anderson, sergeant-at-arms, complete the list of officers.

AS Officers Invade H&R Field

One of the more spacious and gracious "classrooms" on campus is the new Bungalow 2 Associated Student office.

After suffering for a semester and a half in S169, the faculty telephone booth, AS President Bill Cirimele and his cohorts took over their new retreat. Among inconveniences now being faced is a separate kitchen-lounge ineluding a stove. The coffee facilities, according to Cirimele, offer a small bit of relaxation for hard workers like AS Vice-President Joyce Weaver, sophomore class President Jim Buckley (shown at left), and of course, himself.

Columbia Grant Is Exorbitant Since Charity Begins At Home

WHEN the final budgets of the spring semester were approved by the Student Council recently, some members of that body inquired as to the reason for the many cuts enacted on so many budgets.

The Finance Chairman replied that since the Associated Students only had so much money to allot for activities, and that since there were so many organizations entitled to AS support, certain groups were, regrettably, limited in their budget requests by necessity.

The answer was both explicit and true.

Earlier in the semester, in fact in the second meeting this spring, the council approved a donation of $200 to the Columbia School Fund, a campaign to refurbish the so-called first public school in California.

In view of this generous contribution, the question now arises as to whether the council, in its liberal mood, has in some measure limited student activity here.

The allocation must have come from AS funds, for the council would have no right to act on the donation if this were not the case. Since the same source from which the donation was made is also the melting pot for distribution of funds to all AS organizations and functions, it seems that the council was out of the line of its regular function in the allocation of the Columbia School and other donations.

There is an overlapping fund at this college which makes up the deficit between the bare financial needs of the AS and the amount of money brought in on AS card sales each semester.

The deficit this semester ranges somewhere from $10,000 to $11,000.

With such an enormous difference between the ability of the AS to meet expenses and its actual needs, the $200 contribution now appears to be more than generous, it appears to have been exorbitant.

It is no secret that the word around AS-budgeted groups is to "get the request in early in the semester to be more certain of receiving what you ask for." This situation is vulnerable due to the relative inexperience of the new council members early in the semester, and in some measure will always exist as a necessary evil.

Because of the fact that overall budget requests will always exceed AS funds, any and all donations to worthy causes which the AS wishes to make should not come from funds normally used for support of group functions, but should come from the excess fund, which this semester presently stands at $322.

The AS reserve fund is used for late semester allocations which do not come under consideration in original budget requests, such as extra money for the baseball team should it win the conference championship and travel to Los Angeles for the state finals.

Since this fund is limited, it should be realized that although contributions to charity may of necessity be small in proportion to the AS membership, that just as the AS cannot ALLOCATE money it does not have, it cannot DONATE money it does not have.

The argument that such donations are justified by favorable publicity does not hold water for the simple reason that no organization has gone over its financial limits for the purpose of press releases and still remained within operating means.

If the Associated Students wish to operate with some semblance of financial stability, then it would be wise in the future to save donations for only the most worthy of charities, or they may become a charity themselves.

Mary And Her Lamb Obsolete

College Briefcases Only Blind For Unscholarly Bizarre Collections, Plus Corresponding Personalities

By Charles Clausen

Mary had a little lamb and brought it to school one day.

It's an old rhyme, but with a few innovations the same things can be said of today's students.

For instance, the lamb has been replaced in some cases by the briefcase. From time to time, students carrying one of these leather monstrosities can be seen.

One student can be seen almost every day, complete with his leather satchel. He could be practicing for his future role in life, but actually, what does he carry in the aforementioned article?

Passing him by and giving him a quick look, one would think that he is carrying books, but more than likely he has his lunch, a paper, a comic book, and possibly a jug of coffee stashed away in the thing. Maybe a gun. Who knows?

On the female side, we have a counterpart in what is known as a lady's handbag, which is usually larger and heavier than the above-mentioned briefcase. They come in all sizes and shapes, and one that can be seen on the campus looks, feels, and probably is a football helmet.

What wonders of the universe reside in these nightmares of a fashion designer? Lipstick, powder, eye shadow, eyebrow pencil, tweezer, emery board, lipstick brush, nail polish, bobby pins, datebook, last year's ad on a Macy sale, pills, and you name it and you can have it.

One girl had Benzydrine pills to keep her awake at night so she could study and had other pills to counteract them so she could sleep in class.

But this isn't the limit of what a redblooded student will bring to college. Just look around you.

Some bring pets — cats, dogs, and sometimes more interesting creatures of the animal world. So don't kick that dog you see running around the campus because it might belong to one of the instructors.

Students bring many things to college; some bring cars, some bring what they think are cars, and some walk. All arrive sooner or later bringing some bizarre or sometimes ordinary object to the campus.

Think it over. Maybe you have something strange in your pocket, or maybe the person sitting next to you has. A lizard, perhaps, or an elephant. OK, don't laugh.

Queen Elizabeth recently took on another hobby to add to her long list of duties and pastimes. She is learning to cook.

Modern Artisans Inspired In Crafts Shop Seclusion

Go to Cloud Hall, turn to your right and keep going until you hit the first building there; no, its further down, right near the men's gymnasium. An hour's pause, then again. Please tell me, where is the Ceramics Department? Why, in Annex C, of course!

A somewhat long, not too modern, wooden building, found by the careful observer to lie to the left of the men's gymnasium near Hurley's Village, is where Roy Walker sets up his Ceramics department.

For some 110 students it is a place where they may combine talent with imagination and become skilled in pottery, jewelry, and sculpture crafts.

The treatment of clay may be regarded from two differing aspects: as an industry, it ranks fifth in importance in the United States, or as an art. In the latter case, the scope of technique in its application is as infinite as the artist's own imagination. Walker defines it as an art where one obtains results in the beginning and at the end of a lifetime, yet he feels as though he has only touched the surface.

It is a tradition for the Ceramics department to have a show during Open House here, and at other gatherings during the year.

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

• Facts and Figures

Editor, The Guardsman:

On the much disputed question of whether or not AS members only should have the right to receive a Guardsman, let us first review the facts concerning the change in distribution.

Currently, according to the rule that AS only has the right to a Guardsman, the weekly circulation has been cut from 2,500 copies to 1,700 copies (almost a third). This reduction in The Guardsman of 800 copies per week would total at the end of the semester 11,200 copies.

But, although The Guardsman is reduced nearly one-third in circulation, the total amount saved for the spring semester is $247.34. In comparing the reduction in cost to the reduction in distribution, expenses go down approximately 1/15 while the distribution is cut almost one-third.

Another fact to take into consideration, in whether or not AS members only should have The Guardsman, is in regard to the estimated income of the AS and where this money is derived from. The estimated income of the AS for the spring semester of 1956 is approximately $18,000 and when broken down comes principally from two main sources. These two sources are the student bookstore (approximately $9,000) and the AS cards (approximately $8,000).

The big question now arises as to what percentage of the AS funds does the non-AS member contribute. Even though the student bookstore is operated by the AS, a large part of the money received is contributed by non-AS members.

A question easily asked is, "Why, if non-AS members contribute a large part of the income of the AS, are they denied the civil rights as registered students here to have a Guardsman?"

If AS members were to receive their Guardsman one day earlier than non-AS members, I would certainly agree, but to limit The Guardsman to members of the AS only, I believe, is to destroy the purpose of The Guardsman, which is to inform all students here of the college's rules, regulations and activities.

I do not wish to critieize the intentions of those who support this idea of limited Guardsman distribution, but in view of the facts and figures just presented, I feel that a more complete distribution of The Guardsman is to the best interest of the AS as well as the non-AS members.

Wayne McFadden,
Associated Men Student President.

• Only Result Harm

Editor, The Guardsman:

The present plan for distributing The Guardsman is fraught with manifold disadvantages and discrepancies. Its adoption was due to improper and inadequate examination by our student leaders of the facts, advantages, and disadvantages of such a plan.

The purpose of any newspaper is to publicize the current news and activities concerning its readers. In order for this purpose to be fulfilled a wide circulation is necessary. Under the present plan of distribution, The Guardsman does not have its former high circulation and its effectiveness as a news organization is curtailed.

Many papers every week go unread and useless. Evidence of this can be found in the Associated Student office. A great many AS card holders refuse to wait in a long line to obtain a paper, because it is a cumbersome process

RUSSELL NYPE, who became a Broadway star overnight when he co-starred with Ethel Merman in Call Me Madam, recently visited the college's drama department and in the process increased this reporter's ego.

It seems that Nype was self-conscious about his glasses and would remove them before going upon the stage. That is, until the director of Call Me Madam requested that he wear them. He is now recognized be his trademark of "horn-rimmed glasses."

No longer do we have any defaming remarks to make against that bleached blonde that told us, "Oh, you have the kind of a face that glasses would improve."

OUT OF THE MOUTHS OF BABES, the kind that are impossible to get along with and the hardest to do without, comes the most interesting, startling comments. The Bohemian

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

COMMON man has not yet been so mentally civilized to cease regarding that which lies beyond the orbit of his comprehension with any other outlook but one characterized by contempt.

It has become commonplace to witness the scene, one that may fill the sensitive spirit of the onlooking artist with a frenzy of fear and doubt in humanity, of a boisterous throng forming in a corner a cordon of ignorance and intolerance which momentarily bars and nullifies centuries of learning.

What object motivates such scorn and revilement pronounced by the group congregated here in this museum to act like barbarians in their disrespect?

It is a painting, abstract in its perspective and unintelligible in its design. A design representing an idea which only the artist and his associates can understand, can appreciate and can criticize.

The group loathes it. Spill paints on a canvas, the members sneer, swish them around a little with a brush, frame it, call it some fancy name and there you have it, modern art.

Can they understand its significance, its true meaning? They wish to do so immediately. They naively expect to grasp in a few hours the essence of an aesthetic radiation, which has taken the artist a life time of inspiration to create, without even bothering to acquaint themselves with the rudiments of art.

This is their great transgression. Their lack of consideration to inform themselves thoroughly on what they are so prone to disdain causes them to profane the museums into which they wander aimlessly.

There are some preliminary definitions to be established and some simple notions to be made clear before any manifestation of art can be understood.

To paint is to cover a surface with lines and colors. There are no limits in human imagination for graphic relations between lines, between colors and between lines and colors. These relations, if properly used, can create symbols or graphic images which can suggest or represent everything the artist wishes them to represent.

The relations between lines on a surface are known as drawing, between colors or between lines and colors are known as painting. This way, every relation of lines or color has its value of representation.

For surface: a circle put in a due relation with a rectangle represents sun over a house, in relation with other forms it represents an eye or lake or a silver dollar. A straight line can in the same manner signify horizon or a highway or a sun ray.

However, it is evident that the representation of a painting is clearer and more satisfying when the lines and colors with their innumerable lines and gradations are put in such relations on the canvas that the resulting symbols or forms correspond without any doubt to our perceptions of objects, colors, lights and shadows as we see them in reality.

In other words, there exists a logic of pictorial representation, which is a kind of regulation of how our common sense perception of reality shall be represented on a canvas.

Next week, we shall see how a group of radicals in art break the bounds so deeply rooted by the influence of the Renaissance, that of complete logic of representation, by using geometrical figures in their art.

RAMBLINGS

No Uniformity In AAU 'Amateur' Rules

By Al Moss

(Editor's note: This is the second in a series of two articles dealing with the present set of amateur rules governing athletics in this country.)

WES SANTEE and his alleged under-the-table expense account have caused a great deal of controversy among track officials, participants and fans. The pros and cons of the case won't be presented here, but this is a wonderful example of arbitrary rulings and of the men behind such rulings.

From the facts presented to the Amateur Athletic Union, the governing body of amateur track, among other sports, and from other information made public from time to time, it would seem that Santee is neither the first nor the last to break the amateur rules. Why then has no similar action been taken against his law-breaking predecessors?

The answer could lie in the comment of Dink Templeton, outspoken Bay Area track coach and expert, who said: "Santee made two mistakes. He talked, and he took checks (in lieu of cash)."

Santee's equally outspoken manner irritated the brass of the AAU, and he was made the goat for a "sin" that many committed. Because he said the wrong thing about or to the masters of amateur track he was outlawed, rather than Glenn Cunningham or any of the dozens of others who quite likely "sinned" as much as, and no more than, Santee.

What is the reason behind this apparently arbitrary set of rules that finds one man guilty, another innocent for the same crime? There is none. It is simply the strange mental workings of a group of men who consider themselves the saviours of amateur track, at least when it suits their own purposes.

Typical of these men is Avery Brundage, top man of the International Olympic Committee and a loud voice in the American AAU. Brundage is a man whose aims, at least those on the surface, are undoubtedly noble. The end, in this case, does not justify the means.

Brundage will listen to any idea, as long as it agrees with his own. He apparently has little sense of humor, at least where track and field or the AAU are concerned. In the sport as he sees it, black is black and white is white and there is no grey, no in-between.

It is this kind of attitude, no matter how well-meaning it may be, that could write finis to amateur sports, and Brundage is certainly not the only offender. There are far too many such men, men who stand bravely at the front door fighting off evil professionalism while true and honest amateur standards sneak out the back door.

Perhaps Mrs. Jim Thorpe, widow of the great Indian athlete who was also victimized by the fluctuating rules of the AAU when he was chastised for something that was at that time common practice, had the right idea when she suggested recently that the AAU be abolished.

This might be too drastic, but there is only one cure for the evil of fluctuating rules and arbitrary enforcement.

The coaches, participants and others really vitally interested in the sport itself and not in personal glory, must get together, overthrow the self-centered dictators who now so often control athletics, and set up honest and enforceable rules for the betterment of sport.

If these rules, perhaps rigid as they may be, are made in the best interests of the competitor and spectator, and are reasonably static in both letter and enforcement from sport to sport, the real ideal of the word "amateur" might be realized.

Ram Netters Bag Fourth Straight Conference Win

Winning their fourth straight Big Eight Conference match, the tennis team downed Stockton, 5-2, at Golden Gate Park on Friday, March 23.

A clash for league leadership takes place on Friday, April 6, when the Rams travel to Modesto to meet the undefeated Pirates. Both teams have won four encounters thus far.

Doy Mays, number one man on the team, continued his streak by defeating Tom Means of the Mustangs, 6-2, 6-3. Other singles winners for the Rams were Joe Souza who beat Bill Burrows, 6-0, 6-0, and Pete Schwartz who topped Ron Brown, 10-8, 6-1.

Losers on the team were Paul Fischer, who was beaten by Stockton's George Reyes, 6-4, 6-1, and Shir Azar-Pey, who lost by the score of 6-4, 7-5 to Ted Katzakian.

Both double matches were won by City College as Mays and Souza teamed to win 6-2, 6-1, and Fischer and Azir-Pey were victorious, 6-4, 7-5.

Coach Roy Diederichsen said that Azir-Pey has shown the most improvement this season and that he has moved from the fourth man on the team to number three. Other men who have shown progress have been Mays and Souza.

3 AMS Leagues All Tight Races

Tau Chi Sigma's basketballers belted Gamma Phi Ypsilon, 34-13, to retain their undefeated mark in the Inter-Fraternity basketball league and keep the loop lead over three other unbeaten clubs.

Boasting a 3-0 mark, Tau Chi Sigma tops Phi Beta Delta, Zeta Phi Sigma and Beta Tau, each with a 2-0 record. Every other team in the circuit has dropped at least two games and are all but mathematically out of the race.

The title fight in the Independent League continues as a battle between the Chinese Club and The Guardsman, with the former by virtue of their victory over the Royalaires, holding a half-game edge.

The Chinese now have a 3-0 record, while The Guardsman, idle that round, is 2-0. The two teams meet on Thursday, April 12, and the game could decide the works.

In the Hotel and Restaurant League the first, second, third and fourth semester teams are currently battling in their round-robin tourney. Next games will be held this evening at 7 p.m. in the women's gymnasium.

Grid Game With Air Academy Out

Negotiations for a football game the weekend of September 20-21 with the newly formed Air Force Academy fell through last week, as a letter from Air Force Academy Athletic Director Colonel Robert V. Whitlow ruled out the feasibility of the contest.

Colonel Whitlow's letter, addressed to Jack Gaddy, athletic director here, stated that since members of the academy, football players included, would be at the flying school during September, no football games can be scheduled by the academy for that period.

Spikers Face Frosh, Weak Comets At Stanford Saturday

Continuing their bid for the Big Eight Conference round-robin title, the Ram trackmen return to action after a two-week layoff when they meet the Stanford Frosh and West Contra Costa this Saturday, April 7, at Stanford's Angell Field. Opening event begins at 10:30 a.m.

An informal practice meet with San Francisco, schedued for last Saturday, March 31, was cancelled.

Although the Stanford Yearlings figure to offer the stiffer competition, it's the West Contra Costa dual meet that counts in Big Eight standings.

The Comets do not figure to be one of the stronger teams in the loop. With every letterman from last year's thin squad gone, the Contra Costans can boast neither depth nor experience.

Distance running appears to be the Richmond strong point, at least in depth. No less than five top prep long-distance men grace this year's roster, with Ron Gross, Beryl Smith, Larry Swenson, Fred Schaub and Jerry Smith all possible point-getters.

Top competition for Clint Redus and George Jones, the Rams' devastating one-two punch in the hurdles, appears to be Dan Stallworth, another high school star. A pair of footballers, Bob Ross and LeRoy McNear appear the top field men, both in the broad jump. Exact marks of the Comet thinclads are unknown.

Number one man in the Stanford scheme of things is Don Chesarek. Probably one of the top track prospects in the Bay Area, Chesarek, the tall, long-striding quarter-miler from Riordan High School, has already recorded a :49.0 this year, and the Indian coaching staff predicts big things for him.

Against Chesarek, Coach Roy Burkhead will probabiy throw Myron Zimmerman, Ron Anderson and Mich Martucci, the trio that swept the 440 against Santa Rosa. Another strong possibility is letterman Dennis Moorhead.

Chesarek is also a strong 880 threat, although in the early season he may be held out of the longer event.

Block SF Plans Two Social Events

Two social features and a membership drive occupy the efforts of the Block SF Society for April, according to Walter Smith, society president.

The Block SF dance will be held on Friday, April 27, in the student union building here, Smith announced, and at one of the meetings this month movies of last year's Notré Dame-University of Southern California football game, won by USC, 32-20, will probably be shown.

As in the past, members of the Block SF who lettered in the different sports will sell membership cards to members of their respective teams who qualify. Selling in the different sports are: Jim Poppin, baseball; Norman King, basketball; Sam Zelder, soccer; Dick Blakiston, tennis; Clint Redus, track; Mack Calhoun, golf; and Smith, Ron Taylor and Sandy Malnick in football.

DeNardi, Brunk, Phalen Spark As Golf Squad Defeats Santa Rosa At Harding

Defeating Santa Rosa 11½ to 3½, the golf team won their first match of the season at Harding Golf course on Friday, March 23. The next match will be against Oakland on April 6.

Norm DeNardi, one of the best prospects on the team and playing his first eligible match, shut out Merrill Angell, 3-0. Gil Brunk also shut out his opponent Tom Howard, and Phil Phalen did likewise to Bob Anderson.

Frank Hubert split with Ray Peterson, 1½ to 1½, and Don McDowell lost to Gary Rousson, 1-2. Gil Brunk shot the low score of 78.

Coach Grover Klemmer said that DeNardi helped the team as had been expected and that Gil Brunk was showing the most improvement so far.

COACH GROVER KLEMMER, head golf mentor here, whose Ram divot-diggers opened their Big Eight Conference season by topping Santa Rosa.

Hitters Open Home Season At Balboa Field Saturday Against Strong Stockton Nine

By Lou Lucia

Balboa Field will be the site of the second Big Eight doubleheader and home league opener for the Ram nine as they meet the Stockton Mustangs this Saturday, April 7, at 12:30 p.m.

Tomorrow, April 5, the college nine and Presidio team will open the new Presidio diamond. Coach Bill Fischer states that a military ceremony will precede the game, and a general will make the initial toss.

Fischer was impressed by the hitting ability of his team, which totaled 20 basehits in the doubleheader against Sacramento, but looks to improved play in the field. Each member of the infield committed at least one error in the first game, and two outfield errors in the nightcap allowed three unearned runs.

Last reports on Stockton date back to March 16, when the Mustangs had won seven games without a loss. Bob Leopold is the top pitcher, with Dean Martin also doing adequate throwing. Don MacDonald and Dick Nunes have carried the brunt of the hitting attack, helped along by outfielder Itch Horton and Jerry Marquis.

Injuries hampered the Rams to some degree as third baseman Glenn Bukowatz did not make the trip to Sacramento because of an injury, and Ray Warman was struck by a thrown ball while sitting on the bench at Saeramento. Warman's glasses were broken and particles of glass bothered his eyesight. It is expected he will have recuperated sufficiently to face the Mustangs.

Fischer tentatively plans to use Fred Glosser and Warman on the mound for the doubleheader.

Starting probable lineup for the Rams is:

Lou Flores, LF
Bob Bandettini, CF
John McCarthy, 2B
Ken Dito, C
Jim Poppin, RF
Blair LeMire, SS
Roger Ferrari, 1B
Glenn Bukowatz, 3B

The batting ability of Vic Williams has caught the eye of the coach, and he may start in rightfield in place of Poppin.

High points of the infield play center around the nimbleness of first baseman Roger Ferrari, and the strong arm of catcher Ken Dito.

RA Participates In Cage Playday

In a recent basketball playday, which took place at Santa Rosa, the Recreation Association won one and lost two games.

Jean Taylor, manager, headed the delegation which consisted of Ann Allen, Carmen Arellano, Willy Toliefson, Norene Phillips, Catherine Waidrup, Delores Black and Dorothy Maedeary.

College of Marin will host a co-ed Badminton-Tennis playday on April 14. Signups are in the women's gymnasium.

Anne Hanley, president of the RA, stated that the recent conference for two-year colleges, which was held at Asilomar, was very successful.

Crystal-Balling The Majors

Yankees Picked To Win AL Chase; Bosox Offering Main Competition

AMERICAN LEAGUE

By Mike Berger

Although the junior loop presents a race with five teams capable of winning the flag, we figure that only one club has the depth to come home ahead of the pack.

Unless the crystal is out of focus, the New York Yankees will win the pennant by a comfortable margin over Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Kansas City, Baltimore and Washington in that order.

Most baseball experts will claim that pitching is at least 75% of the game. Cleveland, the Yanks' chief threat in the past, has had enough of an edge in hurling to make up for deficiencies in other positions, but it is our belief that the combination of improved Yankee hurling, plus the aged condition of the Indian staff spells pennant for Gotham.

The addition of Maury McDermott to a staff already rich in southpaw talent, Whitey Ford and Tommy Byrne, should give New York superior depth on the mound. Rip Coleman, young lefty who showed flashes of brilliance last year, may be another addition to the southpaw corps.

On the righthanded side of the pitching staff, sueh 1955 winners as [illegible] Don Larsen, [illegible] John Kueks, Tom Morgan and Tom Sturdivant will round out what may be the Yanks' strongest overall hurling in several years.

As long as the likes of Gil McDougald, Billy Martin, Andy Carey, Jerry Coleman, Phil Rizzuto and Bill Skowron are around, the New York infield will be the best in the circuit. Yankee outfield depth troubles persist with Irv Noren's knee hurts, but players like Mickey Mantle, Hank Bauer, Elston Howard, Joe Collins and rookies Lou Skizas and Norm Siebarn won't hurt the picture in any event.

One real threat to Yankee supremacy is the youthful Boston Red Sox outfit, Frank Sullivan, Tom Brewer, Bob Porterfield, Will Nixon, and George Susce form solid front-line hurling. With the relief efforts of Tom Hurd, John Schmitz and Leo Kiely also available, Bosox pitching depth is second only to that of New York.

The Beantowners are solid from stem to stern, from Ted Williams in the outfield to Sammy White behind the plate. Only trouble spot on the club may be at third base, where Grady Hatton will fight young Frank Malzone for the job.

Cleveland has marvelous relief pitching, but even excellent throwers like Don Mossi and Ray Narleski will suffer unless someone besides Herb Score is found to augment the fading "Big Three," Bob Lemon, Mike Garcia and Early Wynn.

Jim Busby and Al Smith will form a good two-thirds of the outfield, but the left field load will probably fall on a rookie, Rocky Colavito by name. With gaps at first and third bases due to the doubtful physical status of both Vic Wertz and Al Rosen, the infield is weak, despite the sometimes-brilliant Chico Carrasquel at shortstop.

The Chicago White Sox, like the Indians, have infield weaknesses, but we think that a well-balanced pitching staff may keep the Pale Hose in third spot. It'll be a [illegible] between Chicago and Cleveland, but hurlers Dick Donovan, Sandy Consuegra, Jack Harshman, Billy Pierce and newcomer Joe Dahlke should keep the Sox one jump ahead of the Tribe.

Bucky Harris' Detroit Tigers, another young ball club, figure as the dark horse in the chase. Although the Bengals should challenge for a first division berth, they are still too weak at second base and left field to be rated a pennant threat.

Kansas City, Baltimore and Washington are the only AL teams that won't be near the top in '56, but all three will cause the contenders some grief before the season is out.

H&R Students Leave On Annual Trip

Eight Honor Grads Will Tour Several California Hotels

Eight graduating Hotel and Restaurant students who were chosen this year for the annual spring trip to Southern California embarked yesterday, together with Wendell Muntz, department chairman, and Louis F. Batmale, dean of Semi-Professional Courses.

The students chosen were as follows: Bill Chang, Thomas Dupar, John Langhans, Robert Langhans, Robert Lubach, David Riebel, Robert Snider, and Philip Zichterman.

They were selected on the basis of class work, leadership, and ability by a vote of the students and faculty of the department. Competition was high because this is one of the most sought-after honors that an H&R student can achieve.

Interesting and educational tours are scheduled all along the all-expense-paid trip, which is sponsored by a number of San Francisco hotels.

This trip is expected to provide valuable information and knowledge which the students can use upon their entrance into the industry.

Overnight stops enroute will be made at the following hotels: Casa Munras in Monterey, The Carillo in Santa Barbara, The Hollywood Plaza in Hollywood, The Statler in Los Angeles, The Desert Inn in Palm Springs, The Biltmore in Los Angeles, and The Californian Hotel in Fresno.

The group is scheduled to return next Tuesday.

Next Lecture To Be Given Friday

Third in the lecture series sponsored by Alpha Gamma Sigma is a lecture entitled Denmark Today, which will be given this Friday during college hours, 10:40 a.m., in Room S100. Donald Jensen, lecture sponsor, announced recently.

The speaker for this lecture, which will be followed by a 15 minute question and answer period, will be Erling Norlev of the Scandinavian Department of the University of California.

Norlev was born and educated in Denmark. He has served in the Danish Finance Ministry and the Commerce Department. In 1947 he became Danish cultural attache in Scotland, giving lectures, showing films, doing broadcasts, and writing for the Danish newspapers.

In 1952 Norlev went into the field of television as a producer and director. In addition to his many other accomplishments, he is author of a book, How To Limit Government Interference In Modern Democracies, to be published in January.

Costumes for Taming Of The Shrew are all original creations designed specifically for this production by Ritch Baruiieh. Stress has been emphasized on character identity through costume alone.

The stage setting for this play has been renewed from "the walls out," Griffin stated, and sets for this production are promised to be unlike anything previously presented by little theater. The complete stage settings are being designed by Chuck Mullen, stage and set designer for Lute Song.

Forthcoming presentations for little theater include a theater demonstration and lecture given by David Hunter of the San Francisco Municipal Theater on April 18 and 25 at 8 p.m.

Organizations To Meet On Friday

Campus clubs and organizations will meet in their regularly scheduled locations during college hour, from 10:40 a.m. until 11:20 a.m., this Friday, April 6, according to the official college hour schedule.

Also during college hour, Golden Horizons, which is the next film scheduled to be presented by the audio-visual department, will be shown in Room 136 in the science building.

The film will show how the water in California is transformed into power before it reaches the Bay Area. Many of the Bay Area installations are shown and explained.

All interested student and faculty members are invited to attend the showing, Madison Devlin, audio-visual department instructor, announced, adding that the film will start promptly at 10:40 a.m.

Personal Interviews To Be Held On Resort Jobs

Selected applicants for summer resort positions will be personally interviewed on April 10 and April 16 by Harry W. Smith, managing owner of Crater Lake National Park Company and John Dunlap of the Le Tianon Resort, according to Joseph A. Amori, placement director here.

Also being sought by Amori are outstanding men for positions as Tour Escort for one of the largest travel organizations in America. Candidates must be over 21 years of age, be physically fit, have demonstrated past experience in working with the public, and be able to pass satisfactorily the aptitude and personality inventory test.

Petitions Available For AS Elections

Petitions for the elections of the Associated Student officers will be accepted from April 2 through April 8, according to Gary Sthymmel, election commissioner here.

The elections, to determine the Associated Student officers for the Fall 1956 semester, will take place on May 25, 28 and 29, Sthymmel said.

Prospective Fraternity, Sorority Pledges Feted At Rushing Affairs

By Joyce Weaver

AS PLEDGE week draws near the fraternities and sororities are entertaining prospective pledges at rushing affairs.

Theta Tau sorority recently held a bowling joint with Phi Beta Delta fraternity. The sorority is busy making plans for their second rushing affair, a Luau. It will be held at the Stonestown YMCA.

The Hillel Foundation will hold a meeting Friday during college hour in C201. All friends and members are welcome.

A smoker was the second pledge affair of Tau Chi Sigma fraternity. It was held at the home of John Murphy, and refreshments were served.

Alpha Lambda Chi sorority held a business meeting at the home of Marilyn Xerakis to discuss plans for the May Festival. The sorority's project was making Easter baskets for the children at the general hospital. Their second affair, a French theme, will be held tonight at Sigmund Stern Grove.

Norman Durieux, freshman class president, was recently elected president of the Canterbury Club. The club met last week with San Francisco State at St. Francis Church.

Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity held its first affair last week at the Swedish American Hall where George Kaplanis, president, gave a speech on brotherhood and fraternity.

Collegiate Christian Fellowship members are busily preparing for the May Festival and for a Friday-the-13th party in April. Officers for this semester are Martha Lozar, president; Tak Watanabe, vice-president and CAB representative; Ernest Rector, secretary; Bev Seerest, treasurer; and Osear Preston, publicity chairman.

Phi Beta Rho sorority held its first rushing affair at the home of Donna Puccinelli. There were many alumni present. A business meeting was held afterward to plan for future affairs.

Current campus projects of Alpha Phi Omega fraternity include the construction and erection of a mail box for campus organizations to be located in the AS office and a trophy case to be located in the student union building. Their second affair, a smoker, was held at John Dudley's home.

Zeta Chi sorority held their first affair, a coketail party, at Wynelle McCarthy's home. Slides were shown afterwards by Ruth Inskipp, the sorority's sponsor. A meeting was also held to discuss May Festival and future rushing plans.

Opponents Of Limited Guardsman Give Reply

and time between classes is not sufficient to warrant it. Furthermore, it is extremely difficult to find people who have the time and interest to distribute the papers.

There is a fallacy in the logic and fairness of the people who adopted the plan. Our Associated Student budget for this semester amounted to something like $19,000. Of this the AS money from card sales amounted to about $8,000. Approximately $9,000 came from the profits of the AS bookstore.

It is fine to say the AS owns the bookstore, but upon investigation I found that the Associated Students per se have absolutely no control over the operation and financial activity of the bookstore. Perhaps if they did, new business innovations would be employed to make more profits and the current hodge-podge of archaic methods would be liquidated.

However, if the Associated Students receive such a large amount of their money from the bookstore which is patronized by many non-card holders, it seems only fair that these same patriots should receive some benefit from the $3,000 per semester Guardsman budget.

This plan of distribution has been tried at least three times in the past and has failed. I have been an AS card holder for four semesters and I have never had any trouble obtaining a paper.

I am writing about this plan objectively as a student body officer of some experience. I sincerely feel that the present plan of distributing The Guardsman destroys the proper function and purpose of The Guardsman and that it is bad policy, unfair, unwise, and can only result in harm to the Associated Students and the college.

AS Parliamentarian.

• Hails Restriction

Editor, The Guardsman:

Congratulations and best wishes on your brave new policy! I am in complete accord with the Associated Students restriction on the circulation of your newspaper. It should be realized by every CCSF student that a free press does not mean giving away newspapers, without charge! The finest newspapers of San Francisco cost 10 cents per copy, on daily editions alone; and their circulation is far greater than ours could ever be. Therefore their expenditures, per unit copy, must be far less than ours. They also have a larger percentage of advertisements per unit copy, and probably charger a higher fee. Finally, I believe we have a very lucky school, to have such an effecient newspaper.

AS Card Holder, No. 1669.

• Parking "Fee"

Editor, The Guardsman:

The Student Council is justified in their feelings that only AS card holders should get The Guardsman.

There is no denying that The Guardsman and many other benefits such as free dances, discounts at various stores, etc., are brought about through the efforts of Student Council and the funds derived from the sale of AS cards.

I would just like to see the Student Council show me how they supply the parking area.

The parking area IS paid for by the taxpayers and any student of City College should have the right and privilege to park there.

Can the Student Council or William Cirimele show me where they get the authority to extract a fee for parking on City, State, or Federal property, which is the offense cited for not having a student-body card?

Carroll D. Hall,
AS Card 1686.

P. S. How Student Council would cream if their main selling point of AS cards would be taken away.

• Sigg Answers

Editor, The Guardsman:

Several weeks ago I wrote a letter to The Guardsman in which I pointed out what I thought to be disadvantages of limiting distribution of The Guardsman. I am pleased by the response which my letter received. The lively interest which this controversy created shows that the students of City College are interested in the affairs of the school and do not hesitate to take a stand on any issue.

I have discussed the matter of Guardsman distribution with many students and I have discovered that many AS card holders, like myself, feel that the council, although motivated by honest intentions, has committed an error in judgment.

I feel justified, by the favorable as well as the unfavorable response of the students, to continue this discussion and to try to point out some of the arguments in the hope to persuade the council to reconsider its decision.

In reply to some of the letters in last week's Guardsman, I would like to make the following comments:

This is my fifth semester at City College and I have never failed to purchase an AS card. The number of my card for this semester is 1568, in case Mr. "Eager Beaver" Kaplanis cares to check this. In my two years at City College I have become somewhat attached to the college and I feel that I must take a stand when a move has been made that is not in the best interest of the college.

Mr. Kaplanis made a point of questioning me of my motives for entering this controversy in the hope of discrediting my opinion by finding political motives. May I assure Kaplanis that I had no political motives when I entered the disscussion.

In a letter in the March 28 issue of The Guardsman, Jim Carroll, Emery Lebohville and Marilyn Sicotte expressed the opinion that "the AS does not receive any funds other than those from the Associated Students." This is contrary to the information I have been able to gather.

I understand that the student book store contributes most of its profits to the AS budget. These funds amount to several thousand dollars, which make up a considerable percentage of the AS fund. Therefore, the thousands of non-AS members who patronize this store indirectly contribute to the AS fund.

This fact should be sufficient to warrant a consideration of benefits to those who cannot afford to buy an AS card. Perhaps free copies of The Guardsman distributed to these people would not put too big a strain on the budget.

In the same letter the three students mentioned that the "freeloaders" are an expense to the AS members. I fail to see how non-AS members receive much benefit from extra-curricular activities. Fraternities, sororities and athletic teams all require 100 per cent membership in the AS. Dances, drama productions and games are free or reduced to AS members; but these same events are expensive to non-AS membrs. So these co-called "freeloaders" do not exist, since someone paying cannot be called a freeloader.

The same letter pointed out that approximately $1,000 is spent on publicity. Would it not be wise to publicize college activities on the campus first? Free distribution of The Guardsman would accomplish that goal at a minimum of expense.

Already the council has discovered that by requiring the showing and marking of the AS cards before passing out the papers, students are discouraged from obtaining the paper because of the inconvenience of standing in line and of having to carry the cards with them when attempting to secure a paper.

According to a story in the March 28th issue of The Guardsman, 300 out of 1,400 copies for AS distribution were left over. This problem had never been present when free distribution was the policy, even though more papers were printed then. Subtracting the 300 unused copies from the available 1,400 copies, left only a circulation of 1,100 papers.

Since there are about 1,600 AS members, it would seem that by cutting down the number of Guardsman papers and limiting the distribution of those few copies, the council has not only kept non-AS members from receiving a paper, but it also has decreased the circulation among its own members.

The council's intentions are to raise the value of the AS cards and to induce students to buy these cards, but the limiting of the paper would not seem to be the answer.

I personally am proud to be a member of the AS and I feel that the benefits I receive are well worth the small investment of five dollars.

I would recommend to anyone the purchasing of a card. The council, however, with the same purpose in mind, is going about it, I think, in the wrong way.

Since I helped to elect our current government by voting, I have no choice but to abide by its final decision. I can only hope that the council will again consider the points that others and I have brought up and reverse its decision.

New AS Office Provides Food For Thought

By Don Ball

THE new Associated Student offices located in Cabana 2 may bring about startling changes in future elections here.

No longer will presidential candidates be able to win a plurality by mouthing a few simple platitudes. It will take a budding Escoffier to win the voter's confidence. The ham 'n egg men will be the campus Kefauvers, forced to do battle with Souffle champions.

An accent on culinary skill may give birth to a real evil: a one-party control of executive and legislative representatives of the AS. The one-party menace: the H&R department, a group already mobilized to take advantage of the innocent and unskilled office seekers who content themselves with courses which is no way prepare them for the rigors of AS service.

Luckily there is a solution. Since naturally it would be ridiculous and facetious to suggest that a kitchen has no place in a student office, a course of preparedness is needed.

Perhaps all future candidates should be required to submit a certificate of completion of home economics courses to the electorate.

The real beneficiaries of cooking candidates would be the voters. No longer would they be besieged with cards and placards bearing the candidate's name. Now, monogrammed pastries and ornately iced and lettered cakes would vie for voter attention.

With no officially announced candidates as yet, it's difficult to predict who will win the election, though it is sure to be won by the person promising the most pie in the sky to the electorate.

Mel's Drive-In Spurs Students With Cash Awards

A recipe contest, sponsored by Mel's Drive-In, is currently being held for students of the Hotel and Restaurant Department here, according to Wendell Muntz, department chairman.

The idea of the contest, which is being handled by Frank Di Marco and Associates, a local public relations firm, is to develop a new food item, or one that is presently known, but can be prepared or presented in a different manner.

Monday, April 23, Muntz announced, is the deadline for the contest. Recipes must be standardized and worked out to serve 100 people.

Complete instructions must be included so that anyone can follow them. Also, a cost breakdown must be attached.

Recipes will be delivered to Mel's on Wednesday, April 25. All testing and publicity will be handled there.

There will be three winners, and prizes will be as follows: first prize, $75; second prize, $50; and third prize, $25.

The winners will be announced on May 14. This contest was arranged by Russell St. John, assistant sales manager of the Sheraton-Palace Hotel and H&R instructor here.

Scholastic Requirements For Associated Student Offices Listed For Coming Elections

Importance of familiarization with qualifications, powers, and duties of the student offices by prospective candidates was emphasized by Gary Sthymmel, Election Commissioner here, last week.

As set forth in the Constitution of the Associated Students, Article 2, Section A, the president shall have completed at least 45 units of work, shall preside at all meetings of the association and be chairman of the Associated Student Council and ex-officio member of all other committees and councils.

He shall have the power, with the consent of the Student Council and the advice of the Dean of Student Activities, to dismiss from office or take disciplinary action regarding a cabinet officer or council member.

The Vice-President must have completed at least 30 units of study prior to his term in office; assumes the duties of the President during his absence, and acts as chairman of the Social Committee, is a member of the President's Cabinet and a voting member of the Student Council.

The President of the Sophomore Class should have completed at least 45 units of study and not more than 60 prior to his term in office. He becomes a member of the President's Cabinet and the Social Committee, represents his class and presents its business to these bodies and to the Student Council.

The President of the Freshman Class is eligible if he has completed under 30 units of work prior to his term in office. He is a member of the President's Cabinet and the Social Committee, and represents his class and presents its business to these bodies and the Student Council.

The President of the Associated Men Students must have completed at least 30 units of work prior to taking office. He is a member of the President's Cabinet and the Social Committee, represents the AMS and presents its business to these bodies and the Student Council.

The President of the Associated Women Students should have completed at least 30 units of work prior to taking office. Like the President of the AMS, she is to be a member of the President's Cabinet and the Social Committee. She is obligated to represent the AWS and present its business to these bodies and to the Student Council.

Petitions of candidacy for the 20 elective offices will be accepted by Sthymmel between April 2 and May 8.

King-Queen, Soph-Prof Chairmen Needed To Aid Soph Week Festivities

Students are still needed to help lay plans for Soph Week which is scheduled for this coming May 28 through June 2, according to Jim Buckley, Sophomore Class-president.

Emphasis is being placed on those who want to help make this semester's Soph Week one of the best in the history of the college, according to Buckley.

Bobbie LeBoff has been named recently by Buckley as vice-president of the Sophomore Class and will assist him in setting up various activities scheduled for this Soph Week, but others are still needed to act as chairmen of the King and Queen Contest and the Soph-Prof softball game.

Twain Finally Meet In Annual May Festival

"First go West, young man, then go East." This about sums up all the directions the students, women included, need to participate in May Festival activities.

The May Festival, to be held on May 18, will have for its theme a Western style enclosure, according to Wayne McFadden, Associated Men Student president here.

East is the direction that the parade, featuring personalities and floats, to be individually decorated by the various campus organizations, will take as it proceeds from here and takes its route down Geneva Avenue to the Cow Palace; where the festivities are to be celebrated.

Former Miss America, Lee Ann Meriwether, or John Lo Coco may be the honor marshall for the parade, McFadden announced.

In keeping with tradition, a king and queen will be chosen to reign over the festival. The queen may be selected from five finalists at a local television program, either the Dottie Hanson Show or the Don Sherwood Show. Any Associated Student member is eligible to enter the contests. McFadden also reminded that king and queen petitions are due by Friday, April 20.

A bazaar composed of different booths, to be erected within the Cow Palace, will be established and managed by the organizations here.

Lotteries, raffles and solicitations of any kind are ruled out, the administration has announced. It is anticipated that the organizations will sponsor as many as some 30 booths at the May Festival.

May Festival events will start off with a car rally to be held here during college hour and will conclude with a costume dance at the Cow Palace.

The Club Activities Board recently showed films taken of the previous festivals held on the west campus. Reason for the showing was to provide the planners with a general view of the major problems to be faced in preparing such an event.

Paul Ribera has been appointed the new AMS vice-president and Irwin Shelton secretary. They replace Dave Jamison and James Carroll.

AMS members are urged to attend meetings on Mondays at 3 p.m. in Bungalow 2.

MIKE AND BEN, the wrestling Sharpe brothers, will be here Friday.

Spring Sports Rally Brings Stars To Campus On Friday; Wrestling Sharpe Brothers To Grapple Here

By Dee Noodlman

An All-Sports rally to help promote spring sports is being planned by the Rally Committee for college hour this Friday, April 13, in the men's gymnasium, according to Mike Gilbert, Rally Commissioner here.

Ira Blue will act as master of ceremonies at this affair. Also on the program are the Sharpe brothers, Mike and Ben, to demonstrate some of their wrestling holds.

Introduction of the college's athletic teams, and the appearance of Warren Baxter, a former college student and now a member of the University of San Francisco Dons basketball team, are also on the program.

Major purpose of the rally, Gilbert declared, is to introduce the spring sports teams which represent the college this semester to the Associated Students.

It is the consensus of Rally Committee that too few students at the college are aware of the athletic teams which represent them at the sports events in the Big Eight conference around the Bay area.

Not only will the team coaches be introduced, Gilbert said, but also each member of the various teams, which include baseball, track, tennis, golf and basketball.

AS Receives $10,000 Yearly From Bookstore

In the five and a half years since it was established in 1950, the Ramporium, college bookstore, has turned in a total amount of $50,000 to the Associated Students for its activities. Dick Main, Ramporium manager, announced recently.

The Ramporium has been turning this money in at a rate of $10,000 every year, and it is expected to turn in more than $70,000 for this year. Students are requested to patronize the Ramporium Associated Student bookstore in order to have more sales and profit for this year from which all proceeds will be for Associated Student activities, Main said.

AWS Prepares For Semi-Annual Tea And Fashion Show

Plans are now underway for the semi-annual Associated Women Student tea and fashion show which hosts high school senior women on Friday, April 20, in the college library and the student union building, according to Rose Thurman, AWS president.

The theme for the spring fashion show will be Carnival of Cottons, which will outline a college woman's summer wardrobe. Fashions for the affair will be shown through the courtesy of Joseph Magnin of Stonestown.

Presently working on future plans for the show are AWS officers, including Vice-President Janice Ruhland, Recording Secretary Willy Toklefson, Corresponding Secretary Diane Oliver and Treasurer Anita Guerra.

Models are being chosen from the six sororities on campus plus six non-sorority women, Miss Thurman said.

Jane Newman, fashion coordinator from Joseph Magnin's, is helping Miss Thurman and her committees to arrange the show.

The committee chairmen for the fashion show are as follows: registration, Darlene Reitz and Diane Soo Hoo; entertainment, Carol Melodia and Gail Fletcher; hostesses, Nina Coleman; decorations, Ann Hanley, and Metta Weddleton; programs, Diane Oliver; set-up, Anne Allen; check-room, Anita Guerra; clothes, Janice Ruhland; models, Diane Oliver; refreshments, Louise von Emster and Anne Allen, and invitations, Willy Tollefson.

Chosen as models for the Carnival are Louise Behring, Pat Chapman, Nina Coleman, Darlene Johnson, Mary Larsen, Ginger Maiabey, Irene Menshikopf, Jacqueline Miles, Edwina Moquin, Nancy Nelson, Margie Sheller, Elvera Steiner, Jackie Toepher, and Helen Yu.

Guests of honor will be from the city's public and parochial high schools, Miss Thurman declared, and all AWS members are automatically invited to the tea and show.

All interested women students are invited to attend the AWS meetings every Tuesday afternoon at 1 p.m. in Dean Mary Golding's office, Room 150, in the science building.

IRC Masquerade Set For Student Union On Friday

Masquerade Dance will be presented by the International Relations Club this Friday, April 13, in the student union building from 9 p.m. to midnight, according to Maria Giron-Cerna, the IRC president.

Prizes for the best costume will be awarded and should add to the color of the event, Miss Giron-Cerna added. This is the first time that a masquerade dance has been held on campus. Last spring the IRC held another masquerade dance, which was a huge success, but it was held off campus.

Upon purchasing a ticket to the dance, the entry for the costume contest will be secured automatically, Miss Giron-Cerna explained. Admission fee is set at 75 cents for IRC card holders and AS members, and $1.00 per person for non-members. Tickets will be obtainable from the committee members or at the door. All students and their guests are invited to come, Miss Giron-Cerna emphasized.

Maurice Wolohan and his band will provide the music for the evening, and during two 15 minute intermissions members of the club will provide more entertainment.

Students who are on the Masquerade Dance committee include Miss Giron-Cerna, AnnaLisa Domars, Emory Lebonville, Irene Menshikoff, Maurice Paszkiewicz, and Natalia Zalessow.

Irksome Act Breeds Hostility Toward 'Guardsman-To-AS' Plan

ANOTHER noble experiment has failed. For the sixth straight week, distribution of this newspaper to AS members only has flopped, and for a variety of reasons which we will try to interpret.

In order that such a plan have any chance of success, more people than were originally used in distribution must be utilized. This is due to the fact that since the act of handing out the paper takes more time under the "AS-only" plan, more distributors must be available to eliminate long lines of "customers," who, by the way, have been conspicuous by their absence in recent weeks.

The Rally Committee, first group to attempt the planned mode of limited distribution, failed to collect enough people who were willing to take time out to hand out The Guardsman. Consequently, never more than 800 of the 1700 copies of the paper were distributed in the weeks Rally Committee handled the process.

This showing is opposed to the previous unlimited distribution of 2500 copies, ALL of which were gone by each Wednesday afternoon.

For the past two weeks, a service sorority, Gamma Sigma Sigma, has attempted to carry out the hapless plan, with results similar to previous efforts.

We do not hold Rally Committee or Gamma Sigma Sigma wholly responsible for their failing attempts at distribution, for the act of trying to get enough people to cooperate is very difficult, as they have doubtless found.

Another of the reasons for the failure of this plan is the inconvenience it has caused those who wish to obtain a copy of The Guardsman. The tedious process of having to present one's AS card, plus the added trouble of waiting in line for the issue adds up to complete consternation for the purchaser.

Whereas one spot for dispersion was quite adequate under the complete distribution plan, several areas for this purpose are needed for a limited action of the type used in recent weeks. Rarely, however, was The Guardsman available, save for the main hall of the science building.

Those who claim the inconvenience to the purchaser is worthwhile because it "raises the value of the AS card" are sadly mistaken.

From the large amount of student response, both written and verbal, which we have received, the irksome act of attempting to secure a Guardsman has bred only disgust and hostility toward this weak idea.

Such a reaction is not to be discounted, for it comes in the vast majority from Associated Student members who are fed up with the plan.

Other ideas have been proposed, such as selling The Guardsman to non-AS members for anywhere from two to ten cents per copy, or selling semester subscriptions to the paper.

The former idea is far-fetched, because the actual cost of printing one copy of this paper is approximately 17 cents, and the act of digging up this unseemly amount each Wednesday is ridiculous.

If the Associated Students wish to make a profit from The Guardsman, then a subscription plan might be feasible. It would be far better, however, for the AS to profit from the attendance of non-members at events reported in The Guardsman, events which now go unnoticed by the vast number of non-AS card holders.

We are vigorously opposed to the idea of making a profitable enterprise the main object of any newspaper, especially at the college level.

Nearly every college paper in the nation is available to the students at no charge, and we advocate the return of this policy to City College of San Francisco as soon as possible.

Only through complete apportionment of The Guardsman can the AS hope to grow, both in numbers and in stature, for this growth depends upon getting non-members interested in Associated Student activities.

How can the AS possibly hope to expand when they have cut off their one source of news-dispersion at their own level?

We feel that it is far more reasonable for the Associated Students, and the Student Council in particular, to yield to success rather than to stand on failure.

Example Of What Not To Do

Nary A Sound Is Heard From A Once Fine Specimen Of Manhood

By Charles Clausen

Every day one can see students rushing around, wolfing down meals and sometimes not eating anything at all. As the semester progresses, these very same students seem to fade away.

They don't rush so much, their clothes hang loosely, and their books seem to be too much of a burden for them. What happens to these students who seem to suffer from malnutrition, brought about by their dire desire to obtain an education?

A case in point is illustrated in the picture to the left. Here is a fine specimen of what ambition can do to a person. When perusing this mass of bones from the head bone to the toe bone, it appears that it was once a fine specimen of manhood. Unless it was a woman.

The question is, how did he get himself into this predicament?

Undoubtedly, he was one of those who had ambition. Never missed a class, stayed up all night studying and neglecting to eat. While everyone else munched away merrily in the cafeteria, he probably chewed on some tough problems.

His goal in life might not have been in the field of brainwork, on second thought. Looking at his size he might have been on the football team. That is, when he had meat on his bones.

Looking toward a pro-career might have led him to come out to practice early and leave late. This could have caused him to miss a few meals and making those tackles can take weight off of one, especially if he were tackling after everyone had left. Ambition can make a man do funny things.

Whether he did it for sports or for intellectual ability, the fact remains that the poor man just wilted away to skin and bones. His usefulness is not ended though, as he is being observed everyday by students as an example of what not to do.

What is left of his manly physique graces Room 324 in the science building. Used by the biology department, he probably draws more attention than when he was alive.

This brings up the thought of whether our subject believed in his ideals so much that the science section talked him into making the sacrifice. Nobody will ever know. He didn't even murmur when he was wheeled out into the hallway to have his picture taken.

The Questions That Mankind Never Answers

It seems as though everyone during this modern day is worried about time. How much time for this? How much time for that? This civilization is moving too fast, and the result is that no one has time for anything.

Children during their grade school days worry about how much time before school's out for the day, how much time until summer, how much time until they pass to the next grade and how much time 'til high school. All the time they are waiting for time to pass.

Then during their high school days, they worry about how much time before the next game, how much time before the next date, how long before the next test, and how much time before graduation.

After high school, their thoughts turn to the serious side and they then worry about how much time before they learn a profession or a job that will stay by them the rest of their lives, how much time until Uncle Sam comes calling, and how much time before marriage.

So it goes the rest of their lives, always worrying about time. How much time is there until the weekend, how much time to payday, how much time to the paid vacation, and how much time until this or that.

Sometimes we all feel that we would never like to see a clock again, but in a culture such as ours it would be impossible to do so. The only thing for us to do is get a clock that doesn't tick so loudly.

Missing: One Student, Any Kind

Enrollment Down One, Sun Comes

Enrollment figures this semester for day students indicate that there is one less in attendance than last semester.

This brings up a puzzling question. What could have happened to this missing student?

After pondering this question at length, this reporter has some possible theories concerning his disappearance.

1. Utter frustration over the lack of available parking space here could have prompted him to enroll elsewhere.

2. As a result of receiving unexpected passing marks in all his subjects last semester, he may still be wandering around somewhere in a state of amnesia and shock.

3. Since this is Leap Year, he may have been pestered to such an extent by the opposite sex as to cause him to go into hiding.

4. He might have received a letter in a brown envelope, which started out, "Greetings from the President."

5. He may have become confused and lost his way in the enrollment lines and just gave up.

All these theories are being considered, and we are sure that this mystery will be unravelled soon.

In the meantime, if anyone should run across this wayward one, please tell him to drop us a card.

Hustling Student Wins Okay

"Will you give me a job mowing the front lawn, mister?"

This question was asked of Dean Edwin Browne at the door of his office recently by a young, 10 or 11 year old boy.

Taken aback at first by the boy's candid question about the huge expanse of lawn, Dean Browne hesitated a moment, and then informed the boy in kindly fashion that this job was already taken.

"Oh, well thanks anyway," said the crestfallen boy. He then explained that he had two days of vacation from the parochial grade school which he attended, and was trying to make some spending money.

Admiring the lad's enterprise and ambition, Dean Browne remarked, "I'll tell you what, sonny. I'll pay you a dollar tomorrow if you'll wash my car."

The boy agreed to this business proposition, and was asked what time he could be there to do the job.

"Will 7 o'clock in the morning be all right?" he asked eagerly.

Restraining a smile, Dean Browne told him to make it 9, instead.

Shots At Ramdom

IT IS not important if a character has two children on page 84 of a novel and no children on page 284, Saul Bellow, the author of The Adventures of Augie March revealed at the recent San Francisco Book and Author Luncheon.

Bellow thinks there is "too much" fact and accuracy in American fiction. This, he believes, may obscure from the reader the truths and meaning of life which the author is attempting to find or reveal.

The possible validity of Bellow's opinion will not be denied. But we question the practicality of it. What reader would be convinced of a truth through foolish absurdities; who would value that author's opinion of the meaning of life who used impossible and not even probable examples; is that author any more accurate when relating the truths of life than when he is distorting the facts to fit his own purposes?

Maybe complete accuracy is not necessary in works of fiction, but truth can only be found through truths or facts. The intentional misrepresentation of facts certainly does not benefit the believer, although it usually benefits the distorter. And for whose benefit and for what purpose is the book supposedly being written and published?

IRONICAL: That a newspaper, which influences and helps mold the opinions of so many people, should be as accurate as possible is an age old policy of every worthy newspaper. Yet one local newsmonger, who writes an interesting and widely read column, commenting on novels said, "As a newspaper columnist, I agree there's an overemphasis on accuracy."

Break From Reality In Painting Starts Cubism

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

RENAISSANCE influence upon Western painting was so profound and omnipotent that the clarity of representation, that is the legibility of a canvas, became a dogma common to all painters independently of means they used for representing reality.

In the last decades of the past century, however, some painters started to put in doubt the validity of means by which the illusion of reality was obtained.

The French Impressionists, Manet, Renoir, and Cezanne, to mention a few, became conscious of the aesthetic fact that the richness of color in harmony or contrast is more important than a servile reproduction of reality, performed in the name of a perfect representation.

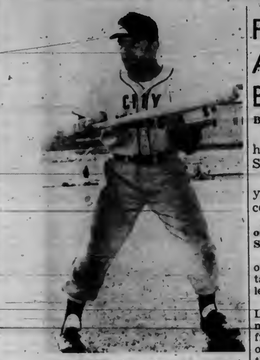
One of these Impressionists, Paul Cezanne, sought more than just the fragmentary and purely analytic handling of the form by his companions. He went back to the tradition of Western art, to the clarity of representation.

The importance of Cezanne lies in the fact that being in such an intimate contact with reality as he was, he nevertheless never sacrificed the color or the form for the sake of clarity of representation.

This art of the evocation of the reality, based on a painstaking observation of nature and the high quality of his artistic means put him in the vanguard of this great current of artistic creation known as modern art.

As many other denominations of artistic schools, the word cubism is owned to pure accidental means. Henri Matisse, saw his colleague Georges Braques carrying a canvas for an exposition—the painting represented some landscape with houses in the shapes of cubes. "So you now indulge in cubism," said Matisse, who was always an enemy of geometrical simplifications. The word was consecrated in the artistic world of Paris by a bookiet of Guillaume Appollinaire, Les Peintres Cubistes.

The publication of the famous poet and critic of art introduced to the public the names of the cubist, Braques, Metzinger, Leger, Gris, Picasso and Miro and others. Some of these names became famous in the history of art, others have only had an accidental significance and have sunk into oblivion.



Albert Gleizes and Jean Metzinger were the most noted theoriticians of French Cubism. The principal endeavor of that group was to create a new perspective.

Upon our continuance of this brief analyses of modern art and of the principles and theories of these artists, endeavoring to revolutionize the concepts of art in its form, we shall next discover how the cubist achieves a perspective of three dimensions. He conceives this only by allowing the complete disruption of forms, some distorted beyond recognition.

Ram Baseballers Split Big Eight Double-Header With Stockton Nine

Fischermen Take Nightcap, 12-8, After Losing Opener To Mustangs; Battle San Mateans Here Tuesday

By Lou Lucia

By scoring a 12-8 victory in the seven inning tilt of a doubleheader the Rams revenged the first game 12-7 loss at the hands of Stockton last Saturday at Balboa Field.

It is improbable that any Big Eight team will go undefeated this year, so the second game win left the baseballers very much in contention.

Next home game for the Rams is on Tuesday, April 17, as they host the San Mateo Bulldogs at 3 p.m.

Lack of clutch-hitting on the part of the home team enabled the Mustangs to tag the team with its first league defeat.

Stockton's speedy left-handed Bob Leopold struck out 12 Rams as his mates scored two runs in the initial frame and were never headed. Sixteen of Bill Fischer's charges were left on the basepaths, while only eight Mustangs were stranded.

Glosser received the only extra base hit for the Rams by tripling in the sixth, the same inning that Bob Gritts and Don MacDonald hit consecutive home runs off him.

Chunky fire-baller Bob Bandettini pitched his second victorious effort in the nightcap by allowing only three walks, four earned runs, and striking out five in the 12-5 effort.

Though the winners committed four errors, defensive gems were the order of the day. Examples cited could be shortstop Blair LeMire's back-handed stab, perfect throws by catcher Ken Dito to second base, and Lou Flores' peg to the third sack.

In the fifth spasm, Stockton was threatening to tie the game when Glen Bukowitz speared a one-hopper, threw to keystone guardian John MacCarthy who in turn flipped to first sacker Roger Ferrari for the perfectly executed rally-killing double-play.

Dito, LeMire, and MacCarthy accounted for nine of the 13 hits, each getting three. Dito and Jim Poppin took care of the long range blows with third and sixth inning home runs.

Line scores:

Block SF And Band Will Co-Sponsor Semi-Annual Dance

Plans are being discussed by President Walt Smith and his fellow officers for the semi-annual Block SF dance, to be held Friday, April 27, in the student union building from 9 to 12 midnight.

The dance is under the co-sponsorship of the Block SF organization, Bill Fischer adviser, and the college band association, under the direction of Meyer Cahn. Music will be provided by the 20 piece band of the college band association.

"The theme has not been chosen as yet, but it will definitely be a classy one, because this dance is being put on by classy people," Smith quipped recently. "The Block SF dance will be open to all those who can put up the 75 cents door charge," Smith added, "and the dress for the affair will be casual, real casual."

Plans for participation of the Block Society in some way in the coming May Festival have also been discussed by Smith and the rest of the Block SF officers.

Smith stated that he and his 95 co-members plan to get together and build a booth for the festival, and also hope to arrange to have a float in the parade. The May Festival is scheduled for Friday, May 18, with booths located in the new Cow Palace location. Deadline for the entry of floats in the parade is tentatively set for Friday, April 20.

Block SF plans for the festival were discussed at a society meeting last Friday, and in the coming group meeting this Friday during college hour, final preparations will be made.

RA Joins In Marin College Sports Day

The Recreation Association has been invited by the College of Marin to participate in that college's sports day on Saturday, April 14.

The sports offered are archery, badminton, bowling and tennis. Anyone interested in participating in the co-ed sports day is asked to sign up in the women's or men's gymnasium.

Conlan Appointed To PCC Grid Post

College President Louis G. Conlan was appointed April 3 to assist the commissioner in the supervision and direction of the Pacific Coast Conference football officiating program by PCC Commissioner Victor O. Schmidt.

Conlan was appointed second president of the college on July 1, 1949, when President A. J. Cloud retired. President Conlan was an instructor here when the college opened in 1935.

In 1936 he coached the basketball team to their first conference championship, while Ralph Hillsman, present Dean of Student Activities, captained the squad. Conlan also coached the varsity football squad, and had an active interest in the sport while at Saint Mary's College.

He served as Co-ordinator of Educational Management here in September, 1940.

Spring of 1943 found Conlan at Columbia University for Naval training. He later headed the Great Lakes Naval Training Station. After the war ended he was appointed principal of Mission High School.

Previous to becoming president he was assistant superintendent in charge of Secondary Schools in San Francisco.

The aspects of officiating are nothing new to Conlan, as he has officiated some very important contests, including the Rose Bowl classics and several Stanford-University of California Big Games.

Mock Wins Honors In Nisei Tourney

Al Mock, City College's All - Big Eight guard, bucketed 28 points in the final game to lead the San Francisco Chinese team to a 61-60 win over the Hawaii All-Stars and give them the national Nisei championship at Salt Lake City on March 31.

It was the fifth straight national title for the San Francisco squad, led throughout the tournament by Mock and Doug Hom, who performed for the Ram varsity in 1954-55.

Both the 6-2 Mock and Hom, at 5-7, were named to the tourney all-star team, as was Hank Nose, who starred for San Jose College during the regular season. Outstanding player in the tournament was Dick Nagai, former University of Southern California player.

A freshman here, Mock plans to enter a College of Pacific next season. Hom is currently enrolled here and plays for the Chinese Club in the Associated Men Students' Independent Basketball League.

Ramblings

By Al Moss

APPARENTLY we're not the only ones who feel that Amateur Athletic Union rules are due for a change. (See Ramblings, March 28 and April 4.) After the ridiculous recent ruling by the august AAU officials that several basketball players had lost their amateur status simply because they announced intentions of turning professional—they had not yet signed contracts—there were other comments to be heard.

"Muttonheads" was the term applied to the AAU brass by none other than Abe Saperstein, veteran coach of the Harlem Globetrotters, who were involved in the dispute. "They (the AAU officials) interpret the rules to suit their own whims," said the mentor of the famous clowning troupe.

The dispute came about when the AAU high-handedly ruled that five players, including All-Americans Sihugo Green of Duquesne and Darrell Floyd of Furman, were ineligible to compete in the East-West All-Star game at Madison Square Garden on March 30. Floyd and Julius McCoy of Michigan State were later reinstated to play the game, after signing affidavits that they were not going to turn pro, at least in the next few days.

The fact that McCoy signed with the Globetrotter troupe the day after the game just illustrated the idiotic aspects of the situation, and the lack of power that the AAU really exercises. With more and more men like Saperstein realizing the arbitrary nature of the AAU, that body could suffer a great loss of power and prestige in the near future.

• • •

Bill Fischer, the Ram baseball coach, has one fine team right now, and has turned out some great players in the past, but there are or were two men he missed the boat on. Gil McDougald, the New York Yankees' versatile first team infielder, and J. W. Porter, one of the finest young prospects in the major leagues with the Detroit Tigers, were both students here for short periods of time, too short, however, to take their cuts with the City College horsehiders.

• • •

A former Ram cager hit the news recently when Warren Baxter, an All-Big Eight choice here in 1954, did some fancy substituting for the new National Champions, the University of San Francisco Dons.

For the second year in a row, Baxter pulled the fat out of the fire in the NCAA semi-finals, this time against Southern Methodist. The 5-8 speedster hit four of five field goal attempts, all in the clutch, and was something to see on defense. Last year, another championship year for the Dons, Baxter did the same thing, that time against Colorado, to put his team in the finals.

• • •

Eugene Brown, who went to class here but never saw the inside of a Ram uniform, was Eugene on the spot in the NCAA tournament. Replacing All-American guard K. C. Jones for the Dons, Brown scored 23, 18, 12 and 16 points in the four games and otherwise showed well.

The tall USF ace, quite possibly their next All-American, did work with the City College varsity in the AAU Pacific Association tournament in 1955, when the team took second place under the name of San Francisco Rams.

It's a shame that Ralph Hillsman, head coach here at that time who has since moved up the hill as Dean of Student Activities, didn't have Brown all year. It would have been nice to bow out with a Big Eight Conference championship team.

Tracksters Try To Retain Big Eight Mastery In Triangular Meet Friday With Sacramento, Stockton Teams

Trying to continue their mastery of the Big Eight, the undefeated Ram tracksters meet Stockton and Sacramento in a triangular meet at Sacramento's Hughes Stadium this Friday, April 13. Opening event will begin at 3 p.m.

Both teams are relatively unheralded in the Big Eight race, and both could cause trouble. Sacramento, the stronger of the two, lost all three of their all-conference performers of last year. Paul Webb, a 13-9 pole vaulter; Bob Rush, one of the top distance men in the loop; and Chuck Diffenbacker, a top quartermiler, have all moved on, and the Panthers appear to lack adequate replacements. Roger Biffle, with a 12-9 mark, is the ranking pole vaulter.

Overall strength could be another story. Conference coaches rank the Capitol City thinclads behind Modesto and the Rams as the powers of the league, but a variety of strengths should make the Cats the most dangerous league foe yet faced by Coach Roy Burkhead's San Franciscans.

Stockton shouldn't offer as much of a threat. The Mustangs, far from strong last year, are suffering from the same malady this time around. With a turnout of only 19 men, at last report, Stockton Coach Frank Boyle offers little hope for team performance in a sport where depth means so much.

As individuals, the Stockton crew might offer something more. The Mustangs seem to be blessed each year with a top-notch distance man, and although Charlie Curtis, the top pioneer last year, is gone there figures to be someone to take his place.

Against these unknown quantities, Burkhead will throw an undeniably strong Ram squad. Led by Clint Redus, the sprinter-hurdler, the San Franciscans have chalked up four straight league victories, and if they get over Sacramento and the Mustangs, will have only powerful Modesto between them and a clean sweep.

Crystal-Balling The Majors

Prophet Sees Brooklyn In Repeat; Redlegs, Cardinals May Surprise

NATIONAL LEAGUE

By Mike Berger

It seems that the senior circuit has one Goliath and seven little Davids who will scramble for final position in 1956, but unless old Goliath recovers from his sore arm, he may topple once again.

We are not going to pick against the World Champions at this time, however, so our choice for the NL flag is the Brooklyn Dodgers, followed in order of preference by Milwaukee, St. Louis, Cincinnati, New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

This, we repeat, is not to say that it will be a one-man show by the Dodgers this season, because if their ailing pitchers don't come around, plenty of trouble awaits Wait Alston and his crew.

To be sure, the loss to the army of Johnny Podres, a hurler just coming into his prime, is a big one to sustain, but such proved performers as Don Newcombe, Carl Erskine and Clem Labine should be able to shoulder most of the load.

There are others on the staff, such as Billy Loes, a potentially great pitcher who has yet to find himself; Roger Craig and Don Bessent, a pair of youngsters who carried the Bums through the stretch last year; and big Karl Spooner who, if he can stay healthy, is the coming strikeout king of the loop.

However, sore arms and shoulders have hit Newcombe, Erskine, Loes and Spooner. The first two named seem to have recovered, and indeed Erskine looks ready for a great year, far above his puny 11 games won in 1955. Loes and Spooner on the other hand continue to have their troubles.

Brightest spot of all in the Brooklyn outlook is the fact that with the abundance of power in Dodger bats, only satisfactory pitching will be required of Dodger arms. Herein may be the key to the pennant in '56 for the Bums of Flatbush and/or Jersey City.

Milwaukee will once again furnish the chief threat to Brookiyn, but the Braves have enough hurling problems of their own to rate them a notch below the top.

News from the spring training camp has it that southpaw Warren Spahn is finally rid of his knee ailment, and is due for his best year ever in the majors. Tall righthander Gene Conley, however, is still a question mark after his shoulder injury of last year. Greatest puzzler of them all is lefty Chet Nichols, who, after a great rookie year and two more in the service, has been unable to regain his form. Should Conley or Nichols come through, though, the Braves will bear watching.

Cincinnati, always a potent batting club, now has some solid hurling, too, and figures as the surprise team of the loop.

We see Joe Nuxhall, Art Fowler, Hersheil Freeman, Rudy Minarcin and Brooks Lawrence sparking the Redlegs to their first top-four finish in 12 years. Unless Ted Kluzewski recovers from his pulled leg muscle, however, scratch the Ohio nine from contention.

New York is rebuilding under new field boss Bill Rigney, and it seems that only John Antonelli, Willie Mays and Al Dark are assured of starting spots. The Giants have enough to stay in the first division, but this young club needs more time before it once against becomes a serious contender.

Plenty of argument for the first division will come from the St. Louis Cardinals, who are on their way back to prominence. Redbird hurling is well set, with "Vinegar Bend" Mizell, Willard Schmidt, Harvey Haddix, Luis Arroyo and Tom Poholsky available. The bullpen looks well stocked, with Frank Smith, Paul LaPalme and rookie Ben Flowers the top men.

Chicago, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh are the only National League clubs without a chance for the pennant this year, but Bobby Bragan may hustle the Pirates out of the cellar.

Netmen Rout ECC 6-0 To Continue Winning Streak

Continuing their winning streak, the Ram tennis team shut out East Contra Costa, 6-0, in a practice match on the losers' home court on Friday, March 30, in preparation for the matches with Modesto, held last Friday.

The Rams next play Oakland at Golden Gate Park on Friday, April 13.

Every match in the East Contra Costa game was won by Ram netters. Led by Don Mays, number one man on the team, who defeated Milton Gordon 6-1, 6-0, the rest of the team members also won by lopsided scores.

Other singles winners were Joe Souza, who beat Phil Dunn, 6-1, 6-0; Shir Azir-Pey topped Dale Clark, 6-1, 6-2; Paul Fischer blanked Jerry Patterson, 6-0, 6-0, and Pete Schwarz had it over Bob Spackman, 6-1, 6-0. Azir-Pey and Gordon, a newcomer to the team, won their doubles match, 6-2, 6-0.

Having won four straight conference matches, Coach Roy Diederichsen said that only Modesto stands in the way of a Ram championship.

Modesto, consistently the toughest team in the league, has many Junior Davis Cup players on their team, including stars from Mexico and Canada.

Recent Miss SF Winner From College Now Goldwyn Girl In Guys-Dolls Foreign Tour

By Denny Delman

Jan Darlyn, former Miss San Francisco from the college, was in San Francisco last week to publicize Guys and Dolls, in its last performances at the Stage Door theater, before attending the foreign openings of the picture.

She is one of three winners the college has turned out in the last five years in the annual Miss San Francisco Pageant.

Leading off the trio of college winners was Barbara Huffman, who captured the coveted title in 1951. Miss Huffman is currently playing the night club circuits in the Los Angeles area. Her first effort in the southland proved to be a smash, as she opened at Ciro's to excellent reviews.

Miss Darlyn, now one of the famed Goldwyn Girls, walked off with the title in 1952. Miss Darlyn, who had received her Associate in Arts Degree from the college in 1951, was attending the House of Charm at the time of her victory.

After winning the crown, Miss Darlyn did modeling work in San Francisco before she finally went to Los Angeles. There she did several television commercials and appeared on the Eddie Cantor and Liberace shows.

In 1955 she became one of the Goldwyn Girls. She has had minor parts in Anything Goes, which opened at the Paramount Theater last week, and in Cecil B. DeMille's Biblical spectacular, The Ten Commandments.

Miss Darlyn is currently in Australia with four other Goldwyn Girls to be on hand for the overseas openings of Guys and Dolls. She was in town last week for publicity shots with two Miss SF contestants from the college, Diane Dawson and Marlee Dumas.

Following her present tour in Australia and South America, Miss Darlyn will return in July before starting out on the European openings of the Goldwyn production.

The third and most widely known of contest winners from the college is Lee Meriwether, winner of the city, state and national pageants. Miss Meriwether was awarded a contract with Dave Garroway, in addition to two starring roles on the Philco Playhouse.

She is enrolled in the Actor's Studio in New York and recently made a screen test at the Warner Brothers Studio in Hollywood.

Listed among the ten requirements on the entry blank is a statement which says that a contestant may be either amateur or professional.

This statement has left some women in doubt as to their chances in competion with someone on a professional level. George Kaplanis, Junior Chamber of Commerce Liaison Officer, has indicated that the aforementioned women reached their current professional status only after they had won the contest.

Kaplanis went on to say that the winning trio is an example of what this college can turn out. He stated that "Now, as in the past, City College is well equipped to walk away with the heralded crown."

Young unmarried applicants, 18 to 28, who are high school graduates with at least six months residence in San Francisco, or with one completed semester here, should see Kaplanis in Bungalow 2 on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m., or Tuesdays and Thursdays at 9 or 11 a.m.

Rushees To Make Last Choice Soon

By Joyce Weaver

EXCITEMENT is building as rushing affairs for the sororities and fraternities draw to a close and rushees must make their final decision.

Zeta Chi sorority held its second affair last Sunday at the Fort Scott Officers Club. Entertainment was put on by the sorority sisters.

Prospective pledges were entertained by Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity at a party last Saturday night.

Collegiate Christian Fellowship Club invites students to try their luck at the Friday-the-13th party at 8 p.m. at the Ocean Avenue Presbyterian Church. A fun-packed evening is guaranteed for all. A discussion will be held in C221 during college hour. Everyone is invited.

Five women from Phi Beta Rho sorority received their pins last week at a meeting held at the home of Judy Kailin. Those receiving pins were Donna Puccinelli, Cathy Grant, Miss Kailin, and Sonya Cohn. A business meeting followed.

The newly elected officers of the Canterbury Club are Norman Durieux, president; Joan Finneran, vice-president; Carol Wingo, secretary; and Mike Monteith, treasurer. The club is making plans to attend the Regional Conference of the National Canterbury Clubs of the U.S.A.

Gamma Sigma Sigma is the newly formed sorority (not yet chartered by Club Activities Board) on campus. It is the college's only women's service sorority. Women with a C average are welcome to sign up for rushing. It is possible to belong to this sorority and a social sorority as Gamma Sigma Sigma is on a national level. The officers are Metta Weddleton, president; Elaine Tobriner, vice-president; Joan Finnerman, secretary-treasurer; Louise Geers, parliamentarian and sergeant-at-arms; and Anita Guerra, historian.

Alpha Lambda Chi sorority held a French dinner at Sigmund Stern Recreation Room for its second affair. Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity served the girls and put on entertainment. There will be a business meeting tomorrow night at the home of Rose Thurman and Darlene Reitz.

The Hillel Foundation will present its first dance of the semester, April Showers, Saturday, April 21. It will be held at the Stonestown YMCA. The dance is stag or drag, and bids may be purchased at the door. This is a charitable dance and all proceeds go to the United Jewish Appeal.

The YMCA in Stonestown was the site of Kappa Phi sorority's second affair last Thursday evening. A short meeting followed the affair.

There will be a meeting this Friday, April 13, during college hour in S193 to discuss plans for a Chess Club. The club, when organized, will be for beginners as well as advanced players. Tournaments will be held with other colleges to test the skill of the members.

Tau Chi Sigma fraternity is currently making plans for its pledges.

Campus Police Readying For Inspection By Ahern

Chief Francis Ahern of the San Francisco Police Department is expected to inspect the college's police form within the next two weeks, Campus Police Chief Lee Hargus revealed here last week.

Hargus, who had his squad's budget trimmed by approximately $150, will present his entire squad to Chief Ahern in full dress. Hargus reported several of his men do not have uniforms because of the budget cut.

LEE MERIWETHER, City College coed who won the coveted Miss San Francisco crown in 1954, went on to become Miss California a month later and climaxed her achievements by capturing the heralded Miss America title at the annual pageant in Atlantic City the following September, 1954.

Amori Named To Conduct Post In Public Relations

Joseph A. Amori, placement director here, was selected by the Executive Board of the California Personnel and Guidance Association last week to act as director of public relations for that organization.

Amori will conduct all public relations activities for the organization, including the state conference to be held at San Francisco State College from May 3 to 5.

The California Personnel and Guidance Association is composed of 18 professional organizations in California. Included among these is the California Psychological Association, the California Guidance Association and the California Supervisors' Association. There are approximately 5,000 active members in the organization.

Selig Appointed To Stanford Post

John Selig, political science instructor here, was recently appointed as a member of the advisory council for the newly established Northern California Clearing House at Stanford University, according to Robert Horn, director of the organization and a member of Stanford's political science department.

The NCCH, located at Stanford, is the twenty-second such center that has been set up in the United States. Its principal purpose is to try to increase and stimulate the interest of students in political and governmental affairs.

As its first project, the Northern California unit will help sponsor the annual Northern California Political Science Association conference, which will be held at Stanford on Saturday, May 5. The 1956 political campaign is scheduled to be discussed and considered at this conference.

Also on the agenda, the new unit of NCCH plans to aid and support Stanford's Political Union, a student forum group.

Highway Film Next For Movie Series

The High Road is the title of the next film for the college hour film series to be presented Friday, April 13, at 10:30 a.m. in Room S136, according to Marion Devlin, instructor in the audio-visual department.

The film is a new one just released within the month by the Ford Motor Company and concerns the international Highway and its history.

Seen in the film will be sections of the highway from Alberta, Canada, through the United States down to Laredo, Texas.

Plan of the highway is to eventually link the Alcan Highway with the Pan American Highway. When completed, the highway will link the border of South America with the tip of Alaska. It now only reaches Guatemala.

The road covers much of the famous Santa Fe Trail and the old Chisholm Trail, which the pioneers built in the southwest during their early settlement of the West.

Little Theater's Elizabethan Play Starts April 20

William Shakespeare's Taming Of The Shrew will be presented at the little theater for six performances, commencing Friday, April 20.

The play will be presented on April 20, 21, 24, 26, 27, and 28 at 8 p.m. A special performance will be given on Tuesday, April 24, in observance of Public Schools Week.

The additional role of Gremio has been added recently to the cast and will be played by Oscar Anderson. The cast will also include Herb Valle as Lucentio, Mel Rasmussen as Grumio, Stan Weston as Petruchio, Bob Phalen as Baptista, Crockett MacClanahan as Hortensio, Virgil Cox as Tranio, Peggy Powell as Biondello, Paul Morales as Curtis, Edwina Moquin and Stephanie Koppe as Catherine, Jeanne Graham and Carol Waugh as Bianca, Peggy Barton as the widow, John Roberts as the Pedant, and Melanie Mead as the tailor.

The little theater stage has been recently redesigned from the bare walls, and new draperies, settings, lights, and staging equipment has been brought in. The new work has been stimulated by the new play, along with an intense desire of everyone concerned with little theater to renew the old furnishings.

Several other changes have taken place in the theater and its equipment, in that a new "room" has been acquired for theater sewing. This room is located directly across the hall from the theater, making a total of three rooms presently used for theatrical activities.

Michael Griffin, drama director, stated, "We're acquiring greater area for our ever-expanding ideas and work. I call my rooms Plant No. 1, which is used for dressing and rehearsals; Plant No. 2, which is used chiefly for make-up, and Plant No. 3 as the recently acquired sewing room."

Majority of the costumes are hand made by the actors participating in Taming Of The Shrew, and were designed exclusively for this production by Ritch Barulich.

The little theater budget operation was originally designed for spending approximately $2800, but the department had to settle for less than half that amount. A strict budget is now adhered to and theater money is spent sparingly on the many items necessary for theater production.

Chiefly, the expenditures include royalty charges, furniture rentals, cartage, make-up, lumber, materials, lights, seating, paints, brushes, and costumes. Royalties alone usually run from $50 per performance upward.

Early AMS Poll Returns Favor Open Distribution

Ballots counted at the end of the first day of the Associated Men Student election concerning the current controversy of distributing The Guardsman to all students here, showed that AMS members favored free issuing of the paper, Wayne McFadden, AMS president, announced last week.

Voting was 195 pro and 113 against equal distribution after the first day of the three-day election. Results of the decisive voting, which continued the next two following days, were not available at press time.

The final result of the voting, one way or the other, will be used as a recommendation to the Student Council regarding further action concerning the limited distribution policy.

Model UN Debate Hot

By Al Moss

Despite a wild spree of parliamentary procedure that began midway in the opening session of the General Assembly and lasted throughout committee meetings and the final assembly meetings, 11 resolutions were passed by the body of the Sixth Session of the Model United Nations that ended last Saturday, April 7, at Corvallis, Oregon.

Chile, represented by seven delegates from City College, could get no resolutions out of committee and before the assembly, but argued a case before the International Court of Justice and received a surprisingly good 7-5 decision ruling the court incompetent to handle the hotly-disputed Chilean claim.

The case presented to the court asked for conservational sovereignty of coastal waters of Chile, to extend not less than 200 miles off the Chilean coast. The contention was that foreign interests were exploiting the maritime resources of the nation. Observers expected the case to be thrown out quickly, and the 7-5 ICJ decision was a moral victory for delegates Vic Hebert and Bill Whitney, who argued the case for the Chile-City College group.

The General Assembly became a near-riot of parliamentary procedure soon after the opening speeches were delivered on Wednesday evening. Dr. Charles Sprague, ex-governor of Oregon, was continually besieged by points of order and appeals to the decision of the chair. Several of the more hotly-contested resolutions caused out-of-hand debate, and one resulted in the United Kingdom delegation walking out of the General Assembly.

Another fiery debate occurred over a resolution by Czechoslovakia that would censure Union of South Africa for their racial policies. The South Africans, represented by UCLA, the winners of the award as the best large delegation, bitterly opposed the motion but a simple majority passed it. It was then pointed out that, due to a rule change effected in the morning, a two-thirds vote was necessary to censure. The motion was declared lost over loud and unruly protests by the supporting nations.

AS Top Brass Go To Catalina Conference

Six delegates will represent this college at Catalina Island for the state conference of two-year colleges in California, to be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday, April 26, 27, and 28.

The six delegates chosen are Bill Cirimele, Joyce Weaver, Marilyn Sieck, George Kaplanis, Emory Lebonville, and Wayne McFadden. The purpose of the conference is to help the various two-year colleges with their problems of legislature and student government.

Cirimele, Associated Student president, is advocating a luncheon to be held on Tuesday, April 24, for all the two-year college student presidents. Idea of the luncheon is to promote good relationship between colleges. The student council has not yet passed this issue, but it is expected that the issue will come to a favorable conclusion.

Needed: The Ability To Laugh At Self

By Don Ball

OFTEN the butt of jokes about its size, its people and its weather, Texas has become one of the standard topics of ridicule by humorists throughout the country.

Envy is the reason most Texans attribute to their position as a standard laugh-getter, but columnist Paul Crume of the Dallas News proposes another theory:

"Texas is the only thing left in the U. S. strong enough to stand being laughed at . . .

"You can't laugh at other states or cities, for instance, or they will get mad. As a state California is very sensitive and has a right to be. Anybody who has ever seen Philadelphia knows that it is no laughing matter. Florida is a few fauna and flora enlirely hidden by New York salesmen; when the alligators spot the first visitors arriving they run off in the swamp and hide. If you tell Oklahoma a little, they bring up that football team . . .

"You can't laugh at people any more. The dialect story is out. Stories about races and creeds are bootleg items. Only the Irish have not laid down the law, and the Irish joke has been damaged because people have found out that Pat and Mike were really not Irishmen. All Irishmen are named Sean . . . All this leaves Texas as the thing that the U. S. people can laugh about without looking over their shoulder or lowering their voices, and it is a good thing. The people which can't laugh at itself is going crazy."

Crume's point although hyperbolic is basically true. Any individual or group which cannot endure to be made the object of humor is lacking in that most important element, emotional maturity.

Not only is maturity lacking, but also it would seem, from the example of a censored press in dictatorships, there is a lack of self-confidence.

Crume says that if they can't laugh at themselves, they are going crazy. A lack of self-confidence all too often leads to a persecution complex, a common neurosis nowadays.

For this reason, one of the most entertaining forms of humor has all but disappeared from the American scene: satire, which seems to amuse everyone except the satirized.

All too often the satirized seem to sway a disproportionate amount of weight, e.g. the sponsors who discharge comedians who have the gaul to make light of the product they are helping to sell.

These hypersensitive sponsors not only deprive themselves, in this case, of sales, but they also deprive the publicc, causing unprofitable public relations.

Hillsman Takes Former AS Spot As New Office

Ralph O. Hillsman, assistant dean of Student Activities here, moved from his office last week into S169, the room formerly occupied by the Associated Student officers.

Hillsman's former office in S127 will be taken over by the registrar's office, to be used as a filing room.

Associated Student officers are now located in Bungalow 2, which is situated near the student union building.

AWS Drops 'Guardsman-To-AS' Poll

ROSE THURMAN, president of the Associated Women Students.

A poll by the Associated Women Students, to determine the feelings of AWS members on distribution of The Guardsman, was dropped last Friday, April 13, because of pressing social activities, according to Ralph Hillsman, dean of student activities here.

The ballots, informing women students holding AS cards that they should decide how their money was being spent, offered a choice of free distribution of the newspaper to all students or limited distribution to AS members only. The poll started on Wednesday, April 11, and ran for the three days before being called off.

Activities such as the upcoming AWS tea and fashion show curtailed the balloting, according to Hillsman, and the ballots were apparently disposed of without being counted. The poll followed a similar vote by the Associated Men Students.

AWS Puts Final Touch On Spring Tea This Friday

Last minute details are now being taken care of in preparation for the Associated Women Student tea and fashion show, this Friday, April 20, according to Rose Thurman, AWS president here.

Carnival Of Cotton, as this semester's show is titled, will be held in the college library, while the tea will be in the student union building.

Jane Newman, fashion coordinator at Stonestown Joseph Magnin, which store is providing the fashions, is helping Miss Thurman and her committees to plan the affair. The cottons to be featured in the show will outline a college woman's summer wardrobe.

At this semi-annual tea and fashion show given by the AWS members, the high senior women from San Francisco public and parochial secondary schools will be honored guests. All AWS members are automatically invited to attend the show. At an affair such as this, the women are shown around the campus and given a chance to become better acquainted with college life.

Presently working on future plans are the AWS officers, including Vice-President Janice Ruhland, Recording Secretary Willy Tollefson, Corresponding Secretary Diane Oliver, and Treasurer Anita Guerra.

Guests of honor, from the public and parochial high schools will include George Washington, Mission, Immaculate Conception, St. Peter's, Academy, Polytechnic, Galileo, St. John's, Lincoln, Lowell, Balboa, Presentation, Notre Dame, Our Lady of Victory, Sacred Heart Convent, St. Paul's, St. Rose, St. Vincent's, Star of the Sea, Mercy, Miss Burke's, Miss Hamlin's, and Napa, East Contra Costa, West Contra Costa, San Jose, San Mateo, Vallejo, Santa Rosa, and Marin. About 700 guests are expected to attend.

According to Dean Golding this is the first time that any other two-year college women have been invited to attend the tea and fashion show.

Models have been selected from the six sororities on campus, plus six non-sorority women. Chosen as models for the carnival are Louise Behrins, Pat Chapman, Nina Coleman, Darlene Johnson, Mary Larsen, Ginger Malabey, Jacqueline Miles, Irene Menshikopf, Edwina Moquin, Nancy Nelson, Margie Scheller, Elvera Steiner, Jackie Toepher, and Helen Yu.

The committee chairmen for the fashion show are as follows: registration, Darlene Reitz and Diane Soo Hoo; entertainment, Carol Melodia and Gale Fletcher; hostesses, Nina Coleman; decorations, Ann Hanley and Metta Weddleton; programs, Diane Oliver; set-up, Anne Allen; check-room, Anita Guerra; clothes, Janice Ruhland; models, Diane Oliver; refreshments, Louise von Emster and Anne Allen, and invitations, Willy Tollefson.

According to Dean Golding, the AWS sponsor, this tea and fashion show is expected to be the largest in the history of the college.

College To Observe Public Schools Week With Open House Next Tuesday

LOUIS G. CONLAN, president of the college.

Special Performance Of Taming Of Shrew Scheduled For 8 O'Clock

City College of San Francisco will hold Open House as its part in Public Schools Week next Tuesday from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m., according to Oscar Anderson, coordinator, Division of Educational Management.

"The purpose of Open House is to show off the facilities we have and the kind of college we are," Anderson said. Anderson added that he believes the public is interested in the college and wants to know it better.

A special feature of the Open House will be the little theater production at 8 p.m. of The Taming Of The Shrew, by William Shakespeare. The comedy, set in 16th century Italy, is directed by drama instructor Michael Griffin.

There will be no special displays set up in the rooms, Anderson said, as people want to see the college as it is everyday. Evening class laboratories are of considerable interest and will be open to visitors, he added.

There will be student guides to show the visitors around, and instructors will be in classrooms to answer any questions a guest may wish to ask about the college or a subject.

"Since the college will be open to the public it will be a grand opportunity for students to invite their parents as well as their friends," Anderson said. "Every student should be proud of the facilities at the college and want to have them noticed by the public.

"There is a need for better understanding and what better way than to open the college for the public to see," he declared.

All parents are especially urged to attend the Open House as it will give them the opportunity to see the kind of life the students are leading while attending college.

Vehicle Code Gives AS Authority To Regulate Parking

Authority for issuing citations for illegal parking in campus parking lots was confirmed last week by Bill Cirimele, Associated Student president. Cirimele noted section 603-A of the California Vehicle Code in answer to a letter which appeared in the Rams' Horn, letters-to-the-editor column of this paper, on April 4, which in effect questioned the legality of restricted campus parking.

Section 603-A of the code, the section which automobiles parked in campus parking lots without parking permits are cited under, reads as follows:

"No person shall drive any vehicle or animal, nor shall any person stop, park or leave standing any vehicle or animal, whether attended or unattended, upon the driveways or paths or any of the grounds of any public school, State university, State college, State, county or municipal institution or building, or any educational institution exempted in whole or in part from taxation, except with the permission of, and upon and subject to such conditions and regulations as may be imposed by, the governing board or officer of such public school, State university, State college, State, county or municipal institution or building, or educational institution."

The college authorities have vested power in the AS to regulate parking in the campus lots. As a control point the AS has set up a police system, which has the same power as any city police force to regulate campus parking and to cite offenders under the state vehicle code, which is cited above.

In order to restrict parking, and to make control easier, the campus police have the power to issue parking permits, which they feel should be issued to AS members only since their department is an intricate part of the AS and their funds are directly derived from the AS.

It has been noted that parking is at times restricted to a certain number of AS card holders, and not open to all members, as many members of the AS have been led to believe, a member of the college administration pointed out.

In a recent letter to the editor of this paper, a student brought out the fact that the parking area is paid for by taxpayers and as a result any student should have the right to park in the campus parking lots.

However, the above quoted section of the vehicle code makes it clear that permission to park on college property must come from college authority, who in this instance has given the power to permit parking to the AS who in turn require the purchase of an AS card.

Funds which are derived from the citing of offenders of the above section of the vehicle code do not go either to the AS or the local police unit, but to the city.

65 San Francisco Executives Here For Ed-Bus Day

Approximately 65 executives from leading industries in San Francisco will be at the college tomorrow from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. for Education-Business Day, according to Louis G. Conlan, president of the college.

An orientation program will be held to acquaint the visitors with the college, and there will be a discussion on the problems confronting education, not only in San Francisco but also in other parts of California, Conlan added.

A tour of the campus is being planned to show the guests the facilities of the college Conlan further stated that student speakers would talk on the activity program available for the students here.

Lunch for the guests will be served by the Hotel and Restaurant Department in the faculty dining room in the student union building.

Ugly Man Contest Petitions Due Today

Campus organizations are recruiting candidates to take part in the "Ugly Man" contest to be held here Thursday, May 17, according to Earl Cabrinha, in charge of the affair. Petitions to enter the contest are due today.

The gains of the contest are to be dedicated solely to fund raising for the City of Hope charity drive.

Contestants will stand in either the cafeteria or at the Silver Pole to swallow pennies through a fabricated glass jaw. Students will vote for n "Ugly Man" by depositing pennies in these containers, each coin representing one vote. Voting will start on Monday, April 30.

Spring Fever Dance Friday To Climax Hell Week Capers

As a climax to the frantic activities of Hell Week, Gamma Phi Epsilon presents its Spring Fever Dance, to be held at the San Francisco Rowing Club, at Post and Hyde Streets, this Friday night, April 20, from 9 p.m. to midnight, according to Brent Street, fraternity president.

Dancing will be to the music of Charley Sabella and his band.

Bids to the dance are $2 per couple, and may be obtained at the student bank, student union building, from Gamma Phi members or from any pledge to the fraternity, and at the door.

Appropriate dress for the affair is cocktail dresses for the women and suits for the men.

Students who are on the Spring Fever dance committee include Bob DeMarte, Gamma Phi Ypsilon's vice-president, who is chairman of the committee; Don Mabrestiti, in charge of publicity; Dick Arnold, in charge of decorations; and Jerry Roth, Fred Muller, Mike McGuinnis and Al Coppin, who is also pledge master.

The fraternity is sponsored by Fred McFarland, Health Education instructor here. Officers other than Street, DeMorte, and Coppin are Mike McGuinnis, treasurer; Dan Corcetti, historian; Don Tills, secretary; Bob Thomas, sergeant-at-arms; Fred Muller, brother-at-large; and Kevin O'Connell, custodian.

AMS Voters Refute Council Decision

With a final vote of 270 to 131, the Associated Men Students, in a poll concerning Guardsman distribution, last week voiced their dissent over the Student Council action, in favor of limited circulation, according to Wayne McFadden, AMS president.

Since the results of the poll are now final, the AMS will recommend to the Student Council that it revoke its previous stand on this issue, and return the distribution to an unrestricted basis.

In answer to several criticisms that the 401 votes cast did not represent a cross-section of AMS opinion, McFadden stated that in the past college-wide elections, an average of only 500 votes have been cast. McFadden illustrated last semester's AS elections, in which only 700 out of 2,400 AS members took time out to vote.

Guardsman Criticism Inspects Situations, Not Personalities

WHENEVER there is controversy, with a corresponding amount of criticism, observers tend to regard the main source of criticism with somewhat of a "sour grapes" attitude, instead of taking a careful appraisal of the situation in question.

As stated previously, it will never be our intent in any way to injure or defame leading individual personalities in any debated question, but only to voice our opinion when proper, attempting to make the issue as clear as possible to the readers of The Guardsman.

Such criticisms which have appeared in this space in the past, such as the Columbia School donation and The Guardsman distribution situation, have been voiced only to present a point of view on these subjects, and to stimulate public opinion wherever possible.

We have taken great pains in the past not to single out any individual for personal attack, but only to direct our editorial gaze at the situation as a whole which seemed to warrant attention.

As in the case of Guardsman distribution, the views and objectives of those who supported limited distribution were, as reported here, logical and well-meaning. So as to preserve a healthy state of student affairs, however, a certain amount of argument over issues of the day is in order.

Should people in an organization always agree, that organization will not move forward, because any democratic group must have free discussion as the very basis for its prosperity.

We are pleased to note the amount of student interest which has been expressed over issues of the past weeks, for such interest indicates a basically sound student affairs foundation at the college.

The moment such interest, and heated debate as well, is suddenly gone, however, the time for deep worry over the welfare and spirit of the college has arrived.

The essence of all editorial comment in any newspaper should, from the moral standpoint, be comment directed toward constructive criticism, and not toward the airing of personal differences or jealousies.

To be sure, many newspapers neither subscribe nor stand by this ideal. However, it has and shall always be the purpose of The Guardsman to adhere to this worthy principle, keeping the welfare of the college the foremost consideration of its editorial policy.

Revealing On-The-Spot Interview

Hell Week Proves Hectic For Average Sorority Pledge

As Hell Week at City College reaches the midway point, sororities and fraternities have almost become accustomed to the daily pledging routine. The following is an exclusive interview with a sorority pledge:

6:32 a.m. No problem this week what with having to wear a white sweater and yellow skirt everyday.

6:45 a.m. Can't understand why people keep staring at me. What's so unusual about a girl in a white sweater and bright yellow skirt, a white cap and rolled-up bobby socks, carrying a cigar box and a doll?

7:26 a.m. I'll just make it if I hurry. This hill gets steeper every time.

7:30 a.m. "Pledge, start singing." I just know my voice will give out by the end of the week.

9 a.m. For once I am thankful to go to class. I'm sure that I heard a crack in my cigar box . . . not the raw egg. But it is the raw egg all over my supplies.

9:06 a.m. "100 demerits, pledge, spilling egg all over my dentyne chewing gum. How clumsy can you get."

12 noon. Time for lunch. But how can I eat what with getting lunches for one person or the other and singing at the top of my lungs.

3:01 p.m. Finished for the day, with classes anyway. I have to attend my first joint meeting tonight.

11:02 p.m. To bed at last. Boy, am I tired. But . . . it really has been loads of fun. You know . . . I'm really looking forward to tomorrow.

Deserving People Missed At Oscar Award Ceremony

It's just not fair! Every year at Academy Award time, scores of "Oscars" are presented, yet there are some deserving people who are neglected.

The following are some those who may rate an award:

Musicals: Hoagy Berlin, for his many desert island epics. Whenever the hero of the movie starts to serenade his leading lady, Berlin is responsible for the music which emanates from behind a convenient grove of palm trees. The most amazing part of this is the outstanding coordination which exists between Berlin and the hero. It never fails to astound the average viewer when the hero knows the words and the tune of the songs which are being played by the concealed orchestra, especially since the songs haven't been published yet!

Horse Operas: "Tex" B. DeMille, for providing the convenient hillside which the cowboy hero, who is really a Texas marshal in disguise, rolls down, while scuffling with the villain in the last reel.

Murder Mysteries: Alfred Hitchcock, for his timely removal of corpses, which baffles the heroine, who has discovered the body in a closet, and has left it just long enough to phone the police. This switch by Hitchcock usually causes the investigating homicide lieutenant to become dubious of the heroine's sanity. The picture invariably works out satisfactorily at the end, though, because the lieutenant and the heroine discover the missing body and the murderer, and then romantically discover each other.

Arrow Find During Construction

Modern Progress Uncovers Relic Of Indian Civilization On Campus

They threw an arrow in the air . . . and it landed right in the college's new parking lot.

An arrowhead was found recently during the levelling of the parking lot grounds by construction foreman Joe Sylvestro.

The arrowhead makes up only the front four inches of the spear. Spears are the oldest weapons known to man. The spear was usually thrown at an enemy, though sometimes held by the assailant if at close quarters and used for thrusting.

Sylvestro reported that an instructor here told him the 12 inch, rust tinged spearhead belonged to one of the early Spanish Conquistadores or was made by a farmer.

Don Juan Bautista de Anza and his expedition settled in San Francisco in 1776, so it is possible for the spearhead to be the metal counterpart of Bridey Murphy, a piece of metal that recalls the ancient days of California before television. The Conquistadores of this era can be imagined in their armor suits, bright colors, and long beards and the women in soft white colored gowns accenting their dark skins and flashing eyes.

Because bungalow two is so close to the lot, and Student Council meetings take place on Thursdays, the day the arrowhead was found, some theorized that one of the members became incensed after a heated discussion and threw the spear at an opponent. However, the erosion of the steel disproved this theory.

Then it was believed that the spearhead was strategically placed for added advertisement of the picture, Alexander the Great.

In some civilized countries, where the wild boar and other game are found, the hunting spear is still used. This thought led to the theory that the early days of the H&R Department were not as bountiful as today.

It is questionable if Sylvestro's spearhead is of historical value. If not, the spearhead might be used as a paperweight, advantageously placed to add to its story-telling background.

The Bohemian

An Episode: Youth And Age In Endless Debate

By Maurice Pastkiewicz

A SMALL, quaint looking house on the soft beach, swept by gentle breezes of the Mediterranean—this is where the former art critic lives.

The young man knocked softly on the door and after a moment's pause was let in. He was met by an elderly man, insignificantly dressed. At first glance he presented an almost comical spectacle, with his long white hair.

But a further, closer look at the old man's features revealed to the careful observer that this man had an expression denoting wisdom, a thorough understanding of life. One was convinced of this when he spoke in that erudite manner characteristic of intellectuals.

They sat in the modest room, and after a polite exchange of words, the interview began. "What, sir, do you believe is the major problem that the theoreticians, Albert Gleizes, Jean Metzinger, and J. Ozenfaut, of this new manifestation of art, so-called cubism, have to cope with in creating their perspective?" The old man sat silent for a while, then he answered.

"Their problem is: how to substitute the perspective based on lines, lights and shadows, that is, the perspective of three dimensions, by one which could avoid the representation of a third dimension but permit representation of real objects.

"The cubists left on the canvas only the geometrical figures of the object to be represented. This way, when the objects ceased to be objects as observed in nature, the perspective of the third dimension ceased to be necessary for the composition of a painting. Therefore, the cubist paintings have a decorative character which relates them so intimately to the bezantine and gothic art and places them so far from the Renaissance, the naturalistic and realistic arts."

"But why does the cubist employ such abstract planes in his art, sir?" the youth interrupted.

"If, from a complex, real object only its geometrical skeleton is extracted for the purpose of the composition, it is clear that this way the observed reality was substituted by an invented abstraction. The cubist made large use of abstraction, always justifying this process as necessary for the establishment of a new perspective."

But, sir, can such an arrangement, which does not correspond in anything to our vision of reality be called perspective at all?"

The critic looked up and smiled. "Who knows? The spectator himself must feel inside that it does." And so the question was avoided.

The interview was over, and the young man found himself strolling along the beach once more. How wonderful is art; the painter can grasp life and reproduce it so vividly on a blank canvas, for all to witness, to enjoy.

This concludes the series on modern art. The opportunity is taken to express sincerest gratitude and acknowledgment to the critic and friend, who made its completion possible with his invaluable declarations. His name is withheld by request.

Shots At Random

STAFF EDITOR of The Guardsman, Denny Delman, just lost many, many gold points when he drove Diane Dawson and Marlee Dumas, who are registered contestants in the Junior Chamber of Commerce Miss San Francisco pageant, into the city while leaving the feature editor and the editor-in-chief forlorn to find their own means of transportation.

Now it would have been more practical for them to have ridden into the city with Don Ball, the managing editor. But they were forced to blow their 30 cents on trolley fare, for Don (and we quote) . . . "I haven't eaten all my Easter eggs yet!"

Which all goes to prove (and we are sure Francis Bacon would agree) that if Delman would put the paper's interest ahead of his lady friends, and Ball would finish eating his Easter eggs, it would greatly facilitate and enhance this publication.

DANCING CAN BE DANGEROUS: as Margie Brown, treasurer of Zeta Chi sorority, recently proved. While dancing with Paris Royo, president of Tau Chi Sigma fraternity, they dipped. She tore a ligament! Is walking about on crutches.

And the moral of the story: Don't dip, Drip. (So we're corny today, okay, but it rhymes with chimes.) "Oh, you kid!" Yes we do, but we don't anymore because the Editor is making funny noises.

Habits Of Collegians Vary In Spring

Lighter Snacks Pose Bigger Problems

By Charles Clausen

Spring is here, at least one or two days a month, and it brings many changes with it. Lighter clothes, convertible cars with their tops down, and changes even appear in eating habits. So, let's look into the realm of the light snack.

The two lovely ladies in the adjoining picture were most likely sipping a nice hot cup of coffee just a few days ago, and now they are munching happily on ice cream cones.

But a simple happy scene like this, which is being enacted all over the United States, can have a far reaching effect on the average female. In a couple of months they'll be wondering where to put that extra pound or two that these very ice cream cones can give them.

There won't be as many phone calls, and all prospects of a date might be lost before winter sets in and the hibernation period takes these unsightly bulges away. Ladies beware! Especially the ones who go in for the triple decker.

Men of the campus, it's your problem, too. Have you been to the snack bar in the student union building lately? If you have, you probably noticed the long line of females plunking down nickels and dimes for those weight adders.

On the other hand, ice cream is cheaper than some beverages that are sold in certain spots frequented by some of the aforementioned students. Undoubtedly some of the men will take advantage of this feminine weakness of the warm season by economizing on their dates.

From now on when he orders a double for his girl, it won't be what she is accustomed to. So look out, girls, not only will you be putting on weight, but you will look awfully silly eating an ice cream cone in an evening gown.

This problem of conservation versus spending lots of money can be perplexing to the men, too. If he tries to save money by only buying her ice cream, she gains weight, and if he turns to big spending, he loses money. This can be a tough decision.

Then, too, there is the faculty. They seem to have a desire for this frozen commodity also. Some psychology student should make a study to determine whether this is regression or retrogression. Are some of us in our second childhood?

Whatever this investigation brings forth, one thing is certain, that the craze is on for ice cream, and it is catching. The craze, that is.

Thinclads Battle Bucs In League Crucial

CLINT REDUS, star Ram sprinter-hurdler, will lead the highly-rated San Franciscans against strong Modesto this Friday, April 20.

Baseballers Edge Oakland In Extra Innings, 4-3, After Two Rainouts To Keep Second Place In Big Eight

By Lou Lucia

After being rained out in two scheduled games the Rams defeated Oakland by a 4-3 score in a 13-inning contest last Saturday afternoon at Balboa Park.

Nature aided the Rams last Wednesday, when rain washed out a 3-0 first inning deficit Oakland had accumulated over the team.

At 2:30 this afternoon the team meets Alameda in a practice game at Balboa Park.

Bucs Top Netters; Golfers Victorious

By Charles Clausen

Tasting defeat for the first time this season, the Ram tennis team lost to powerful Modesto, 7-0, at Modesto on Friday, April 6.

The Rams meet Santa Rosa next at Golden Gate Park on Friday, April 27.

Although pushing the Modesto netters into full sets, the heat and the imported junior Davis Cup players of the Pirates proved too much for the Ram team.

Don Mays lost to Charles Rayner of Modesto, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3 in the feature match. Ram Joe Souza was beaten by Gil Rodrigues, 6-2, 1-6, 6-2, while Shir Azir-Pey lost to Manual Garcia of the Bucs, 7-5, 6-3. Paul Fischer of the San Franciscans was downed by Ed Panul, 6-3, 6-0.

In the doubles, Bolton and Carnino topped Mays and Souza, 6-3, 3-6, 6-2, and Pirates Davis and Lee edged Azir-Pey and Fischer, 7-9, 7-5, 6-3.

Winning their second match of the season, the golf team defeated Oakland, 10-5, at Harding golf course April 6.

The Rams meet Stockton this Friday, April 20.

The San Francisco win over Oakland wasn't cinched until number five man Phil Palen defeated Rod Schneider of Oakland, 3-0.

Rams Duel Pirates For Big Eight Lead At Modesto Friday

With the Big Eight Conference round-robin title at stake, Coach Roy Burkhead's high-ranking Ram tracksters move into Modesto to meet the rugged Pirates this Friday, April 20, at 3 p.m.

For the first time this year, the City College thinclads are the underdog. Although Modesto has lost to the Cal Frosh, the only dual meet loss suffered by the Buccaneers this season, the hosting squad is favored. The Rams opened their season by edging the Berkeley freshmen.

Modesto at first glance appears to offer too much for the San Franciscans. At last count, the Pirates had eight of the top marks in Northern California out of 14 events, and offered another excellent mark in the mile, where Ray Hale's 4:26 rates second.

Top performers for Coach Chuck Coker's Bucs are sprinter Chuck McNeil, who has a :21.7 220 to his credit and finished second to a :09.4 by world champion sprinter Mike Agostini; Chuck Winger, with a 1:58.2 half-mile already racked up; Hale in the mile and two mile, with a fine 9:47 mark in the latter; and a host of top field men that includes Bob Milligan (49-5½, the top mark in the state in the shot); Ernie Smith (6-5 high-jump); Roger Davis, (22-8 in broad-jump); and Marvin Stuart (with a discus toss of 139-4½). In addition, the Modesto mile relay team has clocked the top north state time of 3:25.5.

In rebuttal, the Rams offer a scattering of top performers and as much depth as Burkhead has been blessed with in past years. Clint Redus, of course, tops them all. Redus holds two Northern California bests, in the 100 at :09.9 and in the low hurdles with a :24.5. His times of last year indicate that he hasn't needed his best, or near it, this season.

Redus' top competition will probably come from McNeil in the 100 and, if the Ram ace runs it, the 220.

Other individual competition will be closer. The Ram half-milers have yet to break two minutes, for instance, but any one or all of Les Andersen, Ron Anderson or Tal Webb could give Modestan Winger a battle. In the mile and two mile, Lloyd Castello's times have not approached Hale's, but the little Ram distance man has no qualms whatever about facing the state's best.

In the field, the Rams can also offer some tough competition. Smith's 6-5 high jump is impressive, but Burkhead can come back with no less than four top leapers. Ben Walker, LeRoy Thomas, Kevin O'Sullivan and Norm King have all topped six feet, and all can go higher.

Main Ram hope for taking this meet hinges on depth, and as shown by last year's 64-60 win by Modesto, those place and show points can make the difference.

Clint Redus, Ben Walker Named As Co-Captains Of Ram Track Team For 1956 In Voting By Teammates

Clint Redus, state champion hurdler, and Ben Walker, freshman jack of all trades, have been chosen as co-captains for the 1956 Ram track team.

The pair was chosen by a vote among their teammates, following the Stanford Frosh-West Contra Costa meet on April 7. The Rams won the meet, and the vote was taken on the return bus trip.

Redus, firmly established as one of the finest performers in the state, has yet to be beaten this year, capturing three events in every one of the team's meets this year. He took high point honors in last year's state meet by running fourth in the 100-yard, taking a close second to a fabulous :23.2 low hurdles, and winning the 120-yard high hurdles in the state record-tying time of :14.6.

The election of Redus to the captainey makes it two years in a row for the sophomore star. He shared the job last season with Ray MacIntyre and Henry Stroughter.

Walker, a newcomer to the squad, did not compete in the opening meet, with the Cal Frosh and Oakland. He started with a bang in the Santa Rosa-San Mateo affair by tying with teammate LeRoy Thomas for a first in the high jump, with a 6-1 leap, and garnering points in the pole vault and 880. He is the number one Ram pole vaulter, a top high jumper, recorded a 1:58 half mile in high school, and also competes in the low hurdles and, if necessary, the relay.

Ram Spikers Down WCC, Indian Frosh In Triangular Meet

By Jerry Cassidy

Frank Carroll's winning discus throw and Ron Anderson's impressive last lap of the relay, as he stood off Papoose star Don Chesarek, gave the Rams their third straight triangular meet victory, a win over the Stanford Frosh and West Contra Costa, April 7, at Palo Alto. The Rams had 68 points to 64¾ for the Frosh, and 18 for Contra Costa.

In the Big Eight dual meet with the Comets the Rams won by an impressive 93-25.

Clint Redus, the Rams' big threat, made it four meets in a row in which he has won all three events entered. He won the 100 in :10.2, took the high hurdles in a close race with teammate George Jones in :15.2, and captured the low hurdles in :24.5.

League Track Meet At Sacramento Rained Out

The scheduled Big Eight Conference triangular meet involving the Rams, Stockton and Sacramento at Sacramento was rained out last Friday, April 13.

Sacramento will host the Rams at a later date, probably on the weekend of April 27-28. Stockton will probably forfeit the meet to the San Franciscans. Mustang Coach Frank Boyle reported in a phone conversation, although a letter must be filed with the league commissioner, Harold Taggart, before the forfeiture will become official.

Crystal-Balling The Coast League

Seattle Selected For PCL Honors, But Seals May Become 'Gold Sox'

PACIFIC COAST LEAGUE

By Mike Berger

With major league tie-ups in some form nearly all the way down the line, the Pacific Coast League can look forward in 1956 to possibly its best season since the post-war boom days.

The bright outlook extends nearly the length of the league, with such major-minor working agreements as San Diego-Cleveland, Los Angeles-Chicago Cubs, Hollywood-Pittsburgh, San Francisco-Boston, Seattle-Cincinnati, Portland-Brooklyn and a loose agreement between Vancouver and Baltimore.

With the sweat pouring down his already-wrinkled brow, the prophet shakily predicts the following final finish: Seattle, San Francisco, Hollywood, San Diego, Portland, Los Angeles, Sacramento and Vancouver.

Emil Sick's fondlings return this year with a potentially stronger club than that which won the pennant last year. Returnees in the hurling department are Elmer Singleton, Howie Judson, Vic Lombardi and Larry Jansen.

Add to this talent such others as Don Fracchia, ex-Seal and a promising youngster; ex-Cincinnati standouts Fred Baczewski and Corky Valentine; Arnold Atkins, a 22-game winner in the Texas League last season; and Art Shallock, veteran southpaw who has never failed to impress in the Coast League, and one possesses so much pitching it fairly oozes with potential 15 and 20 game winners.

A slightly aged condition on the Rainier ball club is the only weak spot in the makeup, for the Coast League as a whole has more youth and speed this year than in recent seasons.

San Francisco doesn't figure to get off to a fast start, mainly because the players to fill the present gaps at shortstop, third base, and on the pitching staff will not arrive (f.o.b. Boston) until the May 15 major league cut-down date.

Nevertheless, such hurlers as Jerry Casale, Al Schroll, Russ Kemmerer, the two Smiths, R. W. and R. G., and veteran Bill Henry should take up the early slack.

If the players capable of filling present gaps are delivered into the hands of Manager Eddie Joost, the Seals will be a pennant contender.

The Hollywood situation is the same as usual: a slow start until the Pirates' cut-down date, and then all hell breaks loose, as the Pittsburgh Triple-A wonders go to work.

San Diego and Portland are also first division contenders, each club having good balance with adequate hurling. The Padres' outfield will be strengthened by the return of Harry Elliott, league-leading hitter in 1954; and the Beavers will also present a formidable picket line, with big Bob Borkowski and Smiley Lloyd Merriman and Luis Marquez to anchor the trio.

We place Los Angeles in sixth place only because the parent Cubs have a weak farm system, and don't figure to give the Angels the kind of support the other top clubs will be getting.

Best struggle of the year could be the battle for the cellar, both Vancouver and Sacramento having the "potential" to take the dubious honor. The Solons of Tommy Heath have more horses at this date, but with enough Oriole castoffs, Lefty O'Doul might manipulate his Mounties into a higher spot in the final standings.

Northern Tracksters Slowed By Weather

RAMBLINGS

By Al Moss

Sunshine, USC Farm System Aid South

EVERY year there is increasing evidence of the supremacy of Southern California in track, and this year is no exception. Again, on the high school, two-year college, and university levels, the southlanders excel in times and distances.

The answer, or at least part of it, lies in the weather. "Everyone talks about the weather, but no-one ever does anything about it," Mark Twain once said. He wasn't thinking of the southland's track coaches.

While Roy Burkhead, Ram track mentor, and his Northern California cohorts struggle with wind and rain, especially rain, the coaches from the Los Angeles area which, Los Angeles people generally acknowledge, reaches from Fresno to the border, bask in sunshine.

Workouts in the southern area usually begin in February, sometimes earlier, while the northerners are kept indoors by inclement weather, often well into March, sometimes later.

Another factor is the presence in Los Angeles of the University of Southern California. Most good prep trackmen lean toward the Trojans, and their 17 or so straight NCAA championships.

Unfortunately, or perhaps fortunately, not all of them can make the grade, either track-wise or scholastically. So, after ... to Los Angeles, they are "farmed out" for a year or two to a two-year college. This doesn't hurt USC, with their abundance of material, and it certainly improves the marks in the two-year colleges. Furthermore, UCLA is rapidly improving and is beginning to try the same experiment.

A good example of a "farmed-out" trackman is Charlie Dumas. As a prep, Dumas high-jumped 6-10¼, which is less than two inches short of the world's record and good in anybody's book. Everyone expected him to enroll at USC, but for some reason, possibly grades, he didn't, at least not right away. This year he's competing for Compton, and his best is 6-8½ only because he hasn't had to jump any higher. It's no secret that he's almost certainly Trojan property.

The combination of these two factors, and perhaps others of less importance, have continually given the Southern California area the best marks. Examples this year are numerous: a :09.5 100-yard dash, as compared to ... Chet Redus' Northern California best of :09.9; a :20.8 in the 220; an amazing 1:52.1 half-mile by Compton's Willie Arterberry; a 24-9½ broad-jump, as compared to the north state best of 22-8; a mile relay mark of 3:16.7 by Mt. San Antonio, as compared to the national two-year college record of 3:16.4; and of course Dumas' high-jump standard.

Taking everything into consideration, it may seem surprising that Northern California does as well as it does in the state meet. It's a difficult job, and to the credit of such as Roy Burkhead that they can do as well as, for example, third place in the state meet, the San Franciscans' finish of last year.

Distribution Problem Of Guardsman Argued As Cirimele Springs Surprise Debate In Student Council Meeting

By Elmer Gentry

In a surprise move last week during a Student Council meeting, Associated Student President Bill Cirimele turned his gavel over to Joyce Weaver, AS vice-president, in order to take an active part in a discussion on the controversial issue of limited Guardsman distribution.

Cirimele was first to speak on the issue in the discussion, which took place during the absence of Mike Berger, Guardsman editor - in - chief. Cirimele gave a number of reasons as to why he felt the decision of Student Council was a just one.

Some of the main reasons he gave are quoted:

1. "Since only 1,700 papers are being printed at the present time, distribution must be limited so that AS members will be able to receive a paper. Maybe we should hand out papers to AS members on Wednesdays, and the remainder of the papers at random on Thursday."

2. "It has been remarked that there is much complaint by students over waiting in line to receive The Guardsman, because of the new distribution procedure. There should be no complaint over standing in line, because during the war people always had to stand in line for sugar, nylons, meat, and other items."

3. "Maybe the complaint about line-standing is an indication that The Guardsman could stand some improvement in order to provide more incentive for the students to wait for their paper."

Al Moss, Guardsman sports editor, contradicted Cirimele's last reason by pointing out the paper's 23 national All-American ratings.

George Kaplanis commented on the bad choice of material in the April 11 issue concerning the reference to an AS officer as "a racetrack fiend."

(Editor's Note: In the April 11 issue of The Guardsman, the item referred to by Kaplanis actually read as follows: "Finance Chairman here last semester, Joyce Weaver, who is currently Vice-President of the Associated Students, denies this as a piece of political propaganda, but reliable agents report she was a frequent visitor at Tanforan last semester." The item was cleared through Miss Weaver prior to publication.)

Vic Hebert asked Cirimele how many AS members were "missing out on their copy of The Guardsman" under the former free distribution system.

Cirimele vaguely replied, "Quite a few. Of course I don't have any figures on this, but I have received complaints."

In a forthright statement about the Guardsman distribution polls which were held, Jim Carroll remarked, "I feel that council is biased. We were elected as representatives of the AS, and should take into consideration their opinion. I make a motion a committee be formed to investigate more fully this distribution issue." He was ruled out of order by the chair.

Card Sales Chairman Dave Jamison, refuting a previous statement made by Kaplanis, said that he didn't feel the limited Guardsman distribution had increased card sales.

Two New Names Give College 7 Miss SF Entries

By Denny Delman

Two more Miss San Francisco title seekers from the college were officially registered with the Junior Chamber of Commerce while another two were added to the college list of entrants, George Kaplanis, the chamber liaison officer, revealed here last week.

Barbara Baker and Fannie McHuff officially entered the contest last week upping the total of City College entries to seven, with Diane Dawson, Marlee Dumas, Gale Fletcher, Margie Scheller and Shirley Stortz making up the rest of the list.

Rose Marie Grider and Barbara Lindsley were added to the college list, which now totals 15 prospective candidates. In addition to the seven officially entered, and the two new names, the list now includes Pat Chapman, Sally Fulcks, Eleanor Gandut, Pat Hamil, Lynn Johnson, Shirley Siequist, Betty Terra and Jackie Toepfer.

A letter forwarded by Kaplanis from Joseph Mignola, contestants chairman for the pageant and alumnus of the college, disclosed that "this pageant is not a beauty contest, but it is conducted each year to select the girl who is most truly representative of San Francisco's womanhood."

Mignola's letter further stated that "The winner of the 1956 Miss San Francisco Pageant will receive many valuable awards and prizes. She will have her expenses paid to the state contest at Santa Cruz. The girl who is chosen Miss California will then have an opportunity to compete for the coveted title of Miss America at Atlantic City."

Examples of former City College Miss San Francisco winners are Pat Sheehan, Comedy Hour beauty; Barbara Huffman; Jan Darlyn, a Goldwyn Girl; Sue Fetz, top-flight San Francisco model, and Lee Meriwether, feminine star of the Dave Garroway Show.

Unmarried women 18 to 28, who are high school graduates with six months' residence in San Francisco or have completed one semester here should see Kaplanis in his office in Bungalow 2 on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 9 a.m. or 1 p.m., or on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 9 or 11 a.m.

Sthymmel Heads AS Election Body

This semester's Associated Student Election Committee was announced last week by Gary Sthymmel, election commissioner here.

Included on the committee are Ellie Smith, Bobbie LeBoff, Maria Gironcerna, Elver Steiner, Carol Aizenberg and Mike Monteith.

Petitions are available now at Assistant Dean of Student Activities Ralph Hillsman's office, S169, the Associated Student office in Bungalow 2, the student book store, or by seeing Sthymmel. Tuesday, May 8, is the deadline for filing petitions.

It is necessary for students seeking Associated Student offices to meet the requirements in Article 2, Section A, of the Constitution of the Associated Students, and also that they have a 1 grade point average with a minimum of 12 units for the second midterm period of this semester.

Campaign expenditures for prospective officers must not exceed $21.50. This includes pictures, posters, leaflets, and $1.50 for janitorial service and the mailing of sample ballots. An itemized list of all expenditures must be given to the election committee no later than Thursday, May 24.

Friday Deadline For AMS Entries

May Festival king and queen contest petitions are due this Friday, according to Wayne McFadden, Associated Men Student president here.

Any Associated Student member is eligible to enter the contest and does not necessarily need sponsorship from a campus organization, he said.

In keeping with tradition, a king and queen will reign over the festival taking place this year at the Cow Palace Friday, May 18. The queen finalists will appear on a local television show and judging will be done by prominent local figures, McFadden said.

Cast Completed For Drama Department's Friday Opening Of Taming Of The Shrew

By Robert Peppers

Another role, that of Vicentio, was added last week to little theater's presentation of Taming Of The Shrew, to be presented starting next Friday, April 20, at 8 p.m., according to Michael Griffin, drama director.

The cast now includes, with the two added changes, Harry Boress as Vicentio, Oscar Anderson as Gremio, Herb Valle as Lucentio, Mel Rasmussen as Grumio, Stan Weston as Petruchio, Bob Phalen as Baptista, Crockett MacClanahan as Hortensio, Virgil Cox as Tramio, Peggy Powell as Biondello, Paul Morales as Curtis, Edwina Moquin and Stephanie Koppe as Catherine, Jeanne Graham and Carol Waugh as Bianca, Peggy Barton as the widow, John Roberts as the Pedant, and Melanie Mead as the tailor.

Tickets can be obtained without charge upon presentation of an Associated Student card. A charge of $1 is made to non-AS members.

Griffin announced the impending visit of David Hunter, present director of the San Francisco Municipal Adult Theater here. Hunter will present a drama demonstration tonight and next Wednesday evening at 8 p.m. He will show some new theories of dramatics, teaching through examples. Griffin said the new theories differ somewhat from the Stanislovski method of acting in that all participants of a particular scene are being constantly made aware of all situations, events, persons, and locale affecting their stage environment. Students of the new idea are discouraged from "living" their roles on or off stage, the Stanislovski approach, and are expected to adapt themselves readily to any new or unexpected situation on stage.

Following Hunter's demonstrations, little theater has scheduled Eugene O'Neill's Pulitzer Prize-winning play of 1920, Beyond The Horizon, which will be presented in May. Tryouts and casting will begin next Monday, April 23, in the little theater.

Artist Lecture To Replace Serenade During College Hour

Although the Court Yard Serenade has been canceled, campus clubs will meet in their regularly scheduled locations during college hour, from 10:40 a.m. until 11:20 a.m. this Friday, April 20.

Benny Bufano, an Internationally famous artist, will speak in the fourth of a series of lectures which are sponsored by Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society, in Room 100 in the science building.

Bufano is well known in San Francisco as artist of the mosaics which decorate the walls of Powell Street's Moar's Cafeteria. His lecture is entitled Twenty-Five Hundred Years With The Artists.

Time And Eternity, which is the film to be presented by the audio-visual department, will be shown in Room 136 in the science building. It will run the length of the college hour and 10 to 15 minutes into the 11 o'clock class time. The film explores the mysteries of time and reveals how prehistoric man first keep a record of time.

520 Graduate In Annual Ceremony

Commencement exercises for City College graduates this spring semester will see approximately 520 students receiving their Associate of Arts degrees, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar here, stated recently.

Commencement exercises will be held at Riordan High School on Friday, June 15. This is also the last day of instruction for the spring semester.

This tentative figure is slightly higher than last year's graduating class, Miss Learnard declared.

Tentative listing of all 1956 graduates is posted on the bulletin board outside the office of the registrar.

Postcards are being mailed to all students whose petitions have been approved for graduation. If for any reason a student does not receive his postcard in the mail, he can consult the graduation list for his name.

Miss Learnard added that many students don't realize they must file an application to graduate. If this isn't done, the student won't be permitted to graduate, she said.

Students Forming Guard Platoon

Lieutenant Herman R. Mattern, a student here, is currently organizing a National Guard platoon compiled of students from the college.

Mattern is a National Guard officer in Company K, 3rd Battalion, 159th Regiment of the 49th Division, stationed at Fort Funston here in San Francisco.

Listed as some of the reasons advantageous to the men who enlist in the unit are draft deferment for those between 17 and 18½ years of age and specialized training in some technical field with good pay. A private draws enough money to pay for college needs such as books, Associated Student card and other necessary items.

Further information can be obtained from Mattern at 427 Marston Avenue in Hurley Village, or by telephoning him at DE 2-5281.

Kelly Father's Behavior Hurts US Goodwill

By Don Ball

INTERESTING to note the hoveringly protective demeanor of John Kelly, father of Grace, at her recent wedding. When Prince Ranier, Grace's espoused, was on the outs with some of the members of the working press, it was the diplomatic Pa Kelly who offered as to how he would have a talk with the Prince.

Seems that the Monegasque monarch was getting too "uppity" for the father of the Philadelphia beauty. "Un-American" the pere of the Kelly family called it.

Strange that Ranier would forget himself and act in an "Un-American" way since it was so obviously distasteful to the ex-bricklayer from Philadelphia.

Merely because he is the reigning monarch of Monaco was no reason for him to act as though he ran the place. Quite possibly, without the efforts of the Philadelphia parvenu, an international incident might have been provoked.

As Pa Kelly might say, "When in Monaco do as the Americans do."

The head of the Kelly family is no stranger to the press in his own right. A former skulling champion, he was being pictured in Life when the Grace Kelly rage was still a subconscious desire in the minds of thin blondes throughout the country.

Heralding the finesse, for which he would become known when his daughter married into the royal Grimaldi family, was a gesture he made toward the British royal family.

About 25 years ago, Pa Kelly was refused permission to race in a skuling match against a British champion on the grounds that he, Kelly, as a bricklayer, was not a gentleman.

But he showed them what a REAL gentleman was. After capturing the world's skulling title a few months later, he mailed the sweaty cap he had worn while winning the championship to the British King.

Unfortunately, the remarks of the King were not recorded. Though he must surely have been impressed by the polish and savior faire of the American gentleman.

The wedding of Kelly's daughter to Ranier should not be underrated in its worldwide significance. A total of 1800 reporters from all over the earth were in Monaco covering the event. This is over 400 more than the press staff for the recent Geneva confrere. Which proves something. If nothing more than that either Grace Kelly or Ranier is prettier than Bulganin and Khrushchev.

Sports In April Is Theme Chosen For Semi-Annual Block SF-Band Dance In Student Union This Friday Night

Sports In April is the theme chosen by the college Block SF Society for its semi-annual dance to be held this Friday, April 27, from 9 p.m. to midnight, with the student union building as the site of the affair. This semester the dance is being co-sponsored by the college Band Association under the direction of Meyer Cahn.

Music will be provided by the 20-piece band of the College Band Association. Bids for the dance are 50 cents per person for those coming stag and $1.00 per couple. They will be sold at the door, according to Walter Smith, Block SF president. Smith also added, "Dress for the affair will be casual, real casual."

Those who are on the dance committee include Lon Ernshaw who is in charge of decorations; Rich Martucci, Ray Batz, Frank Carroll, and Manuel Simpson who are in charge of putting up posters; and Dale Boyd and Smith.

Bill Fischer, physical education instructor here, is the society's faculty adviser. The group meets during college hours on Fridays.

Smith stated that he and his 95 co-members plan to get together and build a booth for the May Festival, and also hope to arrange to have a float in the parade. The May Festival is scheduled for Friday, May 18, in the new Cow Palace location.

Last Presentation Of Shrew Set For Friday, Saturday

Final performances of Taming Of The Shrew will be presented tomorrow evening, April 26, Friday, April 27, and Saturday, April 28 at 8 p.m., here at the little theater.

The cast for the William Shakespeare comedy includes Stan Weston as Petruchio, Bob Phalen as Baptista, Herb Valle as Lucentio, Harry Boress as Vicentio, Oscar Anderson as Gremio, Crockett MacClanahan as Hortensio, Virgil Cox as Tranio, Peggy Powell as Biondello, Paul Morales as Curtis, Edwina Moquin and Stephanie Koppe as Katherine, Jeanne Graham and Carol Waugh as Bianca, Peggy Barton as the Widow, John Roberts as the pedant, and Melanie Mead as the tailor.

No changes in the cast are anticipated for the remaining three nights.

Since budget restrictions have prohibited the printing of programs and tickets, all seats are sold the evening of the performance or through advance reservations. It was urged that those desiring select seats apply to the little theater sometime previous to their chosen evening.

The play's announcements have been made on mimeographed folders, supplemented with oral presentations between and during the acts.

Stage Techniques Presented Tonight

David Hunter, director of the San Francisco Municipal Adult Theater, will present a lecture and demonstration on drama techniques in the little theater at 8 o'clock tonight.

The demonstration and lecture will explain and illustrate the newer techniques in teaching and executing dramatic work.

The new theories differ from former schools of acting in that actors, rehearsed or unrehearsed in their lines, adapt themselves to a situation as it effects them at the moment.

Students of the new idea are discouraged from on or off stage "living" their roles and are expected to adapt themselves readily to the unexpected while acting.

500 Sign Up For Summer Sessions

Pre-enrollment for summer sessions here for the 1956 summer semester has now exceeded half of the estimated registrants, Mary Jane Learnard, the college's registrar, said recently.

Students are enrolling at the rate of 30 to 40 per day since summer session pre-registration opened last month. With an approximate estimate of 900 students enrolling in summer courses, more than 500 have signed up to date. It was suggested that students with summer session intentions register as soon as possible.

Summer sessions at City College are open only to a limited number of students and are available only to present and potential City College students and to those who were formerly students here, who have not enrolled in another college since leaving.

In addition to courses previously announced, philosophy 6A has been substituted for 6B, and dropped courses include chemistry 8, communications 6B, Spanish 1, Spanish 1A and speech 1B, Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction, announced.

The summer semester will run for six weeks beginning June 25 and terminating August 3. Classes will run from one to three hours daily, five days per week

AS Leaders Leave Tomorrow, Help Promote Idea Exchange

Before most students here are on their way to classes tomorrow, six representatives will have boarded a chartered plane destined to reach Long Beach for the annual spring convention of the California Junior College Student Government Association.

Representatives here include Associated Student President Bill Cirimele, Vice President Joyce Weaver, Associated Men Student President Wayne McFadden, Finance Chairman Emory LeBonville, State Information Service Chairman Marilyn Sicotte, Councilman George Kaplanis and Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities.

A ferry boat ride from Long Beach will take the delegates to Santa Catalina Island to spend three days coping with two-year college student exchange of ideas.

MARILYN SICOTTE, State Information Service chairman of the CJCSGA.

Since the convention has no legislative powers, the resolutions which are passed will be carried home by delegates in the form of recommendations which will then be acted upon independently by the legislative bodies of the individual colleges.

Don Hudson, president of Compton College students and an organizer of the convention, assured delegates to the convention that a well balanced three days will be in store. The conference will consist of three days of legislation, entertainment, and relaxation.

According to Hudson, a typical day will include general assemblies, workshops, advisory meetings, free time, sectional meetings, and entertainment.

Within these days of business and pleasure, delegates will learn to better their own student governments through the mistakes, trials, and successes of others.

Yesterday, a luncheon was held here for 15 two-year college student presidents of Northern California institutions. Cirimele stated that the luncheon's primary purpose was to discuss any legislation that is going to be brought up in the CJCSGA.

LACC Collegians Highlight Variety Show This Friday

A variety show, featuring the Los Angeles City College band will be held this Friday during college hour, in the men's gymnasium here.

The Collegians, as the band is known, feature two vocalists, Lynn Avalon and Laurie Wegeman and comedian Don Parker.

Winners of the Metronome Magazine college dance band contest, the 17 piece band has been touring the country in recent weeks.

The band is a swinging group playing many original tunes and arrangements. Out of almost 40 entries, five bands reached the finals in the Metronome contest. The Collegians won in a very close contest over the band from Indiana University. One of the outstanding features of this band, according to reports, is its trumpet section, composed both of five section men and soloists.

As an outcome of the contest, the Collegians made two records for Capitol Recordings, September in the Rain, and an original composition by a Los Angeles student, Creampuff.

With their title, the Collegians indicated to observers that there is a much untapped musical talent in colleges. The contest, according to reports, not only recognized much of this talent, but also lent it encouragement.

Among the alumni of the band are Jerry Coker and Bruce Locke. Coker spent more than a year with the Woody Herman Third Herd as the featured tenor sax soloist. Locke was a product of the San Francisco high schools before going south to continue his schooling.

Commencement Talk Tryouts Here Tuesday

Tryouts are being held here Tuesday, May 1, for commencement speakers, with commencement itself scheduled for Friday, June 15, at Riordan High School auditorium, Edwin C. Browne, in charge of the ceremony, stated recently.

Twenty-eight students who have attained a 2.3 grade average in their two years here have been notified of the tryouts and will have a chance to be speakers at commencement, Browne said.

New Parking Lot Has Usual Rules

Use of the new parking lot near the student union building started last week, with the same regulations as apply to the west campus; that is, open to Associated Students by permit, according to Oscar E. Anderson, co-ordinator, Division of Educational Management here.

For the remainder of this semester the west campus will be used before being taken over by the city, Anderson said, adding that the lower parking lot, between Cloud Hall and the men's gymnasium will be open in about two or three weeks, also for use by permit.

There should be enough parking space, Anderson further stated, because there will be room for approximately 500 cars in each of the new lots, as compared with about the same number on the west campus.

Eligibility for parking permits is Associated Student membership.

Wisdom Of AS Voters Put To Test By CJCSGA Conferences

THE FINE RECORD of City College in its ventures into regional and state student government conferences should move forward again this week, as the college delegates are engaged in the California Junior College Student Government conference at Catalina Island in southern California.

Both the wisdom of the voters in past AS elections, and the leadership ability of the college delegates is either proved or disproved in these conferences, and in nearly all previous CJCSGA conferences, the college has been well represented in both elements.

Upon examination of state and regional reports by college representatives, it has become apparent that this college is one of two or three delegations in the whole organization that is looked to in the majority of situations for advice.

This position of prominence which City College holds in these conferences is made possible through complete participation in student affairs, both social and governmental, by the college delegates.

As stated here many times in the past, student PARTICIPATION in affairs of the college will continue only with a similar amount of student INTEREST in affairs of the college.

Those colleges which continually add nothing but confusion to such meetings are those colleges which have little chance to take part in student government because of student apathy. Such student apathy causes not only the aforementioned state of affairs, but many times is the direct cause of the election of improper student leadership, and consequently, poor representation at these conferences.

Poor representation at state and regional student government confabs injures not only the leaders' prestige, but the very reputation of the college which they do, or do not, represent.

Student government elections, therefore, take on a two-fold significance, because the voters are not only electing their leaders for the following semester, but the reception which their college will receive at these conferences.

Typical of the leadership which this college has exhibited in past meetings of the NCJCSGA (regional conference) and the CJCSGA (state conference), is the recommendation regarding the publications workshop proposed and accepted by college delegates.

At state and regional meets of the past year, college proposals restricting representation in the publications workshop have been passed. These motions stated that only qualified persons, those having direct affiliation with their college publicatons, may represent their college in this workshop.

These motions are significant because it is the general trend in these conferences to have such restrictions on all workshops, so that a finer representation may be obtained.

Not only in the publications end of affairs, but in the broader case of student government as well, this college stands as a beacon in the night regarding the solution of other colleges' problems. The City College AMS organization has been copied by numerous other colleges who wished also to give their men students individual representation.

Obviously, if such leadership is to continue, a great deal of contemplation on the part of the AS voters in the coming elections is in order, for only with due consideration of candidate qualifications can the proper leadership be obtained.

The Bohemian — Diplomatic Immunity: Consecrated Tradition

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

DIPLOMATIC immunity is a respect paid to embassies representing their countries by diplomatic relationship in foreign soil. It is a privilege consecrated by historical and traditional practices in dealings between the states of countries throughout the world.

Without this total immunity, it would be impossible for countries to conduct necessary transactions, whether they be of business or of complete reverence, among themselves.

Perhaps one of the most famous cases in recent times in which a diplomat used his privilege for personal enrichments was or [illegible] concerned a courier stationed in Belgium during the First World War.

It seems that this courier had access to advance information that the defeated Germans would soon redeem the occupational marks then in circulation. As the almost valueless marks were all in Germany, the courier went over to that country to buy a truckload of that money. By use of his diplomatic immunity, he somehow managed to get it across the border into Belgium. Of course, he was the first one in line at the bank when it came time to redeem the marks into hard Belgium francs.

He voluntarily resigned from the diplomatic service, but was in turn compelled to enjoy his millions in exile.

Because this immunity gives the diplomatic representatives of a foreign power a free, uncontrolled hand in the country where they reside, it has often been abused.

Some governments make it a point to turn their embassies into potential espionage centers, where pertinent and strategic data can be amassed and sent to the home offices. Such practices do not present much of a threat to the welfare of the country, however, since the information at reach to the embassies' hosts is limited.

Cases in which the diplomatic functionaries have misused their immunity from arrest by foreign authorities for personal gains have been, unfortunately so, numerous. When the feats are clever or the personages involved famous, they cause uproarious scandals, much to the embarrassment, to say the least, of the governments represented.

At the Vatican, diplomatic immunity is not altogether unrestrictive. All, high ranking diplomats included, who wish audiences with the Pope must do so ungloved.

This custom has been unbroken for centuries. Since the day, during the Dark Ages, of course, when a French cavalier had the audacity to strike the Pope with his glove.

May the cavalier's soul rest in peace!

A Day At Races, A Day At Beach; Students Return With Suntan, No Money, But Hope For Tomorrow

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

It is commonly said that horseracing is the sport of kings. But the real savoir faires, bon vivants and all around devotees of leisure know this to be an overestimated recreation, one that often causes embarrassing situations.

This noble sport is mentioned mainly because it is but a preamble to the greatest of "passetemps" yet concocted by human, students' included, imagination. This could only refer to the art of sun tanning himself.

After an ordinary day at the hippodrome, one is ready to follow the current fad, for its prerequisite, that of, to use a crude expression, being bareback has been efficiently taken care of at the waging gates. Someday we shall return to reclaim our shirts. But now our thoughts wander to the beach, for there one may freely trespass.

First, the tan aspirant must be well provided with a bottle of sun lotion. Its soothing compound will act very much like a sauce which covers a fish about to be grizzled. But to the pleasant side of this solace. Ah, the label on the bottle depicts a picture of well-shaped sights to admire on the torrid sands.

"Read on," encourages an interested companion, who too shares the conviction that a weather-beaten complexion is an asset to winning friends and popularity.

"Is the sun healthy for you?" One is faced with this perplexity. Again the companion interjects. "Are you sure you got the right stuff?"

The article goes on to state with scientific accuracy that with the aid of this magic lotion, our backs, after some exposure to the sun rays, will display the glossiness of a well-fed panther. We discard this silly bottle and obtain a more envigorating mixture. Remember, we're still shirtless, and the weather is most unco-operative.

At last we are on the beach. It is deserted. The wind blows and particles of swept sand are forever pestering. It starts to rain. We make our retreat.

All's not in vain; we have that weather-beaten look. Tonight, at home, under the strong rays of the lamp, we shall conclude our make-up.

Scholars Brave Loss Of Sleep, Morning Hours

There are thousands of students on the campus daily, and among them are a few (very few) heroes, who faithfully make their 8 o'clock class every time.

This hour has been the scourge of students and instructors alike for many years, and the problem of meeting this class has been solved in many ways. The solutions usually end up with one decision; not to go.

But the heroes are there every morning, rain or shine, earthquake or hurricane. In any class of 25, there is usually a good hard core of five, and they never fail.

The energy involved in getting to an 8 o'clock class though is nothing compared to what it takes to get out of going. Any instructor would welcome just half of the brain matter used in these excuses in his classroom. But they never see this display of superior knowledge probably because they never see the student.

Anything goes, and it is surprising what students can think up at 7 o'clock in the morning when they are half asleep in bed. The strangest things can happen to their cars, and it's strange how they suddenly think of that dental appointment. There is always the Muni Railway to blame or a non-working alarm clock.

With some of the students getting to class on time so early in the morning, it has presented a problem for the faculty. Many an instructor can be seen running down the hallway at 8 o'clock in the morning with their coat tails flying, trying to beat the deadline.

After they have unlocked the door and caught their breath, they look at the few students standing around and give them a look filled with superiority. They have won again, but was the speeding ticket worth it.

Meanwhile, the many students who didn't make it are slowly arriving on the campus. Smartly dressed, wide awake, and raring to go. The cars have been fixed, the dental appointment taken care of, the Muni bus has finally come, and the alarm clock suddenly began to work. Just in time for the 9 o'clock class.

Shots At Ramdom

By Bob Kauth

ONLY A FOOL laughs at his own jokes, they say. No doubt this may be true, but modern psychologists reveal only a fool cannot laugh at himself.

Now Nero, he's a good example. He could take a joke. He was no fool! He had a sense of humor, that guy. He even fiddled while Rome burned they say, for he could see the humor of the situation.

Lou Lucia reports that Nero could even laugh at himself. Lucia said that one day one of the court jesters made Nero the subject of a joke. And Nero, who was no fool, laughed and said, "Ha Ha! Cut off his head."

Nero, he could see the humor of a situation.

Then again, it seems humorous to us when Maurice Paszkiewicz runs in and exclaims, "Ah Ha! Caught you reading your own column. You don't catch me reading my column. I do it at home! Come on, tell me," he says "whose column do you read first?" But we don't tell him!

This recalls to mind a recent Student Council meeting, where George Kaplanis stood up and falsely accused this column of using "bad taste" when we referred to Joyce Weaver as a "racetrack fiend" (HE SAID).

But Kaplanis was misquoting us. For what we said was (and we quote) "Joyce Weaver . . . DENIES this as a piece of political propaganda, but reliable agents report she was a FREQUENT VISITOR at Tanforan last semester." AND some weeks prior to publication, MISS WEAVER'S CONSENT for publication was received! (Big deal, eh what?)

Now it may be true that only a fool laughs at his own jokes, but it is also true that only a fool cannot laugh at himself, and it can be fun. But if you don't appreciate our humor, we apologize to you Kaplanis. And Miss Weaver, how about placing a small bet for us next time? You "racetrack fiend" you!

Letters to the Editor

• Fan At Tanforan

Editor, The Guardsman:

It seems that someone has gotten the idea that I am a regular attender of the Tanforan Race Track.

To be very truthful with everyone, I don't even know which way a horse runs. That may sound very silly, but you must all understand that I have been reared in the city. I don't know anything about horses.

I must admit that five years ago (approximately, that is) I went to the races with my parents. But we went to Golden Gate Fields and not Tanforan.

I have been pondering over how anyone could possibly have seen me at Tanforan, and I have come up with a few possible ways that someone may have gotten this idea.

1. Someone may have been at Tanforan who resembles me. (Heaven forbid!)

2. Someone may need a new pair of glasses.

3. This person may have been so excited over a race that he began seeing things.

4. There is a girl who works at Macy's whose name is Joyce Weaver, and someone may have called her name.

5. If none of these is the answer, this person must have seen my bookie, and I'd appreciate it if he'd quit giving my secrets away.

Joyce Weaver.

Redus Wins Four Events As Spikers Whip Bucs

Ram Ace Gains Three Northern Cal Bests As Top Clutch Performances Upset Modesto In League Crucial

By Al Moss

Clint Redus romped to four wins to lead an inspired Ram track team to an upset win over Modesto last Friday, April 20, at Modesto, and virtually assure Coach Roy Burkhead's undefeated crew of the Big Eight round-robin title.

West Contra Costa also competed in the triangular meet and scored 5 points, while the Rams topped Modesto in the dual meet 65½-56½.

Redus provided the fireworks for the San Franciscans, but surprise performances on the part of the whole team provided the real edge as 17 individual seasonal bests were tacked up by the Rams.

Nevertheless, it was Redus, the sophomore sprinter-hurdler, who provided the keynote. He captured the 100-yard dash in :09.9, tying his own Northern California best; won the high and low hurdles in :15.0 and :24.4, both north state top marks to date; and the 220 in the good time of :21.8.

Come-through marks for the City College thinclads were the impetus behind the upset. Frank Carroll, undefeated in Big Eight competition, got off his best discus toss of the year for a surprise win, and Jimmy Smith topped his previous best by some 12 feet to take an even more unexpected third place.

Ken Richter raced to a :50.6 440 victory, among the best times in the league, for his first win of the year; Ben Walker pole-vaulted 12 feet for a first; and Norman King, held out of the more familiar high jump, took the broad jump with a strong 21-9¾ leap.

The broad jump, incidentally, was the deciding event of the day, and the clean sweep in the leap cinched the meet for the visiting Rams.

Chinese, Tau Chi Sigma Undefeated In Hoop Leagues

Tau Chi Sigma and the Chinese Club continue as league leaders in the Inter-Fraternity League and the Independent League respectively.

Sparked by Doug Hom and Chew Jeong, the Chinese Club defeated the previously unbeaten Guardsman by a 35 to 24 score. This was the sixth straight win, for the Independent League front runners.

By virtue of their win over Alpha Phi Epsilon in Inter-Fraternity League competition, Tau Chi Sigma now has a perfect 5-0 record. In other action, Beta Tau beat Zeta Phi Sigma.

A win over Alpha Phi Omega by the International Relations Club elevated the IRC into second place. The game was won by default. In the only other game scheduled that week, the Filipino Club beat Royalaires. Both were Independent League games.

In the Hotel and Restaurant League, the six teams are currently battling for the right to represent their league in the tournament playoffs, to be held on Tuesday, May 22.

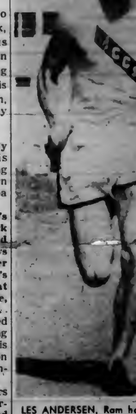
Les Andersen Chases Cows

Ram Trackster Reveals Unique Training Method For Endurance Build-Up

There are a great many ways to train for the distance events in track, and each of the greats, near-greats and never-will-be's have their own secret for conditioning and building up endurance. One method that is unique here is that of Les Andersen, Ram 880 ace, and even John Landy probably never tried this one.



Andersen chases cows.

Believe it or not, the blonde City College half-miler attributes his strength and endurance for the long haul to chasing cows up and down the hills of his Northern California ranch-farm.

Andersen came to San Francisco's Balboa High School and, as a dark horse [illegible] City meet, surprised everyone but his coaches and cows by winning the 880. He came under Ram track Coach Roy Burkhead's tutelage in 1953 and competed, at different times, in the 440, 880, mile, and as part of the mile relay team.

Following that season, he entered the Army, and now is slowly working the khaki-inspired stiffness out of his running joints. He still practices, on occasion, his somewhat peculiar training methods.

If the interested distance runners in the Big Eight didn't know Andersen's secret before, they do now, and from the success he's attained so far, it's a good bet that there won't be a safe cow in the neighborhood from here on in.

LES ANDERSEN, Ram half-mile star who trains for the long distance grinds by chasing cows up and down hill. Running a simple half-mile (or mile or 440, as he has run both) over smooth territory now seems like nothing.

JACK EGAN

VAN PARISH

Ramblings — Parish And Egan Prove Coaches' Skill

By Al Moss

EACH year, the ability of the Ram coaching staff to turn out winners is evident, not only in the outstanding teams that compete for the college, but in the large number of former Ram athletes who star for other colleges or universities.

Examples are numerous, in every sport. Tops in the spring sports, at present, appear to be a pair of Coach Roy Burkhead's former track charges, each of whom gained the winning habit here and kept it as they moved on.

Van Parish, a sprinter-hurdler with Burkhead in 1953, before he entered the Army, is now competing for San Jose State. A state meet sprint winner with the Rams, and a sprint star with Fort Ord during his stay with Uncle Sam, Parish is a consistent point-getter for the Spartans.

His last sojourn in a Ram uniform was during the recent football season, when he donned pads and used his speed to good advantage as an end, a starter for a good part of the season. Burkhead still makes good use of his former star trackman, for Parish uses his spare time to race and pace Clint Redus and the rest of the present Ram sprint crew.

The other of the top examples is Jack Egan, the massive weight man who now scores for University of Southern California's potent track team. Egan competed for the City College thinclads last year and set two records and one Big Eight Conference mark in the process. His shot put of 45-2 topped the City College mark, and his discus toss of 154-2¼ stands as the league standard.

Egan, now a sophomore at USC, is a consistent placer in the Trojan meets, and his seconds and thirds are highly respectable for the mighty Southern California thinclads, national champions for the last 17 years and almost certainly a repeater this season.

There are others, all of whom are a credit to this college and its coaching staff: Joe Hare, the All-American soccer goalie here, who now saves points for the University of California; Bernie Kelly, now the starting center fielder for the Berkeley Bears' baseballers; Dave Davis, named to the California Basketball Association all-star team as a high scorer-rebounder for College of Pacific, and others too numerous to mention here.

These men are living proof of the value of two-year college athletic training, and of the high caliber of this college's coaching staff.

Weather Hampers Tennis, Golf Action

Playing in the rain and with the additional handicap of cold weather, the Ram golfers managed a tie with Sacramento, 7½ to 7½, at the capitol city Friday, April 13.

The tennis match between the Rams and Oakland, scheduled for April 13, was rained out and has been rescheduled for today at the college courts near Balboa Field at 2 p.m.

The golfers' next match is against Modesto on Friday, May 4, which ends the regular season.

Gil Brunk won three points for the team by defeating Richard Trimble of the Panthers, 3-0. Brunk also was low scorer for the day when he shot an 80. Don McDowell added two points by beating Tom Conovey 2-1 and Phil Palen topped Tom Kenneth for the tying 2½ points.

Ram losers were Frank Hubert, who lost to Gary Bowers 0-3, and Bob Zimmerman, who was beaten by Lester Davidson 0-3.

Coach Grover Klemmer said that individual scores were up, but that it was due to the rain. Over all most of the players have been shooting consistently lower, he said.

San Mateo looms as the powerhouse of the league as most of their players are hitting in the 70's. They haven't fost a match this season, Klemmer said.

Baseballers Beat Bulldogs Twice To Gain League Lead

By Lou Lucia

By defeating San Mateo in two single contests last week by scores of 7-3 and 4-2, the baseball team finished the first half of the season in the conference lead, with a half game lead over second place Santa Rosa.

Two home contests and the Rams meeting West Contra Costa at 2 p.m. this Saturday, April 28, and Beale Air Force on Monday, April 30, at 2:30 p.m.

Coach Bill Fischer is not taking the highly rated low standing Comets chances of an upset as unlikely.

A left-handed pitching duel between the Rams' Fred Glosser and Paul Conrad of San Mateo featured last Saturday's fray, as the college nine edged the Bulldogs, 4-2.

Glosser scattered six hits, allowed no earned runs and struck out five to receipt for his second win as against one loss.

Only earned runs of the game came in the fifth and ninth innings, when John McCarthy and Blair LeMire walloped home runs at the 375 foot mark at San Mateo's Central Park.

It seems that the drought has set in. After totaling only six hits in thirteen innings against Oakland, the Rams garnered only two baseHits while collecting their seven runs in the first San Mateo conquest.

Larry Nissim won his first league game by setting down San Mateo on seven hits and only one earned run. Even this run, a home run by starting pitcher Paul Conrad, was almost averted when the wind held back Blair LeMire's perfect relay throw which Conrad beat to the plate with only a second to spare.

Bob Bandettini made his second relief role and fourth league pitching appearance in the ninth and retired the two batters to face him on a line-drive double play, and a strike out.

The Rams scored once in the second stanza on two infield miscues. Using the big inning to advantage, five walks and Jim Poppin's triple with the bases loaded accounted for five scores in the inning of the same number. A cushion run was added in the seventh when three walks and a sacrifice fly by LeMire scored John McCarthy.

Beside Poppin's triple, pitcher Nissim singled to left in the last of the eighth for the other hit.

Pitchers Conrad, Mike Kerney, and Ron Kreiger walked eleven Rams to account for the paucity of hits and large number of runs. When the San Mateans had the ball under control they appeared to have the best staff of pitchers the Rams have faced so far.

Intramural boxing matches in ten weight divisions will be held in conjunction with the Associated Men Students' smoker at the men's gymnasium on Wednesday, May 9, according to Roy Diederichsen, boxing coach here.

Preliminary boxing action is now taking place in the regular boxing classes, and those interested in signing up may do so in the men's gymnasium, Diederichsen said. The weight divisions range from 125 pounds to the heavyweight class.

The three round bouts will last 90 seconds each and winners will receive engraved medals, Diederichsen added. Following the matches, there will be entertainment and refreshments, supplied by the AMS.

Sthymmel Announces Pre-Candidacy Meeting Of AS Office Seekers Friday For Discussion Of Election Policy

All students contemplating running for Associated Student offices are expected to meet this Friday afternoon, April 27, in bungalow 2 at 3 p.m. to discuss and understand election policy, Gary Sthymmel, election commissioner, announced last week.

Election petitions are still available and will be until Tuesday, May 8, in the Associated Student office, the student book store, and Dean Ralph Hillsman's office, S169. So far about 10 petitions have been requested by prospective candidates, Sthymmel said.

Three 5 by 7 inch pictures of all those interested in running for AS office, are also required with the petitions, he added. Posters no larger than 12 by 18 inches are to be turned in to the Election Committee by Friday, May 18. These posters are placed around the campus and in Cloud Hall and the science building by members of the committee.

Pictures of candidates for the offices of Associated Student President and Associated Student Vice-President must be in The Guardsman office, S304, by May 8.

Two more members were added to the Election Committee last week. Sthymmel announced, and the committee now is comprised of Ellie Smith, Bobbie LeBoff, Maria Gironcerna, Elver Steiner, Carol Aizenberg, Mike Monteith, Donna Pucinetti, and Margie Scheller.

Associated Student elections are scheduled for Friday, May 25; Monday, May 28, and Tuesday, May 29, with the election rally taking place on Friday, May 25, according to Sthymmel.

Deadline Date To Enter Miss SF Is This Saturday

Women wishing to enter the Miss San Francisco contest have until this Saturday, April 28, to register, George Kaplanis, Junior Chamber of Commerce liaison officer, warned last week.

Those women, who are unmarried, 18 to 28 years of age, with a high school diploma, and who have lived in San Francisco for six months or have completed one semester at the college are eligible to register for participation in the annual pageant.

Students desiring to become contenders for the title are expected to sign up with Kapianis in bungalow 2, next to the student union building, on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m., or on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 9 and 11 a.m.

Contestants will be judged equally on four different phases: beauty, personality, talent and intellect, according to the contest rules.

Included under personality and intellect are charm and poise. The talent phase will include a three-minute display of singing, dancing, playing of a musical instrument, a dramatic reading, art display, dress design or any other form of talent.

If an entrant does not have one of the aforementioned talents, rules provide that she will be allowed to speak for three minutes on her plans for the future and the type of career she wishes to pursue.

The beauty side of the contest, Kaplanis said, will be judged on the contestant's appearance in a bathing suit and an evening gown.

Student Bank Adds Two Hours Per Day

The student bank, located in Rooms 106 and 107 of the student union building, has lengthened its business day two hours over that of last semester. New hours, according to Roberta Frederick, in charge of the bank, are 8:45 to 11:10 a.m., and 12:01 to 2:15 p.m. daily.

The bank is operated by college controller Oscar E. Anderson, with the assistance of Mrs. Frederick, cashier, and Carl Anderson, bookkeeper.

This office of finance handles all money matters of organizations on the campus, including budget and non-budget groups. A budget group is any group that receives financial assistance from general student funds. Such transactions as collecting club dues, selling Associated Student cards, locker fees, selling tickets for shows, contests or other special events.

Controls placed on financial transactions are in a Board of Education Manual, which governs this college organization. The bank is periodically checked by auditors from the Board of Education, and subsequently all organizations affiliated with the college must be acquainted with the finance regulations, which are available upon request.

Japanese Air Line Film Slated Friday

So Small My Island is the title of the forthcoming movie, part of this year's college film series, according to Madison Devlin of the audio-visual aids department here.

The film will be shown only once, he said, beginning at 10:40 a.m. and running for about 30 minutes. The site of the showing will be in Room 136, the large lecture hall located at the south end of the science building.

The film is produced by the Japanese Air Lines and is in color. The scenes take place in Japan and are on the general basis of a travelogue. The major difference is that this film, unlike most on Japan, does not just show Tokyo, the capital city.

New Tivoli Cafe Site Of AGS Fete

Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society, will hold its semi-annual dinner tomorrow night at the New Tivoli restaurant, Donald Jensen, AGS sponsor, announced last week.

Guest of honor for the evening will be Edwin C. Browne, Dean of Men at the college, who will address the members. Membership cards and pins will be awarded at this time, Jensen said.

Part of the cost of the dinner will come from the AGS fund, he added, so that the actual cost per person will be only $2.

The AGS lecture committee hopes to experiment with a new idea, Jensen declared, such as sponsorship of panel discussions on current topics, with the panel composed of students. Besides appearing at the college, they would also accept other speaking dates.

Midterm Grades Basis For Degree

Second midterm grades will now be used as the basis to help determine the eligibility of potential graduates for a degree, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar here.

Previously each instructor was asked before finals for probable final grades of prospective graduates. "This semester the second midterm grades will be used," Miss Learnard said, adding that no changes in midterm grades will be accepted by the registrar's office.

Grade standing for students after the second midterm week which ends Friday, May 4, will be released by their instructors. Counsellors will receive their students' grade standings after the entire grades have been processed.

Eight Act As Models For Photo Department

Plans are being formulated to use photography models to a greater extent during the rest of the semester, Emmett Smith, photography instructor, announced recently.

Regular model is Barbara Baker, while Sherilynn Roberts, Helga Faross, Antonia Aquino and Ardel Montgomery have made themselves available through Guardsman information. Linda Allen was personally reached, while Sylvia Marie Lim and Judy Wills, who modeled in past semesters, are still available.

During first and second midterm periods, models were used exclusively for the portrait classes, but from now on, Smith said, they will be available for fashion and story telling photography in illustration classes.

Stalemate On Distribution

Afternoon Distribution Up After Morning Log

The plan to give The Guardsman only to members of the Associated Students failed in its strictest sense again last week, and with approximately 1,000 copies of the newspaper remaining undistributed at 12:30 p.m. on Wednesday, the distribution was thrown open to the entire student body.

With the combined forces of the Rally Committee and Gamma Sigma Sigma checking AS cards and giving The Guardsman only to card holders, distribution went about as usual on Wednesday morning. The two organizations, having previously arranged to distribute only until noon under a suggestion, by a 5-1 vote of the Publications Board, then left the job.

The remaining copies of The Guardsman were then put out, unguarded, for everyone desiring them. This was done despite Student Council's sustaining on the previous day their ruling that the paper would be given only to AS card holders.

Council Disregards Publications Board, Sticks To Original Action

By Elmer Gentry

With an apparent show of disregard, Student Council last week voted down a recommendation given them by the Publications Board, concerning the highly controversial issue of Guardsman distribution.

Early in the meeting, the recommendation was delivered to the council by the chairman of the board, Mike Berger. It was suggested by a 5-1 vote of the board that The Guardsman be distributed only to Associated Student card holders until noon on Wednesday, the day of publication, and then the remaining copies be given to non-AS members for the remainder of the week.

Jim Kennedy made a motion to rescind the present system of Guardsman distribution to AS members only. When voting on this motion, the council showed a surprising increase of members who are in favor of free distribution. Previously, when voting on the limited distribution, the council made the decision by a vote of 14-1.

When voting on Kennedy's motion, the vote was split 7-7, with one council member abstaining. In an attempt to obtain a positive decision one way or the other, AS President Bill Cirimele called for another vote. Again the vote was tied, and under the rules of parliamentary procedure the motion was lost for further legislation.

Before Cirimele declared the motion lost, he was reminded that under Roberts' Rules of Order, the presiding officer may vote to break a tie, but Cirimele decided not to vote.

Another council member, Bob Bliss, then made a motion that The Guardsman be given out to AS members all day Wednesday, and non-AS members on Thursday. He was ruled out of order by Cirimele.

Then, after a period of council discussion, Bliss brought up his motion again. This time the motion was in order, but before the council voted on it, Berger reminded them of the publication board recommendation which had been ignored by asking, "Doesn't this recommendation count for anything?" Berger then pointed out two facts concerning the issue:

"The paper should be distributed on the day it is printed, otherwise the news becomes old. Besides that, many student activities are held on that day and are announced in the paper, and by holding the extra papers over until Thursday, many students are prevented from attending these functions."

When council finally voted on Bliss' motion, it was defeated. It was voted on twice, since the first tally showed a 7-7 tie, with one member abstaining. In the second vote one member who had previously voted for the motion abstained, leaving the vote 7 against and 6 for, with 2 abstentions.

Other matters taken up during the council meeting included the granting of $30 to the Election Committee to cover the cost of mailing election material.

Campus Police Chief Lee Hargus brought up the matter of parking restrictions involving the new parking lot next to the student union building. He also informed Cirimele that his request for reserved parking spaces for officers of the Student Council would have to be re-submitted.

George Kaplanis, chairman of the May Festival parade preparations, outlined the plans which have been formulated for the festival, which will be held at the Cow Palace. He asked for any comments which the Council had in reference to the plans.

Because of the activities concerning Education-Business Day held last Thursday, there was no council meeting that afternoon.

ASUC Candidate

AL KINGSTON, Associated Student president here in the Spring 1955 semester, and now attending the University of California, has become a candidate for the office of President of the Associated Students of the university. The last college graduate to attain this position was 1951 AS President Ralph Vetterlein.

Ramporium Total $15,000 To AS

Between 10 and 15 thousand dollars will be turned over to the Associated Students as the percentage of the total sales made for this semester by the Ramporium, student book store in the student union building, according to Dick Main, Ramporium manager.

Last semester, Fall 1955, the book store contributed $10,000 to Associated Student activities. In the last five and a half years since the Ramporium was first established in 1950, a total amount of $50,000 has been turned over for the support of the Associated Students and its activities.

One of the major problems of the Ramporium is lack of space, Main said. The book store's warehouse is presently located in the science building, which is a handicap in bringing books, supplies, and equipment back and forth.

If the facilities for the store were enlarged it would increase the sales and thus increase the profits which would be contributed to AS activities, Main declared.

Inspection Of Campus Police Is Slated By Ahern, Commissioners

City Police Chief Francis Ahern and members of the Police Commission are expected here either this week or the first week of May to inspect the Campus Police company, according to word received here last week from the chief's office.

However, an office spokesman commented that the heavy work schedule of the commissioners and the chief himself will determine the date.

Earlier this semester, Chief Ahern, in a letter to President Louis G. Conlan, stated that he would personally inspect the local law enforcement group, but he did not include bringing the Police Commission until recently.

The members of the Police Commission for the City of San Francisco are Harold McKinnon, Thomas J. Mellon and Paul Bissinger.

Official designation of the Campus Police, which is headed by Campus Police Chief Lee Hargus, by the City of San Francisco Police Department is Company "H," Detail 10. This is the only company or detail which has not been inspected by the chief following his recent appointment to the post.

Meanwhile, Assistant Chief of the Campus Police, Harold Hockett, is holding rigid inspection of the 29-man detail at regular intervals in preparation for the inspection by Ahern and members of the Police Commission.

Spring Brings Pranks Here, K&B To Britain

By Don Ball

THE recent digging of a grave on campus, complete with sign lamenting the death of "school spirit," has caused many persons around the college to give rise to the observation that spring is finally here.

As the traditional pranking season for students starts, one wonders what the cause of this strange annual phenomenon is. Possibly the northward return of the sun exerts some change in the metabolism of ordinarily placid students.

Panty raids would seem to be out of the question here, the women's gymnasium proving an almost impregnable fortress, capable of resisting attack indefinitely.

College administrators usually take a tolerant view of the collegian version of spring fever. Usually going on the premise that as long as the students harm neither property nor people, the administrators tend to look the other way.

There is one small question which someone here might do well to answer. Has anyone looked in that grave? No more ideal way to dispose of a body could be found than to bury it on a college campus along with a "proper" sign. This could be a big one for the campus police.

Both interesting and heartening to note was the British people's reception of Kruchsev and Bulganin during their recent visit.

In the official language of the diplomats, "It was a limited success," i.e. a failure.

K&B had accepted the invitation of an Anthony Eden completely carried away by the spirit of Geneva last summer when they agreed to visit the British Isles.

The Kremlin advance man, almost cherubic Georgi Malenkov, gave K&B reports on British hospitality which must have led them to believe that the Russian hierarchy would be better received than a balanced economy.

Instead, K&B were greeted with a chill which did even the normally reserved Britishers proud. Anthony Eden set the pace when he greeted the Russians at the airport with a speech which was as warm and friendly as a face-down welcome mat.

As was expected, the British lined the sidewalks as the Russian limousines passed, but the crowds merely were curious, not friendly.

Perhaps the most rude shock K&B received was at Oxford. There the students looked on respectfully, all the while chanting, "Poor Joe, poor Joe." Evidently the Russians had misgauged the British distate for iconoclasm.

College Hosts High School Leaders At May 10 Prep Day

Preparations for the Spring 1956 Prep Day on Thursday, May 10, are currently under way, Joyce Weaver, Associated Student vice-president, revealed last week.

Five student representatives from each public high school will be invited to the college where they can observe the manner in which it is run.

First order of business will be the morning registration, after which the visitors, guided by Associated Men and Associated Women students will tour the college. A luncheon and special entertainment was also announced by Miss Weaver.

Assisting Miss Weaver in the planning of Prep Day are Ginny Hase, in charge of registration, while AWS President Rose Thurman, and AMS President Wayne McFadden will head the tours. Recording Secretary Barbara Polster will take charge of the luncheon, and Mike Gilbert and the Rally Committee will provide the entertainment.

At a recent Faculty Association meeting, $25 was allocated for the Prep Day program.

Explaining the reasons why a Prep Day is held, Miss Weaver commented, "The purpose of Prep Day is to acquaint the high school students with this college and make them aware of the facilities and advantages of a two-year college."

Concert Here Friday By San Bernardino College

A "Pop" concert, featuring the San Bernardino Valley College band, will be held this Friday, May 4, from 1 to 2 p.m. in the college library in Cloud Hall.

By special permission of the administration, the band was invited to appear at the college during this hour, since this is the second midterm week and there will be no college hour on that day.

This will be the second visiting band to play at the college. Last week, the Collegians from Los Angeles City College were here. They presented a variety show which featured two vocalists, Laurie Wegeman and Lynn Avalon, and Don Parker as comedian.

This group, winner of the Metronome Magazine college dance band contest, has been touring the country in the past few weeks.

IRC Plans Model United Nations Session In June

Members of the International Relations Club here have tentatively scheduled a model United Nations session to be held in June, Joseph Jacobsen, counsellor and sponsor of the organization, announced recently.

Preparations and discussions about the topics to be placed on the agenda have been taking place during club meetings. The IRC Model UN will try to review international problems which are facing the world today. Mainly those involving the Israel-Arab conflict, the Cyprus issue and the legitimacy of Red China's petition for entrance into the UN will be brought up.

Because some students have nationalistic feelings regarding these topics and have had personal experience with the resulting difficulties from these prevailing discords, it is expected that both sides will be effectively, though emotionally, represented.

It has not yet been decided whether to stage the whole General Assembly at the session. This requires total representation of the nations and would occupy a great deal of time. The entire session may be kept to include only reports from the Security Council, the Trusteeship Council or the International Court of Justice, Jacobsen said.

Vic Hebert, who was a delegate from this college representing Chile at the Model UN recently held in Corvallis, Oregon, is acting as adviser and chairman of the group.

Taking into consideration the time limitations, the representatives of the differing viewpoints centering around the aforementioned issues will have prepared their speeches in advance.

A definite date for the meeting has not yet been set, but the club hopes that sufficient time will be found available on June 1 or during a double college hour. The Model UN will either take place in the library or in S136, Jacobsen said.

This Saturday's ISC Ball To Use Cotillion Theme

Plans are now completed for the semi-annual Inter-Sorority Ball to be held this Saturday, May 5, Barbara Batmale, president of the ISC, announced recently. The title selected this year is The Cotillion Ball.

As has been the tradition in the past, the ball will be held at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel on New Montgomery and Market Streets. The festivities will begin at 9 p.m. at which time the new sorority pledges will be formally presented. Then the dancing will begin to the music of Stephen Paul and his band.

Attendance at the ball is limited to couples, with the women inviting their dates as their guests for the evening. The dress is formal for the pledges who are to be presented, and cocktail dresses for the other women. Miss Batmale said, adding that admission is free to sorority members, with a charge of $2.50 per couple for non-members. Bids may be purchased at the student bank or at the door.

The committee for the ball includes Miss Batmale as general chairman and member of Kappa Phi; Gail Zeigler, in charge of invitations and member of Theta Tau; Darlene Reitz, bids, Alpha Lambda Chi; Barbara LeBoff, music, Phi Beta Rho; Eleanor Baenner, photography, Delta Psi; and Barbara Polster, tallies, Zeta Chi.

Patrons and patronesses for the dance will be administrators of the college and parents of the presidents of the sororities.

Election Pictures

Contrary to a statement by Election Commissioner Gary Sthymmel, it will not be necessary for election candidates to hand in their pictures to The Guardsman office, because of the fact that The Guardsman assigns all such pictures to be taken through its photography staff.

Election Petitions Due By Tuesday

Six days remain for the acceptance of petitions for Associated Student office candidacy, according to Gary Sthymmel, election commissioner here.

Petitions are now available at Assistant Dean of Student Activities, Ralph Hillsman's office in S169, the Associated Student office in bungalow 2, the student book store, or from Sthymmel himself. The petitions must be turned in to Hillsman's office or to Sthymmel by Tuesday, May 8.

It is essential that students seeking Associated Student offices meet the requirements in Article 2, Section A of the Constitution of the Associated Students, Sthymmel declared, and also that they have a 1.0 grade point average, with at least 12 units being taken as of the second midterm period of this semester.

Three 5 by 7 inch pictures of all those interested in running for AS office are also required with the petitions, he added. Posters no larger than 12 by 18 inches are to be turned in to the election committee by Friday, May 18. These posters are to be placed around the campus and in Cloud Hall and the science building by members of the committee.

Campaign expenditures for prospective officers must not exceed $21.50. This includes pictures, posters, leaflets, and $1.50 for janitorial service and the mailing of sample ballots. An itemized list of all expenditures must be given to the Election Committee no later than Thursday, May 24, Sthymmel said.

Elections are scheduled to start Friday, May 25, and run through Tuesday, May 29.

Sophomores Slate Meeting Monday To Discuss Plans

At a meeting of the sophomore class last week five students volunteered to help with plans for Soph Week, which is scheduled from May 28 through June 2, according to Jim Buckley, sophomore president.

Those who volunteered their services include Bobbie LeBoff, vice-president of the sophomore class, appointed to act as chairman of the committee; Judy Walker, appointed to act as chairman of the dance bid committee; Leo Champagne, appointed chairman of the Soph-Prof softball game selection committee; and Bill Anderson, who was appointed chairman of the King and Queen contest committee.

King and Queen contest petitions will be available Monday, May 7, in the Associated Student office, Dean Ralph Hillsman's office or from Buckley or Anderson. These petitions must be turned in by Tuesday, May 15, and should be accompanied by a 5 by 7 inch picture of the contestant.

Dean Browne To Be Honored At Charter Day Dinner Tonight At Hunters Point Officers Club

Edwin C. Browne, dean of men here, will be honored at the Alumni Association Charter Day Dinner tonight at Hunters Point Officers Club at 7:30 p.m., Bob Winegardner, president of the Alumni Association, disclosed last week.

In 1958 Bill Boldenweck, former Associated Student President here, will retire from the committee along with Don Constine, Assistant United States Attorney; Maury Schwartz, theater chain owner, and Pete Chevrier, salesman for the Carnation Dairy Company.

July 1 Deadline For Demolition Of West Campus

With completion nearing of two new campus parking lots, the day is at hand when the college will no longer be dependent on an area of ground known as the west campus parking lot. This was announced last week by Oscar E. Anderson, director of Educational Management here.

The west campus parking lot, a good part of which is covered by unused buildings abandoned by the college last year, is owned by the Public Utilities Commission. By agreement between the college and the commission, the college is permitted to use this area for its parking needs. With the completion of the two new lots, it will no longer be necessary to depend on other parking areas, Anderson commented.

The commission is going ahead with leveling the area. A contract calls for this work to be finished by July 1. In place of the unused buildings, two covered reservoirs are planned for the land.

It is hoped the commission will allow parking on the black top areas while the buildings are coming down, Anderson stated, adding that they have been very fair in their dealings with the college and have allowed the use of their property much past the agreed time when the college was to give it up.

He expressed the hope that if the PUC will allow parking while the buildings are coming down, the students would cooperate fully with the commission in the process of clearing the land.

"The new parking lots are designed by experts in that field to assure complete parking facilities for the present college parking needs. The old west campus parking lot accommodated 450 cars, while the three new lots will park 500," Anderson said. He also pointed out that the lots cost a good sum of money and he hopes the students using them will keep this in mind when they park their cars there.

When the two new lots are completed in back of Cloud Hall, cars parking there will enter from Ocean Avenue and exit past the men's gymnasium. This system will be changed and improved in time when better methods are found to handle the expected heavy traffic moving through the two lots, Anderson said.

Balloting For Ugly Man Contest Now Being Held

Voting for the "Ugly Man" contest is currently being held at the Silver Pole and in the cafeteria, and will continue until Thursday, May 27, according to Earl Cabrinha, contest chairman here.

Everyone is eligible to vote and may do so by depositing a penny or pennies in the fabricated glass jaws, each of which represent a candidate. The contest's profits will be given to the City of Hope charity drive, Ed Emig, who is working along with Cabrinha, said.

Second Rate Attitude Still Prevalent Towards Sports Here

WITH all the activity concerning the state student government conference, hell week and the upcoming May Festival, the splendid record by the college teams in the various spring sports has been unnoticed, unfortunately, by the majority of students here.

By virtue of their recent victory over the contending Modesto track team, the Rams of Coach Roy Burkhead are on the threshold of a second straight Big Eight Conference dual meet championship.

In baseball, Coach Bill Fischer's charges have moved into the top spot in the conference standings, and stand an excellent chance of winning their first title in a decade.

Continuing their usual fine showing, the golf and tennis teams, under the tutelage of Grover Klemmer and Roy Diederichsen, respectively, each occupy a high place in the standings. The only loss for the tennis players has been to a loaded Modesto aggregation, and the golfers likewise have but a single loss in Big Eight competition.

Rarely in any level of sports competition has a single college compiled such a fine overall record in a single semester. All the teams mentioned deserve not only well earned plaudits but considerably better support than has been the case thus far.

The undefeated tracksters surely rate the top spot in Northern California, and their individual marks prove that this rating is no fluke. The mistaken impression that two-year college sports are second-rate is being shattered year after year, as competitors from this level of play are constantly proving to be stickouts in major college competition.

Unfortunately for the college track performers, they are an orphan outfit, having no home track to call their own, and so their local performances are few and far between.

There is no such excuse, however, for the lackadaisical baseball fans, who have only to stroll down one block to Balboa Park to witness the home games of the Ram horsehiders.

It should become apparent to anyone who has an interest in any sport that the level at which that sport is played is inconsequential.

The only thing that matters is whether or not that spectator derives enjoyment from the game he is watching.

Two-year college baseball is only a step below the major university level, which many experienced observers claim is equal to many Class C professional baseball loops.

The only faults in two-year college sports, studies or activities obviously lie only in the minds of the blind critics, those who deride but are strangely lacking in practical knowledge of that at which they whine.

Midterm Blues Hit College Again

Sleepless Nights, Frantic Cramming Bring Woes

Apparently the Midterm Blues are again hovering over the college until this Friday, and stereotypes of some of the students is herein described.

The Chronic Worrier:

Chronwo lies awake the night before the exam and confuses his musical knowledge with geography, physics, jewelry courses, and natural character. He believes his psychology question to read thus: "Conjecture the dissimilarity of the contour of a stringed instrument of percussion and the loveliness of a ruby anterior division which contains the brain of the physical organism."

Waiting Willie

Waiting until the last day before the test, Willie started studying at 1 p.m. and decides to keep at it until 8 a.m. By next morning, his knowledge is on a par with that of the great brains of the world. Willie's ability in geography matches that of the atlas; studies of psychology would make Dr. Freud blush, and knowledge of opera would put Gino Prato to shame. There is one drawback; by the time class starts he is also able to out-nap Rip Van Winkle.

Noe Itall

Noe refuses to open a book, believing it will only fill his empty head with unimportant data. After the test he strolls up to the narrator's desk and states that the material wasn't included in any of the lectures. The professor reminds him that there are text-books on the subject. Noe replies that he has one but the pages are all stuck together.

The Cheater

There is a lack of this type here . . . because the instructors have eagle eyes. The cheater will never pull out a hankerchief for fear of dropping one-thousand small, note-filled papers on the floor. Don't believe that the penned dates on his body have anything to do with his age. A friend had 1776 knuckles, 1842 wrists, and 1938 palms. His numbers will expand once he graduates from college and does post-graduate work at San Quentin.

Don John

Don doesn't know what Blues of any type are, least of all Midterm Blues, but he understands red-heads, blondes, and brunettes. His main problem is getting to college in the first place. A little black book and a nickel are his only assets, and if he can't borrow a dime he won't even make it to Phelan Avenue.

He avows his choice of subjects, sewing, cooking and the like, are being taken for their educational value. Perhaps so, but he failed to turn in a doily and received an "F" in sewing.

Library Noted For Volumes, Scenic View

Open Stacks And Modern Lighting Library Assets

In 1935 the City College library was established, and since then it has grown into one of the finest open stack libraries at any two-year college in the state. The library is best known for its comfortable atmosphere, modern lighting, and beautiful view, and its extensive book collection.

One of the main features of the college library is the open stack system. This system permits students to browse in the stack sections behind the desk. Another feature of the library is the use of the honor system. By using this system students have free access to all parts of the library on their honor not to deface any library materials.

The spacious rooms allow more comfort and give more students the opportunity to make use of the library's many facilities. There are three sections to the library, the reference room, the reading room and the main reading room.

Almost 50,000 volumes of good reading and reference material are provided, and space for 50,000 more is available.

When the library first got its start in 1935 it was located in balconies, walled in, at each end of the Galileo High School women's gymnasium. It wasn't until 1940 that the science building was finished, and the library was moved there. With the completion of Cloud Hall, the library was moved to its present location.

THE CLOUD HALL LIBRARY, which is one of the finest in the state, features the open stack system, which allows students to browse in the stack sections back of the main desk. Opening and closing hours this semester are from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m.

HEMINGWAY, Hemingway. Hemingway: there is a magic to that word.

For it draws readers as personality, looks and money draw friends. And we like readers and money. And Hemingway, even though we are going to criticize his "cold realism" portrayed in The Sun Also Rises.

"You are all a lost generation" is considered the theme of this novel. It is a story about the effect of war on people. The style, dialogue and story may be great, but, we think, the "cold realism" portrayed is as real as midterm grades.

This lost generation consists of four men and a woman who have lost their sense of security and faith in life, but they have retained their natural emotions. Lady Brett Ashley, whose title is ironic, is a lady of ill repute, and, although they are aware of the fact, Robert, Mike and Jake love her. This in itself is unlikely.

Yet the impossibility of the story is enhanced, for these men are without personal pride. And this is our criticism. For certainly an individual with no personal vanity or pride can not have any more pride, regard or love for any other single mortal.

True it is that a man without personal pride, of whom history records only a few examples, may be a humanitarian and respect or love mankind in general. But he cannot focus his love on any single person. If he has no respect for himself, he cannot have any more respect for another individual who is similar to himself.

So, the "cold realism" presented in this tale of woe is fooling no one. "Mr. Way."

TOO SHORT: For its audience appeal, The Taming Of The Shrew is hailed as one of the best productions of the college's little theater. Its musical background was composed by Glenn Wescott, a music student here who has written the musical background for all of the little theater's productions this semester. The commendable performances of Stan Weston, as Petruchio, Bob Phalen as Baptista, and Mel Rasmussen as Greumio added greatly to the play's success. The only major criticism of the two hour show seems to be that it was "too short."

BOYS WILL BE BOYS and we agree with her philosophy. Miss M. Enne and Mrs. Nicholas Domars, visitors from Finland, recently toured the college. Upon being asked her opinion of the boys in this country, Miss Enne, a retired instructor, said, "There are no bad boys in Finland, and they're all good here too."

The Bohemian — Another Visit To The Sunny Mediterranean

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

THOSE days are gone, never to be recaptured again, you think as a sonorous guitar strums its melancholic tune. You have now lapsed into a new world of hurriedness and petty cares, being conscious of tomorrow, always tomorrow, never time to live today.

Yes, it's true you dwell in comfort, enjoy the luxuries so yearned for in those earlier years of indecision, when your goals meandered like a lost ship. Yet there lacks satisfaction; within you a trace of restlessness still undulates.

From time to time you reminisce and begin to long for that other life known so well. The morning greetings from the picturesque bootblacks of Madrid are even missed.

They were considered fortunate for not having to rise early as the other laborers. Around ten in the morning, they gathered in front of the cafe conversing in small groups and taking coffee or cups of hot chocolate. Each was dressed alike, in a uniform of faded blue.

When they walked, it was in a strange, twisting motion, characterized by a limp. This was as much a sign of their occupation as was the box, tied with a leather strap slung on their drooping shoulders.

In passing you observe how they anxiously turned, threw a quick, sharp glance at your shoes and then rushed out from their retreat calling, "Aqui, Senor."

Slowly, you searched for Manuel between the shower of gesticulating hands trying to attract your attention. After spotting him, you signaled for him to come to a table on the not-yet-crowded promenade.

Every morning at that same time, you sat there in your favorite cafe, reading a newspaper and drinking coffee while the little old man in blue, wearing a worn cap, polished your shoes.

He would open his box, select carefully the polish, apply it in generous amounts and brush the shoes vigorously. Not wishing to disturb your reading, he waited until you noticed that the job was finished.

Finally, you laid the paper aside, glanced at the shiny surface of your shoes and complimented him. Because he was your prediject "limpiabotas," tipped him. By the time this prodecure was over the streets were filled with pedestrians and you would get up to join them, leaving the cafe behind until nightfall.

• Council Usurping Power?

Editor, The Guardsman:

This writer has it on good authority that the members of the Student Council intend to have reserved parking spaces for themselves in the new parking area adjoining the cafeteria. The reason being given for this unprecedented move is, "When the members have business to attend to, they don't want to have to be parking way down there and running all over the place." This was quoted directly from a member of the Student Counell.

This same student, when asked by what authority the Student Council intended to reserve these places, replied, "By their own (The Student Council's) authority." How's that for an outright assumption of power? Let this go through and the next thing they'll be doing is voting themselves salaries and days off.

There appears to be some inconsistencies on the matter of authority. Another member of the Student Council stated that the authority for this move came from the campus police. When asked how they managed to swing that, the reply was, "The Student Council runs the campus cops." I challenge the innocent campus police to make a reply to this statement, for I am sure they are in no way subject to the Student Council.

Now, fellow students, the rest is up to you. Organize some resistance to this move. Write letters; gripe; bring any influence you have to bear. And, failing all else, make it an issue at the next elections and vote in some officers who have your interest at heart and not their own comfort.

Art Instructor Here Aids In Ball Decoration

Evans Ecke, art instructor here, assisted in the decoration of the Fairmont Hotel's adjoining rooms of the Gold Ballroom and Nob Hill Room for the Black and White Ball held in San Francisco April 19.

Decorator Barton Davis and Ecke spent three weeks designing, constructing, and coordinating the artistic decorations for the ball. Robert Kovacic, also an art instructor at the college, aided Ecke in assembling an obelisk.

The obelisk had four sides, two of which were decorated by military motifs while the opposite sides contained musical instruments. It reached a summit of 23 feet where a sunburst adorned the top.

Baroque, the theme of the dance, characterized the late eighteenth century when clothing and art design were greatly exaggerated.

The Fairmont had ballroom dancing while concurrently the St. Francis handled Latin-American music; the Palace hotel played Viennese waltzes and the Mark Hopkins jazz, all for the similar purpose of raising funds for the San Francisco symphony.

Anarchists are blamed for inciting workers during the Haymarket riots which caused the death of seven police.

Rams Seek Conference Track Victory

Burkhead Trackmen To Clash With League's Top Performers Saturday At Big Eight Meet In Sacramento

With the round-robin championship safely tucked away, the Ram tracksters go after a clean sweep when they take on the top performers in the Big Eight conference in the All-Conference meet this Saturday, May 5, at Sacramento. Trials are at 10 a.m., finals begin at 3 p.m.

Under the guidance of Coach Roy Burkhead, and sparked by their great sophomore sprinter-hurdler, Clint Redus, the San Franciscans have marched methodically through this season undefeated, racking up wins over the seven league foes, and the Stanford and Cal Frosh teams.

As nice as it is to take round-robin honors, it is the conference meet that decides the official champion, and the Rams have their work cut out for them to successfully defend the meet championship won last year.

Top battle of the year, and perhaps in the history of the Big Eight, should be between Redus and the rapidly-improving Ray Norton of Oakland. Norton was barely edged by Redus and Cal's Al Kellogg in the 100 yard dash in the Rams' opening meet, and the Thunderbird ace, called as great a natural sprinter as he has ever seen by Burkhead, has been working hard for the express purpose of topping Redus in the conference shindig.

On the same weekend that Redus was winning four events against tough Modesto, Norton was registering Northern California bests of :21.5 in the 220 and :24.1 in the low hurdles, and taking the 100 in :10.0 and the broad jump in 21-6½. With Redus probably skipping the 220 for the 100 and both hurdles this Saturday, and Norton possibly ignoring the hurdles for the sprints and broad jump, the two will probably meet only in the century, in a race that will almost certainly lower the existing loop record of :09.9.

The rest of the track events are reasonably clear-cut, with standout performers in each one figuring to win without too much trouble. Redus looks for wins in both hurdles and, unless Norton competes in the lows, Ram teammate George Jones is a good bet for place points in both events.

The 440 and 880 could both turn into tight ones, with a pair of San Franciscans contenders in each event. Ken Richter, a surprise winner against Modesto with :50.6, and Myron Zimmerman are as good quarter-millers as can be found in the league, and Ron Anderson and Les Andersen will push for points in the 880. Ray Hale, as near to a sure thing as is possible in a track meet, figures to cop the 880, if he enters, and the mile and two mile.

Top competition in the field figures to be in the broad jump, where seven top performers will match leaps. The Rams boast four top men: Norman King, with a 21-9¾ to his credit; Bob Guddee, with a best of 21-5¾; Al Hardy, at 21-5½, and Ben Walker with 21-5. All four of these marks came in the Modesto meet, and shut out Pirate Roger Davis, who recorded an early-season 22-8 but hasn't touched it since.

Ram co-captain Walker will also go in the high jump, teaming with Le-Roy Thomas and Kevin O'Sullivan to offer a 1-2-3 San Francisco punch. All have done 6-1, and all can place in a field that includes Ernie Smith and John Allen of Modesto, with early-season marks of 6-5 and 6-4 respectively, and Oakland's Hal Theus, defending champion, who turned out late and has a top of 6-1 this season.

The versatile Walker will [illegible] the pole vault, where he is consistently around 12-0, but doesn't figure to score high against the Santa Rosa trio of Carl Cox, Norm Beeker and Mike Franchetti, all above 13-0 this year, and Sacramento's Roger Biffle, at 12-9.

Another battle looms in the discus, where Frank Carroll, unbeaten in the Big Eight this year, will represent City College against Modesto's Marvin Stewart and Tom Ross of Santa Rosa.

The team fight should be a two-way affair between the Rams and Modesto, with always-improving Oakland a threat, and Santa Rosa an outside bet to take high honors.

Rain Cancels Dual Meet With Cats For Second Time

The scheduled track meet with Sacramento, the final dual meet of the season for the Rams, was rained out for the second time last Friday, April 27, and now cannot be made up until after the All-Big Eight meet this Saturday, May 5, at Sacramento.

A triangular meet involving Sacramento, Stockton and City College was originally set for April 13, but wet weather forced the Panthers to postpone the meet. Stockton, unable to make up at any future date because of scheduling difficulties, agreed to forfeit the meet to the powerful San Franciscans.

The dual meet was rescheduled for last Friday, but rain during the week had made a quagmire of Hughes Stadium, the Panthers' home track, and there were no other fields available. With the all-important Conference affair this Saturday, Ram Coach Roy Burkhead decided not to run the twice-postponed dual battle until next week, probably on Tuesday, May 1.

National League Contest Sponsored By Guardsman

Beginning today and lasting until Monday, May 14, The Guardsman is sponsoring a contest of National League baseball predictions, with the prize being a free Associated Students card for next semester.

All those interested in entering this contest are urged to submit their eight National League selections, in order of preference, to The Guardsman office, S-304, by Monday, May 14.

Selections should include the student's name and address, and the contest is open to all members of the student body.

The AS card will be awarded on Monday, September 31, the day following the end of the National League season.

Coach Here Advised Venturi On Golfing

Ken Venturi, the local golfer who recently made such a fine showing in the Masters Tournament, was a dyed-in-the-wool tennis player when a teenager, until he got some good advice from Roy Diederichsen, court mentor here.

The young whiz of the fairways was preferential to tennis in his Lincoln High School days, until Diederichsen advised him to devote full time to golf, adding that Venturi's real future was on the tournament circuit.

Ram Golf Squad Tops Stockton, 9-6

Winning their third match of the season, the Ram golfers squeezed by Stockton, 9-6, at Harding Golf course on Friday, April 20.

The Rams end their season this Friday, May 4, against Modesto.

Like the two previous matches, the winner in the Stockton game wasn't decided until the number five men had played. Up until then the score had been tied 6-6. Bob Zimmerman of the Rams then blanked Les Gini of the Muster[illegible] 3-0 to give the final score.

In other matches, Frank Hubert was defeated by Burgess Windsor of the Mustangs, 1-2, but the Rams tied the score when Gil Brunk beat Bob Moffitt 2-1 to make the score 3-3.

The Rams took the lead in the next match as Don McDowell topped Ken Hultgren 2½ to ½ but they were quickly tied again as the Mustangs' Dale Jensen did the same thing to Phil Palen.

This set up the 6-6 tie which Zimmerman broke in the final match to give the Rams their victory.

Brunk and McDowell both shot in the seventies, getting 77 and 79 respectively.

Ram Nine Tops Contra Costa Twice To Hold Lead, Faces Santa Rosa In Crucial Pair Here Saturday

By Lou Lucia

An 8-5 victory over West Contra Costa at Richmond and a 9-5 decision over the same opponents at Big Rec last week enabled the Rams to retain their league lead over the second place Santa Rosa team.

A double-header that could decide the Big Eight championship transpires this Saturday, May 5, at 12:30 p.m., as the second place Santa Rosa team vies with the Rams at Balboa Park.

A six-run outburst in the third inning of the second game, when 12 Rams stepped to the plate, gave Bill Fischer's crew an adequate lead.

With two outs and Lou Flores on first base on a base on balls, Rock Giordano walked three consecutive batters to make the score 2-1. Ferrari rose to the occasion by hitting a triple over centerfielder Ben Walker's head to clear the bases. Bandettini then knocked in Ferrari and scored on Bukowatz's one base shot.

Flores tripled two more across the plate in the seventh and Ferrari came through with a single in the eighth to knock in his fourth run.

Warman was the winning pitcher for the second time over the Comets, as he came in to relieve Fred Glosser in the fourth. Bandettini made his appearance in the seventh and held the Comets scoreless to preserve the victory.

Ironically, the Comets outhit the Rams 17-10, but free passes to first base accounted for six Rams crossing the plate.

By scoring two runs in each of the last four innings, the Rams erased a five run West Contra Costa lead in the Tuesday tilt, staked Ray Warman to his first league victory, and gave coach Bill Fischer his first victory over the Comets on their home grounds since he has coached at the college.

Warman made his first mound appearance since being injured at Sacramento a winning one by scattering ten hits.

The Ram lefty walked in the sixth and Lou Flores followed with a blast over Seawright Field's right field wall to start the team on their way.

Two unearned runs in the seventh frame set the climatic stage for Roger Ferrari's line-drive single, which scored Ken Dito and Blair LeMire with the tying and go-ahead runs.

Insurance runs were added in the ninth, as Jim Poppin walked with the bases loaded and LeMire drove in the last tally with his fourth consecutive single.

Defensive maneuver of the day went to center-fielder Bob Bandettini who made a shoestring catch of Jim McGowan's line shot.

Former heavyweight champion Jersey Joe Walcott scored identical third round knockouts over Phil Johnson in 1936 and his son, Harold Johnson, in 1950, both times in Philadelphia.

Ex-Ram Athletes Plan Future Wins At Other Colleges

Athletes come and go, but the memory and records linger on.

Every college is proud of its star performers in the athletic field, and there are many former members of the college who have gone on to new heights since leaving the Red and White.

Last fall, Coach Grover Klemmer's squad of footballers had one of their best seasons as they won 9 and lost 1 and finished second in the Big Eight Conference.

Among those players who have gone on to higher education and future glory are the following: Van Parish, San Jose State; Tom Kiefer, San Francisco State; Bert Mondino, Cal Aggies; Willie Hudson, Cal Poly; Stan Keith, San Jose State; Les Barros, Rich Plazza and Dick Mannini, Cal Poly.

Others planning to attend other colleges are Rich Martucci, San Francisco State; Bill Canihan, San Jose State; Sandy Malnick and Mack Calhoun, San Francisco State; and Al Chatman, Cal Poly.

In the basketball sport, Sid Phelan's crew sends the following cagers to further basketball wars: Rich DiConti, San Jose State; Al Martino, San Francisco State; Norm King and Al Mock, COP; Walt Morgan, San Jose State; Dan Curley, COP; Clarence Grider and John Rudometkin, California.

Coach Bill Fisher's baseball team contributes the following to the other colleges: Ken Dito, California; Roger Ferrari, USF; John McCarthy, Blair LeMire, San Francisco State; Glenn Buckowatz, COP; Jim Poppin and Bob Bandettini, California; Larry Nassim, Fred Quinn, Fred Glosser, Vic Williams, San Francisco State; and Lou Flores, San Jose State.

Completing the cycle, Coach Roy Burkhead's tracksters have decided on the following: Doug Tanner, Frank Carroll and Myron Zimmerman, California; Clint Redus, Occidental or San Jose State; LeRoy Thomas, COP; Lloyd Castello, San Francisco State or San Jose State; Ray Batz, San Francisco State; Ken Richter, San Jose State or California; George Jones, San Jose State or Texas; Roy Buekman and Dennis Moorhead, San Francisco State; and Ben Walker, San Jose State.

Buttimer, Instructor Here, Wins Northern California Tennis Title

Harry Buttimer, business education instruetor here, upset defending champion Nick Carter, 6-3, 6-2, in the final round to win the 11th annual Northern California tennis championship last Sunday, April 29, at Golden Gate Park.

Buttimer also teamed with Harry Roche to capture the men's doubles, topping the 1955 winners, Butch Krikorian and Joe Woolfson, 1-6, 6-3, 6-0.

HARRY BUTTIMER

Donna Story, a freshman here, advanced to the finals of the women's singles before being edged by champion Linda Vail of Oakland, 2-6, 6-4, 6-4. Miss Story and Miss Vail were upset in the women's doubles, losing to Ruth Snell and Vivian Roberding, 6-4, 6-2.

A ranking national player, Buttimen, the underdog, had little trouble with Carter, whipping the Oakland ace in straight sets. The win avenged last year's final round, when Carter topped Buttimer to take the championship. Carter also took the title in 1954.

Buttimer's victory came largely on his cannonball serve, acknowledged as the finest in Northern California. He is a graduate of Lowell High School and University of California.

Buttimer and Roche, the veteran team of the Olympic Club, came back after being trounced in the opening set, and took the next two for the doubles crown. He and Roche have been playing as partners for several years.

Miss Story carried Miss Vail, among the outstanding women players in Northern California, out to full sets, winning the first and battling the champion to the limit in the final two.

AS MIDTERMS are currently topnotch on the calendar, club and organization activities are slowing down so that grades can be kept up or brought up.

Zeta Phi Sigma fraternity is starting a perpetual trophy that will be given each semester to the outstanding member. Social chairman Joe Banovich has a full social calendar for the remaining semester.

Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity had a very successful hunting trip over the weekend. No game was bagged, but the men are now looking forward to a fishing trip. The fraternity is also planning a big alumni picnic to be held early in June.

The Theta Xis pledges gave the members a Chinese dinner last Sunday at the home of Patty Ellis.

Committees are being formed by the Collegiate Christian Fellowship for the May Festival. Oscar Preston is in charge with Beverly Secrest in charge of materials and Tak Watanabe in charge of booth construction. The group meets during college hour in C221.

A business meeting was held at the home of Phil Malnick to discuss plans for the Tau Chi Sigma fraternity's House Of Blue Lights dance to be held May 25.

Zeta Chi sorority is currently making plans for the coming May Festival. They are beginning to work on the float and make preparations for the booth.

Pledge week ended with Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity gaining six pledges. They are Leigh Guerra, Pete Russell, Bill Pound, Rudy Benton, Jerry Redford and Bill Johnson. Final interrogation was held at Jack MacDonald's house.

Alpha Lambda Chi sorority recently held a business meeting at the home of Paula Moore. Their pledge during pledge week was Gail Terrido. Plans are now underway for the float and booth for the May Festival next month.

Members of the Canterbury Club are planning to go on their annual retreat to be conducted by the Rev. Father Ison at St. Dorothy's Rest, Camp Meeker, Calif. The retreat is to be for two days, Friday and Saturday, May 11 and 12. Fee for the two days will be $6.00.

Under the direction of Ralph Kirk, vice-president, Beta Tau fraternity experienced one of its most outstanding pledge weeks. Those who were initiated are Tyk Stamatus, Al Maliwaeko, Chuck Pritchard, Jerry Campbell, Chuck Young, Bill McCurdy, George Victorine, Milt Anderson, Bill Robinson, Ellis Pizzi, Stan Nielson, Ted Comesia and Ron Limneos.

Applications For May Festival King, Queen Contest Still Being Accepted; Dinner, Amusements Are Scheduled

Plans and preparations for the May Festival, the college's annual Associated Men Student spring celebration to be held at the Cow Palace on Friday evening, May 18, are under way, Wayne McFadden, AMS president, stated recently.

May Festival, known in former years as the Mardi Gras, has transferred its location this year from the college campus to the spacious Cow Palace to facilitate greater crowds and extensive amusements.

Contestant applications for the King and Queen contest are still being received and are expected to be chosen before long, McFadden said.

Dancing to an orchestra is to be one of the bigger attractions this year, and western-style clothes and decor are planning as the general mode of attire. Other amusements and games are also on the agenda, together with tentative plans for serving dinner. It was thought that a full-course dinner would add to the attractions and encourage more students and their families to "spend the evening." The college's hotel and restaurant department will handle the food concessions.

May Festival, McFadden pointed out, is held primarily to serve two purposes: to create an evening of unity and pleasure for students and to help raise funds for campus organizations. Each organization will erect a booth or stall in which some entertainment is offered for a small participation charge. Small games are expected to be a better share of the amusements, each charging a nominal amount to play. Every partlepating organization receives its share of the proceeds.

The competition last year was a part of the college's 20th Anniversary and was called the 20th Anniversary Festival. Richard Amico and Barbara Batmale were crowned King and Queen of the celebration and a dance was held following a parade of floats on Junipero Serra Boulevard. Booths were set up in the parking lot offering mock marriage ceremonies, shaving contests, nail driving and frog jumping contests, to name a few.

Smith Hall To Be Dedicated May 21

George D. Smith Hall, now known as the student union building, will be officially dedicated on Monday, May 21, Louis Batmale, dean of Semi-professional Courses here, announced last week.

Honor guest for the event will be George D. Smith, the man for whom the building is named. Smith is head of the Mark Hopkins Hotel.

The dedication program will consist of a dedicatory program and dinner. "Normally in Spring, the Hotel and Restaurant Department has hosted the California Northern Hotel Association," Batmale stated, "but this year the dedication will be held in conjunction with the hotel meeting."

Guests for the occasion, he declared, will include the members of the Board of Education, Dr. Harold Spears, Superintendent of Schools, Mayor George Christopher, and many leading hotel men.

More About Sophs

tering the contest is that they have completed at least 30 or more units of study here.

Two meetings of the sophomore class have been called for Monday, May 7, at 2 p.m. and Friday, May 11, during college hour, and "everyone interested in helping out is encouraged to come," Buckley added.

A Cappella Choir To Join Concert At COP

A Cappella Choir members will participate in an afternoon concert and dinner, to be held at the College of the Pacific next Monday, May 7, Fiosita Badger, director of the choir, said last week.

The choir will make its initial appearance on the campus this semester at the dedication of the George D. Smith Hall on Monday, May 21, Miss Badger said.

Combining talents with the Sixth Army Presidio Band on Sunday, May 27, the choir is scheduled to sing in the Presidio. Solo numbers by both groups will precede the joint singing, according to Miss Badger.

Also on the choir's agenda is a musical program which will be presented to the students here during college hour on Friday, June 1.

Students Apply Now For Summer Employment

All students who have filed their summer job applications, including personal data sheet, personal rating sheet, and job application form, and who have not been notified of job openings, should report to the placement office immediately for additional job opportunities, Joseph Amori, placement director here, recently stated.

Twelve Debaters Attend SF State Political Meet

Twelve delegates have been tentatively selected to represent the college in a mock political convention to be held at San Francisco State College on Saturday, May 12, Thomas Dutcher, debate coach here, announced this week.

Sponsored by the Northern California Forensic League and including all of the major colleges in northern California, the purpose of the convention is to set up platforms for the Democrat and Republican parties in the field of foreign policy, civil liberties, and agriculture.

Every college will have a committee for each of the issues involved and will submit their recommendations to their respective parties for further discussion, Dutcher said.

The 12 City College delegates picked so far are Gary Verbin, Jim Carroll, Vic Hebert, Bill Whitney, Barbara Poister, Klaus Arons, Frank Czyzewski, Willie Jones, Phil Braverman, Pat Mahoney, Don Ball and Al Moss.

Dutcher said that he is still short on debaters and urged anyone interested to consult him in his office in Cloud Hall, 335B.

"There are excellent trips and a variety of speech offerings to attract the interest of everyone," Dutcher said. No experience is necessary, he added.

Wall Street Journal Educational Director Will Speak To Business, Journalism Students Here Monday

Dr. J. Leroy Thompson, director of the Educational Bureau of the Wall Street Journal, will speak here next Monday, May 7, to students interested in journalism, business, economic, and financial careers, Edward W. Larson, instructor of business, announced last week.

Two separate sessions of his talk will be given in Room 246 in Cloud Hall, at 10:10 and 11:10 a.m. The reason for two talks is because of the small capacity of the room, Larson said, which will hold only 74 students.

Although these lectures are presented primarily for business and journalism students, all interested students are invited to attend, Larson stated.

The talks will be 40 minutes in length, with a 10-minute question and answer period. Thompson will discuss how business is reported by a modern newspaper, the organization of a newspaper and what problems are encountered, and the function and makeup of a news wire service.

There are approximately 300 colleges and universities in this country which employ the Wall Street Journal for class use.

While in the area, Thompson will speak at the University of California, the University of San Francisco, San Jose State College, Stanford and other colleges.

Thompson is listed in Who's Who In Education and Leaders In Education. His range of speaking arrangements include economic and management workshops, executive development programs, as well as advertising clubs, management groups, service clubs and sales executive clubs.

Each year, a graduating student in the division of business education here is awarded a silver medal and a year's subscription by the Wall Street Journal on the basis of high scholastic standing and potential promise in the field of finance and investment.

Deadline Near For Signup In Summer Session

Students interested in attending summer session here from June 25 to August 3 are urged to enroll as soon as possible, Mary Jane Leanard, the college's registrar, said recently.

Enrollment is expected to reach 900 this year, she added, and students have been enrolling at approximately 35 per day since the pre-registration program opened last month.

Courses offered include business 1B, 50A, 60, 75A, 80A, 80B; chemistry 1A, 1B, 8, G1G, G17; communication G5A, G6A, G6B, G12; criminology 51A, 60A; economics 1A, 1B; engineering 22, 90; English 1A-1, 1A-2, 1B; French 1A, 1; history 4A, 17A, 17B; Hotel and Restaurant 63; humanities G11A; journalism 26A, 26B; mathematics C, D1-1, D1-5, D2, 3A, 3B, 4A, 90A, 90B, 31; music 21A, 27B; philosophy 6B; political science 36; psychology 1A-1, 1A-2, 1B, G-7, G-12, 33; sociology 1A, 1B; Spanish 1A, 1; speech 1A, 1B, and zoology 1A, 1B, or zoology 1A may not enroll in any additional courses. Students are requested to consult with counsellors for courses not listed above.

A maximum of six units is permitted, and students must confirm their registration at the registrar's office no later than June 21, by telephone or in person. Students who do not confirm their registration by this date will lose their reservations and will be restricted to registering on June 25 in those classes not yet filled, Miss Learnard warned.

Veterans under Bill 550 must carry the equivalent of 14 class hours per week for full subsistence. For ¾ subsistence, 10 to 13 hours are required and for ½ subsistence, 7 to 9 hours are required.

Library Adds Fifty Volumes To Shelves

Approximately 50 new books, including a vast array of titles in many different subjects, have been added to the college's library within the past month, according to Irene Mensing, librarian staff member here.

The library, constantly adding new stock to build, supplement, and replace, has grown considerably in the past six months with an estimated 200 new additions. The additions are expected to keep the library comparable with other college libraries in the Bay Area in breadth, volume, and scope in pleasure reading, reference, and technical capacity.

Some of the newer books on the new book shelf now open for lending are Edge Of The Sea by Rachel Carson, The Jacksonians by Leonard White, Bride Of Innesfallen by Eudora Welty, Cat On a Hot Tin Roof by Tennessee Williams, and Boon Island by Kenneth Roberts.

Guardsman Distribution Open Again As Council Rescinds Limited Action

By Elmer Gentry

Guardsman distribution was put back on a free basis last week, after Student Council passed a motion reseinding its previous action.

Five council members, including Chairman Bill Cirimele, president of the Associated Students, were not in attendance because of previous commitments. Joyce Weaver, AS vice-president, wielded the gavel for this session.

Jim Kennedy made the motion to rescind the limited distribution plan, which in turn started a session of heated discussion. Many arguments were brought up, pro and con, concerning the highly controversial issue.

In an attempt to postpone the meeting and delay the vote, one council member, Darlene Reitz, received permission to leave. This action brought the number of members present down to nine, which is one short of the number needed for the necessary quorum.

It was brought up that, under parliamentary rules, Miss Weaver could appoint someone not on the council to take her place at the chair, thus making up the shortage left by Miss Reitz's departure. This also allowed Miss Weaver to vote on the motion.

Wayne McFadden, president of the Associated Men Students, was, because of his cabinet position, designated to preside, and forthwith he took charge of the proceedings.

Rose Thurman, president of the Associated Women Students, asked for a postponement on the vote, asking, "Why doesn't council wait until next meeting, when all members will be present, to bring this issue to a vote?" Ignoring Miss Thurman's protest, council proceeded with the vote, which came out seven for free distribution, none against, and three abstentions.

The meeting was marked by repeated outbursts of anger, both on the part of council members and those in attendance. At one point, an observer had to shout to regain order so that Miss Weaver could conduct proceedings in an orderly manner.

An additional allocation request from the track team for the sum of $253.92 was granted, after receiving a favorable recommendation from Finance Chairman Emory Lebonville.

Ed Emig, Club Activity Board's representative on cabinet, asked council to take action against five clubs and organizations which have failed to submit a petition and a charter to the CAB for approval. The clubs and organizations to which he referred were Phi Rho Pi, Sigma Tau Sigma, Horticulture Society, Hotel and Restaurant Society, and Lambda Phi.

520 Students To Get AA Degree June 15

Plans are now underway for the 21st annual commencement exercises for City College graduates, which will be held at Riordan High School auditorium on Friday, June 15, according to Dean Edwin C. Browne, chairman of the commencement committee.

Approximately 520 students will receive the Associates of Arts degrees. Those tentatively scheduled to graduate are named on the bulletin board outside the office of the registrar, S150.

Commencement exercises begin at 8 p.m. with music by the college band, and the processional starts at 8:15 p.m. The rest of the schedule is not yet known, but should be decided upon during the next week, Browne added.

Twenty-eight students who have earned a 2.3 grade point average in their two years here have been notified of tryouts for commencement speakers and will have a chance to try out to speak at the exercises, Browne said.

Red Heads Like Chaplin, Call Him Great Help

By Don Ball

OUT of England by way of a generous United States and into the everloving embrace of the communists: so goes the peripatetic Charlie Chaplin.

Chaplin was born, quietly enough, in London in 1889, in the year of the Johnstown flood. Tiring of the prosaic English life, he came to the US, where he established himself as one of the most popular comedians of this century through the then young medium of the movies.

As his success grew, so too did his income and in time he became one of the richest performers in the film industry.

There was only one small fly in Chaplin's ointment. A certain segment of the US population thought that a man who was getting as much from this country as Chaplin was, might indeed show his gratitude for his adopted country by becoming a citizen of said nation.

"Swear allegiance to America? Faugh," said Mr. Chaplin. "Is not my art a big enough contribution for these petty people?" And so it went with Chaplin receiving all the benefits which the US could provide him while refusing to recognize any debt toward the source of his prodigious fame and fortune.

Perhaps some excuse for the comedian can be given on the grounds of a lack of time on his part. For as some men change ties, Jolly Cholly was changing wives in order to wear a paternity suit. A rigorous schedule, indeed, especially for someone who had to make a movie or two at times.

One aspect of American life was particularly odious to Chaplin. He found it quite ridiculous that a man of his talent was expected to pay income taxes like any other member of the proletariat.

As his resentment grew, he became an outspoken critic of this country and a clarion of the virtues of those who "truly desire world peace," that is, the communists.

The last straw was tossed into Chaplin's hat a few years ago when an ill wind carried to him the news that the Treasury Department was more than a little interested in his tax returns, or more specifically, why didn't he return them.

Rather than break bread with the T-men, Chaplin grabbed his toothbrush and his current wife Oona and fled to Switzerland.

To his horror, Chaplin discovered that he had left a goodly portion of his fortune in the capitalist banks, so Oona was forced to don her dark glasses and tiptoe back into the states, where she stuffed a suitcase with the valuables and hustled back to Charlie to help him laugh at the US.

While in Switzerland, Chaplin reached the pinnacle of his career. For while there, he was named as a recipient of the coveted Stalin Peace Prize in 1953.

The joker is, Chaplin practically

ACP Rates Guardsman All-American For Twenty-Fourth Semester Award

For the 24th time in 29 semesters of membership, The Guardsman was last week awarded an All-American rating for the Fall 1955 semester by the Associated Collegiate Press.

Only three other two-year college papers in the nation received this highest of all ACP awards, which is determined each semester by judges in ACP headquarters at the University of Minnesota.

The All-American rating was the sixth consecutive award for the college newspaper, and was awarded last semester to only three other two-year colleges in the nation.

Each semester the Associated Collegiate Press conducts its rating service, in which member papers are judged and rated in the All-American, First Class, Second Class, Third Class and Fourth Class categories.

All phases of the newspaper, ranging from news content to use of typography, are scrutinized by the ACP judges and then assigned point ratings, which, totaled, comprise the classification. The 473 college papers which won ratings in the judging are divided into classes according to college enrollment and frequency of publication.

Editorial assistants were Toni Mannins, Mitsuya Ohno and Joe Calias. Reporters were Gary Alexander, Mario Cassulo, Frank Chase, Marion Cheader, Denny Deiman, Bob Kauth, Mauriee Paszkiewicz, Martha Rowley and Walter Sigg.

Cub reporters were George Briel, Jerry Cassidy, Charles Clausen, Joetta Colwell, Eugene Doherty, Elmer Gentry, Mario Giron-Cerna, Nancy Hawkins, Herman Hopkins, Lou Lucia, Ray MacIntyre, Nofie McClanahan, Dee Noodiman, Bob O'Brien and Alex Panasenko.

Photographers, under the direction of Bill Hamilton, included Ray Allen, Goodarz Bakhtiari, Maureen Brown, Alex Cornejo, Larry Dong, James Fong, Robert Frick, Dave Gehringer, Harry Gorman, Walter Lee, Bennett Mendola, James Sargent and George Wong.

At the present time DeUrioste is with the Harris, Upham and Company, members of the New York Stock Exchange. Executives from the downtown office and members of the administration will attend the luncheon.

Entertainment will be provided by the Men's Glee Club and Treble Clef under the direction of Robert Morton.

Dean Mary Golding announced that Anita Guerra and Martha Lozar, winners of the Deaman Scholarships, will receive their $125 awards at the luncheon.

Festival Posters For Emporium

ANNETTE LaGRAS, advertising art student here, puts the finishing touches on one of four May Festival posters, now on display in a window of the downtown Emporium store. Miss LaGras, Jimmy Lim, and Robert Palma did the art work for the four posters depicting the main phases of the May Festival—the parade, the king and queen contest (poster at left), the dance (poster at right), and booths. Advertising art student Jon Ardel designed the window display. Forty-Five Candidates Enter May Festival King, Queen Contest; Judging Scheduled Tomorrow In Cloud Hall

Forty-five candidates have filed petitions for the May 18, Cow Palace May Festival's King and Queen contests, which will be judged tomorrow, according to Leo Champagne, the contest chairman for the sponsoring Associated Men Students.

Twenty-five women and 15 men will compete for the regal titles, before an impartial group of judges not otherwise associated with the college. The judging will start at 3 p.m. and take place in the library in Cloud Hall. Names of the candidates were not available to The Guardsman at press time.

The festival will start with a parade initiating at the campus and concluding at the Cow Palace. Floats, banners, cars, flags, and decorative devices are being lined up for the send-off, commencing on Phelan Avenue at 6:30 p.m., and continuing at parade speed from Persia Avenue on to Mission and Geneva Streets to their destination.

Both San Francisco and City College police escorts will accompany the parade, Wayne McFadden, AMS president said, to assist the numerous floats, automobiles, and marchers through the traffic and streets.

Dancing is to be the big attraction this year after the parade comes to a halt at the Cow Palace. Dancing should begin around 8:30 p.m., continuing to midnight, McFadden added.

Numerous amusements are planned for the evening, each concession set up by the various clubs and organizations here.

Contests in balloon shaving, frog jumping, nail driving, and age guessing have been hinted as being a few of the attractions along with booths for mock marriages, fortune telling, and "ball throwing."

Each booth will be sponsored or operated by a club or organization, McFadden said, and a small charge will be made for participation in these attractions.

A "Western" theme for the festival has been planned, and McFadden asked those attending to wear casual-type clothing such as blue jeans, plaid shirts, Levis, and, if available, western caps or hats.

Food is expected to be served by the college's Hotel and Restaurant department from light snacks to complete dinners.

Free parking is available at the Cow Palace to an unlimited number of cars in the palace's parking lot facilities. Those who are unable to participate in, or follow the parade are guaranteed free parking space, McFadden declared, and no college identification is required to enter the parking grounds or the Cow Palace itself.

Sheraton-Palace Plaque Awarded To H&R Student

G. Phillip Ziehterman, Hotel and Restaurant student here, was the first recipient of the newly inaugurated Sheraton Award Plaque series at an H&R social meeting and dinner which was held at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel last Wednesday night.

Wesley Hadden, west coast sales director of the Sheraton Corporation of America, made the presentation during the meeting which followed the dinner.

A Sheraton Corporation committee, devised especially for the purpose, selected Zichterman from among three outstanding graduating H&R students who were nominated for the award by students and faculty members of the department. The names of the two runners-up were not available for publication at the present time.

Besides receiving the plaque, Zichterman will have his name placed on a perpetual plaque which will remain in the college.

Approximately 75 were in attendance at the event, including the H&R graduating class and faculty members of the department.

The principal speaker of the evening was George Thomas Cullen, general manager of the Sheraton-Palace Hotel, who stressed the important points which contribute to the success of an H&R student.

Also present were Richard Poltenghi and Russell St. John, sales manager and assistant sales manager, respectively, of the Sheraton-Palace. V. M. Patineau, assistant to the general manager, and Lucien Heyraud, department chef here.

This college was chosen to be the first to receive these plaque awards, and the Sheraton committee is observing the student and department reaction. The committee is tentatively planning to inaugurate this type of presentation in other H&R departments in colleges and universities.

AMS Smoker To Be Held Tonight In Gymnasium

Dad's Night will be the theme tonight at the combined Associated Men Student smoker and intramural boxing tournament, which will be held in the men's gymnasium starting at 7:30 p.m., according to Wayne McFadden, AMS president.

Entertainment and refreshments will be featured during the smoker portion of the program. A "blind man's swing," which is sponsored by the Inter-Fraternity Counell, will open the affair.

"One pledge from each of the nine fraternities has volunteered to enter the nine-man slugfest," McFadden said. To prevent any serious injury, the boxers will use extra heavy gloves, Bob Tueker, IFC president, explained.

Entrants and their fraternities are Ron Castro, Zeta Phi Sigma; Jerry Derry, Tau Chi Sigma; Don Franklin, Alpha Phi Epsilon; Leigh Guerra, Alpha Kappa Rho; Jerry Hill, Phi Beta Delta; Bob King, Gamma Phi Ypsilon; Howard Klein, Alpha Sigma Delta; Chuck Pritchard, Beta Tau; and Gerry Williams, Beta Phi Beta.

Arrangements for judo exhibitions are currently being made by Leo Champagne, IFC athletic commissioner. Several duets by Rose Marie Grider and Barbara Lindsley are also scheduled, McFadden said. They will be followed by a few solo numbers by Gail Fletcher and Fred Sieger.

Refreshments, which will be served by Alpha Phi Omega fraternity, will follow the smoker, McFadden announced, adding that the Associated Women Students may also present a can-can dance.

The evening's program will commence with the eight final matches in the college's intramural boxing tournament. The preliminary matches have been held during the last few weeks, and these matches tonight will pit the top boxers in each weight division, according to Roy Diederichsen, boxing coach and co-ordinator of the matches. Each bout will be three rounds, and a medal will be awarded to each of the winners.

Names and details concerning the intramural boxing tournament are published on page 3 of this paper.

Acknowledgment and credit for the arrangements of Dad's Night activities go to Diederichsen, McFadden, Tueker, Champagne, John Dudley, refreshment committee chairmen; Sam Franzella, entertainment committee chairman, and Mike Monteith, who was responsible for publicity of the affair.

Petitions for the Sophomore Ball king and queen contest are available now in Dean Ralph Hillsman's office in S169, the Associated Student office in Bungalow 2 or from Bill Anderson, king and queen chairman.

King and queen contest petitions must be turned in to one of these three sources by next Tuesday, May 15, and must be accompanied by a 5 by 7 inch picture of each contestant, Anderson stated.

Soph Week is scheduled for May 28 through June 2 with the Soph Ball being held Saturday, June 2, in the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel, from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. Admission to the affair is by AS card or $2.50 per couple.

The band as yet has not been selected, but Bobbie LeBoff, dance committee member, said that possibly Stephen Paul and his 16 piece band will provide the music for the affair, which is currently scheduled as semi-formal.

Ken Woodruff recently was appointed to act as chairman of the publicity committee by Jim Buckley, president of the Sophomore class.

Fluctuating Council Action Shows Headstrong Attitude

CONTINUING its fluctuating stand on the issue, Student Council last week voted through the third motion on Guardsman distribution.

The motion itself is meaningless. Under the latest plan, this paper will be given to AS card holders only until 1 p.m. on Wednesdays and to all students thereafter.

Only one hitch will make this plan flop: there isn't anyone in the entire AS membership willing to distribute the papers—in the morning or any other time.

As we said, the plan itself is meaningless. Its only value is proof positive of the headstrong, almost irreconcilable attitude which has been a regular feature of this semester's Council.

Student Councils come and go, and for the most part, semester activities are handled in the same manner year after year. It is when a vital issue arises, however, that the true value of these councils is determined.

The Guardsman distribution issue, tiresome as it must seem by now, is still with us, and for only one reason. Student Council has simply not taken any action whatsoever that corresponds with the opinion of the Associated Students they are supposed to represent.

Council has twice disregarded recommendations by two official groups on campus: the AMS, which comprises over 75 per cent of the total AS membership, and the Publications Board, which numbers the top AS officers among its members.

Instead of taking logical action, Council has instead heaped one inconsistency upon another, returning distribution to a free basis two weeks ago and then voting through the present semi-limited plan last week.

In its weaving course of inept and inconclusive action on this main issue of the day, the Council has turned it into a long, drawn-out affair of one stand one week and then another stand another week. If this is representing the Associated Students, then a new low in student government here has been reached.

The Student Council has had its big chance to show its worth, and has ingloriously flubbed it, through the tool of stubbornness, inaction. Its constant reversing of stands on the distribution issue has stamped this body as immature, voicing only individual opinions, and not representing those who elected them to office.

A few members on Student Council have remained resolute in their convictions. These are the members who have remained mindful of their obligation to the college and to the AS, and who deserved to be elected.

Guardsman editorial policy has always been directed toward the best interests of the college, and we, to the best of our ability, have tried to remain true to that objective.

Good points outnumber the bad points in student government here by a distinct margin, and we have been quick to mention the attributes in every instance. It would hardly be consistent, therefore, to let what we felt to be a bad job of student government practice go unmentioned.

Fine showings in AS government will continue to be made, but to keep the standards by which those showings are measured in the high place which they now occupy, a re-appraisal of records is necessary.

If the most powerful factor of student government, the voters, keep these ideals in mind while in the voting booth, then comments about the weaknesses of student government will become fewer and fewer.

Monroe More Than Meets Eye

Individuals Too Easily Misled By Mention Of Monroe Moniker

Did you know that Monroe . . . No, not Marilyn!

One may easily be misled by using surnames only and forgetting the first moniker. For instance, by just uttering the word Monroe someone will invariably say "Marilyn." Everyone has heard of Marilyn, but the type of person addressed leads to varied reactions.

All speak of Monroe one way or another.

Army General: "She is the most extensive work of a defensive character in the United States." He is speaking of 139-year-old fortress Monroe located in Virginia, which as stated above is of purely a defensive nature.

English teacher: "Miss Monroe founded a magazine of verse known as Poetry, which has been active in fostering the work of young poets." Correct. Born in 1861, Harriet Monroe was an American writer of poetry.

Teenager: "What a throat, what a diaphragm, just terrific." Yes, vocal artist, Vaughn Monroe, has made many records and is quite popular.

Political science instructor: "Monroe wrote one of America's greatest treatises when he wrote the Monroe Doctrine." James (not John, Thomas, or Henry as some have answered) Monroe, 8th President of the United States, spent some of his best years writing the Monroe Doctrine.

However, Miss Marilyn Monroe gained more name popularity in 24 years than James did in 71 years of earthly endeavor. James probably spent years working on his doctrine while Marilyn rose to world acclaim in a couple weeks of posing.

What if James were alive and about to orate in C100, and Marilyn was decorating Room C101. Classroom C100 would no doubt be empty, for the political science instructors would have to join the student body, because James would be sitting in the first row of the adjoining classroom.

But which is the Monroe Doctrine—a political protection and a guarantee of freedom from European interference to all states of North and South America, or an open mouth, wiggle, and blonde trademark?

This characteristic contrast points out how not to be President of the United States, but a scratching Tom Ewell.

Bullfighting Is An Essential Spanish Trait, Tradition That Has Spread To Other Countries

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

ON SUNDAYS at 3 o'clock in the afternoon—in every major city of Spain, the inhabitants form themselves into waves of exhilarated mobs. Only after much fanfare and confusion do they reach their destination, Plaza de Toros, where they may cheer and cry, admire and dispraise without restraint.

For here, in another hour, the Brave Festival will be celebrated.

The bullfight is a manifestation of Spanish character that defies comparison; it is an essential Spanish trait that is repeated in other countries only because of Spanish tradition and influence in those countries.

Those who are acquainted with the history of the "corridas," bullfights, maintain that this custom came to Spain from the island of Crete. Bullfights are represented on some of the Cretian frescoes. Others say that the Arabs were the originators of this sport, considered by many to be an art.

Regardless of its beginning, the corrida has long been regarded as a national festival. It provokes such strong passions that it would be difficult to imagine a Spaniard being dedicated to another pastime.

The corrida takes place in large amphi-theaters called Plazas de Toros, which seat up to 50,000 spectators. Some of the most famous ones are the plazas of Madrid, Barcelona and Seville. Although the Andalusians are the most ardent fans of the sport, the major Plazas are in Madrid and Barcelona. And a bullfighter can hope to attain universal fame only by being consecrated in the bullring in Madrid.

Each bullfighter has his own "cuadrilla," formed of two mounted picadors, a banderillero, whose duties we shall later describe, and an assistant. In the larger Plazas, the corridas consist of fights with six bulls, equally distributed among three bullfighters.

The Festival is usually presided over by the mayor or an important official, who directs the corrida by signaling with a white handkerchief. The president decides how many times the bull shall pass under the matador's cape, the number of jabs he shall receive from the picadors and just when the fatal sword thrust shall be made.

When the time has come for the corrida to begin, the doors to the Plaza are barred, leaving the late comers standing outside with tickets in their hands and curses on their lips. The Spaniards are most punctual when participating in their national festival.

The matadors with their respective "cuadrillas," dressed in picturesque costumes, parade around the arena to the tune of gay and stimulating music, usually dedicated to a famous bullfighter.

Suddenly quietness descends over the Plaza and is immediately broken by the shrill of a trumpet. This is a signal for the door to the stall where the bull is kept to be opened. The bull lunges out into the arena and the "cuadrilla" assigned to that particular bull goes out to meet him.

Next time we shall attempt to describe some of the events and feats that go into making this contest between the ferocity of beast against the skill and reasoning powers of courageous men, an artistic performance instead of a mere act of butchery.

Shots At Ramdom

JUST A SUGGESTION: John Lo Coco, a former student from the college who is currently trying his luck at Universal-International Studios in Hollywood, recently accepted an invitation to attend the May Festival here. He wrote that he will try to bring a well-known star along with him. But, we think, a few dozen blonde starlets might encourage more fathers and sons to attend the May Festival.

• •

UNBIASED: Lee Meriwether, another former student, who won the Miss America title in 1954, recently received a successful screen test with Warner Brothers. The technicolor shots proved her to be most photogenic. But because she has a three-year contract with the National Broadcasting Company, she was unable to make any commitments with Warner Brothers. Although she will not disclose for whom she will vote, she will appear and look pretty at both the Republican and Democratic conventions this year.

GRATITUDE UNBOUND: Although Edwina Moquin makes an attractive blonde, auburn hair did more for her, our agents report. Nevertheless, Miss Moquin is a prominent example of gratitude unbound. For she recently placed a sign on the bulletin board which read . . . "To the person who took my book (Taming of the Shrew): Thank you for returning my library card."

Again in the drama department, a few days later Carole Waugh, whose father owns Allen Waugh Furriers and whose mother is allergic to mink, had her purse stolen. Apparently experience has hardened the criminal, for he did not return a thing. Miss Waugh says she only wishes that her driver's license and personal identification cards would be returned. But how about your library card?

BIG DEAL: Over at the California Book Store they are currently running a big value sale on originally $2.25 belt buckles, which are now being sold for only 69 cents. And each buckle is initialed "San Francisco Junior College."

Twentieth Anniversary Of Forum

Ads Have Made Literary Magazine Self-Supporting

Forum, the college's annual creative writing magazine, is observing its 20th anniversary this year.

In 1936, the idea of this literary magazine was conceived by a college discussion club. With the country still in the throes of the depression, the first issue, as a whole, reflected a view of life as it was then on Skid Row.

The publication cost was at first defrayed by Associated Student funds, but as time went by, the cost of printing rose sharply, necessitating some other source of income.

As a solution to this problem, it was decided to sell advertising space. This idea proved successful to such an extent that the magazine became self-sustaining.

This year, $300 worth of advertising has already been solicited toward the $400 cost of printing 1,000 copies.

No effort has ever been made by the editors to direct the content. Students from the college, who voluntarily submit their work, have complete freedom of selection of topic.

After the deadline, the material that has been submitted is judged by 35 students, who comprise the Forum Board.

This year, from the 160 contributions received, there will only be room for approximately 35. Of the material submitted this year, there was a great preponderance of work with "death" as its theme.

The designs for the title page and cover are selected from entries submitted by students of an advanced art department group, and are voted on by the Forum Board in the same manner as the manuscripts. This year, from the seven entries submitted, those drawn by Emilio Sanchez were selected. As in past years, the popular Ram theme will predominate.

The spring 1956 staff has Catherine Connolly as its faculty adviser, with Jack Luscutoff as editor, Annette Legras as art editor, and Ed Emig as business manager.

Forum will be distributed approximately one week before the final examination period. It will be given with no charge to members of the Associated Students, and non-AS card holders will be charged 50 cents per copy.

Look Alert, Take Notes, Laugh At Jokes, Up Grade

COOKEVILLE, TENN.—(ACP)—These suggestions on how to get through college without even trying appeared in the Tennessee Tech Oracle and were reprinted by Pageant Magazine.

Bring your instructor newspaper clippings. If you don't find clippings dealing with the subject, bring in clippings at random, for he thinks everything deals with his subject . . . Look alert. Take notes eagerly, and don't stare at your watch unbelievingly and shake it.

Nod frequently and murmur, "How true!" To you this may seem exaggerated, but to him, it's quite objective . . . Sit in front, near him. (This only applies if you intend to stay awake.) . . . If you must sleep, arrange to be called at the end of the hour. It creates an unfavorable impression if you sit there dozing after the rest have gone.

Laugh at his jokes! (If he smiles expectantly, he has told a joke.) . . . Ask for outside reading. You don't have to read it. Just ask for it . . . Ask any questions you think he can answer . . . And if you know he's written a book or an article, ask in class if he has written it!

Rained-Out Ram Spikers Move On Fresno

Baseballers Face Bucs In Pair Saturday

Modestans Host Rams After Rain Reschedules Crucial Santa Rosa Duo; LeMire Tops Hitters In Latest Marks

By Lou Lucia

Modesto's tough baseballers host the Rams this Saturday, May 12, in a double-header that leaves only the rained-out Oakland game to be played in league competition, and the twin tilts with the Buccaneers could go a long way toward deciding the final position of the San Francisco nine in the final standings.

Scores of the all-important Santa Rosa games were unavailable at publication time due to rain canceling the double header Saturday and re-scheduling of the games for last Monday.

Largest Ram loss of the season came on Tuesday, May 2, when Coach Bill Fischer's car was stolen. Catching equipment, bats and baseballs, and team records were included in the theft.

Leading hitters for the Pirates are Joe Chappell and Buster Whitehead, though shortstop Terry Vitato is considered the best all around performer by Coach Ralph Johnson.

Roger Gray has been spearheading the pitching staff while Ed Vegley has been doing adequate relief work.

Portsider Gray was able to shut out West Contra Costa on only three hits. The 2-0 victory appears especially significant because West Contra Costa pounded out 27 hits against the Rams in two contests.

Thus far the Rams have averaged eight runs, nine hits and three errors per game.

Bob Bandettini has won the most games—three, leads in strikeouts with 18 in 23 innings pitched and has appeared in six of the nine games. Fred Glosser has pitched the most innings, 36, and Ray Warman has but a 1.40 earned run average per nine innings.

In Bandettini's last 10⅓ innings of hurling he hasn't allowed an earned run.

Unofficial team leading statistics find the following players in front of their teammates:

Times at Bat: Flores (39).
Hits: LeMire (14).
Runs: Dito (10).
Runs Batted In: Poppin (15).
Two Base Hits: McCarthy, LeMire, Poppin (1).
Three Base Hits: LeMire, Glosser, Poppin, Ferrari, Flores (1).
Home Runs: LeMire (2).
Batting Average: LeMire (.438).
Walks: McCarthy (15).
Stolen Bases: McCarthy (3).

Top performers against the Rams at this mid-point in the season have been Outfielders Bob Gritts (Stockton), and Bob Pringle (WCC), Shortstop Jim McGowan (WCC), Catcher Frank Torre (Stockton), Third Baseman Bob Freschi (San Mateo), and Pitchers Chuster Litzsey (Oakland) and Bob Leopold (Stockton).

Won-lost records for the Ram pitchers are as follows: Bandettini (3-0), Warman (2-0), Nissim (1-0), Glosser (2-1).

Just as one big threat came out of the All-Metropolitan meet, so another, even bigger, threat was eliminated. The surprise of the day, perhaps of the track year, came in the broad jump, where Roy Range, who won the 1955 Pan-American games with a terrific 26-6 leap, could go only 21-3 and failed to place among the first four in that event, therefore eliminating himself from the regional and State meets.

RAMBLINGS

By Al Moss

ED KRAFT, last year's outstanding Ram shortstop, has joined Bernie Kelly, another of Coach Bill Fischer's former charges, on the first string of the University of California nine.

Kraft has moved over to second base with the Bears, while Kelly, who served a hitch with Uncle Sam before joining the Berkeley baseballers, has been forced from center field to right, with Earl Robinson, the fabulous cager-turned-baseballer, now in center.

Northern California thinclads who thought they were through with the Dorsey track clan were sadly mistaken. Dick Dorsey captured both sprints in the State Junior College meet while competing for Santa Monica last year, and this year is racking up points for the USC Trojans.

News Item: Bob Dorsey, brother of Dick, raced to a :48.7 win in the 440 during the All-Metropolitan Conference meet, held in Bakersfield on April 29. Dorsey, also running for Santa Monica, grabbed a second in the 220 behind fabulous Ken Dennis of Los Angeles Valley, and this particular Dorsey doesn't mean sweet music for north state hopes in the State Meet at Modesto on May 26.

Golfers Shut Out By Bulldogs, 15-0

Suffering their worst defeat of the season, the Ram golfers were blanked, 15-0, by San Mateo at Harding Golf Course on April 30.

The Rams played their last regular season game last Friday against Modesto.

With no one on the Rams breaking into the scoring column, all of the matches ended with 3-0 scores in favor of the Bulldogs.

The first of the Rams to meet defeat was Gil Brunk, who was beaten by Chuck Blackburn. Frank Hubert followed the parade of Ram goose eggs when he fell to Bill West of the Bulldogs.

Don McDowell was topped by Bill Clancy and Phil Palen lost to Bob Stewart. Bob Zimmerman kept it unanimous by losing to San Mateo's Darryl Mohr.

This defeat left the Rams with a record of three wins, two losses and one tie. Low medalist for the match was Blackburn of the Bulldogs who shot a 72. Low man for the Rams was McDowell with an 85.

Netters Beat Cubs, Finish Dual Season

Although pressed most of the way, the Ram netters defeated Santa Rosa 6-1 at the Golden Gate Park courts on April 25.

The Rams next play in the Northern Section Championships next Friday and Saturday, May 11 and 12.

Don Mays of the Rams beat Bob Namba 8-6, 6-3, to lead the victory over Santa Rosa. Joe DeSousa followed by defeating Bob Nielson of the Bearcubs, 6-3, 8-6, and Shir Azar-Pey topped Richard Hastain, 6-4, 6-3.

Running into stiffer competition, the Rams' Paul Fischer beat Bob Bryer, 6-1, 8-10, 6-3, and Pete Schwarz beat the Bearcubs' John Pelmulder, 6-1, 3-6, 6-1.

Mays and Souza joined forces to take the first doubles match, as they defeated Namba and Nielson. Santa Rosa took their only match, as Bryer and Hastain measured Azar-Pey and Schwarz.

The Rams now have a season record of six wins and one loss to give them a solid second place position in the standings.

Intramural Boxing On Tonight

16 Finalists Battle For Medals In AMS Fight Show-Smoker

A boxing tournament, beginning at 7:30 p.m. tonight, will be the feature of the Associated Men Student fatherson smoker to be held at the men's gymnasium, Wayne McFadden, president of the AMS, stated recently.

Elimination bouts during the last few weeks sorted out the finalists for the 10-second, three-round bouts, boxing coach Roy Diedcrichsen announced.

Sixteen participants who will vie for medals in eight divisions are:

132 pounds, Manual Chang vs. William Daggert; 137 pounds, Jack Johnson vs. Merle Martin; 144 pounds, Ron Perenzo vs. Ray Tribbie; 150 pounds, Herbert Collins vs. Len Matesky; 157 pounds, George Miller vs. Peter Escoo; 163 pounds, Tom McGrath vs. Roger Ruiz; 168 pounds, not decided at press time; and in the 178-pound class, Len Jones vs. Herman McKee.

Following the intra-mural boxing, the Inter-Fraternity Council will present the "Blind Man Swing." Each of nine fraternities will enter one pledge who will be blindfolded and placed in the ring.

Wearing extra heavy gloves in order that no serious injuries will be sustained are pledges Leigh Guerra, Alpha Kappa Rho; Jerry Hill, Phi Beta Delta; Bob King, Gamma Phi Ypsilon; Howard Klein, Alpha Sigma Delta; Ron Castro, Zeta Phi Sigma; Chuck Pritchard, Beta Tau; Gerry Williams, Beta Phi Beta; Jerry Derry, Tau Chi Sigma; and Don Franklin, Alpha Phi Epsilon.

MACK CALHOUN, star halfback for the Rom football team, donned the gloves for last year's annual intramural boxing tournament, but his Marciano-type tactics could earn him only a draw. Calhoun has chosen to pass up tonight's tourney, but 16 others will try their luck in the AMS-sponsored affair.

Chinese Win To Cinch AMS Title

Drawing a bye in their final week, the Chinese Club wound up their Independent League basketball season undefeated by topping the Filipino Club, while Tau Chi Sigma, idle last week, continues to lead the Inter-Fraternity League.

Beta Tau defeated Alpha Kappa Rho in an Inter-Fraternity League game which elevated them into second place, a game behind Tau Chi Sigma. In the only other league game, Alpha Phi Epsilon was victorious over Beta Phi Beta.

Independent League action saw Alpha Phi Omega defeating the Newman Club, while the IRC beat the Royalaires.

Block SF Continues May Festival Work

The Block SF Society is continuing with its plans to enter a float and a booth in the upcoming May Festival pageant, according to Walt Smith, president of the organization.

Work has already begun on the parade float for the Block SF, and Smith announced that the entry will have a sports theme.

Final meeting for the Block SF before the May Festival will be this Friday, May 11, in Room C246 during college hour. At that time, Smith said, plans for the Block SF booth will be presented, and final decisions regarding the float will be voted upon.

Top event of the year for the athletic organization will be the Block SF dinner, which is scheduled to be held Wednesday, June 6, in Smith Hall.

During the affair, the team coaches will introduce their respective team members, and the most valuable player in each sport will be announced, Smith added. Bill Fischer, sponsor of the group, announced that Block SF awards will also be presented at this dinner.

Weather Postpones All-League Meet; Coast Relays Next

By Al Moss

Again plagued by rain, Sacramento, the hosting college for the annual Big Eight All-Conference track meet, was forced to cancel the all-star affair last Saturday, May 5.

The conference meet is now tentatively scheduled for next Tuesday, May 15. Trials will be held in the afternoon, starting at 2 p.m. in the Panthers' Hughes Stadium. Finals will begin at 7 p.m.

Barring an even more complete reshuffling, the top men of the City College squad prep for the State Meet when they meet California's best at the annual West Coast Relays at Fresno this Saturday, May 12. The meet is an all-day affair, with morning and afternoon trials and afternoon and evening finals. Starting times are 10 a.m. and 7 p.m.

The cancellation was the third straight postponement of the season involving the Rams and Sacramento.

The dual meet between the two teams was rained out twice, and there is a question now whether or not it will ever be run. A tentative date, following the second postponement, was yesterday, but the rescheduling of the all-conference finished that.

Sacramento, having nothing to gain from the meet, may conceivably forfeit, but otherwise the dual affair will have to be run following the Northern California Meet at Santa Rosa on May 18.

Clint Redus will again lead the Rams in the Fresno meet, but will have to go some to top his performance of last year in the relays. The defending state high hurdles champ, Redus whipped 1954 state champion and California record-holder Lionel Daniel of Compton in the morning trial at Fresno, setting a City College record and unofficially topping the state record with a blazing :14.5. Daniel came back in the finals to edge the Ram ace by inches, also in :14.5.

Pressing Redus this year may be a pair of teammates, George Jones and Bob Guddee. Jones, probably the second-best hurdler in the Big Eight, has a :15.2 to his credit and is still improving. Guddee could gain points and may also go in the broad jump.

Coach Roy Burkhead has emphasized that the final selection of a skeleton traveling squad probably won't be made until tomorrow, with the crew leaving early Friday morning. Expenses limit the Ram participants to ten, but Burkhead has submitted several additional names and will choose the top ten on performances in yesterday's scheduled meet and past marks.

The Rams will probably enter two of the relay events. Burkhead originally planned to enter a team of Ron Anderson, Les Andersen, Ken Richter and Myron Zimmerman in both the mile and two-mile relays, but unless Zimmerman's severely pulled muscle is completely healed, the City College mentor may make a last minute change. Rich Martucci and Dennis Moorhead are both strong in the 440, the laps making up the mile relay, while Moorhead can double in the 880 lap of the two-mile race.

Lloyd Castello, the college's distance ace, will try something new when he goes in the 5000 meters.

Others who may compete at Fresno for the San Franciscans are co-captain Ben Walker in the pole vault, high jump and broad jump; Norman King in the broad jump and high jump; LeRoy Thomas and Kevin O'Sullivan in the high jump; and Redus and Lonnie Bates in the open 100 yard dash.

RA Women Top Visitors At Badminton Playday

Sixteen women from Abraham Lincoln and Galileo High Schools were hosted last week by the Recreation Association, Barbara Bawden, the association's vice-president, disclosed yesterday.

The high school guests participated in a badminton playday, put on by the RA each week in the women's gymnasium. The college participants topped their guests, as Jean Krieg, the club manager, reported on the success of the playday.

Guardsman Gives Students Chance To Obtain AS Candidates' Views

With the object of stimulating interest and creating a clearer picture of the issues, The Guardsman is giving the students themselves a chance to voice their questions to the Associated Student office candidates in the coming elections.

Any and all queries concerning college problems and/or situations will be welcomed by The Guardsman, and a ballot box for that purpose will be located this week at the Silver Pole in the science building. Ballots will also be placed at that site for the students' convenience.

Election Petition Date Extended By Committee

Deadline for petitions for Associated Student elections has been postponed until this Friday, May 11, according to Gary Sthymmel, election commissioner here.

Three 5 by 7 inch pictures of all candidates must accompany the petitions when turned in to Dean Ralph Hillsman's office, S169.

Newest Plan To Distribute Paper Apparent Failure

The new plan for Guardsman distribution, that of limited allotment for several hours and, after that, completely free distribution, had no more apparent success than its predecessors when first tried last week.

Student Council revised their original stand, which limited distribution of the campus newspaper to members of the Associated Students, two weeks ago. The original motion, limiting papers to AS members, was rescinded, but the meeting was adjourned before a substitute motion could be made.

Because of council's inaction, The Guardsman was given to everyone desiring a copy on Wednesday, April 25, and the approximately 1,500 copies went quickly.

At the next meeting, the council quickly passed a substitute motion, grudgingly allowing free distribution after 1 p.m. on Wednesdays, the day of publication. Until that time, papers are to be given only to AS card holders.

This plan was first tried last Wednesday. At noon, with The Guardsman being given only to card holders throughout the morning, there were approximately 1,160 copies of the paper undistributed.

donated his way into the prize, with money which rightfully belonged to the US government, by heavily endowing the proper red organizations.

That the money Chaplin made while in the states was often funneled into communist channels, is a fact which usually seems to escape those liberal thinkers who say "So what" to his red affiliations with a shrug of their shoulders and say he's a great actor.

Whether Chaplin is a great actor or not is irrelevant. What is important is the fact that whatever profits Chaplin also profits an ideology which is diametrically opposed to that of the US.

As Krushchev told Chaplin during the red leader's recent visit to Britain . . . "We recognize you. You have been a great help."

Council Changes Distribution Plan Again, Puts Lower Minimum Units For Sophomore President On Ballot

By Elmer Gentry

In a reversal of their former decision, Student Council last week passed a motion to place Guardsman distribution on a semi-limited basis.

Bob Bliss brought up the rather complicated motion, which stated that Associated Student card holders be given first call for The Guardsman until 1 p.m. on Wednesday, the day of publication.

After that hour on Wednesday, one-fourth of the remaining copies will be given to non-AS members, and the remaining papers will be distributed on Thursdays and Fridays.

AS President Bill Cirimele also brought up two tentative ideas for changes in the constitution in order to obtain council opinion. One idea concerned whether or not the Associated Women Student and the Associated Men Student presidents should have a council vote. No action was taken on this idea.

Also brought up was the idea of lowering one requirement for the office of Sophomore class President. The requirement in question was the one stating that in order to be eligible, a student must have at least 45 units of class work. This motion was put on the ballot for student approval.

This question provoked considerable discussion, with nearly every member of council expressing his opinion. Those in favor of the change pointed out that many able students are unable to run for this office because of this requirement. Their opponents stated, among other reasons, that this rule was in effect to limit the office to students in their final semester.

Ed Emig, representing the Club Activities Board, reported that four clubs and organizations have been declared off campus because of their failure to submit a petition and a charter to the CAB for approval.

Those clubs and organizations named in the action were Sigma Tau Sigma, Horticulture Society, Hotel and Restaurant Society, and Lambdi Phi. In order to re-enter the CAB, Emig stated, these groups will have to appeal to council.

Women's Political Meet Saturday

Twelve women from the college will attend the Women in Politics conference this Saturday at Mills College, according to John Selig, political science instructor here.

Sponsored by the Northern California Citizenship Clearing House and the Young Republican and Young Democrat clubs of the host college, the conference will feature speakers from among the national committee women of both major parties, members of the state legislature and women who hold local government positions.

Those from this college who will observe the conference are Donna Bowman, Marcel Chou, Roberta Codis, Diane Dawson, Norma Erickson, June Gaston, Maria Giron-Cerna, Louise Johnson, Thora Johnson, Joan Lewis, Faye Mosikian, Debbie Rudser, Ann Smith and Ellie Smith. Advising the women will be Selig.

SF State Host At Convention Saturday

San Francisco State College will host a mock political convention this Saturday, May 12, Thomas Dutcher, debate coach here, said last week.

Including all of the major colleges in the northern part of this state and sponsored by the Northern California Forensic League, the purpose of the convention is to set up platforms for the Democrat and Republican parties.

This college will send 16 delegates who will be set up in different committees involving foreign policy, civil liberties and agriculture.

Special Bus Will Take Rooters To State Meet

There will be a chartered bus from the college to the State Junior College Track and Field Championships at Modesto on Saturday, May 26, for any interested rooters, according to Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities here.

The bus will leave the college at 3 p.m. on May 26, and return about midnight. Cost will be $2.55 per person, and the deadline for sign-ups is Thursday, May 24, at noon, in Hillsman's office, he said.

The state meet is being run in conjunction with the California Relays, and in addition to the top two-year college trackmen in the state, there will be many of the United States Olympic team hopefuls and some of the top athletes in the world competing in the open events.

City College, with one of the top track teams in Northern California, is expected to have several men competing in the two-year college division. The Rams tied for third in the state last year as Santa Ana took high honors.

Three Reach Miss SF Semi-Finals

Three women here will represent the college in the semi-finals of the Miss San Francisco Pageant, a Junior Chamber of Commerce report disclosed last week.

Diane Dawson, Rose Marie Grider and Shirley Stortz passed through the preliminary session and will join 13 others in the semi-finals.

One other, Gale Fletcher, entered the contest as a representative and reached the semi-finals but is no longer a student here, having dropped recently.

The next judging as reported by the Junior Chamber of Commerce will be Saturday, May 12, at which time the number of contestants will be cut to nine. These nine will enter the finals in the Terrace Room of the Fairmont Hotel on Friday night, June 1.

Disney Film Set For Friday College Hour

Walt Disney's academy award winning picture, Beaver Valley, will be shown this Friday during college hour in S136, Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor here, announced last week.

This film has been shown throughout the world and has won numerous awards for Disney. There will be no admission charge for the movie, Devlin said.

College Benefit Requirements For Korean War Veterans Listed By Dunn

Enrolled in the college this semester are some 1,550 Korean veterans, Robin Dunn, co-ordinator of Veteran Affairs, announced recently.

Several factors regarding college requirements that are very often overlooked by veterans were mentioned by Dunn.

All veterans who have completed 60 units of work here, in a previous college, or before entering the service are not eligible to continue receiving benefits at the college, according to Dunn, but may transfer to a four-year college. To have the benefits transferred to the new college, a form may be secured at the veterans' office, located in Room S134.

Benefits are paid in any training objective desired, and may be changed, but a permanent plan of study must be decided upon, Dunn said, and the man must be enrolled in and attending the classes within three years after discharge.

To change his study objective, a veteran must go to the VA office and fill out the proper forms. Further information is available at Dunn's office between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.

"The next point," Dunn said, "is very important to those making out programs." Veterans are not eligible for benefits for courses which they have previously taken and in which they have received the grade of D or better. If a course must be repeated, the veteran must do so on his own time and at his own expense, Dunn said.

A final point that all veterans should pay attention to, he added, is the selection of courses that are certified to be taken on a certain study objective. If the wrong courses are taken and benefits are accepted, the veteran faces the problem of having to pay back the funds that he had accepted wrongly. "This," Dunn commented, "is very hard for some of the men who have only limited funds to draw upon."

Dunn added that to all these general rules there are exceptions, and if there is any problem or question on any of these items, the veteran should either go to his counsellor or come to the office of Veterans' Affairs for advice.

Editor, The Guardsman:

In recent issues of The Guardsman there have been several articles concerning the authority of the Campus Police and their connection with the student government.

The authority of the Campus Police is embodied in Section 35.9 of the Charter of the City and County of San Francisco. The provisions of this ordinance are as follows:

The Chief of Police of the City and County of San Francisco may appoint, and at his pleasure remove, Special Police Officers. Each member of the Campus Police Officers is sworn into office by the Chief of Police.

Article 7 of the Rules and Regulations for the control of the City College of San Francisco Police Department status: The Department is hereby assigned the duty of enforcing traffic regulations and protecting life and property on the Campus of City College of San Francisco and adjacent public status.

The connection between the Campus Police and student government is as follows: The student government will supply the Campus Police with a budget to buy uniforms. The Campus Police will control and regulate the parking permits for the City College Campus.

The student government DOES NOT RUN the Campus Police, and they do not make policies that the Campus Police must enforce, or do they have any connection with the administration and operation of the Campus Police.

The student government may make requests for police service from time to time which may or may not be compensated, for in the judgment and discretion of the departmental representative of the criminology department, Fred Fitzgerald, who is in turn responsible to the Chief of Police and the President of the college for the conduct and action of all special police officers so appointed.

Seven pledges were taken into Tau Chi Sigma fraternity. Those pledging were Jack Derry, Tom Millino, Tom Turnege, Fred Mauch, Fred Thompson, Kevin McCready, and Hiram Koakua.

The Christian Science organization invites students and faculty members to its testimonial meetings on Thursdays at 3:15 p.m. at 124 Eastwood Drive.

Members of Zeta Chi sorority are busy planning their float and booth for the May Festival. They are also making plans for their dinner dance.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity held a business meeting recently at the home of Leigh Guerra. Plans were started for the float for the May Festival.

A business meeting was held last Thursday by Alpha Lambda Chi sorority at the home of Paula Moore to discuss plans for their coming joint with Tau Chi Sigma. There was also an informal gathering at the home of their sponsor, Carolyn Reideman, to talk over May Festival plans for both their float and booth.

Deadline for all club news is Wednesday at 12 o'clock in The Guardsman office, S304.

Eight Compete For Ugly Man Title

Eight contestants have been selected to participate in the "Ugly Man" contest now taking place at the college until Friday, May 18, according to Earl Cabrinha, contest chairman.

Winner of the contest, supported by Alpha Phi Omega, will be determined by the number of pennies the aspirant has collected by the end of the period. Each penny deposited in a glass jaw that the contestant has about his face will count as a vote. Voting is unrestricted.

The event will be jointly held at the Silver Pole and in the cafeteria. "The money collected from the contest will be donated to the City of Hope charity fund, and it hoped that the contest will increase student spirit by having friendly competition," Cabrinha stated.

Prizes to the winners will be awarded at the May Festival. It is rumored that the first prize consists of a giant mug, capable of holding a gallon of beer.

Everyone is eligible to vote in this contest, which has been held by other colleges throughout the country with success and full participation by the students, Cabrinha added.

High Earners May Get Tax Break At Last

By Don Ball

THERE is an old saying in this country to the effect that nothing is sure but death and taxes. But as everything must, even this is subject to change.

Death continues to hold its own, but taxes may undergo a radical change in the not too distant future.

Unbeknownst to the majority of true-blue taxpaying citizens in the US, a revolution has been simmering.

The revolt: a possible constitutional amendment which would drastically change the current income tax structure.

Although few people are aware of it, 31 states have passed bills indicating that they wish income and corporate taxes to have an upper limit of 25 per cent. If but one more state passes such a bill, the required two-thirds of the states will have given their approval to the proposal and by law, it will be submitted to the congress in the form of a proposed amendment.

As it stands now, the basic tax structure is grossly unfair to anyone who has had the acumen and luck to succeed financially. The desire to exceed is stifled, if not completely killed, by the threat of high taxes. This in turn results in a lack of investment capital which could eventually cause business to founder from inability to expand.

The winner of the vaunted $64,000 Question sees only about $26,500 after taxes. (This is after federal taxes only and does not include possible state taxes.) The 14-year-old boy who won the $100,000 on The Big Surprise took home a mere $32,680 after subsidizing his Uncle Sugar.

The fact that there is less than $10,000 difference, after taxes, between $64,000 and $100,000 illustrates the phenomenal climb in the tax bite as the higher brackets are approached.

It would seem basically unfair to discriminate against those who are able to acquire large incomes to the point of taxing up to 92 per cent of their earnings when it is considered that all the taxes which take 35 per cent or more of a person's income make up only 16 per cent of the total tax take per year.

Festival Car Caravan Set For College Hour

There will be a car parade boosting the May Festival to be held that evening during college hour this Friday. Every student owning a car is invited to participate, according to Wayne McFadden, Associated Men Student president.

Walt Smith, president of the Block SF and a member of the AMS committee, will handle the parade, which will circle the college twice. Route of the car caravan will be down Ocean Avenue and around the faculty parking circle behind Cloud Hall. If enough time remains in the college hour, the automobiles will then motor up and down Ocean Avenue.

Registration Closes June 8 For Summer Session Enrollment

Registration for summer sessions here are nearing completion, Mary Jane Learnard, the college's registrar, stated recently, and students interested in summer credit are urged to sign up for courses before the closing date, Friday, June 8.

Students are expected to confirm their registration at the registrar's office by telephone or in person no later than June 20-21. Those failing to do this will lose their reservations, Miss Learnard warned, and will be forced to accept registrations in classes not filled at that time.

Veterans must carry a minimum of 14 hours per week in classes for full subsistence. For ¾ subsistence, 10 to 13 hours are required, and for ½ subsistence, 7 to 9 hours are required.

Latest Election Petition Totals Reveal Twenty-Five Candidates For Associated Student Posts

By Elmer Gentry

Twenty-five students, as of May 11, have filed petitions for the coming election of the Fall 1956 Associated Student officers, Gary Sthymmel, election commissioner here, revealed recently.

There are three aspirants, Jim Buckley, Patrick Mahoney, and Wayne McFadden, competing for the top student government office of President of the AS.

Rose Thurman and Louise von Emster are matched against one another in the race for Vice-president of the AS.

Competition for President of the Associated Men Students has Norman Durieux pitted against Boh Varni.

Metta Weddleton is running unopposed for President of the Associated Women Students. In like fashion, Bill Roberts and Mike Monteith are without opposition for the respective offices of Sophomore Class President and Freshman Class President.

Candidates for Sophomore Council are as follows: Bill Allen, Jim Carroll, Jerry Cassidy, Joan Finneran, Jim Kennedy, Ronald Kramer, Deborah Rudser, Anne Smith, and Elvera Steiner.

In the running for Freshman Council are the following: Sonya Cohn, William Driscoll, Alvin Foss, Dee Noodiman, George Pyne, and Gerald Williams.

Students are reminded that today is the last day that Guardsman questionnaire forms may be turned in. A ballot box for this purpose is located at the silver pole in the science building.

An election rally is scheduled for Friday, May 25, at which time all candidates will outline their platforms and state their qualifications.

The elections are scheduled for Friday, May 25; Monday, May 28, and Tuesday, May 29. The hours for voting will be the same all three days, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., according to Sthymmel.

Many members have been added to the election committee, Sthymmel announced, and the committee now includes the following: Hameed Abdul, Carol Aizenberg, Sandhu Balbir, Bob Castle, Virgil Cox, Ted Daniels, Maria Giron-Cerna, Naren Jhaveri, Bobbie LeBoff, Mike Monteith, Emilio Pazlo, Barbara Polster, Donna Pucinelli, Margie Scheller, Ellie Smith, Elvera Steiner, Willy Tollefson, Joyce Weaver and Natalia Zalessow.

30 SF Industrial Firms Take Part In Business Day

Thirty leading San Francisco bay area business and industrial firms will participate in Business Recruitment Day here next Wednesday, May 23, co-sponsored by the college placement service and business department here, Joseph Amori, placement director, announced last week.

Students graduating in June from one of the 5 semiprofessional programs in the business department are eligible for the job competition.

Students having as their major field one of the following will be selected for personal interviews: secretarial training, accounting, transportation, sales, merchandising, insurance, marketing, finance, general business, International Business Machines, office machines, advertising, graphic arts, business administration and bookkeeping.

Each student has a choice of business or industrial firms and may be interviewed by as many firms as he desires. Any student who is interested should make arrangements immediately with one of his business instructors to enter his name, Amori said, adding that approximately 150 students will be interviewed next Wednesday at 9 a.m. in Cloud Hall.

Third semester students outside of the business department who are both interested and qualified will be given an opportunity to meet the various employer representatives and be interviewed. Applications may be filed at the college placement office.

Mack Calhoun, Shirley Stortz King, Queen; Parade To Start From Campus At 6 O'Clock

Mack Calhoun and Shirley Stortz will reign as King and Queen of the annual May Festival this Friday evening, and will participate in the scheduled parade, television appearance, and the later Cow Palace activities, according to Wayne McFadden, president of the Associated Men Students, sponsors of the festivities.

There will be no admission charge to the festival for Associated Student card holders. Those holding college registration cards will be admitted for a 25 cent charge, and all others will be admitted to the affair for 50 cents, McFadden added that parking will be free of charge to all those attending.

The festival is being publicized by the Emporium department store, which is donating window space, and three different television programs.

Yesterday afternoon, the Queen appeared on the Evangeline Baker television show, and both the King and Queen will appear today on the Dottie Hansen show at 6 p.m. on KGO-TV, channel 7.

They were crowned last Friday on San Francisco Tonight by Don Sherwood, the master of ceremonies.

To start the festival, there will be a parade of decorated cars and floats, which are due to assemble in front of the campus on Phelan Avenue at 5:15 p.m.

Participants will be assigned positions at that time, and the parade will begin promptly at 6 p.m., continuing down Ocean Avenue to Persia, Mission, and Geneva, and then to its destination.

Police escorts from both the San Francisco police and the Campus Police departments will accompany the parade, assisting it through traffic. McFadden said the parade is expected to last for approximately two hours.

Dancing, food, and amusement booths, which open at 6:30 p.m., will be the attractions at the Cow Palace. Dancing will begin at 7 p.m., and continue until 11 p.m., McFadden stated.

Amusements planned include balloon shaving, mock marriages, age-guessing contests, fortune telling, nail driving, ball throwing, and frog jumping, each booth being sponsored by a college group or organization.

Proceeds from these booths will be divided proportionally at the close of the evening. A small charge will be made to participate in these amusements.

A "cowboy," or "western" theme is planned for the event, and each guest is being urged to wear casual western clothes.

Food booths are to be sponsored by the college's Hotel and Restaurant Society, and plans are to serve snacks.

Petitions Due For Sophomore King, Queen Tomorrow

Petitions for the king and queen of the Sophomore Ball, Saturday, June 2, must be turned in tomorrow to Dean Ralph Hillsman's office, S169, to Jim Buckley, president of the Sophomore Class or Bill Anderson, chairman of this semester's king and queen contest, both officers announced last week.

All those eligible, (satisfactorily completing 30 or more units of college work) who are interested are urged to run, Anderson said. Petitions can still be obtained from Hillsman, Buckley, or Anderson.

A 5 by 7 inch picture of all contestants must be received no later than Tuesday, May 22, Anderson added.

Associated Student members will elect the king and queen, and the election will follow the same procedure as last semester, with the men voting for the queen and the women voting for the king, Buckley said.

Voting for the king and queen will take place during Soph Week, scheduled from Monday, May 28, through Saturday, June 2. The winners will be announced Saturday evening at the Sophomore Ball, held in the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Dress will be semi-formal.

Stephen Paul and his 12-piece band was chosen recently to provide the music for the evening, according to Bobbie Le Boff, band selection committee chairman. Admission to the dance will be by AS card or $2.50 per couple for non-AS members.

Other members of the Sophomore Week committee are Leo Champagne, Soph-Prof softball game chairman; Audrey Hansen, dance committee chairman; Judy Walker, dance hid chairman; and Ken Woodruff, publicity chairman.

Dedication Of George D. Smith Hall Scheduled For Monday Evening Here

Official dedication of George D. Smith Hall, which, is now known as the student union building, will take place next Monday night, according to Louis Batmale, dean of Semiprofessional courses here.

The ceremony will be preceded by a dinner, Batmale declared, which is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Normally, each spring the Hotel and Restaurant Department here plays host to the California Northern Hotel Association, but this year the dedication will be held in conjunction with this meeting.

Those who will take part in the program are as follows: Kc Hart Smith, president of the California Northern Hotel Association and an alumnus of the H&R department here, who will deliver the opening remarks; Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, who will preside over the program; Bill Cirimele, president of the Associated Students here, and Clarence Watson, president of the H&R Society, who will extend greetings.

Mayor George Christopher, Adolfo de Urioste, president of the Board of Education, and Harold Spears, Superintendent of Schools, will also speak.

Introduction of the honored guest, George D. Smith, will be handled by P. Tremain Loud, president of the H&R Foundation here. Smith, who is president and general manager of the Hotel Mark Hopkins, helped to establish the H&R program here in 1936, became the chairman of the original advisory committee, and still occupies this position.

In its beginning, the H&R Department was housed at Galileo High School, with the school cafeteria there serving as laboratory training quarters. After several relocations, the department moved into its present location last fall.

The department, with the rest of the college, has grown steadily. Enrollment in the H&R training program has increased from 40 during the early years of 1936 and 1937 to its present enrollment of 135. Also, the number of instructors has been increased from three full time instructors to its present 12.

Non-AS Members Deserve Voice In Student Government Affairs

THE KEYNOTE for success in the democratic mode of government is equal opportunity for all, both economically and politically, and with this thought in mind it seems that student government here has been lacking in this quality of opportunity for all.

Whereas the Associated Students are more than adequately represented in student government, the large majority of students here have no voice in governmental affairs.

It is our proposal, therefore, to lift total restriction of the voting privilege, and to make a college-wide vote the basis for election to the AS presidential and vice-presidential offices.

Obviously, the name Associated Students can no longer be coupled with these two titles, but if the names Student President and Vice-President were to be adopted instead, these would be quite adequate titles, since these high officers would be student presidents in the truest sense.

By having unrestricted voting for Student President and Vice-President, the college would attain full participation by all factions in student government, while taking away none of the advantages of belonging to the Associated Students.

The AS would still have its AMS and AWS Presidents, plus its chief student government group, Student Council, elected by card holders only. The offices of Sophomore and Freshman President, too, would retain the AS-only voting privilege under our proposed plan.

From the practical standpoint, the offices of Student President and Vice-President are ones of leadership rather than of policy-making, so it seems far more feasible to have these officials elected by a voting faction free of restrictions.

Furthermore, virtually none of the incentive for buying an AS card would be lost, since this plan merely offers the chance to vote for a high student office, and nothing more.

In considering this plan, let us think not of what other colleges are doing or have done, but only of adhering to the essence of democracy. No forward-moving action in student government is truly achieved by waiting for the other fellow to take the first step.

We have always advocated the purchase of an AS card, and we still do, for the privileges and advantages thereof are more valuable to the student than the cost of the card.

However, we vindicate with equal fervor the right of every student to have some participation in student affairs made accessible without restrictons to bar the way.

It is always the aim of any college to grow in stature, both internally and externally. We believe that by opening the barriers and creating a truer and more democratic form of student government, this college will achieve these aims, and in doing so may set a mark for others to follow.

Select A Face And Find A Model

Photos Of Judy Wills To Feature Exhibit May 27

JUDY WILLS, who was chosen Miss Photogenic from last semester, now serves as the photograph department's model.

From an identification picture taken three semesters ago at the time of registration, Emmet Smith, photography instructor here, picked out a face, and found an outstanding model.

Judy Wills is the official, principal model for the photography department. She receives lab assistance pay for her work and holds the same status as did Lee Meriwether of Miss America fame. The outstanding feature of Miss Wills is her height, which makes her especially suitable for fashion modeling.

"The photographers are pleased with her work because of her interest in modeling and choreography," Smith said in speaking of Miss Wills, who he terms as being "one of the best models we ever had." Last year she was selected Miss Photogenic by the photography department.

Pictures of Miss Wills' poses will be one of the features that the photography department will have during the exhibitions at the Fourth Annual Photography Day to be celebrated in Stern Grove on May 27.

Photographers and models throughout the city will assemble on that day to participate in various photographing activities. Five thousand people, mostly those connected with the profession, were present at the last event.

Booths for the college and camera clubs of the city will be erected in Stern Grove for this affair, which is reputed to be one of the largest of its kind in the country. Its theme is San Francisco Progress Since 1906.

The photography department here will set up two booths; one representing a glamour and fashion studio, complete with a background of models and lights, and the other displaying pictures taken by the faculty and students here. These exhibitions will go under a This Is San Francisco theme.

Most of the city models will have a chance to enter a beauty contest, which is to be held during the affair. It was this contest which first got Miss Meriwether on her way to winning the Miss SF title and later to nationwide fame as Miss America.

The "photographers' festival" will last from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. It is under the sponsorship of the San Francisco Recreation Department, Photography Center.

Shots At Ramdom

By Bob Kauth

TO SPEND too much time in studies is sloth," according to Sir Francis Bacon.

Now after recalling this quotation to mind (we're enrolled in English 1B, too), we've concluded Sir Bacon was a wise old fellow despite his Essays. Knew what he was talking about, that guy. Right good writer, too. Ought to be read and followed by more people.

Certainly those instructors who require (and they all do) two hours home study for each hour spent in class should pay more heed to Sir Bacon's completely sound advice.

Now the average student is carrying about 15 units, which on a college day would be 5 hours in class and 10 hours of study at home. There would be 3 college days per week. He averages about 6 hours sleep per night.

Thus, on an average college day a student richly spends 21 hours studying at college and at home and sleeping. And he still has 3 hours every college day and Tuesdays, Thursdays and weekends to do with what he may.

He may make passes at an attractive blonde, catch some extra sleep, take some time out to eat, brush his teeth and wash the stacks of dishes, go to church, find a job in order to continue his education, or even better yet, he may study some more in hopes of raising those D's to C's.

But if he studies some more, he will soon learn "the making many books there is no end; and much study is a weariness of the flesh." Now this may discourage him. He may quit college and search for another means by which to reach financial and social success.

He could become a crooked politician and overtax these same instructors who are now overtaxing his time and mentality. Or he may become a newsmonger and "snow" them with many facts as they are now snowing him with many facts.

But if he decides to discontinue his education, he will soon learn that there is plenty of room at the bottom! (You just can't win, man!)

IF THE GOLDEN MEAN was good enough for Aristotle, then it is good enough for Bill Cirimele, too. He reached this decision a few weeks ago while he was traveling to and fro across the Bay Bridge in his automobile. On the way over to Oakland he was stopped by a police officer and awarded a traffic ticket for speeding. And on his way back, he was cited again. This time for going too slow.

BEWARE OF APPEARANCES: Coach Roy Burkhead used to crack hard-boiled eggs over his knee. That's right; you guessed it. He was recently given a seemingly hard-boiled egg from one of his trackster's lunch. Only to learn after the egg had been broken over his knee, that someone neglected to boil it. The trackster blames his mother. So don't trust Mom, for that sweet little lady may be a practical joker. If you don't believe us, ask Dad. And boil your own eggs!

San Causes Ingenuity Plus

Sunglasses Protect Dignity, Cover Black Eyes, Cat-Naps

By Charles Clausen

Sunglasses were originally designed to protect the eyes against the overly strong rays of the sun. But the ingenuity of countless thousands of persons has devised many uses for these colored pieces of glass.

One of the most common uses for these glasses is to hide a black eye. No more are excuses made up to explain away the black circles around the eyes. Doors are old fashioned, and people don't bother to run into them anymore.

It's just as easy to go to the corner drugstore and buy a cheap pair of sunglasses for a half a dollar or so. Actually it doesn't save any explaining, because everyone wants to know why a person would wear glasses inside a building.

Many explanations have been forthcoming, such as an extreme sensitivity to light or the urge to travel incognita, but none of these hold much water.

Another use for sunglasses has been popular for quite some time. Persons who don't snore can sleep right through a class with no one the wiser. All they do is prop themselves up in an intelligent position, adjust their glasses and quietly fall to sleep.

Then a few years ago, someone invented a form of glass that served as a mirror on one side and a looking glass on the other. Made into sunglasses they gained immediate popularity and are seen everyday. These offer extra added protection as they not only hide the eyes of the wearer, but reflect the image of the person viewing the aforementioned wearer of the glasses. They also reflect sunlight beautifully.

Another purpose, and important to some, is the fact that sunglasses add glamor to an ordinary life. These persons usually have two or three sets of glasses for different occasions and seem to have a special flair for wearing them.

Yes, ingenuity and brains have made a common, ordinary, one-purpose article into a many splendored thing. They had to, since the sun seldom shines in these parts as of late. Don't rush to the nearest drugstore, though, as the flood of customers might jack up the prices.

The Bohemian

Bullfighters Immune To Fear, Kill With A Blow

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

OLE TORERO. The crowds shout in deafening unison. At this moment the matador is immune to the sensation of fear; he feels his heart pound with eagerness to show bravery before the beast's fiery charges.

The first part of the fight consists of passes and is essentially a means of accustoming the bull to charge at the red cape, which the bullfighter waves.

To weaken the bull's tremendous strength, the picador, on horseback, maneuvers in such a way as to spear the bull in the neck and back. The picador's art is to "tame" the bull without exposing the horse to the horns. Sometimes a brave bull ignores the inflicted jabs of pain of the picador's spear and fatally gores the horse, killing the animal in the act. This is the most disagreeable part of the festival.

Trumpets announce that this part of the bullfight is over, and the "banderilleros" come into this picturesque picture. These two men meet the bull alone in the middle of the arena and stab him in the back with "banderillas," short, colorfully adorned spears.

There are two classical ways of doing this, by meeting the bull's charge or by dodging the bull's horns. The "banderillero" stabs the bull by the former method when he meets the bull and provokes his attack. As the bull charges, the "banderillero" scurries to the side, eluding the horns. The second manner of stabbing the bull is performed by letting the bull pass closely and then avoiding the thrust of the horns with an agile movement of the hips and plunging the banderillas with a downward plunge.

After this part is ended by the sound of a trumpet from the president, the matador goes out to execute passes and varied figures around the bull. This is called the "Faena de Muleta," red cape, because the matador uses this cloth to confuse the beast. The whole "cuadrilla," except the picadors, takes part in these feats.

The repertoire of passes with the red cape is inexhaustible, and each matador demonstrates his audacity and style in the development of the figures. When this faena is badly performed, the public manifests its disapproval in a wild way by shouting insults, not only directed at the matador, but also at his mother and family.

Another signal from the president, and the kill is ready to commence. Tired and humiliated, the bull now walks with bent head. The bullfighter with sword in the right hand and cape in the left, puts himself in a profile position. As the bull charges, the matador places the sword in the bull's neck, where the point may pierce the heart.

There are very stringent rules governing the act of killing the bull; rules which denote the position of the beast's head, the movements of the matador's arms and the place where the bull should be stabbed.

A good bullfighter usually kills the bull with a single blow, receiving the animal's ears as a prize for the skill shown.

What really surprises the tourist is the part that the public takes in all the peripetias of the festival. It is an extraordinary spectacle of color and luster. The Plaza trembles with enthusiastic exclamations when the matador avoids the bull's attacks with a graceful gesture or remains suspended in an emotional silence as the matador flings himself with pointed sword at the bull, staking his life in a final venture for triumph.

Dire Comments Lead Reporter To Classic Review

By Elmer Gentry

People who are in the public eye always evoke considerable comment for their every action, especially where marriage is concerned.

Movie stars, for example, when getting married are a subject for nationwide controversy. Many dire comments are to be heard from others, such as, This marriage won't last, I heard this is his fourth one, and She's getting close to 50, and he's only 25.

This reporter flatly condemns this type of comment. In order to prove to the readers that film folk are natural, unaffected, normal people, he obtained an exclusive interview from a famous actress who was recently married.

Reporter: Tell me, how did you first meet your husband, Miss Hartburne?

Miss H: We got acquainted through The Stupid Cupid Lonely Stars Club.

Reporter: What were the features of his personality that attracted you?

Miss H: That's difficult to say. He has a good personality, money, handsome features, money, captivating manners, money, and an affectionate nature.

Reporter: Has he continental charm?

Miss H: Oh, yes, he has one of those, and a nice Jaguar convertible, too.

Reporter: Er . . . yes . . . what are some of the wedding presents you've received?

Miss H: I've gotten just oceans of presents . . . the Pacific, the Atlantic, etc. Also, I've received many pieces of China.

Reporter: Do you intend to continue with your film career?

Miss H: Certainly, I don't want to disappoint my fans. In my next picture, I have a singing part for the first time. I'm really thrilled about it. I will sing a new song hit, entitled Tea For $2. The name of the picture is The Guy With The Golden Arm.

Reporter: Well, I've certainly appreciated this interview, Miss Hartburne.

Miss H: Think nothing of it. Come back and interview me again the next time I get married.

With 2,271,000 students enrolled in institutions of higher learning at the beginning of this academic year, and with the usual additional enrollments that come during the year, the nation's colleges and universities, for the first time in their history, are educating more than 3 million students.

Spikers Face Top Performers Of Three Leagues, Defend North State Title At Santa Rosa This Saturday

Climaxing one of the busiest weeks in their track history, the Rams go up against the top performers of three leagues as they defend their north state championship in the Northern California Junior College Track Championships at Santa Rosa this Friday, May 18. Trials begin at 2 p.m., with finals scheduled for 7 p.m.

The Rams and the rest of the Big Eight Conference teams are straight from yesterday's conference meet and last Saturday's West Coast Relays at Fresno. The rugged workout against the state's top tracksters doesn't figure to help the Big Eight marks.

The top four men in each event from each league qualified for this all-star squabble. The Coast Conference meet came off on schedule, but the other two leagues (Big Eight and Golden Valley) both suffered postponements because of inclement weather. The resulting rest and extra practice could give the Coast performers an edge.

Top race should be a repeat of the Big Eight match in the 100-yard dash, where Clint Redus, the brilliant Ram sprinter-hurdler, meets Oakland's Ray Norton. A humdinger of a battle was predicted for the conference meet (results were unavailable at press time) and the north state century should be as good.

Redus will get more tough competition in the high hurdles, where teammate George Jones, with a :14.5; Modesto's Chuck Cobb, with a :15.1; Coast Conference champ Bob Ballam of Menlo, with a :15.2; and San Jose's Ed Brewer, who finished second to Ballam in the league meet but recorded an earlier :15.1, all will try to upset the defending state champion. Redus has a :14.4 this year (up to yesday) and recorded :14.5 twice and :14.6 twice last year, one of the latter marks tying the official state standard.

The long distance battles should be interesting, with a fight between the Big Eight and the Coast Conference again the highlight. Modesto's Ray Hale, with a 4:22.2 mile and 9:47.0 two mile, and generally considered capable of better in both, will face Hartnell's Wes Bond, who recorded his year's best in his league all-star meet with 4:21.8 and 9:55.3 respectively.

A comeback try in the 440 will get its severest test to date, and if Hosea Harper is still gaining on his form of last year, he may romp in this meet and seriously challenge Compton's Willie Atterberry (:47.2) in the state meet at Modesto on May 26.

Harper suffered a dislocated shoulder on a false start against the Rams early in the year, and was slow in getting back in harness, but is now once again approaching his last year's Northern Cal championship form. His top competition in this one will be from Dick Casper of Hartnell, a :49.8 quartermiler and Coast loop champ, and City College's Ken Richter and Modesto's Chuck McNeill from the Big Eight.

Tightest inter-league battle in the field should be the broad jump. Val Charn of Sacramento, with a 22-8 leap; the Ram quartet of Norm King, Ben Walker, Al Hardy and Bob Guddee; Coast champ Dick "Dutke" Ellington, who scored all of Monterey Peninsula's points in his league's all-star meet; and American River's (Golden Valley) Gene Masterson, all have cleared or approached 22 feet, and any one could come out on top on a given day.

Sophs, Grand Old Men Battle June 1

According to legend, there will always come a time when the taught believe they are better than the teacher.

In order to prove their point, the sophomore team will engage in mortal combat with the professors at the annual softball game to be played on the football field Friday, June 1, during a double college hour.

Under the direction of Alex Schwarz, the professors' valuable experience will try the youth of tiger Leo Champagne's team.

Creaking bones will fight oiled joints, mastery of mind over matter will try to prevail in perhaps the greatest battle since Alexander conquered all.

Redus Winner In Highs; Rams Fifth In Fresno Relays

By Al Moss

Clint Redus, warming up for the May 26 state meet, romped over the top hurdlers in California to take individual honors for the Rams in the 30th annual West Coast Relays at Fresno last Saturday, May 12.

Redus won the 120-yard high hurdles in :14.7, good time, but earlier blazed to a :14.4 in the trials, only one-tenth of a second above the Relays record of :14.3. Redus' was the best time in the state yet this year and set a new City College record. The old Ram standard was :14.5, also set by Redus in a trial at Fresno, that one in 1955.

An accident in the high sticks cost the Rams points and Redus some more competition. George Jones, who had taken second in his heat and was timed in :14.5, stumbled over the third hurdle and skidded almost to the next. The resulting bad leg and the time lost put the lanky Ram freshman from Texas out of the competition.

The Rams, as a team, finished fifth, due primarily to Redus and LeRoy Thomas, who tied for second in the high jump with a leap of 6-2½. Thomas tied with Oakland's Hal Theus, with the Big Eight pair finishing behind Compton's Charlie Dumas. Dumas quit the two-year college group at 6-4½, after cinching his win, and moved into the open competition, where he tied for first with USF's Bill Russell at 6-9½.

Other places for the San Francisco area were in the mile and two mile relays, where the Rams garnered a pair of fifths. The quartet of Ron Anderson, Ken Richter, Dennis Moorhead and Les Andersen toured the mile race in 3:22.7, while Andersen, Richter, Myron Zimmerman and Anderson ran a 8:04.5 in the two-mile event. Top lap times in the former were by Anderson and Richter, with :50.3 and :50.7, while Andersen and Zimmerman, who is normally a 440 man and was running his first half mile in two years, ran 1:59.6 and 1:59.8 respectively in the latter.

The two-mile relay found the winning Compton team setting a new national two-year college record with a winning 7:48.1, smashing the old mark of 7:51.0.

Top performance of the evening in the two-year division was by Mount San Antonio, when the Mounties' distance medley relay team completely shattered the old national mark of 10:22.4 (set by San Mateo in 1937) with a clocking of 10:14.9. The southerners captured the event when Bob McGuire, running the mile anchor lap in 4:17.0, overtook Modesto's Ray Hale after the Big Eight Pirates had led for most of the four laps. Modesto was also timed under the old national record, while McGuire was named the outstanding two-year college performer of the Relays.

RAMBLINGS

By Al Moss

SNAFU of the year, made by Sacramento (again and again and again), is losing friends rapidly for the Panther track officials. The postponement of the Big Eight All-Conference Meet was the latest and most important in a seemingly season-long list of Capitol City cancellations.

All are willing to admit that the Sacramento athletic department can't help the weather. After the mixup on May 5, though, that found the meet off, on and then off again, all in the space of an hour, everyone from league commissioner Harold Taggart on down is steaming, even in all that rain.

To make matters worse, the resetting of the meet to yesterday means three meets—the West Coast Relays at Fresno last Saturday (and most of the Big Eight teams, including the Rams, entered men), yesterday's conference battle, and this Friday's All-Northern California squabble at Santa Rosa—all within a matter of seven days, and all tough and important.

Note: The sun-baked Southern Californians held their regional meet on May 4, and are now sitting back, relaxing and laughing at the north's feeble and slightly damp efforts.

• • •

Santa Rosa officials exploding at each track postponement have made the atomic trials sound like a cap pistol.

The original deadline for entries in the Northern California Meet there on May 18 was May 5 at midnight. The Big Eight and Golden Valley Meets were postponed and, since only the first four men in each event from each league are eligible for the north state meet, the deadline has been extended, reluctantly, Only the Coast Conference meet was run on time.

Old Man Weather has caused another foul-up recently. When San Jose clinched the Coast Conference baseball title (they also took track honors), coaches decided the entire Panther team should scout the possible opposition for the upcoming Northern California playoffs.

Handily enough, the Rams and Santa Rosa had a double-header slated for Saturday, May 5, at Balboa Park, and the San Joseans, figuring accurately enough, that either the Rams or the Bearcubs would cop Big Eight laurels, made the 50 mile trip to take in the twin tilts.

Games called, rain!

The Name's The Same: Unless somebody's been snitching Archie Moore's secret diet, the, fighter with the quite professional name of Jack Johnson who appeared in last Wednesday's quite amateur intra-mural boxing tournament should not be confused with Jack Johnson, the former great heavyweight champ of the world. City College's Johnson fought in the 137-pound class, one step above paperweight, and he's all amateur.

With all the rain in this area, one would think that Northern California could come up with some swimming titles, but even that was denied. Long Beach, led by triple winner Ron Gilcrest, took top honors in the State Junior College Swimming Championships at Stanford on May 3-4-5.

• • •

A sad commentary on the state of the Big Eight came to light in the all-conference tennis tournament on May 4-5. Modesto's Manuel Gallardo won the championship on the toss of a coin, after a sore muscle kept him from facing teammate Ed Guzmon in the finals.

Ram Nine Retains Half Game Lead After Splitting Two In League Crucial With Santa Rosa, 6-4, 1-5

By Lou Lucia

Retaining their one-half game league lead, the Ram baseball team split a double-header with second place Santa Rosa, winning the opener 6-4 and dropping the second game 5-1, on Monday, May 7, at Balboa Park.

Santa Rosa jumped off to a fast 2-0 lead in the first inning of the opener. Another marker was added in the fifth when Jay Guinn tripled Fred Giannini across the plate.

Lou Flores' line drive single to right scored Bob Bandettini in the last half of the same inning but the Bearcubs retaliated when Giannini doubled and scored on an error in the seventh.

With the score reading 4-1 in the eighth frame, the Rams erupted for a five-run outburst.

Glenn Bukowatz gained life on an error, Ken Dito singled, Jim Poppin lined a baseshit scoring Bukowatz, and Blair LeMire was intentionally passed to fill the bases. Santa Rosa's strategy backfired when Roger Ferrari lined a single to left and Bandettini lofted a sacrifice fly to tie the game.

Ray Warman won his third successive game in the past two weeks when his ground ball was bobbled, allowing two runs to score.

Flores and LeMire lead the hitting attack with two singles apiece.

Lefty Charlie Perkins set the Rams down with two hits and struck out eight in the 5-1 nightcap.

Only hits were an infield single by Bukowatz and a long triple by Bandettini. Bandettini's triple was the only extra base hit of the game. Neither of these hits put the Rams on the scoreboard as their lone run came in the first inning on an error and three walks.

IFC Race Tied As Tau Chi Whipped

Zeta Phi Sigma upset previously unbeaten Tau Chi Sigma by a score of 27-16 in Inter-Fraternity League play last week, and a three team race for the league crown now centers on Tau Chi Sigma, Zeta Phi Sigma, and Beta Tau.

On the same night, Phi Beta Delta topped Alpha Sigma Delta.

In the Independent League, which ended league play last night, the Chinese Club, who finished the season with an all-victorious 7-0 mark, wound up as the winners of their division.

Two games are on tap in the Inter-Fraternity League tomorrow night. Beta Tau plays Tau Chi Sigma at 8:30. The first game features Alpha Kappa Rho against Alpha Sigma Delta in a battle of the cellar dwellers.

The AMS banquet will be held next Wednesday, May 23, in the student union building. Awards will be given to winners of the IFC, Independent, and H&R Leagues.

Bucs Take Honors In League Tennis

Team members of Modesto took most of the honors in the Big Eight Tennis Tournament held at Stockton College on May 4 and 5.

Manuel Gallardo shared the singles championship with Ed Guzmon, also of Modesto. There was no actual playoff of the two who had reached the finals, as Gallardo came up with a pulled muscle and the final match was called off.

In the doubles, Gallardo teamed up with Guzmon of the Buccaneers to take the top position as they defeated their teammates, John Bolton and Al Camino, in an all-Modesto finals.

Don Mays of the Rams made a good showing as he reached the semi-finals and finally lost to Guzmon of the Pirates, 6-3, 6-2. Mays had previously beaten Darrel Chapman of Modesto in the quarter-finals, 6-2, 6-2.

In the doubles, Mays joined teammate Joe Souza and reached the semi-finals before they were beaten by Gallardo and Guzmon, 6-3, 6-1. Previously, Mays and Souza had defeated Tom Means and Bill Burrows of Stockton, 6-2, 6-2, in the quarter-finals.

Modesto proved to be the spoiler of Ram hopes as Shir Azar-Pey of the Rams was eliminated in the third round by Guzmon of the Pirates. Gallardo also eliminated San Francisean Pete Schwarz in the third round by defeating him, 6-2, 6-0.

Ram Golfers End Season With Loss To Modesto

Losing to Modesto, 5½ to 9½, at the Del Rio Country Club in Modesto on May 4, the Ram golfers ended their regular season with a record of three wins, three losses, and one tie.

Bob Zimmerman and Frank Hubert were the only ones who managed to win their matches. Zimmerman beat Will Martin of Modesto, 3-0, and the Rams' Hubert defeated Bob Miller, 2-1.

The Bucs took the other three matches by high scores as Gil Brunk fell to Lee Blodgett, 0-3; Don McDowell lost to Lee Hogan, 0-3, and Phil Palen was defeated ½ to 2½ by Modesto's Ron Simi.

Last weekend, the Rams played in the Big Eight Conference Tourney on May 11 and 12. On Monday, May 14, they played in the State Tournament.

In the tourneys there was individual match play. Each man on his respective team is rated a position during the regular season and in the tourney he plays members of other teams who hold the same position on their team.

The positions held on the Ram team are Hubert, number one man; Brunk, who holds down the number two position; McDowell, number three man; Palen, number four, and Zimmerman as the number five man.

Clubs Prepare For May Festival And Semester Dinners

By Joyce Weaver

WITH the May Festival drawing near, the organizations are making preparations for the spring affair. Many organizations are arranging for their spring semester dinner dances.

Gamma Phi fraternity held its formal initiation last week. Before the initiation all the brothers met at Hoods for dinner. May 23 the fraternity will be celebrating an anniversary.

Saturday, May 26, is the date for Theta Tau sorority's formal initiation and dinner dance. They are also working hard on their plans for the May Festival.

Kappa Phi sorority held a coffee hour for their parents last week. They are having a joint tonight with Beta Tau fraternity. They will go ice skating.

The new pledges of Phi Beta Delta fraternity are Max Bond, Jerry Hill, Lou Hunter, Ted Gold, Al Foss, Norm Molaug, and Clint O'Rourke. They are currently making plans for their float and booth.

The pledges of Phi Beta Rho sorority gave a formal dinner for their sisters yesterday.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity currently has plans under way for their booth and float. They are holding meetings to get the float built. Their pledge dinner will be at the Capri Room at Sabella's on May 25.

Zeta Phi Sigma fraternity held a picnic May 6. It was a bit damp, but everyone had a good time. The fraternity has set aside three days to work on their booth and float for the May Festival. Joe Banovich was recently elected as the new vice-president.

Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity and the Phi Delts played a football game last week in Oakland. There was a caravan of cars afterward on the Bay Bridge. It seems that the cars went a bit slow and held up all traffic on the bridge.

A business meeting was held last week by Zeta Chi sorority at the home of Margie Brown. Plans for their dinner dance and May Festival reviewed.

Beta Phi Beta fraternity announced that its pledge class was very successful. May 19 the alumni of the fraternity are giving the present members a banquet.

Film On Plastics To Be Shown On Friday

The World That Nature Forgot is the title of the motion picture to be shown by the audio-visual department this Friday during college hour in Room S136, Madison Devlin, instructor in the department, recently announced.

The film shows the modern laboratory techniques which scientists facilitate to form new plastics for market, Devlin explained. Plastics would at one time easily melt or break, but scientists are now trying to correct this and in some cases replace steel or wool with plastic materials.

Dr. Thompson Addresses Students On Operations Of Wall Street Journal

By Bob Sims

A behind-the-scenes glimpse of the operation of the leading business and financial publication in the United States, the Wall Street Journal, was given by Dr. J. Leroy Thompson, director of the Educational Bureau of the Journal, to students of journalism, business, economics, and finance here May 7.

In contrast with the early "slip runner," who carried business information from the stock market to brokers and buyers, the modern Journal after 74 years of growth keeps the nation up to date with minute to minute information on the economic scene, Dr. Thompson stated.

One of the reasons for this speed in the dissemination of information is the employment of the Dow-Jones ticker, a teletype device which transmits information on a tape eight inches in width to various points throughout the country in a matter of seconds.

Another factor in the growth of the Journal's stature as the voice of the American financial world is the publication of a local edition of the Journal in each of the five major financial cities in the nation, New York, Washington, Chicago, Dallas and San Francisco. These editions, according to Dr. Thompson, carry financial news of local interest, but the front page is the same in all five editions. This is made possible by use of the ETS, an electronic typesetter, one of which is located in each of the five cities and all of which are controlled by a master typesetter located in New York.

The Journal's aim is to provide a reflection of market trends by informing its readers of the sum total of impacts on the economic scene. Its responsibilities are such that it is relied on as the absolute authority on stock market prices, and on all written and spoken words in the economic scene throughout the nation.

Dr. Thompson, a New Yorker since 1929 but originally an Ohio country boy, received his doctorate from Columbia University. His advice to students today is: "Be aggressive in seeking an education and build a sum total column of experience, for the sum total taken at any given time is the true measure of knowledge."

Dave Baar, Tat Cheong Lam Are Commencement Speakers For 21st Annual Ceremonies At Riordan

David Baar and Tat Cheong Lam were chosen last week to speak at the annual commencement exercises, scheduled for Friday, June 15, at Riordan High School, according to William E. Culver, chairman of the student speaker selection committee.

Lam is an engineering major, and made his tryout speech on the subject, The Truth Shall Make You Free. Baar is a science major, and made his speech on Need For Further Emphasis On Science Education.

Tentative plans for the evening are as follows: at 8 p.m. the college concert band, with Meyer Cahn directing, will play a few selections, following which will be the processional at 8:15 p.m., and the playing of the National Anthem by the college band at 8:30 p.m.

Associated Student President William Cirimele will then deliver a welcome speech, followed by an address by Adolfo De Urioste, president of the Board of Education, and the presentation of scholastic awards by Harold Spears, superintendent, San Francisco Public Schools.

Service awards will then be presented by Archibald J. Cloud, president emeritus of the college, and will be followed by Lam's speech.

The A Cappella Choir under the direction of Flossita Badger, will then sing four songs, and the choir performance will be followed by Baar's address.

Edwin C. Browne, dean of men, will then deliver a short talk, followed by the presentation of candidates for degrees by Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction, and the conferring of degrees by Louis G. Conlan, president of the college.

Singing of the college Alma Mater by the A Cappella Choir, and the recessional by the college band will conclude the evening's program.

Approximately 520 students will receive their Associate in Arts degrees during the 21st annual commencement exercises, according to Dean Edwin C. Browne, chairman of the commencement committee.

Final Exam Period To Start On June 8

There will be an added day, Friday, June 8, for final examinations this semester, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, announced last week, adding that there will be no regular classes on that day.

Eleven o'clock finals are scheduled in the morning of June 8, and all health classes will have their finals that afternoon.

Classes will therefore end on June 7, with testing beginning the next day and running through June 15 during final week. A Faculty Association luncheon honoring President Louis G. Conlan will be held on Monday, June 11, limiting tests to Monday morning.

The administration, considering the crowding of finals in the past years, decided to begin the test schedule earlier this year, Miss Learnard said. The main purpose of the early date was in order to spread finals over a more convenient period of time.

Final exams will end at noon June 15 to permit time for grades to be checked before commencement that evening.

Rally Chief Post Vacancy Creates Debate In Council

By Elmer Gentry

As a result of the recent resignation of Rally Commissioner Mike Gilbert, Student Council last week was the scene of a lengthy debate concerning his replacement.

The discussion began when a member of Rally Committee was asked who had been appointed to fill the vacancy. When it was announced that Pat Chisum was filling the the office, Jim Carroll stated that, under the college constitution, it is not legal for a student to hold more than one position.

Bill Cirimele, president of the Associated Students, at this point interjected the fact that Chisum would just be holding the job temporarily. Cirimele further clarified his statement by adding, "It has been decided not to appoint a permanent Rally Commissioner for the remainder of the semester. The members of Rally Committee will alternate."

Carroll questioned this temporary type of arrangement, and remarked to the effect that he felt a permanent replacement should be chosen.

"We are still in a building stage as far as this office is concerned," Cirimele replied, "and we want to give experience to as many students as possible."

Election Commissioner Gary Shymmel was asked whether he had considered postponing the deadline for the submission of election petitions.

It was pointed out to him that grades were turned in to the registrar May 7, this making it impossible to check student eligibility by the original deadline of May 8.

After a discussion, Shymmel agreed to a compromise, in effect that the petitions would still be due on May 11, but the final date for determining eligibility would be extended to today.

Before the close of the meeting, Cirimele assigned certain members of the council to help the Rally Committee with last week's Guardsman distribution, explaining that the committee was temporarily short of members.

O'Neill Play Is Little Theater's Next Production

Eugene O'Neill's Pulitzer prize-winning play of 1921, Beyond The Horizon, is little theater's forthcoming production, slated for performances beginning next week on Friday and Saturday, May 25, 26, at 8 p.m., and continuing the following week on June 1 and 2, according to drama instructor Michael Griffin.

The cast for the play includes Peggy Powell as Kate, Andy Buonsante as Captain Scott, Stan Weston as Andy Mayo, Bob Phalen as Robert Mayo, Kay Douville as Mrs. Atkins, Stephanie Koppe as Ruth, Noreen Deruette as Mary, and Crockett McClanahan as Ben.

The play, set in the early 1900's, involves the minimum of costs for sets and costumes, designed exclusively for the play by Miss Koppe and Phalen.

Beyond The Horizon, directed by Griffin, is an adult drama centered around hate, desire and compassion.

Next Sunday, May 20, at 3 p.m., the Mountain Theater group is presenting Aristophane's The Birds on Mt. Tamalpais in which a number of the college's students are participating.

Griffin is also producing the play, in which Miss Powell, McClanahan, Karol Glasnow, Dawn Kidd, Annajean Ostrum, Dennis Olswang, and Rita Fabri, all of the college, will appear. Technical and make-up work will be done by Ritch Barulich, Chuck Mullen, Mel Rasmussen, Miss Douville, Gay Neuemiller and Lois Storms.

Denman Scholarship Winners Announced; Awards Presented

Winners of the Denman Scholarships, Anita Guerra and Martha Lozar, were announced and presented with their awards at the Prep Day luncheon on Thursday, May 10.

Miss Guerra is a graduate of Lowell High School where she was a science and mathematics major. Miss Guerra is now a high freshman here and a pre-nursing major. Among the clubs and activities to which she belongs are Gamma Sigma sorority, Alpha Gamma Sigma honor society, Rally Committee and the Associated Women Students.

Upon graduation from here, Miss Guerra plans to continue her studies at the University of California School of Nursing.

A Balboa graduate, Miss Lozar majored there in science, music, mathematics and Spanish. Letters and Sciences is her major here.

Miss Lozar has participated in Collegiate Christian Fellowship of which she was president, Alpha Gamma Sigma honor society, Recreation Association, and is recording secretary for Club Activities Board.

She will enter San Francisco State College in September to further her studies toward a teaching degree.

The Denman Scholarships of $125 each are awarded annually to two women who have maintained a 2.0 (B) grade point average and are graduates of a San Francisco public high school. This scholarship was established by Judge William Denman and his sister Mary Cheatham in memory of their father, James Denman, a former superintendent of San Francisco Public Schools.

Members of the Denman award committee included Louis Conlan, president of the college; Lloyd Luckmann, coordinator of Instruction; Archibald Cloud, president emeritus of the college, and Dean Mary Golding.

Former Student Wins High Honor

Roberta Usher, an honor graduate here in 1954, has been named to membership in Phi Beta Kappa, national honor society, and was recently awarded a National Science Foundation scholarship to continue her studies at Stanford.

Miss Usher is currently enrolled at Pomona, and will graduate in June of this year. A biology major, she will use the $1,400, plus tuition and expense allowances, provided by the Science Foundation award to study experimental embryology in her post-graduate work at Stanford.

One of three Pomona College seniors to receive such awards, Miss Usher, who compiled a perfect 3.0 grade point average while attending this college, was one of 48 so honored throughout the entire United States.

Upon graduation from City College in June, 1954, Miss Usher was one of two members of that class awarded the Scholastic Cup, annually presented to the graduate with the highest grade-point average for his or her college career.

In addition to her 3.0 grade mark, Miss Usher was active in student activities. She was Homecoming Queen here in Fall 1953, served as a member of the Student Council, and was president of Alpha Lambda Chi.

Electronics Lab Under Construction

Engineering facilities here will be doubled by the addition of the $30,000 electronics laboratory, to be located in the old machine shop, S49, according to William K. Mayo, engineering instructor here.

The electronics laboratory construction started on April 5, Mayo said, adding that it is scheduled for completion by Sunday, July 1.

Semiprofessional students who are enrolled in television, radio, and electronics courses will begin classes in the new laboratory in September. More than 100 students are presently crowded and holding class in one laboratory, May said. Satisfactory completion of these courses enables students to meet the requirements for graduation and to earn a certificate of competion.

Teaching methods will not be altered by the added space, and more equipment will be available to students, Mayo stated. Electrical machinery, which is a lecture and laboratory course, deals with the operation and maintenance of electrical machinery used in radio broadcasting and television transmission. Electronic equipment and their circuits will be used in the new electronics laboratory.

Alpha Phi Omega Ugly Man Voting Ends This Week

Students may vote for any of the ten contestants by depositing a penny or pennies in the balloting jars, which are located in the cafeteria and at the Silver Pole in the science building.

"The money which is collected from this contest will be donated to the City of Hope charity fund," Cabrinha said, adding that the winner will be announced and the prizes awarded at the May Festival on Friday night at the Cow Palace.

The contest winner will receive a one-gallon "Ugly Man" beer mug and an "Ugly Man" key. The fraternity or club which has sponsored him will be awarded a winner's trophy. The second and third place contestants will also receive an "Ugly Man" key, and their sponsoring club or fraternity will be given a trophy.

Aspirants To Presidency Answer Questions Submitted By Readers On Controversies

(Editor's note: The Guardsman recently invited students here to draft questions which they wished to be answered by candidates. Because of space limitations, five questions as follows were selected by The Guardsman and were put to the candidates for the office of Associated Student President.)

QUESTION 1.—What is your position on Guardsman distribution?

Jim Buckley, AS presidential candidate: "I believe that AS card holders should have preference over non-AS card holders in Guardsman distribution, but if the majority of the AS card holders, through a survey, desire no preference to their AS card, then I believe that The Guardsman should be given out freely to all students."

Patrick Mahoney, AS presidential candidate: "I am with the majority."

Wayne McFadden, AS presidential candidate: "I believe the Associated Men Students have supplied that answer themselves in a recent poll in which they voted 270 to 120 in favor of free distribution. I will support that decision."

• • •

QUESTION 2.—How do you intend to increase student interest in and attendance at AS social and sports activities?

Buckley: "By increasing the membership of joining the AS, interest in AS affairs will also be increased. By increasing the membership of the AS, the scope of activities may be broadened, such as bringing top name entertainers to AS activities, as is the case in many other large colleges.

"Some of the major factors to increase AS card benefits would be early registration for card holders and also parking privileges."

Mahoney: "I am with the majority."

McFadden: "I believe student interest will increase whenever there is a program presented to them in which they can take an active part. If elected I will strive for the following:

"A. Larger intramural program for the AS such as current AMS basketball leagues.

"B. Student scholarships on behalf of the AS.

"C. A student union building in which students may relax after meals or between classes.

"D. Better parking facilities.

"E. Better discounts for AS card holders on activities and theaters."

• • •

QUESTION 3.—Do you feel that elected officers should have reserved parking privileges?

Buckley: "Due to the fact that only AS card holders are allowed to park in the lots, and these AS card holders are the people who benefit from the activities arranged by the student leaders of the college, leaders who put in many hours of work planning these events and who must travel to and from the college several times a day to arrange these activities, such leaders should have parking privileges."

Mahoney: "I am with the majority."

McFadden: "I believe the elected officers are elected by the people and for the people, therefore no special privileges (except in case of the State Information Officer, where communication is very heavy)."

• • •

QUESTION 4.—What do you believe is the role of student government in college life?

Buckley: "I believe that student government plays a very important role in college life because students in college should have reached a mature age, and should be able to assume the responsibilities of managing their own affairs and activities.

"Those students who are willing to take an active part in student government can gain much in the way of leadership, self-confidence and the ability to get along with fellow students and faculty advisers."

Mahoney: "I am with the majority."

McFadden: "I believe that student government in college life is an important part for those who are so interested. However, all of our likes and dislikes are not the same, and we must each and every one find our own fields of interests to be a success in them."

• • •

QUESTION 5.—Have you any personal statement to make on your behalf?

Buckley: "Through my position as Soph President, I have gained the ability to work with my fellow officers toward the goal of more benefits for the entire student body.

"If I am elected, I believe that I can help every student here to fulfill his desire to be able to say that our college is truly outstanding in student government as well as it is in the scholastic fields.

Mahoney: "In regard to these and other issues pertaining to student activities, I am with the majority of students have chosen their position. I have seen this position evidenced in every phase of college life during my two years here!

"The majority of the students have shown a willingness, a natural ability and uneanny perseverance to DO NOTHING. Since this is a democratic institution and the majority should be represented, I have been asked to be the official representative of the majority of the students.

"The majority strength among the students is unbelievable. If the DO NOTHING MAJORITY had presented a candidate in the past, on the basis of students eligible to vote, they would have won every election in City College history.

"So I ask those of you who believe in the DO NOTHING MAJORITY—vote. In this election you have an official outlet to express your position and return student government to the hands of the MAJORITY. VOTE DO NOTHING.

"Further, I challenge the other candidates to debate their principles against the principles of the DO NOTHING MAJORITY, which I am pledged to uphold."

McFadden: "It is my wish to be elected Associated Student President so that I may represent you, the student body, in the manner of your expressed desire.

"After having served as your student representative for the last three semesters—as a member of the Club Activities Board, the Student Council, and this semester as Associated Men Student President—I feel that I have acquired the necessary experience, qualifications, and interests which are required for the office of Associated Student President.

"If I am fortunate enough to gain the office, it will be my goal to serve you and the best interests of college at all times to the best of my ability."

Faculty Committee Deciding Winner Of Finance Award

Now in the process of weighing the facts before rendering a decision, a committee composed of faculty and administrative personnel is seeking the top student in the business field for the annual Wall Street Journal Award in finance, Edward W. Larson, business instructor here, announced recently.

The award, presented for seven years now to a graduating senior in the business field each June, consists of a dollar-size silver medal, encased in clear plastic and engraved with the winner's name, plus a one year subscription to the Wall Street Journal, a $20 value. The Journal is now presenting this award to outstanding students in 700 colleges throughout the nation.

In considering the winner, the committee will choose the student who has demonstrated by scholarship, leadership, and potential promise in the field of finance and investment, abilities exceeding those of other nominees.

The winner of the award will be announced prior to commencement, while the actual presentation of the award will be made at the commencement ceremonies.

Business Leaders Interview Today

Thirty leading business and industrial firms in the San Francisco Bay Area, represented by 50 official representatives, are on the campus today to interview prospective June graduates from the 12 business department programs, Placement Director Joseph Amori announced.

More than one hundred June graduates from 12 different major fields, ranging from accounting and advertising to retail merchandising and graphic arts, have been selected for interviews by the Business Recruitment Day staff.

Graduates will be entitled to as many personal interviews as they desire, and many of the graduates will have full time positions when the Business Recruitment Day closes, Amori stated.

27 Meet Deadline For Submission Of Petitions For AS Candidacy; Rally To Introduce Top Contenders

Although last-minute petition filing for Associated Student offices was made through the 11 a.m. deadline last Wednesday, at that time 27 students were approved for candidacy, according to the official election petition list released by Gary Shymmel, election commissioner here.

There is an election rally scheduled for college hour, 10:40 a.m., this Friday, during which time all candidates, except those running for council, will be introduced.

On election days, this Friday and next Monday and Tuesday, students may cast their ballots at the silver pole, the cafeteria, or the library, between the hours of 8 a.m. and 4 p.m., Shymmel declared.

Three students have declared themselves to be contenders for the top office of AS President, Shymmel disclosed.

The students who are in the race for AS President are Jim Buckley, Pat Mahoney and Wayne McFadden.

AS Vice-President is also a highly contested office, with Jim Carroll, Rose Thurman and Louise von Epster matched against one another.

Norman Durieux and Bob Varni are engaged in a two-man contest for the office of President of the Associated Men Students.

No competition is being given Metta Weddleton for President of the Associated Women Students or Bill Roberts for President of the Sophomore Class.

Two candidates, Mike Monteith and Dee Noodlman, are vieing for the office of Freshman Class President.

In the contest for Sophomore Council are the following: Bill Allen, Jerry Cassidy, Joan Finnerah, Jim Kennedy, Lillian Kowalski, Ronald Kramer, Phil Mainiek, Deborah Rudser, Anne Smith and Elvera Steiner.

Those who have submitted petitions for Freshman Council are as follows: Sonya Cohn, William Driscoll, Alvin Foss, George Pyne, and Gerald Williams. Since there are seven freshman seats on council, Shymmel announced that he would hold the submission of petitions open a while longer, in order to get greater participation.

Shymmel expressed his disappointment in the poor turnout of candidates for most of the AS offices, which Shymmel thought indicated a general lack of student interest.

The Election Committee, composed this semester of 17 students, will have members at each polling site to tabulate the ballots. Other duties which the group performs are putting up election posters, and mailing election information to each prospective voter.

This committee includes the following: Hameed Abdul, Carol Aizenberg, Sandhu Balbir, Bob Castle, Virgil Cox, Ted Daniels, Maria Giron-Cerna, Naren Jhaveri, Bobbie LeBoff, Emilie Pazlo, Barbara Polster, Donna Pucciarelli, Margie Scheller, Ellie Smith, Willy Tolliefsen, Joyee Weaver and Natalia Zalessow.

Blue Lights Dance Friday Night; Paul Orchestra To Play

Tau Chi Sigma fraternity will bring The House Of Blue Lights dance back to the social calendar this Friday, May 25. The dance will take place at the San Francisco Rowing Club, 504 Jefferson St., from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight, with Stephen Paul and his orchestra providing the music.

This semi-formal dance, at $2 per couple, has been absent from the calendar for several semesters.

The fraternity expects everyone to wear something blue to carry out the theme. However, such is not compulsory for entrance to the dance, Paris Royo, Tau Chi president, said.

Working on this dance are Bob Varni, in charge of the dance; Hiram Kaakua, taking care of the tallies, and Jim Gorman, in charge of publicity.

Tickets for The House Of Blue Lights will be on sale at the door as well as at the bank in the student union building. Tickets may also be purchased from any member of Tau Chi Sigma fraternity.

Officers for the Spring semester in addition to Royo are Varni, vice-president; Phil Malnick, treasurer; Lee Lynn, secretary; Jack Lareky, pledge master, and Stan Boyaniek, historian.

Guardsman, Classes Precluded By Holiday

Because of the observance of Memorial Day, there will be no classes held next Wednesday, May 30. The holiday also precludes the publication of The Guardsman on that day. The next issue will be available Wednesday, June 6.

First double college hour of the semester takes place on Friday, June 1.

Double college hour follows the same schedule as the regular college hour except that the 11 o'clock class is omitted.

Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities, stated that the first half of the college hour will be allotted to the Soph-Prof softball game, which will be held on the football field, while a concert by the Sixth Army Band will follow in the library.

IRC To Stage Model UN Conference During College Hour Friday, June 1

Members of the International Relations Club here will stage a model United Nations during the double college hour of Friday, June 1, Joseph Jacobsen, counsellor and the club's adviser, announced recently.

All the countries in the UN will have equal representation as a General Assembly is to be held. The agenda and topics for discussion have already been prepared in order to facilitate the proceedings.

IRC members who are to be the principal speakers at the model UN meeting have been preparing their speeches in advance and taking part in trial debates on the considered topics during regular club meetings.

The international problems to be brought up during this model General Assembly are ones which the UN is currently facing. They include the Israeli-Arab conflict over Palestine, the legitimacy of Red China's petition for entrance into the UN, and the Greco-British controversy over the island of Cyprus, Jacobsen stated.

The session will open with Lloyd Luckman, coordinator of Division of Education, giving an introductory speech.

There will be no extemporaneous debating since the speakers will have been well versed on the matter of their assigned discourses. This measure was taken so as to save time, which is not too abundant considering the number of measures to be brought up, Jacobsen explained.

After presentation of the speeches, which will have given both sides of the issues to the General Assembly, a short period will be set aside for the answering of questions.

Self Government Here Will Die If AS Neglects Voting Rights

EVEN the most precious of possessions become neglected and misused if they are taken for granted, and in this nation of freedom it is necessary all too often to remind the people of their rights.

Perhaps the best way to make freedom a little more important to an apathetic populace is to take it away periodically. Since this is impossible, an editorial tap on the shoulder is needed to impress the voting duty upon the Associated Student card holders.

Nothing is ever gained by standing still, but one can lose everything by running away from responsibility. It is the easiest thing in the world to simply ignore the AS elections, or any elections, and indeed such lack of action is the best formula for throwing government and civil rights to the dogs.

The dangerous thing about this trend is that once it is allowed to take hold, possessions slip away like quicksilver, with the only chance for regaining these rights being a long succession of battles for freedom.

In the more specific case of college student government, it takes only enough people who think about how little their vote counts, and not about the betterment of the institution, for this sacred freedom to be lost.

Freedom is the most precious human right, and may exist in a myriad of forms, one of which is the right of self-government. Since there has been increasing discussion concerning the qualification of the 18-year-olds to vote, it seems to us that student government is an excellent opportunity for the younger voters of the nation to prove or disprove this argument for themselves. If college students are unable to fill their voting duty in student elections, it hardly seems logical that they be given the right to vote on the national level.

Representative showings by the student voters, however, is the best possible evidence of their interest and ability to fulfill their right to vote.

Overall voting totals in AS elections here have, unfortunately, been poor. Last semester, however, the percentage took a rise for the first time in several years. It is hoped that this trend will continue this week and next, as the AS voters decide on their officers for the fall semester.

What this nation has accomplished in past decades now stands ready for our consumption. Whether we will consume and leave only waste in our path, or consume, benefit and show progress instead is for our generation to decide. A measure of that decision will be reached next week.

Shots At Random

By Bob Kauth

LIFE is ironic. One of the ironic things about it is the current trend toward shorter and shorter haircuts and higher and higher haircut prices.

There was a time when most of a barber's business came from shaving the face. Yet today, he almost does and oftentimes does shave the head. In fact, some numb blonde recently got her picture in the paper for proving that women as just as foolish as men.

A blonde, of course. What would you expect? She heard about this Mohawk haircut. When a Mohawk is given, all the hair is shaved off except a short, narrow strip which runs down the middle of the head.

It looks like one row of corn standing on a ten-acre field. Your head, eyes, nose and mouth look extremely large. It is an excellent way to frighten away male (or female) friends who do not believe that . . . "beauty is only skin deep."

This blonde, she got one. So they put her picture in the paper. And we'll run a picture of the first female student here who gets a Mohawk. But you'd better hurry, for this blonde says that it looks great!

There was a time when people only got a haircut every six months or so. But the prices were lower then. Now a haircut is $1.75 in all union shops. And everyone goes to his barber every two or three weeks in order to get a trim or a head shave.

Today Danny runs in and says, "Shave off the top, Bill, but leave the sideburns long. And tomorrow, Dan will say, "Just trim the sides, Bill, and sell me ten bottles of that hair restorer." That's life; ironic, huh?

* * *

THAT COLLEGE STUDENTS are "members of the intelligentsia" was recently announced by Dr. Dorothy Mercer, English instructor here. But we wonder if this includes that mentally cultivated blonde, Analisa Domars (and others), who sets her alarm clock ten minutes fast . . . "in order not to oversleep?"

* * *

CRIME DOESN'T PAY: There has been an increase in the number of parking tickets issued here this semester over last semester. The most pleased of the parking violators, who willingly paid his two dollar fine at City Hall, is Lee Hargus, campus police chief, whose car was recently beticketed for illegal parking by Ed Nelson, patrolman.

* * *

HE'S NO VALENTINO: Although he is a Chesterfieldian-like dancer, has a way with the women and a new Ford, Stan Pfeifer, local college man about town, has his own philosophy. For during a moment of meditation he said, "This world would be all right, if it weren't for women!"

* * *

THANKS, ANYWAY, and better luck next time: Over in the cafeteria, Frank Derfield looked up from his lunch long enough to inquire, "How's your arm?"

"My arm's just fine, thank you," she said as she shouldered her cruteh, "but it was my leg I broke!"

HORSE (center) looks on solemnly, soberly as campus coeds try to convince him that in order to succeed you must be dumb and have confidence, but he's just a hayburner. he says.—Guardsman photo by Richard Brooks.

Racetrack Personalities Disclose Way To Pick The Winning Plugs

By Gary Verbin

Every year thousands of dollars are lost all over the United States and the world on one of the oldest sports known to man, the Sport of Kings, otherwise called horse racing.

Among the personalities who frequent the track, there is first of all the "horsey type," known to all because of movies and television. This is the guy who wears the white shoes, yellow sox, black slacks, red shirt, and the familiar plaid sport coat. Usually he has a big black cigar, which he borrowed from his buddy "just for the day."

Mac Finsterbush is always in need of a fin until the next race is over because he has a one or coming up. But rarely if ever does his hot one make it to the wire in front. He is easily spotted because of his clothes.

Frustrated is the joker who picks his haybunners the night before he gets to the track. He works late into the night with his forms and slide rules, until he is sure he has the winners. But just before he makes his wager, he changes his mind. Of course, the one he bets on runs last and his original selection wins, but he almost was a zillionaire.

Then there is Mr. Average Fan. This poor slob knows from nothing about horses, but he heard that they were giving away nice green money, and he came to get his share. He probably cut school or left work early to come down and reap the harvest of money.

First he buys all the forms available. He doesn't know what they mean, but that's not important. He must look as if he does. While walking to his seat he sees Mac and right away he can tell that this guy knows horses.

He walks up and shyly asks if Mac has a good one. After shelling out five bucks for "service," Mr. Fan is given a one-legged stiff that he could outrun on a fast track. But he walks away happy and sure of winning a fortune. He notices Frustrated walking around, and after further investigation is given another stiff in the same race as Mr. Finsterbush's goody.

After figuring out that he has been "tipped" two different horses, numbers three and five, he bets number six. Of course seven wins. And all of our little friends loose. But you won't lose if you remember the advice of Fedly Flepheart, "Horse racing is the Sport of Kings, and only Kings can afford it."

If one stretched a gallon of gasoline for a distance of 15 miles, it would make a stream about the diameter of a hair from a horse's tail. Yet that thin thread of liquid can move a 3,000-pound car 15 miles with the whole family in it.

The Bohemian

Comedy Of Weakness: Creative Liberty, Free Thinking Sacrificed For Materialistic Luxury

By Maurice Poszkiewicz

ANOTHER one," the fat, impeccably dressed functionary said in his usual methodical manner.

The man, whom the officer had brought before him, cowered like a frightened animal and kept to the darkest confines of the office. His coat was torn; his hair wildly ruffled. But the most prominent of his despicable appearance was the [illegible] beard. It represented a mask, under which his blasphemous practices against the welfare of society could be carried out.

The chief felt somewhat uncomfortable. He always had that sense of uncertainty when confronted by these "beings."

"What's your number?" he commanded the man to answer. A short pause, and then a surprisingly rich and toneful voice from the corner replied, "Machine 99, but I have been using the alias of James Montague."

This confession infuriated the chief, who now began to lose control of his well known collectiveness. "You realize that you're guilty of breaking the law established by our great statesmen at the turn of the year 2000. Let's see what other crimes you are culpable of against our dear society." the red-faced official blurted, as he glanced over the records.

"It seems that two years ago, you mysteriously disappeared, leaving your executive position at the plant, your cars and estates and all your vast funds in the bank unattended. In short, you left all that is desirable and noteworthy in life to become irresponsible and carefree." Beside himself with disgust, the chief shouted the [illegible] derogatory [illegible] that came to mind, "You're an artist!"

"Ah, what did you do during your absence? This cause to which you owe your decadence must have been a great scheme, the profit enormous," the chief began to reflect, suddenly flashing a knowing smile. "I know what you attempt is insurgent to the ideals of this perfect state, but perhaps if the profit is immeasurable, the power supreme, an exception could be made. Reveal the plot," the chief ordered, his eyes narrowing in an attempt to hide the greed which their brightness unveiled.

The man came forth. He no longer slouched, but felt himself to be in the dominating role of this comedy of weakness. This was something that this society had not yet been able to obliterate, despite all its scientific effectiveness.

He had dared to use a name instead of a number which the subjects, human machines part of a gear in a system of perfect regulation, so willingly accepted.

And why not, didn't they, live in materialistic luxury? Who wouldn't give up such petty things as creative liberty, free thinking and artistic inspirations to achieve such a high place of existence?

But this [illegible] being" had, and his madness reached such scopes that it was a proud gesture as he flung a book on the chief's desk.

"Think," he said, "in two years I have written such poetry that leaves the reader in moods of aesthetic ecstasy."

Of these utterings, the official knew nothing. He was confused. It was with curiosity that he opened the book. "Worthless, thin pages full of scribblings," he thought as he began tearing the sheets out one by one. His rage mounted.

"Two years, for this? You are useless to this society." He pressed a button, and the officer automatically entered the room and dragged out the crumpled, unconscious body of the man, soon to be executed.

Baseballers Lose Two To Coalinga In State Playoffs After Topping San Jose Jaguars In Regional, 4-2

By Lou Lucia

Two one run losses at the hands of Coalinga by 7-6 and 8-7 scores at the victors' home field last Friday and Saturday eliminated the Rams from further play-off competition for the California Junior College Championship.

Coalinga retained their unbeaten streak and ran their consecutive victories to 38, and will play Orange Coast for the state title.

No team could possibly have come closer to Coalinga as two one run losses are as close as a team can get in a baseball game.

A crowd of 5,000 watched the Rams surge ahead in the sixth inning only to lose out with a two run Coalinga rally in the eighth, to hand Bob Bandettini his first loss of the season and give the Rams a one game deficit in the two out of three game series.

Catcher Ken Dito's bat was as hot as the 90 degree weather as he powered two home runs and singled once for three runs batted in.

When Dito singled in the ninth inning, a Coalinga fan seriously remarked, "Ha, we held you that time."

Other leading hitters for the Rams were Roger Ferrari with a triple and two singles, Russ Fadeff a single and double, and Lou Flores with two singles.

Nine walks and Mako Tashimo's three run homer gave the Coalinga team an added advantage in the seesaw battle.

In the second game the Rams were scoreless until the sixth inning, when Jim Poppin tripled Blair LeMire and Dito across the plate with the tying runs.

Hans Pung homered in the last of the sixth to put Coalinga in the lead again and a four run rally in the eighth seemed to sew up the game.

A ninth inning grand slam home run by Glenn Bukowatz made the score 7-6 as the Rams refused to die. With two outs, LeMire walked, Dito singled, and Poppin's single tied the score.

Owen Goto's sacrifice bunt scored Pung with the winning run in the last of the ninth.

Second baseman John McCarthy was unable to make the road trip because of an injury.

By virtue of their 4-2 win on May 15 at Balboa Park over the Coast Conference champion San Jose Jaguars, the Rams gained the right to play Coalinga for the championship.

A quick 3-0 burst in the third inning gave the Rams a lead they never relinquished, although the Jaguars came back in the next inning to score two runs on second baseman Don White's home run clout with a runner aboard.

Ray Warman started on the mound for San Francisco, but tired under the heavy strain. The Ram pitchers had worked during the previous days, and Coach Bill Fischer inserted Fred Glosser in the seventh.

Glosser was in trouble in the eighth and Bob Bandettini took over with one out and the bases loaded. A line drive was turned into a double-play. Bandettini returned in the ninth to strike out two of the three last hitters and preserve the game for winner Warman.

Jaguar pitching ace Larry Peterson was unable to stop the hitting of Dito and Poppin, neither being put out during the game. Dito had two singles and two walks while Poppin singled twice and doubled.

Redus Paces Rams To Second Place In All-League Meet

By Al Moss

Clint Redus, nipped in the 100-yard dash by inches for his first league loss, came back to set a pair of circuit records, but Modesto topped the Rams in the Big Eight Conference Championship Track and Field Meet at Sacramento's Hughes Stadium on Tuesday, May 15.

It was Oakland's great Ray Norton who overtook Redus in the last few yards to edge the Ram sophomore, in a record-tying time of :09.9. Norton also cracked the league mark in the 220, with a :21.5 win.

Redus' records came in the hurdle events. Unbeaten in two years of Big Eight competition until the loss to Norton in the 100, he romped to wins in the 120-yard high hurdles at :15.1 and in the 220 low sticks at :24.2. George Jones was second in both events, and also broke the old standard of :24.5 in the lows. Redus, with 28 points, was awarded the high point trophy for the second straight year.

Another league record came in the high jump, where Ram LeRoy Thomas and Oakland's Hal Tieus tied at 6-4. Thomas' leap also cracks the City College record of 6-3⅝.

Modesto, piling up 67 points in the three distance runs, garnered 159½, while the Rams, unused to Sacramento's 80 plus degree heat, had 106½.

Horsehiders Take Conference Title In Modesto Sweep

By Lou Lucia

Two victories by 7-6 and 6-0 scores over Modesto on the loser's home grounds on May 12 enabled the Rams to win the Big Eight championship, as second place Santa Rosa was eliminated from the pennant chase by losing a double-header to San Mateo.

Two days later the Bill Fischer-coached champions sprinkled the field with reserve players and lost to Oakland by a 23-7 score.

Fred Glosser won the first Modesto game in a relief role and then came back to set the Pirates down on four hits in the second tiff for the first Ram shutout and double pitching victory.

Coasting along on a 6-2 lead entering the ninth inning, reliefer Bob Bandettini was shelled from the mound with a four-run rally that tied the game, and marked the first time Bandettini needed relief.

In the eleventh, Roger Ferrari singled Blair LeMire across with the winning run.

Leading hitters in the second game were LeMire with three for three and Lou Flores with two for four.

NL Baseball Predictions Competition Is Closed

After a very favorable response, The Guardsman National League baseball predictions contest closed on Monday, May 14.

Hurdle Ace Beaten But Takes Point Honors As Modesto Wins; Rams Gain Seven Places For State Meet

By Al Moss

Clint Redus, stunningly upset in the high hurdles, came back to win the lows and garner 24 points for high point honors as the Rams took third place in the Northern California track championships at Santa Rosa's Bailey Field last Friday, May 18.

Modesto won the meet with 89¾, while College of Sequoias, with 54¾, edged the Rams, with 53, for second.

Redus was topped by Menlo's Bob Ballam, Coast Conference champ, and Ram teammate George Jones in the highs, after he had beaten Ballam in the trials. The loss was Redus' first high hurdle defeat in his college career.

The Rams lost sure points in the low hurdles when George Jones, a certain qualifier, for the state finals, stumbled on a hurdle and fell, eliminating himself from competition. The same kind of accident put him out of the West Coast Relays.

Outstanding individuals behind Redus were Oakland's Ray Norton, who edged the San Franeiscans in the 100 and won the 220, and Ray Hale of Modesto, who won the mile in 4:20.6 and the two mile in 9:52.0.

Lloyd Castello, fourth in the close two-mile race, was timed in 9:56.3, well below the City College record. Redus, second in the 100; LeRoy Thomas, with a tie for first in the high jump; and the second-place relay team were the others to qualify for the Rams for the state meet.

Mile—Hale (Mod.), Winger (Mod.), Green (Napa), Bond (Hart.), Watkins (Am. River), Jardin (Mod.); 4:20.6 (meet record; old record of 4:28.2 set by Grover, Sac., 1953).

HJ—Tie for first between Thomas (SF), and Theus (Oak.), tie for third between Smith (Mod.), and Worrick (SJ), tie for fifth among Allen (Mod.), Miller (Fresno); 6-6 (meet record; old record of 6-2¼ set by Walters of Santa Rosa in 1954 and Theus in 1955).

North-South Vie In California Relays At Modesto May 26

Still trying to top the sun-baked southern stars, Northern California's outstanding track and field men go into the state championship at Modesto this Saturday, May 26, as underdogs to the Southern Cal champions. The meet is being run, for the second straight year, in conjunction with the California Relays.

Trials will be held during the day, with the finals to be run in the evening, beginning at 7 p.m.

If times and distances are any indication, the south state performers won't need too much to whip their northern cousins. The northerners can boast top times in only two events, the mile and the 120-yard high hurdles. Otherwise, it's all Southern California.

The Rams' ace, Clint Redus, is the high hurdler. Redus racked up a state and personal best in the West Coast Relays at Fresno on May 12, beating many of the same men he will face in the state meet and winning his heat in :14.4. He won the finals in :14.7. As state champion last year, Redus tied the official state record of :14.6.

George Jones, another San Franciscan, may surprise the southland in the highs. Jones has been a consistent second to Redus, and racked up a :14.5 heat at Fresno, then tripped over a hurdle to eliminate himself in the finals. Redus is also the north state low hurdle hope, after finishing second by inches in last year's state finals to a :23.2.

In the mile, the northerners could take an unprecedented one-two. Ray Hale, Modesto's distance ace, has a 4:20.6 to his credit, while Wes Bond of Hartnell has gone 4:21.3. Top miler in the south appears to be Mount San Antonio's Bob McGuire, who won the regional with 4:24.1 and overtook Hale in the anchor lap of the distance medley relay at Fresno.

Top team honors should easily go to Compton, led by the incomparable Willie Atterberry. Atterberry has a :47.2 440 mark and has gone the 880 in the almost equally amazing time of 1:51.1.

Modesto Netmen Win Big 8 Crown

Modesto kept its domination on the tennis scene by capturing both the singles and doubles top crowns in the North Sectional Championships held at Golden Gate Park on May 13.

In an almost exact repeat of the Big Eight Conference championships, held earlier in the month, Manuel Gallardo of the Bucs defeated Ed Guzman of the same college for the singles title, 6-2, 9-7.

In the doubles, Gallardo and Guzman teamed up to defeat Don Mays and Joe Souza of the Rams in the finals for that title, 6-2, 6-3.

Mays and Souza had pulled an upset to reach the finals by defeating John Bolton and Al Camino of Modesto, 6-3, 8-10, 6-2.

On May 17, Mays and Souza played in the State Tourney, which was held in Riverside.

'Peachfuzz Kids' Vs. 'Old Prof Graybeards' In Battle Of Century

By Gary Verbin

It's just possible that the battle of the century will be fought with softballs on the college football field Friday, June 1, when the old "graybearded profs" take on the "peachfuzzed children" known as the Sophs in the annual Soph-Prof softball game.

The Soph-Prof game will be played in a double college hour during which 11 o'clock classes will be cancelled, administrative officials announced. Game time is 10:40 a.m. to 12:10 p.m.

The honor of the "graybeards" will certainly be at stake as they go for their 11th victory in the last 11 years. The old men of these ancient halls seem to be a bit over-confident. Rumor has it that they may use only three men, a pitcher, catcher and a shortstop. They don't seem to think that they'll need more than a pitcher and catcher as none of the "babes" can hit the ball anyway, but just in case, they'll use the extra man.

Meanwhile, the word has leaked out from the camp of the youngsters that they are no longer being allowed to eat, and will go into the contest with that hungry look in their eyes.

Although no official line-ups have been released for either team, a check of records found that the old men will stick pretty close to the same line-up they use each year. If this is so, its possible that they will trip over their collective beards, as there is a great deal of age involved. Their ages add to the grand total of 962, which is, of course, a great deal older than they might admit.

It is expected that "Rocket" Roy Diedrichsen (last year's winning pitcher) will try to make it two victories in a row over the kids, if he can go the required innings, and this seems to be the big question.

The rookies, as they have been called, seem to feel that this is the year that they will end the famine and win at least ONE in a row.

A Cappella Choir, Sixth Army Band To Join In Concert

The music department will present a joint concert by the Sixth Army Band and the A Cappella Choir on Friday, June 1, in the reserve book room of the college library during a special double college hour period, Robert M. Morton, music instructor here, said recently.

Featured in the concert will be the Second Symphony, composed by Morton and written for and dedicated to the band playing it. The first movement of this symphony, a composition in four movements, was presented by the Sixth Army Band as part of its annual July 4 concert at Sigmund Stern Grove in 1952.

Five days prior to their presentation at the college, the band and the choir will give the same concert at the Presidio as part of the band's regular concert series held every two weeks. This concert will feature the world premiere of Morton's Second Symphony, and will serve as a dress rehearsal for the concert here on June 1.

The bandmaster will be Chief Warrant Officer Louis Ferraro, and choir director, the college's Flossita Badger. "This joint concert is rapidly becoming a tradition in good music and fine entertainment," Morton added.

The shortest heavyweight title fight on record is Tommy Burns' 1:28 knockout of Irish Jerry Roche in the first round at Dublin, Ireland, in 1908.

Pre-Graduation Assembly June 16

A pre-commencement assembly will be held at 10 a.m. Wednesday, June 6, in the reserve book room of the library for all prospective graduates, according to Dean of Women Mary Golding.

The prospective graduates will be required to attend and will be excused from their 10 o'clock classes on that day, Dean Golding said.

The program for the assembly will include an address of greeting from Sophomore Class President, Jim Buckley; a member of the Faculty Association speaking on the importance of participation in the graduation ceremonies; Dean Edwin C. Browne will inform the class of the traditional contribution to the Class of '56 scholarship fund, and the other mechanics of the commencement ceremony.

Scholarships being awarded at the assembly will include the Margaret Dougherty, Florence Lewis, Dr. Archibald Cloud, Class of '55, Garden Club, Chinese Club, Square and Circle, Theta Tau, and the University of California scholarships.

Student Council Votes To Place IFC Independency Amendment On Ballot

Council member Jim Carroll's motion for an amendment to be placed on the ballot to permit the Inter-Fraternity Council to become an independent body caused considerable controversy at last week's Student Council meeting.

After many minutes of debate, however, the motion was passed by a majority vote. If voted on favorably in the coming election, the IFC will no longer be under the control of the Club Activities Board, but will be on a parallel with this body.

Associated Student President Bill Ciremele opened the nominations for this semester's outstanding service award. Six students were proposed before the nominations were closed. Those named were Jan Aardal, Bill Anderson, Leo Champagne, Ed Dollard, Shirley Stortz, and Jim Wright.

Two additional budget allocations were passed unanimously during the session. The baseball team was awarded an additional $425, and the May Festival committee was given $15.50 to cover the cost of the festival float awards. The allocations were granted from the undistributed reserve fund.

Norman Durieux, Freshman Class president, asked council to establish a committee to discuss plans now for an Orientation Day next semester.

Ed Emig, CAB chairman, asked that the Hotel and Restaurant Society, previously declared off-campus, be reinstated. He said they had finally met the requirements set up by CAB.

At this point, Jim Wright, vicepreident of CAB, stated that he felt the reinstatement shouldn't go through. "If CAB doesn't hold to its original decision, the board will become a farce," he declared. The motion was tabled until further facts could be gathered.

Plans Made For Feminine Fling

Plans are now underway for the first Feminine Fling to be given on Friday, June 1, by the Associated Women Students, the Recreational Association and the Inter-Sorority Council, according to Rose Thurman, AWS president here.

At this affair the RA will present their award, while the AWS and the ISC will honor their new presidents for the coming Fall semester.

According to Miss Thurman, the affair, to be held in the fountain of the student union building, will begin at 6:30 p.m., and all women students are invited.

O'Neill Drama Opens Friday Night In Final Little Theater Show This Year

By Robert Peppers

Beyond The Horizon, the little theater's final production of the semester, opens this Friday and Saturday, May 25 and 26, and continues its four-night program the following week, June 1 and 2, Michael Griffin, drama director, stated recently.

Eugene O'Neill's Pulitzer Prize winning play of 1921 is an adult dramatization of ten intermingled lives and their heavily conflicting hopes, desires, dislikes and jealousies.

The cast includes Peggy Powell as Kate, Andy Buonsante as Captain Scott, Stan Weston as Andy Mayo, Bob Phalen as Robert Mayo, Lucille Saba as Mrs. Atkins, Stephanie Koppe as Ruth, Noreen Deruette as Mary and Crockett McClanahan as Ben. Miss Saba has replaced Kay Doubille as Mrs. Atkins in a last-minute change.

To make this production possible, the drama department was alloted an additional sum of money by the Student Council, Griffin said, helping defray the costs of lighting, effects, scenery, props and construction.

A highpoint in the play is achieved through a lighting technique devised by Roy Maffei, in which the illusion of age is given to props and setting purely through lights.

Other effects in daylight and night scenes are obtained through the revision of the theater's lighting board, also designed by Maffei.

The closing little theater event, scheduled for the end of next week, is a meeting of the local chapter of Detal Psi Omega, at which a selection for membership is made from the drama department of outstanding drama students. The chapter selects students who have excelled in all phases of theater work, specifically emphasizing sets and set designs, acting, makeup and lighting. Each member must have had at least two leads in any major production or the equivalent in supporting roles or technical work to qualify.

College Hour Movie Series To Conclude With Geology Film

Climaxing the college film series for the spring semester will be the film, In The Beginning, to be presented this Friday, May 25, during college hour in Room S136, Madison Devlin, instructor of the audio-visual department, recently announced.

Subject of the picture is the Grand Canyon and its formation throughout the ages. Starting from the earliest geological age, the film covers the history of the great canyon to the present day.

Highlights are shown of the canyon in the various stages of the year and also the different effects given by the sun during various hours of the day.

Music Course Pre-Req Dropped For Summer

No prerequisites will be required for students to enroll in music 27B during the summer session, which will be held here from June 25 to August 3, according to Edward Sandys, dean of general college courses.

Several students who enrolled for summer session courses desired to register for music 27B, Sandys said, but they could not meet the prerequisites. Therefore, it was decided not to require the prerequisites for the course, which are usually music 27A or music 21A or music 21B.

Deadline for summer session registration has been set for Friday, June 8.

AMS Cage Awards Banquet Tonight

The Associated Men Student basketball awards banquet will be held in the dining room of the Temple Methodist Church, 19th Avenue and Junipero Serra Boulevard, beginning at 7 o'clock tonight, with the presentation of trophies to three league winners to follow the dinner, according to Wayne McFadden, AMS president.

Winners of the Independent League, Inter-Fraternity League, and the Hotel and Restaurant League will be presented with trophies. The Chinese Club won Independent honors, while the IFC and H&R victors were undecided until the last games.

A total of 182 persons is expected to attend the dinner, according to McFadden, with 72 from the IFC, 64 from the Independents, 40 from the H&R, and 6 AMS guests.

Trophies will go to the over-all winner, determined by a three-league playoff, and the runners-up. The final game was held last night between the H&R winner and the winner of the IFC - Independent playoff, held on Monday.

Officials for the three leagues are Leo Champagne, in charge of the fraternity basketball group, and Bob Tucker, president of the IFC; Al Moss and Tak Watanabe, handling the Independent League; and Clarence Watson, president of the H&R Society, in charge of that group's league.

Semi-Annual Alumni Speech Contest May 31

Debate Coach Thomas Dutcher announced yesterday that the 15th semi-annual Alumni Speech contest will be held on Thursday, May 31, at 2 p.m. in Room C246.

The speech will be of the impromptu variety, no more than six minutes in length, and the general topic for the speeches will be American Foreign Policy, Dutcher said.

Each contestant will be given an editorial to read for about two minutes, and then the speaker will have a chance to react verbally to the article.

The contest is open to all students of the college who are interested in debate, and signups are being taken in Room C335B, with the deadline for signup Tuesday, May 29, Dutcher added.

Dog Gets 405 Votes For Student Council Position

YELLOW SPRINGS, OHIO (ACP) —This rather discouraging report on a student election is reprinted from the Antioch College Record:

"A French poodle recently [illegible] 405 votes and ran third in a student council election at the University of British Columbia. The dog was entered as "Kiki Graham" by a student who wanted to prove that the voters do not investigate the backgrounds of candidates."

Club Activities Day Set For Friday With Evening Dance In Smith Hall

Exhibits From Thirty On-Campus Organizations Will Be Displayed As New Members Are Recruited

Club Activities Day, held each semester to introduce students to the organizations officially recognized on campus, is scheduled this Friday, September 28, during college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m., according to Lon Earnshaw, Club Activities Board president. Thirty clubs will set up exhibits representative of their particular type of organization between Cloud Hall and the Science Building to provide opportunity for new and returning students to sign for membership.

Activities will be concluded by a dance Friday night in Smith Hall from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight. Stephen Paul and his five piece band will provide the music, which will be highlighted by the awarding of trophies to the Associated Men Student and Associated Women Student card sales winners, Earnshaw said.

Admission to the dance is by Associated Student card, or by registration card plus 75 cents. Guests passes are obtainable for 75 cents in the office of Dean Mary Golding, but Earnshaw warned that those with guest passes must be accompanied by a student here.

Decorations for the dance, Earnshaw declared, will represent the clubs, sororities, fraternities in CAB.

Other officers for CAB this semester are Bob Wendt, vice-president; Joetta Colwell, secretary, and Soledad Comacho, corresponding secretary.

Member clubs in CAB are divided into six groups. Sports groups are the Block SF Society for men and the Recreation Association for women.

In the special interest category are Canterbury Club, Chinese Students Club, Christian Science Club, Collegiate Christian Fellowship Club, Filipino Club, Folk Dancing Club, Hawaiian Club, Hi-Fi, Hillel Foundation, Horticulture Society, International Relations Club, Latin-American Club, Lutheran Club, Acacia, Newman Club, Russian Cultural Society and United Students Association.

Honor and service groups are Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society, and Alpha Phi Omega and Gamma Gamma Sigma, service.

Professional clubs include Engineering Society, Forum, Hotel and Restaurant Society, Le Cercle Francais, Merchandising Club, A Cappella Choir, Phi Rho Pi, CCSF Band Association, Men's Glee Club, Sigma Tau Sigma, and Pick and Hammer.

Because of additional duties assigned Dean Ralph Hillsman, Sherman Elworthy of the English department is CAB faculty adviser.

Full Program Of College Hours Set For This Semester

Although in the past college hours were not held during mid-term weeks, this semester's schedule calls for a full program, excepting the Columbus Day holiday, the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays, and the dead week before finals, Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities, announced last week.

This Friday several campus organizations under the guidance of the Club Activities Board will set up booths displaying banners and other information pertaining to the individual organizations.

Listed below is the semester's full schedule of college hours and events taking place during the break in classes.

September 28 is CAB Day; October 5, rally; October 12, holiday; October 19, club meetings; October 26, faculty and student coffee hour; November 2, club meetings; November 9, Rally; November 16, IRC fair; November 23, Thanksgiving holidays; November 30, club meetings; December 7, club meetings, December 14, choir concert and club meetings, December 21, Christmas holidays; January 4, election rally; January 11, double college hour, Soph - Prof basketball game; January 18, "dead week," and January 25, final examination week.

College Hour Film Series To Be Shown

Flight Into Time will be the first film to be shown on Friday during college hour in Room S-136, October 5, Madison Devlin, audio-visual instructor here, recently remarked.

The film series will be presented during college hour through the courtesy of Trans-World Air Lines and Pacific Gas and Electric Company. This series will be open to both faculty and students, free of charge.

During the December holidays, Beaver Valley is being shown again because of the popular demand shown last semester, Devlin said.

Student Card Sale Exceeds Former Semester Record

Associated Student card sales have exceeded the $10,000 mark as of last week, according to Dwane Shippey, card sales chairman.

This mark has surpassed the record breaking sales reached last year at this time. The Associated Men Students are currently out in front of the Associated Women Students in the sales contest conducted each semester. During the contest students may purchase cards from the members of either the AMS or the AWS.

The first contests showed the AWS leading off in 1953 by capturing both semester matches. The AMS recovered the following year by taking the next three contests. Last spring the AWS evened the score when Darlene Reutz lead the women to a resounding victory.

Shippey has set a goal of $12,000 which will go into the AS fund to be disbursed to the campus organizations for student activities.

Admission to all home football and other sports events, as well as the student dances and drama productions have been labeled by Shippey as some of the advantages of the AS card. Parking on campus and voting rights in the AS elections are also assured card holders.

Several government leaders have pointed out that the AS card holder constitutes the power behind student government here. Students have been reminded that the student leaders derive this power through the actions of the card holders.

Card sales committee reports have indicated the growing strength of the AS through the sale of more and more cards.

Guardsman Wins First Place In Nationwide Best College Newspaper Editorial Contest

First place in this year's Best College Newspaper Editorial Contest was won by The Guardsman through an editorial written by Michael Berger, spring semester editor-in-chief.

Reprints of Berger's editorial, Self Government Here Will Die If AS Neglects Voting Rights, are presently being sent to all the leading college newspapers in the country. The story was released to the wire services and to all the daily California newspapers.

Immediately following its publication in the May 23, 1956 issue of The Guardsman, the editorial was entered in the contest which was conducted by The Going-To-College Handbook that is produced by Outlook Publishers, Richmond 19, Virginia.

Entries were required to be printed sometime during the academic year, 1955-1956, and were to discuss long-range situations that might be confronted by other colleges.

Although the editorial contest was held for the first time this year, the apparent interest shown by the number of editorials submitted have encouraged The Going-To-College Handbook to schedule it as an annual project, according to Aubrey Brown, editor of the handbook.

Included among the honorable mention winners were Helen Dewar, editor of The Stanford Daily, for her editorial on Academic Responsibility, and Mary Ellen Yates, editor of The Berea Pinnacle in Willard, Kentucky, who wrote on Brotherhood Week.

In Berger's Best College Newspaper Editorial of the year, he said:

"Freedom is the most precious human right, and may exist in a myriad of forms, one of which is the right of self-government. Since there has been increasing discussion concerning the qualification of the 18-year-olds to vote, it seems to us that student government is an excellent opportunity for the younger voters of the nation to prove or disprove this argument for themselves. If college students are unable to fill their voting duty in student elections, it hardly seems logical that they be given the right to vote on the national level."

Associated Students To Vote On Amendments In Extra Election Ballot

An extra election will be held here sometime this semseter for the purpose of voting on proposed amendments to the constitution of the Associated Students, Jim Kennedy, chairman of the constitutional committee, announced last week.

In recent semesters, constitutional amendments have been included on the ballot for AS officers. This procedure has proven unsatisfactory for several reasons.

The major disadvantage of this method, Kennedy stated, was that, though most students were familiar with the candidates for AS offices, they were generally unfamiliar with the included amendments.

By holding a separate election for the amendments alone, it is felt that greater interest will be shown in the issues involved.

Other members of the constitutional committee include Bill Driscoll, George Pyne, and Debbie Rudser.

Petitions Due Soon For Graduation

Last day for filing petitions for graduation is Friday, October 5, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, announced recently.

Certificates of graduation are granted to students who have met the college requirements for a degree of Associate in Arts or have satisfactorily completed a semi-professional curriculum. The recipients of these certificates are recommended by the college for employment in the fields in which they have received diplomas.

Auditions For Rally Talent Now Being Held

Auditions for talent to be used in rallies will be held today and Friday, September 28, in Bungalow six.

Students interested in participating in rallies should sign up on posted sheets in Dean Ralph O. Hillsman's office in Room 148, Science Building. Other sheets will be posted in the student office and in the cafeteria on Club Activities Board Day.

Monthly Sign-up Imperative For Veterans Claims

Veterans attending the college under the veteran's bill, there are some 1,500 this semester, should become familiar with the regulations concerning the government's subsidization of their education, Robin Dunn, in charge of veteran affairs, said recently.

At the beginning of each month every veteran must report to Dunn's office and make a monthly educational activities report. The first sign-up period will be from October 1 to 4, and veterans are urged to bring their claim numbers with them to facilitate the process.

"You are allowed to take 60 units of training here including any acceptable college units which you have acquired in work achieved before or during your service period," Dunn warned all the newcoming veterans.

Those who will be nearing the 60 unit mark and wish to remain for an additional semester are advised first to check with their counsellors and with the veteran's office in Room 136, located in the south end of the Science Building.

Veterans are also reminded that under the veteran's act, one and only one change in their objective training program is allowed. In order to change his major, the veteran must be in training for his new major within three years after his discharge, according to Dunn.

Preparations For Frosh Ball Now Being Made By Freshman Officers

Officers of the freshman class are currently preparing for the traditional frosh ball which is tentatively scheduled for Saturday, October 27, in the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel, from 9 p.m. until 12 midnight, Mike Monteith, freshman class president, recently announced.

Steve Paul and his 12-piece orchestra will provide the music for the dance, titled Autumn Leaves. Admission will be by Associated Student card or five dollars, and attire for the evening will be cocktail dresses for the women and suits for the men, Monteith said.

The committee in charge of the dance is under the leadership of Bill Allen, while Bill Driscoll will act as chairman for the cutest couple contest.

This semester's newly elected freshman class officers are headed by President Monteith, Vice-President Kathy Mulligan and Secretary Elise Laubcher.

More Interesting Individuals Produced Through AS Activities

YESTERDAY'S play at the beach becomes a dim memory, and the registrational chaos subsides. Students and faculty members again adapt themselves to college life, and we, the official publication of the Associated Students take this opportunity to welcome all the new and returning students to City College of San Francisco.

It is evident that all the students, excluding only those who may be here in search of matrimony, believe a college education is one of the better help-mates to success. And it is true! For as a direct result of an education the student's interests and pastimes are extended into new channels never before explored by him. Thus he becomes a more interesting, developed individual. And the leading of a fuller life is facilitated.

However, in addition to the regular curriculum offered to expand the students' knowledge boxes, the AS sponsor and stage many diverse extra-curricular activities which both enrich social life at the college and also facilitate the making of more interesting, developed individuals.

Included among the AS-financed events to be presented this semester are the football and basketball games, the boxing tourneys, the theatrical productions to be shown in the college's little theater, concerts, and the many college dances scheduled.

Admission to these affairs are by Associated Student card. The present purchase of one of the $5 AS cards, which are now being sold on the campus, entitles the card holder to attend almost all of these functions with no further charge.

With the money collected from the sale of student cards, the athletic teams are supplied with traveling money, the campus police officers are kept in uniform, and publicity campaigns for the college are paid for, which in return attract many new students each semester.

These are, of course, only a few of the AS financed activities, for the money is distributed to all of the on-campus groups. The AS provide funds for the publication of this newspaper, which strives to keep the whole student body informed of campus events and the activities of the AS.

Although it is desirable to be an active member of the AS in order to obtain the utmost benefit from college, an inactive member can easily receive better than his $5 worth with an Associated Student card. For many of the theaters, clothing stores, cleaners, and service stations offer special discounts to AS card holders. This special discount catalogue is listed on the back of each student body card.

We urge everyone to . . . "let loose of that fin, man, and buy a student card!" And use it! This do, in order to receive the most personal benefit from a college education.

The Bear Facts About A Cub Reporter's Plight

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

HISTORY may be unstable, and even the Gallup Poll is known to have missed, but the fate of the cub reporter is ever constant.

Ever since the presses started rolling some three centuries ago, the pressure has been applied on these beginners in the art of getting a story before it gets you.

Once out of the safety of his office, a place where refuge may be found from anything and anyone, except the eccentricities of an editor, the novice reporter faces the harassment of an hostile world.

He is considered as being somewhat of a nuisance and is treated with much the same cordiality that an average husband displays when dealing with his mother-in-law.

But does the cub reporter even have a shadow of suspicion darkening his rays of optimism as he dashes himself onward to see his source for a promising story? He does—if this is his second assignment.

Seeing the fleeting newshawk feeting it up London's Fleet Street, being handled like a square on Times Square, or trying to use the scientific approach in the science building is a thrilling, but sorrowing sight to behold. What, another one quitting the staff?

The more experienced in this game of hide and seek continue to read the sports section with a superficial casualness and raise but a sleepy eye to acknowledge the return of another disillusioned one.

Ah, yes, the cub reporter is back, bringing not only one story, but many to tell. Such newspaper jargon is never printed. So to reproduce the cub reporter's complaint at this time would be to sponge it of the very emotional characteristic that makes it so disheartening to hear.

Possessing a gentle nature, his torment is enormously magnified and the consequences of this treatment have served to give the cub reporter an insecurity complex.

The moral of this rather drawn out tale, don't step on it because it has feelings, is that whenever you meet up with one of these shy newsmongers, kind of try to nurse his complex by showing some consideration.

In simpler words, give him a break. Who knows? Maybe some day he'll even spell your name right.

As for getting rid of the editor, not much hope there. The latest plot of sending him off on a slow boat to China had to be given up; the President was against it.

Addition To College Parking Facilities

LIMITED PARKING FACILITIES on and about the campus here have forced students with cars to join in a race each morning to arrive early enough to obtain a decent parking space.

Since the closing of the west campus last week, it seems that by 8 a.m. there isn't any parking space available for miles around.

One student parking lot, open to those with parking permits, is located next to Smith Hall, but it appears to be filled by at least 7:15 a.m. Not long afterward, the lower parking lot between Cloud Hall and the men's gymnasium begins to be filled. This lot is the one pictured above. It was photographed in late afternoon, and presents a far different sight earlier in the day.

It is evident there is a real need for more adequate facilities. Even those with parking permits are finding it difficult to park. Before 8 a.m., all but about 10 parking spaces in the lower lot are taken, as are those in the upper lot.

With an increase in enrollment and an aspected increase of Associated Student card holders, this parking situation will steadily grow more acute. Parking is much more difficult for those without permits, for they must find spaces off campus. Since there are so many in this category, it is sometimes necessary for them to go as far as four or five blocks away.

Oriental Trees On Campus

Sprouting Metasequoias Leave Eternal Marks Here

By Renee Olson

If you've ever wondered what gifts this college will leave for posterity, wonder no longer—the answer is Metasequoias.

Generations after you have left your mark upon the hallowed halls, the Metasequoias will live on, showing to future members of a superior race that at least we knew how to preserve an almost extinct redwood tree.

A man responsible for this growing example of the Time Capsule is Nelson Wells, instructor of physiology at the college. It was his good fortune to obtain several Metasequoia seeds from Ralph W. Chaney, paleobotanist at the University of California, and co-discoverer of the tree in Japan. But, let's start from the beginning.

In 1948, Chaney read a paper by an outstanding Japanese colleague who wrote of a new genus of Sequoia trees in China different from the generally known Coast Redwood. The tree was named Metasequoia and was previously thought to be extinct. Chaney, after reading the paper, made active plans to visit Japan, and upon reaching the site of the "Discovery Tree" was amazed to see the panorama of a fossil come to life.

For the botanist, it is easy to tell the difference between the Metasequoia and the Coast Sequoia. For example, the Metasequoia, or Dawn Redwood, has a strikingly different deciduous habit from the coast species. The Dawn Redwood loses its leaves annually, whereas the Coast Redwood holds its leaves for three or four years.

The finding of the Dawn Redwood caused an upheaval in the scientific world, and many a paleobotanist had to reclassify his fossil collection.

Wells has a few specimens of the Dawn Redwood. Fortune shining, he was able to obtain several seeds from Chaney. Some of the seeds, now grown into Metasequoia seedings, are flourishing in the horticulture building here.

Many generations will pass before the seedlings will become adult Metasequoias. It is then that men of science will thank Chaney and Wells for discovering and preserving a living example of ancient eras.

To See Or Not To See

Cut Film Story Saves Time, Eye At Cost Of Novel

Either read the book in its true form or see the picture's distorted view of the novel; but never do both.

There are persons who pick their reading material according to the movies. After all, if a studio will take a $200,000 or more chance on a book, why shouldn't the avid reader spend 25 to 50 cents for the pocket-book version.

As duly recognized, the picture, East of Eden, won acclaim as sterling dramatic entertainment on the part of the actors. The issue, however, has little to do with the ability of the performers but deals with the camera's eye focusing into the book.

Seeing the picture, East of Eden, the reader realizes the studio has done a good, but chopped portrayal. Three-quarters of the book are shuffled before the reader even starts to assemble any resemblance between the book and the picture.

Holding the story together—as a brace holds the structure of a bridge—John Steinbeck used a Chinese philosopher by the name of Lee. His was the magic hand that molded, theorized, and knitted the component parts of the story. Alas! To the misfortune of Steinbeck and the perusers, six generations of characters were omitted from the picture, and when the seventh generation took their place, Lee was not mentioned.

A cure for the ailing cinema could be one picture lasting three or four hours. Wouldn't movie-goers rather see four hours of a Steinbeck production than two of him or two of some faded cowboy? Lee could have been included in the expanded story as well as part of the missing generations.

Edna Ferber's Giant, soon to make its bow locally, is a three-hour and ten minute movie, and this same longevity could have improved, East of Eden.

If Hollywood would lay down the shears, use the editing pencil sparingly and use good judgment, Steinbeck and cohorts could be sure theirs was the story on film.

INDIANS have a novel way of giving names to their offspring. The child is given the name of the first thing that passes the door of the teepee. Hence, such names as Flying Eagle, Crazy Horse, Big Fox, etc., are quite common. This method is not used by the paleface, but how was J. L. Redford named?

Speaking of Indians, the famous Carlisle football team was on the three inch line with fourth down, and seconds to play in the game. One of the Indians turned to a team-mate and said, "After stealing all our land, we can't expect the white man to give up a mere three inches, can we?"

The instructor quietly replied, "I'm positive!"

Sammy The Ram In Comeback Role

Butting his way back into the spotlight this semester at football games is a personality known as Sammy the Ram.

Sammy is not the hay-eating type of ram, but rather the figment of the imagination of Jim Fernhoff, a former member of the Phi Beta Delta fraternity, who created Sammy in 1948.

Sammy's papier mache head, covering an unknown face, has not been seen for the last two years at games, but Phi Delts assure worried students that Sammy will be tumbling, clowning, and boosting spirit for the games this semester.

In 1954, there was another Sammy, only he was a real, bona fide, live ram. With this type of mascot; it was soon found that human labor doesn't eat hay, and thus is cheaper.

Lou Vasquez, Former Ram Athlete, Washington High Coach, Named Track Boss, Succeeds Roy Burkhead

By Mario Cassulo

Former City College track and football athlete, Louis Vasquez, was recently named head track coach at the college, succeeding Roy Burkhead, who is now an instructor of health education.

Vasquez, a graduate of the college as well as Stanford University, joins the Ram coaching staff this year after serving as head track coach at San Francisco's Washington High School for a number of years.

The coach obtained his Associate in Arts degree in physical education at City College, and later received his master's degree at Stanford. Vasquez also attended the University of Nevada before entering the United States Air Force in 1943.

While at the college, Vasquez played football under the late Coach Russ Sweet and was also a member of Coach Lee Elsen's track team. Vasquez specialized in the mile and two mile runs during his days in collegiate competition.

Following his graduation from this college, Vasquez enrolled at Nevada, playing football under head coach Jake Lawler while at the Wolfpack school. After leaving Nevada, Vasquez served as a member of the Air Force in India.

In addition to leaving his position as head track coach, a job he held for six years, Burkhead is also relinquishing his duties as assistant on the football coaching staff. He aided head coach Grover Klemmer for the past several seasons in that capacity, and will now devote full time to instructing in health education.

Three Returning Vets To Bolster Soccer Outlook

With only three returning first-stringers but a number of newcomers, the college soccer squad is getting prepared for the 1956 season of the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer conference.

All those wishing to sign up for the soccer team can do so by seeing head coach Roy Diederichsen at the men's gymnasium, or by coming to the daily practice sessions, which are held at 3 p.m. at the Ocean View soccer field.

Antonio Quiteno, Rene Carrillo and Pastor Valle are the three returning veterans to the team. Quiteno, who is ranked by observers as one of the top players in this area, will be playing his inside-left position, where he gained All-Conference honors two seasons ago.

Carrillo will man the team's left wing position, and Valle will be stationed at the vital goalie spot, Diederichsen said.

Among the new players, the Rams will be helped by numerous high school graduates, who number among them the twin brother of Carrillo, Ivan, previously performing as the fullback for the Nicaraguan team, according to Diederichsen.

In the past season, the Ram booters captured four out of the six games played in the conference. Bob Palma and Ben Schweizer, gone from this year's team, won top honors, as they were named to the All-Conference team. The Rams finished in third place in the final standings, defeating Stanford, Santa Clara, San Francisco State and San Jose State, and losing to California and the conference champions, the University of San Francisco.

RAMBLINGS

By Mike Berger

IT SEEMS that this wonderful, modern word is so modern and wonderful that it just can't let events take their natural course.

Nope, not satisfied with that, so now it is most imperative that each and every profit-making publication in the land predict, chart, map out and wrap up the whole football season before dad has even thought about dusting off the hip flasks for those cold November afternoons. (It is not necessary to do that, dad, because the season is over, or haven't you heard?

Michigan beat Stanford in the Rose Bowl, Wolverine end Ron Kraemer was everybody that's anybody's All American, even if he did play in half his team's games; Oklahoma was the number one club in the nation and the Sooners' Bud Wilkinson was coach of the year. Save yourself a lot of dough and simply buy a magazine at the drug store and fill in on the details.

This discontent with having to wait for the season to end before knowing who will go to what bowl game and why has even spread to the two-year college ranks, where a complete listing of the top ten teams in the country has just been released. And where, pray tell, are the Rams in this listing? In the number five slot, just below such powers as Compton, Kilgore, Tyler and Jones.

• • •

Ratings do not a winning team make, and Coach Grover Klemmer and staff will be the first ones to second that motion.

According to observers, the Rams have been a smooth, well organized unit in their practice efforts, and may be expected to field a contending team in the coming Big Eight race, injuries notwithstanding.

As usual in the two-year college bracket, a large rebuilding job is in the works for this year's team, emphasized by the fact that only nine lettermen are returning from the club that finished second to Stockton in 1955.

It might be nice if more than the customary handful of fans would show at the footballers' home opener against Oakland on Friday evening, October 19. By that time, the Rams will have played two road games against conference opponents, Santa Rosa and Stockton, and should be in the thick of the fight.

The opening game of the season will be played this Friday night against Los Angeles City College in the southland metropolis. The Cubs, led by tiny quarterback Don Buford, have been selected as one of the top three teams of their conference.

The results of this game may show how much wisdom is contained in the number-five national rating of the college eleven.

Guardsman Pigskin Contest On Today

Once again this semester, The Guardsman is sponsoring a football predictions contest, and it is expected that the prize will be a free Associated Student card for the spring, 1957, semester.

The contest will involve final standings in the western and eastern divisions of the National Football League. Scoring will be based on 10 points for a correct first place pick, 8 points for a correct second place pick, 7 points for a correct third place pick, 5 points for fourth place, 4 points for fifth place and 3 points for last place. The divisions and their respective teams are as follows:

Western division: Chicago Bears, Los Angeles Rams, San Francisco 49ers, Detroit Lions and Green Bay Packers. Eastern division: Cleveland Browns, New York Giants, Philadelphia Eagles, Pittsburgh Steelers, Chicago Cardinals and Washington Redskins.

This football predictions contest is open to all students at the college. Entry blanks will be available at the silver pole in the science building, and should be left in the box which will also be at that location. Deadline for all entries is Friday, October 5.

Grover Cleveland Alexander pitched 90 shutouts in his major league career.

Number 5 Ranked Rams Meet LACC Friday Night In Opening Football Game Of 1956 Season

JOHN PANAGAKIS, shown above, will be the number one quarterback on the 1956 Ram football club.
—Guardsman photo by Bill Hamilton.

Promising that the college football team will not be a pushover for anyone, Coach Grover Klemmer leads his squad to Los Angeles for the first of three consecutive road games, as the Rams encounter Los Angeles City College this Friday evening.

Big Eight play opens for the Rams on Friday, October 5, when the team plays at Santa Rosa in a night game, starting at 8 p.m.

Klemmer described his plight for experienced players by naming only ends LeRoy Thomas and Ron Taylor, guard Rich Max and quarterback John Panagakis as regulars from 1955. Guards Charlie Gilson and Mike Drew, tackle Mario Cohn and back Bob Atkins have limited game time. Left halfback Jerry Dillard, an armed service returnee, played for the Rams in 1953.

Former San Francisco all-city players include tackles Pete Morgan and Al Sheldon, from Lincoln and Polytechnic respectively; end Bob Biaggi, Polytechnic, and fullback Bill Rainburn, Balboa.

Other high school stars vieing for positions are halfbacks Ray Portue and Dave Tyree, both from Balboa; halfback Gene Craft, Galileo; center Bill Tuohy, Riordan; and a former serviceman, fullback Sam Rios from Mission.

Because of a lack of returning veteran players, Klemmer believes the success of the team will depend on how fast these individuals jell into a unit.

When told that the Rams have been rated fifth in the nation by the Glendale Rating Service, Klemmer replied, "That's fine, but we hope to make it number one."

Roth Appointed To Men's Sports Post

The appointment of Jerry Roth to the position of Men's Athletic Commissioner for this semester was recently announced by Wayne McFadden, Associated Student president.

As outlined by McFadden, the principal duties of Roth consist of his being a tie between the alumni and the Associated Students.

In doing this, Roth plans the various sports activities in which the alumni will participate. One such event which he has begun to plan is a homecoming day during the football season.

Another large phase of Roth's job is the men's athletic basketball leagues, consisting of three divisions: the hotel and restaurant, inter-fraternity council and the independent league. Each league plays a round robin schedule and the winners play off for a trophy to be awarded at the semi-annual dinner.

Any club, fraternity or members of the hotel and restaurant department, who are AS card holders, are eligible to form teams to play in the respective leagues.

Basketball Signup Open As Practice Begins Soon

All men interested in playing varsity basketball this season are asked to see head coach Sid Phelan at the men's gymnasium immediately.

Official practice will begin Thursday, November 1, but all prospective players are urged by Phelan to sign up with him as soon as possible.

Heil Named To Army Sports News Post

Walter Heil, former sports editor, then editor-in-chief of The Guardsman, has been named sports editor of The Star Presidian, official newspaper for the Sixth Army Base at the Presidio in San Francisco.

After graduation from the college, Heil wrote sports for brief periods with both the San Francisco Examiner and the Richmond Independent.

Fall Intramural Program Starts

As in past years, the intramural program for this semester will be divided according to sports and class times for competition in these sports, Jack Gaddy, director of the intramural sports program here, recently announced.

Each men's gymnasium class will be split up into teams playing basketball, touch football and softball. Games will then be scheduled, with each class playing a round robin schedule. This schedule will culminate with playoffs for hourly championships, according to Gaddy.

Anyone in a physical activities class will be required to participate in the intramural program, Gaddy said. The only exceptions are men who have received block SF awards. These programs will be started within the next few weeks, Gaddy added, and will continue most of the semester until playoffs are started to decide the champions in each sport.

Beside the physical activities class, the tennis, bowling, badminton, golf and boxing classes will hold competition for the men involved. The tennis classes will hold a tournament during the second midterm, deciding a singles champion and a doubles champion team, according to Gaddy. The bowlers, golfers, and badminton players will also hold similar tourneys to decide the champions in each sport, he added.

Boxers will hold a special tournament, in which the public will be invited. Last year the boxing tourney was held in connection with the Associated Men Student smoker, for fathers and sons. This year Gaddy hopes again to join with the AMS for the tourney.

'No Cuts Allowed'—Brady; New Attendance Regulations Here Hard On 'Unexcused'

JOHN J. BRADY, coordinator of Student Welfare, who announced new regulations tightening college attendance by limiting absences.

A new attendance regulation in which a student may be disqualified from a course regardless of whether his absences have been officially excused has been recently enacted, according to John J. Brady, coordinator of Student Welfare here.

The difference in regulations consists in that in no instance is a student allowed absences from a course that exceeds twice the number of times that the course meets weekly.

If a student in any class has been absent twice the number of times the class meets weekly, and has also exceeded the amount of unexcused absences allowed for emergency occasions, he will be dropped from the course and a grade of F will remain on his record.

If the student has not exceeded the amount of unexcused absences allowed him, he will be given the privilege of dropping the class and no other penalty will be charged, Brady said.

There are actually only two types of absences. Those excused because of illness and those that are officially excused by the President of the college allowing for participation in student activities. The former must be verified by the dean of men or women. "No cuts are allowed," Brady emphatically stated.

The reason for this new regulation, Brady said, is that the faculty feels that two weeks of absence in a course is too much to be made up. Students will no longer receive probationary cards such as the instructors were sending out last semester; notification will only come when they are disqualified from the course.

Issue Dates Set For Guardsman

Proposed publication schedule of The Guardsman for this semester was approved September 13, by the members of the Publications Board, according to Bob Kauth, board chairman, and Editor of The Guardsman.

Tentatively slated for publication is a total of 13 issues, with future publication dates as follows: October 3, 10, 17, 24, 31; November 7, 14, 21; December 5, 13; January 9 and 16. There will be no issue during finals week, Kauth said.

Members of the board this semester, appointed by Kauth, are Wayne McFadden, Associated Student president; Maurice Paszkiewicz, managing editor of The Guardsman; Louise Von Emster, AS vice president; Bob Varni, AS finance chairman, and Lou Lucia, feature editor of The Guardsman.

Inaugurating a new distribution policy, the board will set up three main distribution points. These points will be located throughout the campus for the convenience of the students. Distribution points are located at the silver pole in the Science Building, in the vestibule of the south entrance to the library, and in Smith Hall.

Applications Due For Scholarships

Five scholarships are available this semester for students at the college, according to Mary F. Golding, dean of women here.

One of these five is available to a Chinese male student, who qualifies in scholarship, character and need for such scholarship. It is valued at $50.

Also for a Chinese woman with the same qualifieations is one valued at $125, the latter awarded by the Square and Circle, a Chinese Professional Women's Club.

There are two Denman Scholarships for women valued at $125 each, which will be awarded to the two outstanding women students. These awards are given by Judge William Denman, and his sister, Mrs. Mary Cheatam, in memory of their father, a one time Superintendent of San Francisco Schools.

Also for women of Theta Tau, there are two scholarships for $30 each, given by Mrs. Florence Louis, who is an alumna of the college.

All applications for the above must be filed not later than Monday, October 15, Dean Golding said.

Hour Of Ushering Offers Free Opera Attendance

Opportunities for students here to attend operas, concerts, symphonies, and ballets in exchange for an hour and a half of service, are now available through Dean Mary Golding.

This semester, as in the past, Dean Golding may send four students from the college to each opera as ushers.

Some of the operas open to ushers are The Elexir of Love, Boris Godounoff, Simon Bocanegra, Die Walkure, and Francesca Da Rimini.

Dean Golding announced that as the opportunities arise students will also be used as ushers at the Veterans Memorial Building and at the Civic Auditorium; and a few places will be open at the Alcazar for Anniversary Waltz.

Sign-up is in room S-149 with Dean Golding.

Janet Mowll Back To Design Display Cases

Returning from a semester's absence to the college is Janet Mowll. One year ago, Miss Mowll was responsible for the window displays in the Science Building. This year again, under the direction of William J. Eckert, art instructor, she will do arrangements for the college.

Miss Mowll announced that she will publicize organizations or events for any group during the semester. Her statement was that the request be made at least two weeks in advance.

Wendell Muntz Resigns, Accepts Supervisor Role

Wendell Muntz, who has been Chairman of the Hotel and Restaurant Department here, recently resigned to accept the position of supervisor of the San Francisco school cafeterias, according to Larry Wong, faculty member in charge of the cafeteria.

As yet, Muntz's successor has not been named, but the decision is expected to be forthcoming.

Muntz became the chairman of the H&R Department in the fall of 1955, succeeding Hilda Watson, who left to become supervisor of the San Francisco school cafeterias.

Mrs. Watson, who became chairman of the H&R Department in 1937, has been elevated to the position of Director of Edueation for the American Hotel Association. She left for New York City to assume her dutles on August 1 of this year.

A scholarship was inaugurated last spring in Mrs. Watson's name by the American Hotel Association in appreciation of her contributions to edueation in the H&R Department. This scholarship will be presented to some deserving H&R student each semester.

Mrs. Watson was the first woman to graduate from the Cornell School of Hotel Administration.

In her new position, she will be responsible for the development of edueational opportunities for those seeking a career in hotel work. Her duties also include the evaluation of present college H&R courses in an effort to avoid duplications and to make full use of the tax-supported educational system.

Richardson New Sponsor Of Alpha Gamma Sigma

New sponsor for Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society, is William Richardson, counsellor here. Richardson is replacing Donald Jensen, who is now serving as chaplain in the United States Navy.

Life members of the California Scholarship Federation are eligible to become associate members at the time they enter college.

Temporary membership is open to students who have earrled 12 or more units during the semester and whose grade-point average is a minimum of 3.0 for the semester.

Undermanned Student Council Shows Legislative Competency

By Bob Sims

Two vacant freshman seats have had little effect on the efficiency of the Student Council in early meetings this semester as the Fall edition of student government has shown poise, precision, and good judgment under the leadership of Associated Student President Wayne McFadden.

The vacancies were caused by the resignations of Agnes Roberts and Gerry Williams, and thus far council members have found the task of finding able replacements difficult. At one early meeting, two candidates were nominated but at the following meeting it was learned that both were ineligible for the open seats.

Initial council business concerned the approval of various budgets, the first of which was submitted by Norman Durieux, Associated Men Student President. Durieux asked for a partial budget of $55 to cover preparation costs for the Homecoming Dance to be held in the Palace Corner Rose Room. This request was approved unanimously.

Finance Chairman Bob Varni then submitted the budget for the fres... class, a sum of $100, on which the council agreed. The administration budget of $150 followed and was granted hut, when Varni announced the $1477.75 Shrine Committee budget, the council called for a breakdown.

Other budgets passed by the council to date include $25 to both the Dean of Men and the Dean of Women for emergency funds, an associate executive budget of $1,760, a $20 budget to the Rally Committee for posters advertising a talent search, and a CAB dance budget of $211.

A bit of humor crept into the latest meeting of the council when McFadden introduced the new Sergeant-at-arms, Tom Severson. Severson, a giant-type fellow, expressed his desire that there be "no hard feelings" if and when he is called upon to exclude anyone from the council chamber.

Another introduction to the council was that of Bob Kauth, new Guardsman editor, who stated that 2,500 copies of the first edition of the paper will be available and that distribution will not be restricted.

A council member asked about the AS card requirement which was in effect last semester when issues of the Guardsman were given only to AS card holders. To this Kauth replied that part of the election platform of McFadden and AS Vice-President Louise von Emster stated their desire for free Guardsman distribution.

Other developments of the early council meetings included McFadden's advice to council members, that they should always remember their responsibilities to the students who elected them and that they should not hesitate to introduce any ideas on improvements.

McFadden then presented two new ideas to the council, both of which received unanimous approval. The first was that the student band ought to be present at all football and basketball games and at all rallies. The second proposal was that the administration be informed that stairs from the lower parking lot up to the college area are needed as a little rain would reduce the area to a quagmire.

Varni at the last session broke down the income sources for the AS, stating that AS card sales brought in $12,000, the book store $9,000; sports events, $1,500; vending machines $1,000, and drama productions and dances, $1,500, or a total of $25,000. Although the income this semester tops some of previous semesters, requests have reached $30,000, Varni said.

College Debaters Organize To Plan Active Semester

Phi Rho Pi, the college debate team, is organizing for the fall semester, according to Thomas H. Dutcher, the faculty debate adviser. Subject of the debate topic will be: Resolved, That the United States should discontinue direct economic aid to foreign countries. The discussion topic will be, What should the American attitude be in the Middle East?

The debate club participated in five tournaments last year, including the Model United Nations. The club traveled to Southern California and twice to Oregon. This year's plans include a return trip to Southern California and Oregon and participation in speech events in the Bay Area and Central and Northern California.

Phi Rho Pi is not limited to debate with the other major colleges in the San Francisco Bay Area. "We conduct a discussion program, student congress and participate in the Model UN," Dutcher said. In addition to this there are occasional radio and T.V. projects.

The only prerequisites to joining the club are an Associated Student card and a willingness to participate, Dutcher said, adding that experience is not necessary. Students interested in joining Phi Rho Pi for this current semester may consult Dutcher in his office, Room C335B, Monday, Wednesday or Friday at 11 a.m.

New Grade Points Elevate Low Mark To Higher Stature

In keeping with the new grade point evaluations recently inaugurated in other institutions of higher learning, the college will put into effect a 4 point grading system, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar here.

Summer session grades are to be posted under this new system that basically differs from the old in that there is a grade point distinction between a "D" and an "F". This gives the "F" recipient a penalty never before existing.

Under this evaluation, A grades will give the student 4 grade points and so on down the line, "F's" continuing to yield nothing.

At a glance, the student body may believe that this system will be to his advantage, since he now will receive credit for "D" grades and his grade point average will be boosted. He should hold in mind that a 2(C) grade point average must now be maintained in order to graduate, Miss Learnard warned.

As usual, courses may be repeated only twice, and the strictness of this new grading system really comes to light in this case.

When a student has successfully repeated a course, the grade point totals of both of his grades are divided by the amount of units the student took in that same subject. By this method, his final grade in the course will be concluded.

Because each college will undoubtedly be setting up its own regulations, students who plan to transfer from this college are advised to see their counsellors regarding grade point evaluations, Miss Learnard said.

Another change in regulations this semester concerns transfer students entering the college with deficiency in grade points. Such a student must make up that work, or he will be denied graduation.

Hebert, Cheader Named Award Plaque Winners

Vic Hebert and Marlon Cheader were awarded the annual President's Award Plaque at commencement last June.

Hebert, parliamentarian for the Student Counell last year, was a representative at the Model United Nations held at San Francisco State and Oregon State Colleges. He was parliamentarian for the state-wide student government conference composed of all two-year colleges in California. Hebert was also an active member of the debating society, Phi Rho Pi, here.

Miss Cheader was vice-president of the Associated Students. She was in charge of the Twentieth Anniversary Ball last fall. She was also in charge of the fashion show and tea last Christmas.

Zevas Lists Axidental Stars Entertainment Possibilities For Pre-Game Spirit Builder

By Claudette Myatt

In an effort to enliven spirit for the Ram-Santa Rosa Cub football game, a pep rally will be held in the court between the Science Building and Cloud Hall in college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m., this Friday featuring the Axidentals, according to John Zevas, Associated Student Rally Commissioner.

Following the Gateway Singers' routine, students recently auditioned for rally entertainment will present a short program.

"Big names aren't the only thing we need for rallies," Zevas said in commenting on the need for more student participation. "It's the talented students at the college who can boost spirit for the oncoming games this season."

Head football coach Grover Klemmer will also be on hand with the Ram quarterback talk on the team's potential this season.

Under the direction of Tom Gray, band leader, the college band will play, accompanying the song leaders in a special routine.

Meanwhile, Rally Committee members will be selling tickets during the rally and throughout the day for round trip transportation to Santa Rosa. Members can be recognized by their special red and white hats.

Other tickets are available in Dean Ralph Hillsman's office, S-148, at $1.60. Game tickets will cost 50 cents with an AS card and $1 without a card. Zevas also stated that a dance will follow immediately after the game at Santa Rosa.

Spring Semester Counselling Dates Start October 8

Appointments for planning spring semester programs will begin Monday, October 8, at 8 a.m., according to Waddington Blair of the counselling department here.

On the first day, next Monday, they will be made in the reserved reading room of the library. Students are requested to form a line at the north door of the library, leading from the court. They will be handed a form, which will ask the times they will be free to see their counsellors to make a proposed program. Students are requested to leave through the main entrance of the library, Blair said.

On October 9 through 10, the procedure will move back to the counselling offices in the Science Building.

If students keep their appointments as scheduled they will be assured of keeping the original registration number assigned to them, Blair added.

It is to the students' advantage to make their appointments early, because of the more than 5,000 expected to register here in the spring.

NCFA Schedules Debate Platform

The fall meeting of the Northern California Forensic Association was held September 8, at the University of San Francisco, and platform debates were scheduled, according to Thomas Dutcher, president of the association.

Debate coaches of colleges were present from all over Northern California, and the University of Nevada.

A college round table was held and the topic discussed was, What Should The United States' Position Be In The Middle East?

The round table schedule was established, and plans were made for the first debate to be at Humboldt State College at Areata, California.

Phi Rho Pi, the local debate club, is still open for membership to students who are interested in such a speech program. The program offers students a chance to discuss serious issues with students of other northern California colleges, Dutcher declared, as well as providing competitive events for those who like contest speaking.

Requirements for membership are possession of an Associated Student card and willingness to participate. Students so interested should consult Dutcher in Cloud Hall, C-335.

Fall Enrollment Is Slightly Less Than Spring Semester's

Fall 1956 enrollment figures at the college, as of September 26, show a total of 6,519 students, of which 1,277 are registered in the evening division, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

Although the final total has not yet been computed, these figures show a decrease of 28 students in the day division, and a loss of 58 students in the evening division, as compared with enrollment of spring, 1956, which had a total registration of 6,605 with 1,335 in evening classes.

However, despite the drop, the evening division registration is at a capacity, Miss Learnard added. Many applicants had to be turned away, because of a limited number of courses offered, as there is a shortage of instructors in the evening division.

An interesting aspect of the current enrollment in the day classes shows that there are only 1,504 women compared to 3,738 men students. Thus, there are approximately three men to every woman on campus.

Scholarships Open For Qualified Music Majors; Special Rate Given For Annual Symphony Engagements

Following the election of officers for the A Cappella Choir, Men's Glee Club, and Treble Clef last week, Robert Morton, vocal group director, announced openings for more voices in these organizations, particularly in the tenor and bass sections of the choir.

Morton also pointed out that an available music scholarship awaits application by a qualified person. This is the City College of San Francisco Music Department Scholarship, made available by proceeds from sales of Music Listener's Guide, written by Meyer M. Cahn, college band instructor.

An award of $100 is provided for a third-semester music major with a B average in music and a B average in other subjects, who has demonstrated outstanding leadership in performance courses, Morton said.

Music majors who qualify are urged to apply in writing to Morton. The scholarship will be reserved for deserving students only, and the end of the second mid-term period is the deadline for applications.

Special rate student tickets to the 45th annual symphony season are now on sale at the student bank for all 18 Thursday evening concerts, Raymond Conlan, chairman of the Symphony Forum, recently announced.

These tickets will be on sale until Monday, October 15, or until the supply is exhausted. Prices have been set at $10, $18 and $24, which represents a saving of 50 per cent over the regular admission rates.

The season will begin November 29th with an orchestral concert conducted by Enrique Jorda. This will be followed by the return engagement of such outstanding soloists as Geza Anda (pianist), and Zara Nelsova (cellist).

At Christmas time, four well-known soloists will appear with the orchestra in the Bach Christmas Oratorio.

The season will continue with Leon Fleisher, Eugene Istomin, Pietro Scarpini, and Gary Graffman, pianists, Beri Senofsky, violinist, and an orchestral concert featuring the concert version of de Falla's Master Peter's Puppet Show, with vocalists James Schwabacher and Heinz Blankenburg.

Other soloists will be Glenn Gould, Solomon, Myra Hess, and Del Tredici, pianists, and Szymon Golberg, violinist.

All concerts will be conducted by Maestro Jorda with the exception of those when guests Bruno Walter, Igor Markevitch, and Thomas Schippers conduct.

Traynor Named To Police Chief Post

William Traynor was recently appointed chief of this semester's campus police, according to Fred Fitzgerald, head of the criminology department here.

It was also stated by Fitzgerald that parking citations are now being issued to all cars illegally parked or without permits in both the campus parking lots, which are located west of Smith Hall and between Cloud Hall and the men's gymnasium.

Parking permits are still being issued in C-120. As of last week there were about 1,300 permits issued.

It was emphasized by Fitzgerald that parking on the unpaved section in the lower lot, parking in the no parking zones, and failure to park between the lines in the places designated, will result in a citation. Citations are payable to the city of San Francisco, not to the college.

Sewell, Leff Instruct Two New Courses In College Curriculum

Only two courses have been added to the college's curriculum since last semester, Lloyd Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction, announced last week.

Using the Bay Area live theater as a laboratory, the speech department has inaugurated a new course, Speech G4, introduction to theater. The instructor is Henry Leff, radio and television instructor. He will explain the history and development of the theater.

Franklin Sewell, instructor in the political science department, will conduct the other new course, introduction to law. It is a course for the average student giving a general viewpoint on common laws. The class meets twice weekly and offers two units.

H&R Department Retains A-1 Rank For Fourth Year; Cleanliness And Moderate Prices Are Maintained

By John Rosso

The student cafeteria holds an A-1 rating for the fourth consecutive year, according to Lawrence Wong, instructor in the Hotel and Restaurant Department here.

"To maintain this high rating," Wong stated, "the cafeteria is inspected monthly by the City Department of Health for cleanliness, food preparation, management, and quality of the food."

"We had to work hard to receive this rating for the last four years," Wong added, "and we intend to hold the rating in the future."

Employing students majoring in food preparation, the H&R department is the leading producer of key executives in the hotel and restaurant industry. Working in the cafeteria, H&R students here are given an insight into the many problems of serving the public.

A past member of the H&R department, and former president of the hotel society, Robert Snyder is a typical example of the kind of leaders developed by the H&R department. Snyder is now with the staff planning department of the Hotel St. Francis. Among his duties, he has a hand in planning the menu, approving the budget, arranging special dinners, and supervising the preparation of food served in the hotel.

Operating under a self-supporting system, the cafeteria does not receive funds from the city. Preparation of meals for the student body at moderate prices, from which the cafeteria realizes a small profit for depreciation of equipment, overhead, and the rising cost of food, is managed by the students of the H&R department.

In this, their working laboratory, students study methods of purchasing, preparation of foods, planning of menus, and various administrative details connected with operating a business of this type.

The cafeteria is housed in Smith Hall, previously called Student Union Building. The hall was named after George D. Smith and officially dedicated last spring. It also houses the student bookstore, and the student bank.

It has been estimated that approximately 4,000 separate meals are served in the cafeteria daily. This type of volume preparation provides much practical experience for H&R students, Wong emphasized, as well as economical eating facilities for students. (For editorial comment, see page 2.)

Student Leaders Represent College At Regional Meet

Associated Student President Wayne McFadden will lead a contingent of 30-plus governmental and organizational delegates to the Northern Section, California Junior College Student Government Association regional conference at Stockton this Saturday, October 6.

Each semester, as a prelude to the state conference, sectional meetings of the two-year college student leaders are scheduled in an attempt to solve or smooth over the problems of the respective campuses. Results of the regional conference are then taken to the state conference where they are developed and given a larger range of consideration.

Organization within the conference has been chopped into special workshops covering all phases of student government and athletics.

The college will be represented in the following workshops: Student Government, Student Finances, Campus Organizations, Publications and Public Relations, Rallies and Assemblies, Athletics, Associated Men Students, Associated Women Students, and Improving the Conference.

McFadden's Executive Committee, composed of Louise von Emster, AS vice-president; Norman Durieux, Associated Men Student president; Metta Weddleton, Associated Women Student president; Bill Roberts, sophomore class president, and Mike Monteith, freshman class president, will head the college delegation.

Transportation preparations have been temporarily stalemated pending an investigation into auto or bus possibilities.

H&R Helps 'Buck Stretching'; Student Cooperation Helps H&R

FOR a college student, it is not necessary to take a course in economics in order to learn the value of a dollar, for one of the surest ways of learning how to stretch a buck is by attending college!

Buck-Stretching is not listed in the college's catalogue, nor is it a part of the regular curriculum. However, Buck-Stretching is undoubtedly a major problem that must be met each day of the semester by a landsliding majority of the students.

It probably should be classified as the most highly participated in extra-curricular activity offered at the college, if not the most popular. Even the liberal arts majors, who deny that they may have any materialistic motives, are not always living a Bohemian life by personal choice. A limited budget for living expenses keeps students ever conscious of a slight raise in coffee or milk prices.

Times certainly have changed, for no longer is the most sought after college co-ed judged by her gentle nature, her pleasing personality, or the calf of her leg. What the college man of today wants to know is, "Will she go dutch treat?"

We are not going to try here to solve all the financial problems which must be met by students. However, because the dollar is so all-important, we are calling attention to one of the major money-saving advantages offered at City College. That is, its economical eating facilities in the Smith Union Building.

Unfortunately, eating is a physiological requirement that is forced upon us by nature and will remain with us until we either sprout wings or grow horns, as the case may be. And it costs dollars!

Fortunately for the majority of us, however, City College is noted for its efficient Hotel and Restaurant Department, which is daily feeding some 4,000 meals to students. The primary purpose of this department is to ". . . serve the students with a balanced meal at a reasonable price while also utilizing the finished foods prepared by H&R students in training."

Certainly a reasonable price is the 60 cents that students are paying today for a meal which includes meat, potatoes, the choice of a salad or vegetable, roll and butter, and a special dessert. A meal of similar quality would cost from 90 cents on up in downtown San Francisco, according to Lawrence Wong, instructor in charge of the cafeteria.

The H&R Department is able to do this only by utilizing student prepared foods and by using a minimum number of employees which, of course, is only possible with customer cooperation.

Because of the current economic situation, prices are rocketing skyward, and wages are limping hurriedly after. Therefore, in an effort to keep the presently reasonable prices in the cafeteria, the H&R Department and The Guardsman are requesting continued and, in some cases, improved customer cooperation.

Customers are asked to return cups, dishes, and trays so the tables will not have to be cleared and cleaned every few minutes by additional employees, who would have to be hired.

The job of sweeping and scrubbing the cafeteria floor is made much harder and the time involved is longer because of the large number of cigarettes, which are continually being stomped out upon it. And those aren't finger bowls distributed about on the tables, Mr.; they're ash trays purposely, conveniently placed for cigarette smokers.

"Ask the students to help themselves by helping the Hotel and Restaurant Department," Wong said. And we don't think these few requests are too much to ask students to comply with, so they can in return save themselves from 30 to 40 cents per day.

In an additional suggestion, it was revealed that between the hours of 12 noon and 1 p.m. there is a shortage of seating space in the cafeteria. If this problem were solved, the H&R Department would be able to serve more meals and extra waiting time would be eliminated. To put it bluntly, let the busy blonde with her tray full of food be seated and hold the intellectual discussions until after 1 p.m. Maybe she'll return the Chesterfieldian-like gesture another day.

We sincerely hope student cooperation will be good, and thus another raise in prices will be prevented, and another expense will not have to be added to the student's budget. With the savings we won't be able to monopolize the national market of Cadillacs and blue-eyed blondes, but we'll have a little extra to invest in that direction if we so desire!

Photography Department Improved

New Facilities Increase Interest And Enrollment

By Bob Sims

New features in the Photography Department, besides creating more interest and a higher enrollment, may help produce successful and recognized photographers at a better rate than ever.

The new facilities include a darkroom employing 10 additional enlargers, an equipment and materials storage room, and a planning and organization center, all of which were completed just prior to the resumption of classes this semester.

Enrollment increase is a substantial one over that of last semester in photography courses, with a total of some 300 students attending day and night classes. Instructor Emmett Smith is impressed by this increase because all but 15 or 20 of these students have selected photography as their major.

Chances are, that with these new facilities and a larger enrollment, the number of capable photographers turned out will increase, an encouraging trend in view of past successes.

One apparent success, Richard Brooks, is at present enjoying a leave of absence from the college in order to take advantage of an opportunity that seldom comes to a student in this field. Brooks is currently working, touring, and snapping pictures with one of the top photographers in the nation, Edward Weston.

Another outstanding success is the recently graduated Goodarz Bakhtiari, who now has enrolled in the motion picture course offered by the department only at night. Bakhtiari is noted for his expert ability in selecting models.

An additional claim to fame which he owns is the fact that he is a cousin to the Queen of Iran. It has been rumored that the Shah of Iran set his turban for the lady after seeing pictures Bakhtiari had taken of her. Thus we have a night photography student here who has the distinction of playing cupid with royalty.

If the new facilities and high enrollment contribute toward futures such as those of Brooks and Bakhtiari, there is no telling what honors the current students of photography will bring to the college.

Of Youthful Antics

Johnny Is Wise In The Ways Of Playtime World

Johnny, the illiterate boy who is attacked for not being able to read, write, subtract, or perform chemical equations is the brunt for almost every deficiency known to man.

Most people realize what Johnny can't do, but few know what he can do. If little John is portrayed as the boy in grammar school classes who always has the wrong answer when he is called upon, something indeed must be done, for his prowess outside the classroom to his classmates is more important than being able to give the correct answer.

Johnny among other things can capture toads, pull little girls' pig-tails, place tacks on seats, build model airplanes, and look frightening in Halloween costumes. Furthermore, the boy least likely to succeed can quote television program times, lose letters, be late for school, blame his sister for a broken chair, and make funny faces that no one else would even attempt.

This is the twentieth century Johnny, but what progress will the lad make in the thirtieth century? None! He will lose his way home in interspacial flight, not eat his pellets for dinner, and will pull the tail of the synthetic family cat.

The five-year-old product of a test tube will not comb his green scientific hair nor will he wear his best plastic suit when company flies in. He'll continue to amaze his parents with talk little boys shouldn't know, and won't stop talking until his battery-driven mind blows a fuse.

Main comparison between the two Johnnies is that he still won't be able to read. Scientific progress will not bridge the gap of his not wanting to read; or the fact that perhaps he's just too dense to grasp the subject.

PARASITES are forms of life which depend for their existence on thieving from the dinner tables of species other than own. Therefore, mushrooms, cows, leeches, bacteria, dogs . . . and broadly speaking, men, may be considered parasites.

When calling a constant borrower "a parasite" the phrase may have more truth than sarcasm. Besides, it is better to be called a parasite than a cannibal.

IT SEEMS that stamps are becoming prevalent throughout the city Each district has its own set of stamps as a reward for buying in that particular area. If progress, or degeneration, go far enough, the colleges will give out stamps instead of weekly grades in the gradebook.

At the end of the semester the student need only turn in a filled stamp-book to pass the course. This innovation would establish an interest in stamp buying and selling throughout the college.

The Bohemian

Recount Of Bourgeoisie Gasps For Culture Airs

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

OPERA seasons prove to be the most tiresome and expensive of the social events to which the conservative bourgeoisie considers his presence a must.

Some go to these functions because it is there they may find esthetic feelings being projected into them by beautiful voices sung from scenes of passion and tenderness.

And others, maybe they go for the sake of going to a huge, luxurious place where they can parade around and like a comfortable status.

The pragmatical type of opera-goer finds the whole procedure quite a bother. First, he must wait in some teeming queue marked by general confusion. Still, it's a tolerable experience; nothing lost yet but a little time, dignity, and a shoe shine.

Having secured the tickets for such and such performances is the key to this troublesome means of achieving an acceptable air of culture for our superficial lover of fine music.

Of course, a suitable attire must be worn to these gatherings of financial display, and so we are off again in following the snob's pathway to artistic enjoyment.

Once in the clothing store, he has but to hand over his ticket and presto, he receives a standardized suit of clothing, appropriately cut and priced according to the value of his seating section. This naturally determines his merits in society.

This is just the financial, rather than the physical strains of attending an opera, which our specimen of mockery must withstand. The most drastic side is awaiting him. His emotional balance swerves toward his Mr. Hyde complex when he views with alarm that all this will interfere with his TV programs.

Perhaps culture is too demanding, but alas, it's too late to back down now. All his friends have been informed by inconspicuous word of mouth, that he is one of the chosen to fulfil this social obligation, as he regards it.

Being unaware that the majority of opera-goers are not of his kind and take him as a pest, his metabolism is sparked by that ancient disease known as self-estimation.

The opera he just witnessed and heard was magnificently portrayed with inspired skill, and still our subject fails to remain satisfied.

What could be the reason for this abstention of true appreciation? Maybe he had already seen an opera on TV. Horse Opera, that is, and he missed the horses!

Collegiate Cats Available For Adoption

Collegiate cats have taken over the institution. Relax, these aren't the Elvis Presley "cool cat" variety, but the type biology students would label as "Felis Catus."

It all started this summer when a pretty feline named Frankie started using the patio directly behind the attendance office as a bachelorette apartment. Now you can see that this was a pretty smart cat. She knew a good deal when she saw one—nice gardens, plenty of sunshine and lots of space in which to wander.

Another cat resided around the men's gymnasium and was called Johnnie. He was a rugged individual and had that "I've been around look" about him. It was only a matter of time before fate would decree that these two should meet.

They met and the result of that meeting was five kittens. When Johnnie saw the results of his philandering, he quickly headed for parts unknown with Frankie quickly following. This left five kittens to starve, and our story should end here, but we Americans like happy endings, and being a conformist (non-beard wearer), on to the happy ending.

The kittens were discovered by Uriel Furlong, secretary in the attendance office, and Betty Arnold, secretary in the veterans affairs office, who fed the cats until all but two went out to face the world.

The remaining two are still supplied with food by Miss Furlong and have made themselves wards of the college. One is black and, according to Miss Furlong, "quite a character." The other is gray and quite sober most of the time. (Sober meaning serious.)

These cats can be seen daily in the patio behind the attendance office, and Miss Furlong has announced that the felines are now available for adoption.

Coach Outlines Soccer Prospects For 1956 Season

Although there is lack of balance and reserves on this year's varsity soccer team, the squad, with a few returning good booters and a couple of weak spots, has a fine chance of winning at least 50 percent of the games to be played in the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference, Coach Roy Diederichsen recently revealed.

Tony Quiteno, scoring four times although injured in the early part of the game; Nick Flores, who tallied three goals; Rene Carrillo and Charles Flores in the offensive with Sam Zelver, Rene Kellejian, fullbacks, and Pastor Valle, goalie, were singled out by Coach Diederichsen as the Rams' best performers of the day, as the college team won over Lincoln High School, 13-0, one of the highest scores ever in a Ram soccer game.

"The players are full of optimism, full of spirit and willingness to take on any of the NCISC's teams. One never can tell what's going to happen in this game," Diederichsen observed.

Six lettermen will be on hand this year, according to Diederichsen; Quiteno, inside left now switched to the center forward position; Carrillo playing left wing; Zelver, halfback; Flores, inside left; Kellejian, fullback, and Valle, goalie.

The Ram roster also includes Ivan Carrillo, Joe Congi, Julio Cabrera, Charles Flores, Wayne Wright, Richard Manteuffel, Abner Wiills, Tom Irasmy, Orlando Dona, Toni Baranski and Bong Koong.

Home games will be played at Balboa Soccer Stadium, and there will be no admission charges.

The Ram soccer schedule follows: Saturday, October 13, Stanford — at home—10 a.m.; Saturday, October 20, San Jose State—at San Jose; Saturday, October 27, Santa Clara — at home—10 a.m.; Saturday, November 3, California—at home—10 a.m.; Friday, November 16, at San Francisco State—2 p.m.; Saturday, November 24, University of San Francisco — at USF field—10 a.m.; November 28—playoff; December 1—playoff; December 8—All-Star game.

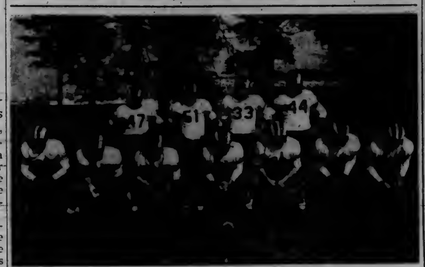
Fall Intramural Sports To Begin

Intramural sports play will begin in the next few days, Jack Gaddy, director of the program, recently announced.

Competition will be held in basketball, touch football, tennis, golf, badminton and boxing, he added.

The physical activities classes have been divided into squads, and will play a round robin schedule, including games of softball, football, and basketball. The winners of each instructor's classes at the same hour will play off for a class championship. Because of the time involved, the program will end with the selection of hourly champs and will not continue to a college intramural champion team, Gaddy said.

All men enrolled in a physical activities class will be required to participate in the program, with the exception of Block SF wearers.



The tennis classes will begin with instructions in the game, to be followed by a tournament in the second midterm period. The tourney will decide a singles championship and a doubles team championship. The winners will receive medals for their skills.

The golf classes are also in the process of learning the game, but toward the end of the sem... will play an 18-hole tournament, according to Gaddy. The other activities class will also conduct tournaments to decide a class championship.

In the boxing classes, there will be a special tournament. It is the hope of boxing coach Roy Diederichsen that this tourney will be conducted as was last year's, in conjunction with the Associated Men Student Smoker.

Contest Ends Friday

The Guardsman pro football predictions contest, which opened last week, will be open to all students of the college until this Friday, October 5. First prize is expected to be a free Associated Student card for next semester.

Electronic Coaching Is Latest Grid Fad

By Mike Berger

IT WAS bound to happen. Just when we were getting used to seeing guards and/or ends dashing back and forth with play calls from the bench, some wizard had to put a bee in the bonnet of the pro quarterback.

In their recent exhibition game with the Detroit Lions, Paul Brown and his Cleveland playmates attempted for the first time a type of wireless and playerless contact between coach and quarterback.

Object in point: Direct play-calling from the bench, via radio receiver in player's helmet, minus any worries about guards with poor memories.

Result in point: Detroit 31, Cleveland 14.

Were we to claim any semblance of sagacity at this early age, however, it would be a total discounting of any and all exhibition scores involving the Browns.

Cleveland has won only four pre-season tilts in the past five years against professional competition. Cleveland has also gone on to capture five eastern division titles and two world's championships in that space of time. See what we mean?

To get back to the main topic of the moment, though, this budding era of football means a whole new level of endeavor is thrown open to electronics. However, these horizons may simply be the edge of a chasm.

The 49ers will no longer have to depend on mere defensive ends or tackles to stifle the Rams' vaulted offensive game. A small investment in a radio "jamming" machine, like those used by the Russkys, is all that is necessary. No longer will Van Brocklin be able to call Los Angeles plays via the wireless.

Radio Free Europe will be superseded by Radio Free Rams, a non-profit group dedicated to enabling Los Angeles quarterbacks to once again hear the interference-free, mellow tones of their beloved coach, whoever he may be.

Not to be outdone by RFR, a loyal San Francisco outfit will proceed to replace "jamming" with the even sneakier method of inserting "special" 49er plays into the Ram wave length.

Imagine the look on the Dutchhuan's puss when an SF impostor of Coach Gilman firmly instructs a quarterback sneak with third and 38.

Picture also the coach's state of mind, as he sees his pass-play call develop into a smoothly executed punt. This wholesale subterfuge will seem almost as ludicrous as the FCC. Another non-profit group, the FCC, will ultimately have to allocate special channels to the various teams.

Aw, come on, coach, can't you see what's gonna happen? Just go back to the good, old-fashioned running guard if you must be a genius. But puhleeze, don't start this radio kiek, or the poor football fans won't even be able to follow a game without hi-fi.

Burkhead Explains Move To Health Education Department

By Mario Cassulo

Roy Burkhead, former head track coach here, has been appointed to full time instructing duties in the health education department and consequently resigned from his former athletic post to accept the new position.

Burkhead, who has been at the college for eight years, will now be able to concentrate all of his time instructing health education classes here, but he announced that he still plans to take an active part in college and outside sports activities.

From 1942 until 1946, Burkhead was a physical education instructor in the Navy, and spent much of this time at the San Diego Naval Training Center, where he attained the rank of Lieutenant, Senior Grade.

Burkhead was emphatic in stating that he liked both the coaching and the instructing factions of his college duties, and enjoyed both assignments thoroughly. "Health education parallels and coincides a great deal with physical education principles, and therefore I feel that I really have not broken away from athletics," he added.

Together with devoting considerable time to health education research here, Burkhead plans to continue his professional work as a swimming coach, along with his usual interest in sports at the college.

Coed Sports Gets Name Changed

Because of an increased enrollment of students, the name Women's Athletic Association was changed here last year to Recreation Association so as to accommodate both the WAA and co-ed programs, according to Lene Johnson, faculty adviser.

Co-educational sports are now a part of the Recreation Association program, and sign-ups for sports are still open to students in the women's gymnasium.

Membership in the Recreation Association is open to all students attending the college holding an Associated Student card.

Students interested in further information about the organization should see Miss Johnson in the women's gymnasium.

Gridders Seek First Bearcub Win After Dropping Decision To LACC Cubs In Opener, 6-0

By Mike Berger

With the label of favorite resting heavily on their shoulders, the Rams will open their 1956 Big Eight Conference season this Friday evening in a nocturnal meeting with a strong Santa Rosa outfit. Kickoff is set for 8 p.m.

Most observers have named the college eleven as the number one team in the conference, and some have even gone so far as to say the Rams have good chances for a Junior Rose Bowl bid.

Santa Rosa defeated San Jose, 6-0, in their first game of the season, exhibiting a strong running game and a defensive unit which was tough when it counted, despite yielding a net of 254 yards gained.

A pair of lettermen, quarterback Nat Carasali and halfback Charlie McDonald, form the nucleus of the Bearcub attack. It was a 28-yard pass play between these two which tallied the lone touchdown in the Santa Rosa opener.

McDonald, who also impressed last season against the Rams, found time

Klemmer Names Taylor, Thomas As Top Flankers

Describing LeRoy Thomas and Ron Taylor as the two best ends in the conference, Coach Grover Klemmer will be keeping a watchful eye on his top pass receivers, as the Rams tackle their first Big Eight foe on Friday night at Santa Rosa.

Klemmer hopes his duo will live up to expectations, and though he has described the team as having a well-balanced attack, it may be speculated that the Rams will be most potent through the air if Thomas and Taylor reach full potential.

The coach further stated, "We're as heavy in the line as in the past few seasons, but I'm not sure if we will sacrifice weight for speed." Then Klemmer single out guard Rich Max as being a stalwart in the line.

Though the squad has diminished from 75 to 40 players, Klemmer believes that he could put two teams on the field which would make a good representation.

Veteran quarterback John Panagakis has been working with the first team but is being hard pressed for his job as signal caller by Larry Beldon and Mike Forette, formerly of Washington and Lincoln, respectively.

It was announced also that Lou Vasquez has filled the post of assistant coach which was left vacant by the recent change in assignment of former assistant coach, Roy Burkhead.

First scrimmage against an outside opponent was held on September 19, when the Rams met Alameda Naval Air Station. The outcome prompted Klemmer to comment favorably on the team's performance.

Cage Practice To Start November 1

While the basketball season does not begin for the college eagers until early December, head coach Sid Phelan has announced plans to start practice sessions November 1 at the men's gymnasium.

Returning veterans from last year's team are the following: James Bryant, Rich DeConti, Allan Foster, Bill Wooten, Al Mock and Rich Russell.

Men going out for basketball for the first time and their schools are as follows: Will Gasper, Poly; John Henry, Poly; Ron Kelleher, St. Ignatius; Stan Rosenberg, Washington; Ted Soulis, Lincoln; Bob Tealer, Mission and Cal Frosh; Al Vidal, Mission; Vic Corl, Poly; Doug North, Mission; Aubrey Tendell, Lowell; Mel McCormick, Poly; Bernie Quinlan, Mission; Mike Prasoff, Washington; Tony Merritt, Poly; Roy Collins, Lowell; Jim O'Connor, returning serviceman; John Bates, Balboa; Bill Flanagan, Galileo, and Don Carstoi, Berkeley.

Rams Lose Opener

A 31-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Val Keckin to end Clayton Tave in the three minutes of play gave the Los Angeles City College Cubs a 6-0 win over the San Francisco eleven in the Rams' opener at Los Angeles last Friday night.

City College was able to net only 127 yards rushing and passing against the hard-charging Cubs, who rolled for a total of 243 yards of their own. Outstanding runner for the winners was tiny Don Buford, who left Ram tacklers in fits with his slippery-type dashes.

The 85 degree, sultry heat of the southland was not conducive to good football, as most of the game was played between the 30-yard line markers. Not once did the Rams penetrate to within the 26-yard line of the Cubs, and the victors only twice threatened to score, making good on their final effort.

to net 83 yards rushing against San Jose, and teams with Don Sbragia to form the Cubs' top running threats.

Although only nine lettermen are back from 1955, the City College team seems to have a number of capable high school transfers, who number among them tackles Pete Morgan and Al Shelton, guard Ernie Ibarra, center Bill Barrington and backs Gene Craft, Bill Rathbun and Dave Tyree.

Additional experience has been obtained with the return of former Ram players Mike Forette, Sam Rios and Jerry Dillard, who have completed service hitches.

John Panagakis, who played last year behind All-Conference choice Les Barros, will probably open at quarterback in Friday's game, with Craft, Dillard, Rios and Rathbun all in the fight for the other starting backfield posts.

Only linemen with jobs pretty well nailed down are flankers Ron Taylor and Leroy Thomas.

Since no definite starting lineup has been selected by Head Coach Grover Klemmer and staff, it is expected that most of the present roster will see the field action from positions other than on the bench.

In 1955 at this time, the Rams entered their league opener with prospects even brighter, and were quite neatly dumped by Stockton, so undoubtedly Klemmer is anything but overly optimistic as to the way the 1956 lid-lifter will go.

Student Placement Office Open To All Students Desiring Work

All students desiring jobs of any kind or occupational information should file applications at the student placement office, S-187, Science Building, according to Joseph A. Amori, placement director here.

During the past month more than 500 applicants have been processed by the placement department. Jobs are plentiful for the applicants who can present some type of marketable skill. Those qualified for accounting jobs and also the operations of office machines are especially needed. These pay from $1.60 to $2.00 per hour for those that qualify. Typists and stenographers are also very much in demand.

Problems in class scheduling restrict many students desiring jobs. Approximately 75 per cent of all part time jobs require a work schedule running from 1 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Because of changes in labor policies, night shifts have been practically eliminated in the San Francisco Bay Area, Amori said.

Employers are demanding older and more mature workers, and most jobs call for a minimum age of 18 years, both for men and women.

All students desiring Christmas work, post office, railroad, airlines, department stores, express companies, and others should file their applications early, Amori declared, so that they will be processed as soon as possible.

The placement office is open daily, Monday through Friday, from 10 a.m. to 12 noon, and from 2 to 4 p.m.

Applications For Scholarship Must Be Submitted Soon

All scholarship applications must be filed in S-149 by Wednesday, October 31, with the exception of the Florence Louis scholarship for which the deadline is Monday, October 15, according to Mary Golding, dean of women.

The scholarships available, all for women, are the Florence Louis scholarship for $50, the Theta Tau Alumnae scholarship for $30, the Square and Circle scholarship for a Chinese student for the amount of $125, and the two Denman scholarships for $125 each.

Denman scholarships are awarded annually to two women students, one a Fall graduate and one a Spring graduate, who have maintained at least a 2, or B average and are graduates of a San Francisco public high school.

This scholarship was established by Judge William Denman and his sister, Mary Cheatham, in the fall of 1939, in memory of their father, James Denman, a former superintendent of San Francisco Public Schools.

This award is presented each year at the Prep Day lunch. Last year Martha Lozar won the award in the fall, and Anita Guerra won it in the spring.

Those wishing to apply for any of these scholarships are expected to write a letter of application to the dean of women and describe in this letter their ambitions and their needs, and also present a picture of their activities in and out of school during their high school and college years.

Band Organized For College Hour

The birth of a new organization, the college hour band, scheduled to meet in the Friday college hours set aside for clubs or rallies, was announced last week by Meyer M. Cahn, band director here, who also announced band officers and outlined plans for the fall semester.

There are currently 30 members in the college hour band, Cahn said. It is non-credit, and was instituted to accommodate students unable to schedule band in their programs. It is hoped that more will participate. Students interested in joining the new group may do so by appearing at the band building, B-5, any college hour, ready to audition and play, Cahn said.

The college hour band is an extension of the college band, he added. Right now both are preparing for the rally and trip to Santa Rosa this Friday, October 5. They will also play at all home games and will perform in the semi-annual band concert on Friday, November 16.

Band officers announced by Cahn are as follows: Bill Huber, student director; Thomas Gray, associate director; Leonard Barnette, manager; and Edward Murney, custodian. John Downs, harmony and rhythm instructor, will train the band in march maneuvers and act as drum major.

Club Cavalcade: Organizations Prepare For Rushing

By Marilyn Gregory

STARTING off the semester with elections and business meetings, campus clubs and organizations continued their social activities with joint meetings and preparations for the rushing affairs.

Zeta Chi sorority held a joint meeting with Beta Phi Beta. The sponsor, Ruth Inskipp, gave the women a box of candy from Berne, Switzerland.

A meeting of Zeta Phi Sigma fraternity took place recently at Ed Salais' home. A hay ride with Phi Beta Rho sorority was brought up for discussion.

Delta Psi sorority discussed plans for the semester at a business meeting at President Pam Havenor's home. Vice-president Dee Sjogren suggested a joint with Alpha Kappa Rho to start social activities.

All students interested in joining the Hawaiian Club are invited to attend meetings every Friday during college hour, in S-193.

Alpha Lambda Chi sorority will hold a joint meeting Thursday, October 11, with Phi Beta Delta fraternity. Weekly visits to general hospital are the sorority's project for the semester.

Phi Beta Delta fraternity awarded Ken Woodriff a trophy for the semester. They are getting Sammy The Ram ready for football games.

Under the sponsorship of Joseph Jacobsen, Foreign Students adviser, the International Relations Club is making the necessary arrangements for its annual international fair celebration, which is to take place at the Aptos Junior High School auditorium on November 19.

The IRC opens its fall semester program which, among other activities, will include in coming dates the IRC's Halloween party and traditional Christmas celebration, held with the purpose of getting to know students from the countries represented.

Deadline for all club news is Wednesday at 12 o'clock in The Guardsman office, S304.

Combined Organizational Requests Overload Associated Student Budget

Finance Chairman Hopes For Boom In AS Card Sales

Budget requests from 36 separate college affiliated organizations, totaling an unprecedented $30,357.09, are contributing to the already outsized financial headache suffered by Bob Varni, Associated Student finance chairman.

With a revised estimated semester income of $26,000 and such uncommittable funds as the mandatory $1,000 athletic injury reserve, and the required $1,000 emergency reserve, a budget of only $24,000 is feasible, Varni said.

The situation is not as serious as it appears, however, for the finance chairman always finds budget requests exceeding income estimates, but it still requires substantial cuts by Varni before he can render a financial report.

To date 14 budget requests have been passed by the Student Council representing more than $13,000 in expenditures and leaving Varni with a working margin of less than $11,000 remaining. This means that the budgets of 22 organizations not as yet allocated by the council must bear the brunt of any cuts to be made.

Varni, at present, has the proposed allocations whittled down to $24,161 and seems to be placing his faith in Dwane Shippey, student card sales chairman, to overshoot his $12,000 sales goal by the sum of $161.

Estimated income this semester is $7,000 over that of last fall, Varni added. Last fall's final budget totaled $18,883 and initial requests ranged over the $25,000 mark, illustrating Varni's contention that no matter how high the income, budget requests somehow manage to total higher.

An additional precedent set by organizations receiving funds from the AS this semester is the fact that all budget requests, completed in duplicate and itemizing each proposed expenditure, were turned in by the deadline date of September 19. "Probably the first time in history that one or two budget requests weren't late," Varni quipped.

Student Bank Hours Set

The student finance office, under the direction of Oscar Anderson, coordinator, Educational Management, and staffed by Roberta Frederiek and Carl Anderson, is located in Rooms 106 and 107 in Smith Hall.

Hours of business are from 8:45 to 11:10 a.m. and from 12:01 to 2:15 p.m. daily. Commencement bids are obtained here, where collections of any sort, including proceeds from athletic events and Associated Student dues are deposited.

Pay Reciprocal At Ramporium

Ten thousand dollars a semester, earned through the Ramporium student book store operated by the Associated Students and located in Smith Hall, is turned over to the various student activities, according to Lois Main, wife of manager Richard Main.

The store, established in 1950, is open from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. and features a large variety of textbooks, stationery, gymnasium suits, magazine subscriptions, and even penny candy bars from which the profit goes to student activities.

There are 14 student employees, eight of whom are part time, who assist Main and his wife. Main has managed the store from its start 6 years ago.

Cake decorating, criminology texts, paper clips, and Lowell High School Centennial Yearbooks are some of the items that can be bought at the book store.

Partial Grant To Freshman Class

A partial grant of $100 was allocated by Student Council to the freshman class recently for the preparation of the annual freshman ball, according to Mike Monteith, class president.

Plans are complete for the event, which is scheduled to be held on Saturday, October 27, in the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel from 9 p.m. until midnight, Monteith stated.

Upon council approval of the $500 balance of the freshman budget, Monteith will put his plans into action.

Bill Allen is dance committee chairman and publicity head. Heading the decorations committee is Monteith, with Kathy Mulligan, Elise Laubscher, Henry Galla, Carol Simpson, Bob Walsh and Sonya Cohn assisting. Bill Driscoll is in charge of the cutest couple contest.

Assisting on other committees still to be formed are freshman members of the Student Council and other interested members of the freshman class. Edward Rogers and Mary Perry are the faculty sponsors.

Grad Petitions Due

Deadline for filing petitions for graduation is this Friday, October 5, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, warned yesterday.

The registrar's office last week urged students qualified for graduation to check with the office ahead of time to avoid complication in meeting requirements satisfactorily.

Shrunken Sweaters Fail To Halt Cut In Rally Appeal

By Bob Sims

Suddenly becoming cost conscious when informed by Finance Chairman Bob Varni that more than $5,000 must be slashed from budget requests, the Student Council showed a new attitude of reserve in allocating funds during the fifth and sixth sessions held last week.

On introducing the budgets for approval in the fifth council meeting of the semester, Varni explained that he made cuts on all expenditures which he deemed unnecessary and that if the council would follow his recommendations, the budget could be balanced.

Requesting a breakdown on every budget announced, the council then proceeded to pass a football budget of $4,011, a soccer budget of $575, a Guardsman budget of $3,337.40, and a controller's budget of $1,600. Tempers flared, both on the council and the Rally Committee, when Jim Kennedy, sophomore council member, proposed an additional cut to the Rally Committee budget.

John Zevas, rally commissioner, pointed out that expenditures for hats, sweaters, and skirts for Rally Committee members were absolutely necessary. He further asserted that the committee, if not attired in the proper costumes, could not possibly perform its duty to the college, which is to promote college spirit at all games, rallies, and special functions.

The motion by the council was then amended to make the allocation a partial one, but before the budget was voted on, the Rally Committee delegation, composed of Zevas and Yell Leader Renee Olson, stormed out of the chamber apparently in protest.

A few minutes later, however, they returned bearing a display of shrunken sweaters, but to no avail, the council having passed the motion during their absence.

A later council meeting, though not as heated, found members in the same thrifty mood. Breakdowns were requested before voting any allocation, and the council showed real determination when they failed to be swayed by Band Conductor Tom Gray's plea for additional funds for his organization. Varni proposed a slash in the band request from $942 to $540 which the council upheld.

Budget requests passed included an Associated Men Student allocation of $589.50; sophomore class, $595; freshman class, $515.50; and the aforementioned band request of $540.

The council adjourned on a rather disheartening note when Associated Student President Wayne McFadden disclosed the fact that the Shriners have just informed the college that they no longer plan to use a Shrine Queen from the college at this year's East-West game.

Scholarships Awarded

Through the advantages of the advertising art department at the college, three student graduates have won full time scholarships in art. Emilo Sanchez received his for the Academy of Advertising Arts. Gil Brunk also will go to the Academy of Advertising Arts, and Isidor Perlos won her scholarship from Shaeffer School of Design. Both the art schools are located in San Francisco.

The climate of California varies according to the distance from the ocean and altitude; mean temperature at San Francisco is 56°, summer mean 60°, winter 51°.

Electronic Laboratories Add Space

Two new electronic laboratories, located in S-47 and S-49, have been installed this past summer, in an effort to give more space to the students, according to Mark Sheldon, one of the four instructors in the department.

The new equipment and remodeling cost approximately $33,000, and one of its most unique features is the working space per student. Each student not only has plenty of elbow room, but more important, Sheldon said, his own separate test equipment.

In addition to the individual units, larger, more costly machines have been added, the most impressive of which is a testing device called Tektronix, which was acquired at a cost of $1,500, he added.

"Grading in these semi-professional classes is somewhat unusual," Sheldon said. "To begin with, 20 per cent of the students who apply are not eligible, and 25 to 30 per cent of the students who are, flunk out in their first semester. Once the first semester passes," he added, "the flunk list is almost nonexistent, and grades are usually above C."

Work in these classes consists of designing and building certain projects which are assigned to the students.

AS Amendment, Straw Ballot Vote Slated For November 6

AS Members Invited To Submit Ideas For Organizational Improvements To Kennedy's Constitution Committee

By John Rosso

A special election will be held Tuesday, November 6, for the purpose of voting on proposed amendments to the constitution of the Associated Students, Jim Kennedy, chairman of the Constitutional committee, said.

By holding a special election for the amendments apart from the election of AS officers, Kennedy feels that the students have a better chance to study the proposed changes and additions.

Members of the AS, and only members of the AS, can submit amendments, Kennedy emphasized, adding that any worthy amendments to the constitution must be displayed in a prominent public place.

There are two ways that the committee may do this. One is by displaying the amendment on a bulletin board, the other by submitting them to The Guardsman for publication. These amendments must be posted not later than one week before the election so that voters can study and understand the proposed amendments.

In order to be on the ballot, amendments must be signed by ten per cent of the AS, and submitted to the Election Committee to be placed on the ballot, or the amendment is presented to the Student Council and accepted by that body by a two-thirds majority vote of those present at voting time. The amendment becomes effective if ratified by a two-thirds majority of votes cast on the amendment.

AS members were reminded by Kennedy that "this is their government and unless they exercise their voting privileges they will lose control of their government."

In what observers called an aggressive and much desired policy, Kennedy stated, "I intend to do the best in my power to clean up and modernize the constitution. The AS constitution is filled with unnecessary and outdated amendments that were enacted when the college was in its infancy, and are no longer of any possible value to the running of a modern AS government."

Among the proposed modern changes stated for future adoption to the constitution are the setting up of three new officers of the AS. These positions are a permanent college photographer, a permanent window display officer, and a secretary to the cabinet of AS President.

Following registration, Miss Hase stated, the first event to be held will be a formal joint rushing tea on Sunday, October 21, at Laurel Hall, 2676 California Street, from 2 to 5 p.m.

Each sorority will then hold open house as follows: October 23, 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., Zeta Chi; 8 to 10 p.m., Phi Beta Rho; October 25, 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., Theta Tau; 8 to 10 p.m., Alpha Lambda Chi; October 28, afternoon, Delta Psi; 8 to 10 p.m., Kappa Phi.

Miss Hase and other ISC members, Barbara Firpo, Eleanor Smith, Beverly Eckart, Darlene Reitz, and Pam Havner, are planning the different rushing affairs.

Registration For ISC Membership In Dean's Office

Women interested in registering for sorority rushing may do so now during the hours of 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., in the Dean of Women's office, S-150, October 17, the deadline date, according to Virginia Hase, president of the Inter-Sorority Council here.

Several members from each of the six campus sororities will be present to acquaint prospective members with their respective groups. A fee of $1 will be required from each registrant.

Assisting on other committees still to be formed are freshman members of the Student Council and other interested members of the freshman class. Edward Rogers and Mary Perry are the faculty sponsors.

Students To 'Vote' For Ike Or Adlai

A presidential straw election will be held here Tuesday, November 6, according to John Dudley, election commissioner.

Wayne McFadden, Associated Student president, consulted with President Louis G. Conlan on the subject of inviting a speaker from each representative political party to speak on campus. President Conlan advised McFadden that no speakers from any political party may speak on campus.

This straw election will give the college students a chance to vote for their presidential favorite along with the rest of the nation, Dudley said. Any student with an AS card can vote.

Straw elections of this sort have given students an opportunity to indicate their interest in national affairs. Many of the public opinion polls operating throughout the country have used colleges as a means of showing preferences of the young voters.

Group Formed To Push Through Proposition 'A'

A committee to help push through Proposition A in the November elections is currently in the process of being organized, according to Robert Varni, finance chairman here.

The purpose of this committee will be to help inform and interest the public in Proposition A, Varni said. Some possibilities for doing this have already been presented, such as a rally and car parade to be held the evening before elections. However, the committee has not been completely organized, and plans are still indefinite.

Proposition A, which will be voted upon in the elections held in November, is a proposal for delegating a total of $27,000,000 to the San Francisco public schools. Of this sum, the college would be allocated approximately $3,500,000.

This money is expected to be used in the building of a new fine arts building, a stadium in what is now Balboa Park, additions to the gymnasiums and Smith Hall, and more parking facilities. When the building program is completed, there is a possibility that the college will be extended to the end of San Jose Avenue.

Varni added that any student interested in this bond issue and in becoming a committee member should inform him as soon as possible.

Far Off Hills Play Opens Drama Season

Six performances of The Far Off Hills, a play by Lenox Robinson, will be presented by the college's drama department under the direction of Michael Griffin.

The play has been scheduled for the little theater on November 2, 3, 9, 10, 16 and 17. Admission is by Associated Student card or by tickets, available from Griffin.

Starring parts have been announced as follows: Stan Weston as Patrick Clancy; Jo Anne Jaklevick playing Marion Clancy; Dorthea, Clancy is played by Linda Cripps, and Anna Clancy by Peggy Powell.

Queen Candidates Sought For Annual Homecoming Week; Bonfire Rally, San Mateo Game, Dance Featured

By Carol Harris

Plans for the selection of a Homecoming Queen and her four attendants for Homecoming Week, November 5-9, are already in progress, according to Norman Durieux, president of the Associated Men Students.

Any woman student of the college who has completed a minimum of 18 units, and is the possessor of an AS card, is eligible to enter. Judging will be on October 23 and 26. The judging panel will consist of three judges, but at press time the judges had not yet been chosen.

Homecoming Queen will be crowned at a special bonfire rally to be held on Thursday, November 8. There is a possibility that Stan Kenton will be the featured entertainer.

A car parade will commence from the college and proceed to Kezar Stadium prior to the Ram - San Mateo football encounter on Friday, November 9. After the parade, trophies will be awarded to the three students having the best-decorated cars.

Homecoming Week will be concluded with the homecoming dance, at which time the queen will receive her trophy. At the present time, the dance is scheduled to be held in the Rose Room of the Sheraton-Palace Hotel, which is located at Market and New Montgomery Streets. The semi-formal affair will last from 9 p.m. until midnight. Dancing will be to the music of The Villagers.

Admission to the dance, Durieux added, is by AS card or $6 per couple to non-AS members. City College Alumni Association members and San Mateo College student card holders will be charged $2.50 per couple.

Merchandise prizes, totaling approximately $50, will be distributed among the queen and her four attendants, Durieux stated. As yet, he added, the prizes, which will probably be in the form of wearing apparel, have not been selected.

NORMAN DURIEUX, president of the Associated Men Students.

Date Set For AWS Fashion Show, Tea

Highlight for the Associated Women Student organization will be the semi-annual tea and fashion show honoring the San Francisco high school women, Metta Weddleton, AWS president, announced recently.

Approximately 220 women from the high schools are expected to attend the show which will be held on Friday, November 30.

The present membership of the AWS is about 15 active members. As of the present time, the cabinet has not yet been named.

Any woman with an AS card, Miss Weddleton explained, is a member of the AWS. All interested in helping the AWS are invited to attend the Tuesday meetings at 1 p.m. in Dean Mary Golding's office.

The purpose of the AWS is to get the college women together, to give them common interests, and to create a feeling of friendliness among the women students.

College Regional Conference Meet Held At Stockton

Nearly 20 delegates representing the college attended the fall meeting of the Northern Section, California Junior College Student Government Association regional conference on October 6 at Stockton College.

Approximately 20 Northern California two-year colleges were represented at the regional conference, and more than 150 students took part in the activities.

Special workships covering all phases of student government and athletics were available for student participation. The organizational workshops occupied the business for most of the morning.

The college was represented in the following workshops: Student government, student finances, campus organizations, publications and public relations, rallies and assemblies, athletic organizations, AMS and AWS activities, and conference improvement.

The purpose of the conference is to provide a means whereby students may discuss and possibly solve some of the college problems met during the semester. This helps to promote a better relationship between the colleges represented, and thus establishes a state-wide student organization which promotes the best interests of the students and the colleges.

October 12 Holiday Honors Columbus

No classes are scheduled for Friday, October 12, because of the Columbus Day holiday. Classes will resume as scheduled on Monday, October 15.

Mid-term week ends on Friday, October 19, and for the first time in the college's history a college hour will be held during the examination period. Excluding holidays and dead week, college hours will take place each Friday of the semester.

Fraternity Council Presents Smoker Tonight

Inter-Fraternity Council will present its semi-annual Smoker tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the men's gymnasium, IFC President Jim Buckley recently announced.

A judo match, a comedy skit, the Men's Glee Club, an organized rooting section, and a zany basketball game will be featured.

All men students at the college are invited to the smoker, which has as its main function the recruiting of new members for campus fraternities. Each fraternity will have a display, and members will be on hand to explain specific functions of their fraternities to prospective applicants.

Organizations taking part in the program planning are as follows:

Alpha Kappa Rho, Bonar Russell, president, and Phi Beta Delta, Cliff Soward, president, will handle refreshments including coffee, coke, and doughnuts; Alpha Sigma Delta, Tom Severson, president, will sponsor the basketball game; Beta Tau, Ralph Kirk, president, produces the program and will stage a skit featuring John Frisk and Doug Tanner.

Beta Phi Beta, Earl Fuller, president, will conduct the advertising assisted by Bill Driscoll and Dick Madrid; Gamma Phi Ypsilon, Gerry Roth, president, will present the Men's Glee Club; Zeta Phi Sigma, Dale Boyd, president, will present a judo match; Lambda Phi, Joe Congi, president, will have an organized rooting section on hand; and Tau Chi Sigma, Bob Varni, president, will have the responsibility of providing the gymnasium.

Buckley also hinted at the possibility of a special award being presented at the Smoker, but would not state the nature of the award or the name of the person to whom it will be given.

He did urge, however, that all men students who attend and apply for admission to a fraternity sign up for three or four separate organizations before making a final choice as to the fraternity they wish to join. This practice will give future fraternity members a chance to get well acquainted with specific functions of each organization which interests them, and provide a better basis for their final choice.

Other officers of the IFC were named by Buckley as large contributors to the Smoker tonight, including Bill Anderson, vice-president; Milt Anderson, secretary, and Charlie McPartland, treasurer.

This Smoker promises to be the most successful in recent years, Buckley declared, for with an attendance mark of only 100 to top, the affair has a fairly easy goal to reach.

Americans Earn Voting Rights With Words, Money, Blood

WITH WORDS, money, and blood, Americans will defend democracy. They'll point with pride to democracy and go to war to preserve it. They'll pay money in taxes to support it, and they'll taunt their Russian neighbors with some of its many advantages, including freedom of the press, freedom of speech, and freedom to vote for the less harmful fella.

Democracy is the control of the government by the majority of those governed. The governed are able to control their government by voting. We did say they laugh and boast, pay money, and are willing to die in order to control their government, democracy, by voting. But we did not say they voted.

When The Declaration Of Independence was adopted on July 4, 1776 and then submitted to the existing states for ratification, not everyone was even eligible to vote. Only those who were land owners and of a certain race and sex were considered qualified to vote. Consequently, they took pride in their privilege and power to vote, and those who were eligible, voted.

After struggling for and demanding equal rights for a number of generations, the American population was granted voting privileges, regardless of race, sex or financial qualifications. Today all American citizens are considered qualified to cast a ballot. Consequently, nearly 40 million eligible voters neglected and minimized their power by failing to go to the polls at the last Presidential election in 1952.

These same individuals are willing to theorize from the grandstand and applaud democracy as not without defects, but the better form of government yet developed by man. They do not want to be enslaved by a government, and they've proven they will defend their attitude with words, money, and blood.

Yet, surprising though it may be, they do not take the trouble to run their government themselves by voting. It is apparent that if they do not run their government, the government will run them. History reveals many good governments which have collapsed because the people grew weary of governing themselves. Each of these 40 million votes which were not cast is one step in this, the wrong direction.

Orally we all seem to be adept at complaining and criticizing our government and its politicians, but only through our votes which are cast can we be heard and can our power be felt.

Each vote cast strengthens the structure of democracy as much as words, money, and blood.

Students Proffer Sage Advice For Victims Of Man's Oldest Plague

Pneumonia is curable, the common cold isn't.

Following are but a few of the sure-fire methods suggested by students of the college to cure a cold.

The first way, suggested by about 75 per cent of those interviewed, is the liquid relief cure, which seems to be a popular cure for any disease contracted.

This dosage, suggested for those who don't like it — sneezing, coughing, nose running and headache—severer than before. The theory is to get all the misery over in the shortest possible time.

Another popular tablet is the Bromo-Quinine cold tablet. This is like a fifth way to cure the Four Way tablet. The fifth way is for those sufferers that want company in misery. The quinine in the tablet causes the person to perspire, thus releasing the cold germs into the air so that friends and enemies alike will also be in misery.

The only sure way to get rid of the common cold is to catch some related disease that is curable. The easiest is pneumonia.

An easy way to catch this curable disease is to take a hot bath and then go to the beach at night. After a brisk swim it is advisable to relax on the beach for awhile. Repeating the latter steps a few times, the common cold should have departed. In its place a good case of pneumonia should be developing.

At this point it is time to see a good doctor and go to the hospital. Remember, by going to the hospital, the life you save may be your own.

Egypt, a republic, has an estimated area of 386,198 square miles. Moslems form 91.40 per cent, Christians 8.19 per cent, and Jews .40 per cent of the population. Illiteracy, which was high until some years ago, is being eradicated by the government, and education is now compulsory for all children between the ages of 7 and 12. The University of Al-Azhar in Cairo, the capital, was founded about 968 A.D.

Weak Character Makes 'Sister Boy' Conform As He Disregards Individualistic Tendencies

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

UNITED We Stand seems to be a worthy adage when the chips are down and the society of a state need form wedges against agression. But within the finer gears of what makes a society tick, the everyday functions of a simple community, the respected feeling of Every Man For Himself must prevail.

Fall not a victim, reader, to hastily drawn conclusions, for it is not cut-throat tactics that are advocated here. This is not a financial page. Individuality is the theme now being revived.

Individuality is a term that has been kicked around a lot. It receives a bad connotation mainly because one tends to associate it with rebellion. How is individualism to be determined, and how does a person become an individual? These are hard questions to answer today when even those seeking individuality merge into little hard-bitten groups of their own.

A group, driven by the same level of needs, materialistic, aesthetic, or otherwise, will usually move along in a distinctive degree of intelligence. Eventually, this level of intelligence will stand out as its main characteristic. The group will be identified by it.

Anyone who is different, uncooperative to the social whims of the group, will soon be forced to seek an outlet. If he takes this step willingly, if he has faith in his own concepts and shows the courage and keenness to carry them out, he is to be admired.

On the other extreme, there exists the type developing individual thinking but lacking the fortitude of character to withstand group reprimand. He springs to beg forgiveness by quickly conforming. His kind is to be ignored.

Under this category fails the person who is partially unaware of his individualistic tendencies. He must first be lashed by the whip of intolerance used by the group to keep its members in line. This may bring him psychological disturbances.

The student may by now be asking himself how all this jibberish nonsense affects him or his dealings in the campus community. An example better to illustrate group narrow-mindedness may be brought to light for the student in Robert Anderson's play, Tea And Sympathy. The play has also found its way to Hollywood.

At the risk of seeing a movie which abounds with too much sympathy and not enough shots of tea to suit his taste, the student, nevertheless, can view the mental and, much too often, physical pressures that immature college groups use on campus non-conformants.

In this case, the individual was almost unaware of why he was termed "different." He desperately seeks to get back into step in the follow-the-leader cadence about the campus. He tries so hard to be a "right guy" that it almost kills him.

The formula for solving his problem is ridiculous, "Sister boy," as the group conveniently labels him, was not at struggle within himself but with this clique refusing to tolerate the individuality of his character. He showed signs of weakness by trying to conform, to get back into line.

Now is the time to ask questions. If a group is right, is it not good to follow blindly since it is going in the right direction?

Everyone thought that the earth was flat. Some wise guy proved them wrong. Being embarrassed, they all jumped to say that the earth is round, but today we believe it is a sphere.

Amerigo Vespucci Gets The Nod As Ericsson, Columbus Are Neglected In An International Name Shuffle

Anthropologists are investigating the supposition that Asiatics could have been the first to discover America. It is possible they may have found their way across the Bering Straits to Alaska, or crossed on an isthmus which has long since disappeared beneath the sea.

Leif Ericsson, a son of Eric the Red, was sent by the Norwegian king in the year 1,000 to Greenland, but apparently his ships were blown off course and touched on some point of the North American continent.

It was not until 1492 that Columbus, sent by Queen Isabella to search for a new route to the Indies, landed on the shores of the Bahama Islands. His discovery too was an accident. A colony was established just off the coast of Haiti, but he soon lost favor with the king for his failure to find riches.

Now, if Ericson was the first to set foot on American soil, why is Columbus, whose "day" means a holiday this Friday, given the credit, and why is America named after still another man who had nothing to do with the discovery, Amerigo Vespucci!

The answer to this first question is relatively simple. Absolutely nothing, aside from the ill-fated colony, was done to further Ericsson's discovery. It is very likely that no one outside of his own domain even knew about it, while in Columbus' case, the government did take an interest.

Answering the second question proves to be one of the quirks of history. Vespucci spent most of his lifetime making maps and charts of the discoveries of Columbus.

An unknown German map-maker, in respect to him, began placing the name America on all his maps. So it would seem both Ericsson and Columbus got lost in the shuffle in the naming of America.

Shots At Random

By Lou Lucia

DOGS have apparently taken their place in the music world. Of course, not among popular singers as Dorothy Collie, or band leaders such as Stan Kennel but in the lyrics being waxed. Some time ago Doggie In The Window, and now Hound Dog have reached stardom.

No one can qualify as a bona-fide music authority, therefore the subject is open for discussion. The standard I Love You may get tiresome at times, but a blaring "you're nothing but a hound-dog" can't take its place.

Too many so-called "novelty songs" are pushed from mediocrity to the head of the list by constant playing of the record on the radio. Put a piece of cheese in front of a mouse and sooner or later he'll take a nibble. People are the same way to a certain extent.

After hearing a song over and over the listener starts whistling the tune and soon its a part of his record collection. Many persons will buy a record just because it has a famous composer's name on the label. Composers, unfortunately, are not always true to form. This could account for a Shrimp Boat sailing along on the crest of the top ten.

If a famous composer writes Fido, Don't Bite, Oh! he would receive hundreds of accolades. Rover House could have written the same song and been laughed into oblivion. There is room in this field for lyricists with fresh ideas who do not own canines.

In order to get out of the dog-house, perhaps an informal vote on the fondness for some of the songs mentioned above would prove interesting. However, don't vote on Fido, Don't Bite, Oh! as it hasn't been written . . . yet.

THIS WEEK'S Blue Badge of exasperation is awarded to an information operator. The operator received a phone call asking the ingredients for baking a cake. The caller was dejected when told that the phone company did not give out that type of information.

He belligerently asked, "What do you mean? You're a woman aren't you? You know how to cook don't you?" She restrained from blowing her top-ping and gave out the recipe.

Chin-Type Longhairs Reminder Of Past Days 'Before Gillette'

What's in a beard? Usually we find a chin, either of a man or woman—including bearded ladies in circuses. Today this is a vital question because around the campus we find certain individuals who have sprouted beards, and the beard is a thing of BG—Before Gillette.

Before attempting to solve this mystery of today let us go back to the days of yesterday—sounds like the beginning of a Lone Ranger adventure.

Beards have had an important role in history, both factual and fictional. Renowned figures such as Sir Walter Raleigh, inventor of the cigarette; the Smith Brothers, inventors of the cough drop (Raleigh created a need for their product); Monty Woolley, The Man Who Came To Dinner; Rip Van Winkle, who tested Sealy mattresses; Abraham Lincoln, who was a Republican; were all beard wearers.

The most famous of the beard wearers was immortalized by the words, "I'll pull you out by the hairs of your chinny chin chin," which were uttered by the wolf in a classic, The Three Little Pigs.

A beard has a certain air of mystery and evil around it. The prince of evil, Satan, is always imagined with a beard and so are magicians who practice the art of black magic, and it was once the "thing" to show the Hollywood villain with growth sprouting from his chin.

It also has good connected with it: no one ever heard of Santa Claus without a beard.

There are many theories behind this beard raising fad, but none of them seem to hold shaving lotion: One theory is that this is a sign of non-conformity, but this statement in itself is a contradiction.

If it is a sign of non-conformity, they certainly aren't going to conform to the rule that beard wearing is a sign of non-conformity because then they would be conforming.

The only sensible reason for the beard fad is that some people just like beards.

Before you start your growth let's hear from the weaker sex. Those approached all stated they would not, under any circumstances, grow a beard.

The reasons pro and con for beard raising have been stated, and as the circus barker once said, "You pays yer money and takes yer choice."

George Washington was never shown smiling in pictures because he had false teeth made of rhinoceros' tusks.

Space Travel Era

Science Unites For Attack On Outer Regions

Space travel, for the past decade the great question mark of scientific exploration, is rapidly materializing into fact.

Experimental rockets are getting bigger and going higher, Congress is voting more money to this branch of development, and the great scientists of the world are banding together to organize an attack on space travel in the 56-57 geophysical year.

Two key names in space travel at present are the late American physicist, Robert H. Goddard, who invented the first liquid fuel rocket in 1926, and the brilliant German scientist, Werner Von Braun, inventor of the potent Nazi V-2 rocket.

The question arises—how will this great coming adventure affect the college student? The answer is apparent; once the tedious job of escaping the earth's gravitational pull has been accomplished, new scientific fields will bust wide open. The call for manpower will be out.

The list will be endless—scores of mechanics, designers, and chemists will be all working for that one common aim, to escape their prison of gravitation, which has held them captive since man first walked the earth.

So the problem stands. It was the dreamers, Jules Verne and H. G. Wells, who said it could be done. It was Goddard and Von Braun, who gave us the basic machine. It was astronomers such as Percival Lowell and Clyde Tombaugh, who created world curiosity as to what lies beyond our planet. And it may be the present college students who will go up and find out.

Renowned figures such as Sir Walter Raleigh, inventor of the cigarette; the Smith Brothers, inventors of the cough drop (Raleigh created a need for their product); Monty Woolley, The Man Who Came To Dinner; Rip Van Winkle, who tested Sealy mattresses; Abraham Lincoln, who was a Republican; were all beard wearers.

The most famous of the beard wearers was immortalized by the words, "I'll pull you out by the hairs of your chinny chin chin," which were uttered by the wolf in a classic, The Three Little Pigs.

A beard has a certain air of mystery and evil around it. The prince of evil, Satan, is always imagined with a beard and so are magicians who practice the art of black magic, and it was once the "thing" to show the Hollywood villain with growth sprouting from his chin.

It also has good connected with it: no one ever heard of Santa Claus without a beard.

There are many theories behind this beard raising fad, but none of them seem to hold shaving lotion: One theory is that this is a sign of non-conformity, but this statement in itself is a contradiction.

If it is a sign of non-conformity, they certainly aren't going to conform to the rule that beard wearing is a sign of non-conformity because then they would be conforming.

The only sensible reason for the beard fad is that some people just like beards.

Before you start your growth let's hear from the weaker sex. Those approached all stated they would not, under any circumstances, grow a beard.

The reasons pro and con for beard raising have been stated, and as the circus barker once said, "You pays yer money and takes yer choice."

George Washington was never shown smiling in pictures because he had false teeth made of rhinoceros' tusks.

Rams Play 1955 Champion Mustang Footballers In Vital Early Season Clash At Stockton Friday Evening

By Lou Lucia

Conceivably, the Big Eight title may be at stake this Friday night, as the Rams travel to Baxter Stadium to meet a strong championship defending Stockton eleven.

Last year the Rams lost but one game, and that one to Stockton, who ran through the league schedule without a loss and just one tie marring their record. The 24-6 loss last year derailed the Rams and Coach Grover Klemmer would like nothing better than to avenge the defeat and get an inside track in the conference race.

Neither team impressed in their opening games of the season. The Rams were squeezed out by a 6-0 margin at the hands of Los Angeles City College, and the Mustangs won by a nose over Santa Ana by a 20-13 photo finish, and then were blanked by Fresno, 14-0.

Santa Ana was rather reluctant to fill their practice schedule with the Ram team as opponents and inserted Stockton for the pre-season contest. Apparently after last fall's 55-7 humiliation, Santa Ana had seen all they wanted to of a San Francisco team.

Sparked by a strong running game, the Mustangs' coach, Don Hall, is no doubt glancing furtively at quarterback Earl Moreno, hoping his passing improves enough to offset his capable faking, ball-handling, and punting prowess. Moreno attempted only four passes during the first game and completed one.

Halfbacks Freddy Almendariz, Marshall Dragomanovich, and Lew Schmid comprise the ground attack the Rams will have to stop.

Almendariz, at only 150 pounds, gained 103 yards in 11 carries against Santa Ana. Schmid is the only backfield returnee from the championship squad, and with added weight along with his experience may develop into one of the league's outstanding runners. Dragomanovich gained almost as many yards as his name, as he picked up 52 yards in 9 carries for a 5.7 average. Viewers of the Santa Ana fray also singled out tackles Carl Kammerer and Ken Castles along with end Tony King as being outstanding.

Despite the fact that the individual figures impress, Santa Ana outgained the Mustangs both on the ground and in the air.

Graduation hindered the champions to some extent. Two all-conference linemen, tackle Bob Denton and guard Tom Mitchell, have left a gap which line coach Don Campora hopes to fill with new recruits. Fullback Charles Haggard, another all-conference selection, and Jerry Marquis, a 100-yard, 9.9 sprinter, will also be missed.

Numerous Ex-Rams Now Starring For New College Clubs

With the present football season now in full swing, many fans of the college team start to wonder what has become of the names that were so familiar on the Ram club in the last few years.

Most of the men try to continue with their sport, but the competition becomes stiffer. Along with men from other two-year colleges, they must prove themselves against players already on the teams.

Ex-Ram footballers have filled their share of positions in the coast football team this year, as in previous years.

Willie Hudson, picked as a 1955 Junior College All-American at guard, is now on the Cal Poly roster and doing well. Hudson was one of the top guards the Rams have ever had, Coach Grover Klemmer recently commented.

Along with Hudson at Cal Poly are Jerry James, tackle; Bob Oliver, end, and Dale Jones, halfback. All four, former Rams, are now on the varsity squad.

At San Jose State College, Stan Keith, another of the ex-Ram guards, is trying for a berth on the starting team. Former teammates who are with Keith on the Spartan team are Bill Canihan, center, and Van Parish, end.

These ex-Rams are also on the San Francisco State grid team. Included are the tackle duo of Jack Derian and Tom Kiefer, and halfback Sandy Malnick.

In the far north, a former college end by the name of Don Beroni is taking his place on the Idaho squad. He was a top for City College and has shown great promise for the northerners, Klemmer reported.

Past Pacific Coast college stars who made names for themselves after leaving the college include Ed Flinn of UCLA, who after playing brilliant ball here, went to the Uclans, where he was their captain during a recent Rose Bowl appearance.

Dick Kotler, playing tackle or guard, and halfback Staton Webster were on the University of California varsity team a few years back, and showed that they were true football players. Playing for the University of Southern California a few years ago was Don Stillwell, a standout end while here.

In the professional field, Klemmer said, the only one to make good has been fullback Ollie Matson of the Chicago Cardinals. Burl Toler played a short time for the Cards, but an injury sidelined him early in his career. He was one of the Big Eight Conference's top linebackers while here, Klemmer added.

NL Baseball Contest Winner Is Announced

Harvey Silverman, a student here, was announced last week as the winner in The Guardsman National League Baseball predictions contest, which was held last semester, and is not to be confused with the current football contest being held.

As the first prize winner, Silverman was presented with a free Associated Student card for this semester. Silverman's winning entry listed the entire NL first division correctly, and had a total of five of a possible eight final standings correct.

Ramblings

By Mike Berger

SOME of the prize football chit-chat being thrown around barber shops these days concerns a good deal of lamenting about how the long gainer is gone forever and how ball control is the new trend and, boy, is football getting dull to watch.

To listen to the middle-aged Sunday evening quarterbacks talk (they don't even wait until Monday any more, you might as well take the air out of the ball beeause passing just isn't in style anymore, at least in college ball.

These are the same guys who say, "I think Stalin murdered his wife for her money," or maybe "that Newcombe just doesn't win the big ones."

Sure, the ball control, grind-it-out type of play is most effective and most efficient . . . if there are plenty of rugged linemen and hard charging backs around.

If Duffy Daugherty of Michigan State had a pair of ends who averaged 6-9 and ran the 100 in 9.5, plus a quarterback who was able to hit a squirrel's left ear lobe at 75 yards, the off-tackle play just wouldn't quite sound like the best play in the world for the Spartans.

This slight exaggeration is simply put forth to show that no matter what the popular trends in football, or any sport, may be, those trends are only as efficient or wise as the material at hand can make them.

Ball control is a fine style of play for Michigan State, Georgia Tech or any team that has the personnel necessary to make that style move, but a fullback trap play just doesn't work too well if your fullback weighs 140 pounds, minus his built-in radio receiver.

In pro football, these trends can take hold on a large scale, since nearly all the clubs have good enough material to adapt to most any type of play. The trends soon move toward cycles, though, because as soon as most clubs start the five-and-six-yard-'em-to-death running game, the defense is bound to tighten up.

As the secondary and backers move in close to help stifle this attack, their shift invites the return of the previously popular style, namely deep throwing, the long gainer.

If one goes to a game with the idea of simply concentrating on the action and trying to get some pleasure and relaxation from the team performances, any style of play can and will be of considerable interest.

Don't be misled, though, into thinking that one type of play or one level of play is the one and only type to watch because of current fads.

Now, about the 49ers . . .

Former college and pro football star Axe Parker played briefly in the big leagues and hit a home run in his first major league at-bat with the Philadelphia Athletics in 1937.

Craft Emerges As Standout Runner In Opening Victory

By Mike Berger

Using both power and speed with stunning effect, City College easily handled the Santa Rosa eleven, 39-13, in the conference opener for both clubs at the Bearcubs' Bailey Field last Friday night.

Gene Craft, a tiny 140-pound streaker from Galileo High, sped for an amazing 178 yards in seven carries to form the head of a Ram attack which moved at will through the outclassed Bearcub team.

GROVER KLEMMER, head coach of last year's second place team, hopes to better mark by one win which would ostsure Rams title.

It took the Rams exactly three plays from the first time they got ball possession to score the first touchdown, with Craft slipping through tackle and racing 60 yards for the tally. After John Panagakis' coversion, it was 7-0.

Then, after 5:25 of the second period, Craft again found the gaping hole at center, and went 76 yards in a brilliant, twisting run for another touchdown. The little baek used his blocking very well, as he out baek, reversed field and generally befuddled any tacklers that eame close to him. The missed conversion made it 13-0.

A fumble on an attempted punt by Santa Rosa's Charlie McDonald, who was hit immediately by the Rams' Ron Taylor on the Cub 21, gave City College the chance for its third tally.

Six plays later, that touchdown came, as quarterback Larry Beldon sneaked into the end zone from one yard out. Another wide conversion attempt heid the count at 19-0, the half time score.

Santa Rosa got baek into the battle briefly in the third quarter, scoring with 3:15 gone when McDonald plunged one yard for the TD. Don Sbragia's successful point after brought the Cubs defieit to 19-7.

The Rams offense was thwarted to some extent by a gigantic 160 yards lost through penalties of all kinds, so the long gainer once again widened the margin, when Panagakis passed for 60 yards to end Leroy Thomas on the first scrimmage playing following the kickoff. Thomas took the perfect toss in stride at the Santa Rosa 35, and went the rest of the way untouched. Still another missed conversion left the score at 25-7 with 4:10 left in the third period.

Quarterbaek Nat Carasali of Santa Rosa passed for 27 yards to McDonald after 5:10 of the final canto, the final Cub drive going for 46 yards in five thrusts. The missed point after held the score at 25-13.

From the ensuing kickoff, San Francisco went on its long push of the evening, 65 yards in eight plays. Halfback Jerry Dillard, who rushed for an impressive 93 yards in the game, went on a spurt of 31 for the touchdown by busting over the middle and outracing the secondary. Panagakis' kick was good, to total the count at 32-13.

By this time, the Rams had done considerable substituting, as Coaeh Grover Klemmer had the opportunity to look at most of the men on his roster. Some hard running by Dave Tyree and Sam Rios had featured the offensive workings during this period, together with good performances by quarterbaeks Panagakis and Beldon.

The final Ram touchdown of the contest was on another scoring pass by Panagakis, this time the toss going to end Dennis O'Conner for 30 yards and the TD. Mr. P. put the ball through the crossbars for the final point in a 39-13 victory.

Booters Open Play With Tribe Oct. 13

City College will host the Stanford soccer team this Saturday, October 13, at Balboa Soccer Stadium, as the college will play this year's first game for the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference.

Last year at Palo Alto, the Ram booters beat the Indians, 4-3, in a real thriller, one of those unforgettable games, one that hardly ever will be repeated, after trailing nearly all the way by a 3-1 score. With only 14 minutes left to play, an inspired, professional-like City College team scored three consecutive times against the Stanford squad, to pull the game out of the fire.

With just 40 seconds remaining in the game, Rene Carrillo, the Rams' left wing, scored beautifully for the winning goal; he and Toni Quiteno, inside left, who scored the other three goals for the college team, were the day's heroes, and will be on the starting line against the Indians this Saturday.

"Although the team has a new look this year, for it's almost entirely made up of newcomers, the men have been improving fast, working hard on the field every praetiee day and winning over high school teams on warm-up games. The spirit is great," Coaeh Roy Diederichsen said. "Stanford is a tough one but after this game we'll know for sure what's going to happen next."

All-American Grid Classic For Two Year Colleges Scheduled For December In Mississippi

Marking a big step forward for two-year college athletics in the state of Mississippi is the inauguration of the Annual All-America Junior College Grid Classic, to be held at the Memorial Stadium in Jackson, Mississippi, Friday night, December 14.

Joining hands with the Clarion Ledger - Jackson Daily News will be the Wigwam Wisemen of America, co-sponsoring the charity game, which will feature an East-West North-South duel, with the possibility of 31 states eligible to participate.

Mose Simms, director of the All-Ameriea High School Grid Classic, held during the past seven years in nearby Memphis, Tennessee, has already contacted every two-year college in the country which fields a football team, and the response was tremendously in favor of the game, according to a recent press release.

Fifty of the top two-year college gridders in America will be invited to play in this national All-Star encounter.

The East team will be chosen from Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Pennsylvania, South Carolina and Virginia.

A squad of the best players will come from Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Oregon, Texas, Utah, Washington and Wyoming.

Two of the nation's outstanding coaches will serve as head mentors for the classic, and nationally known assistants will also be chosen, Simms has announced.

When asked what players might possibly be eligible from City College, Head Coach Grover Klemmer stated that the Rams have fielded strong teams in the past, with numerous individual standouts, so there is every possibility of several Ram representatives in the classic at some future date.

Group Plans For National Champs

National Junior College Athletic Association officials recently announced that their organization and a national sponsor were working on plans for a Little World Series, to be played each season beginning in 1958 to determine the national two-year college baseball champion.

The NJCAA's first National Championship Football Game to be played in Los Angeles Coliseum on December 15, will provide national recognition of two-year college football, already present to a great degree in the traditional Junior Rose Bowl game.

Card Sales Surpass Former Mark As AS Salesmen Win Over AWS; Goal Of $12,000 Nearly Reached

DWANE SHIPPEY, Associated Student card sale chairman, announced present sales total.
—Guardsman photo by Richard Mahnken.

A total of 2,231 Associated Student cards have been sold as of October 4, according to Dwane Shippey, AS card sales chairman here.

Goal for this semester is $12,000, of which $11,143 has been received. Thus the AS is shy only $857 or 171 cards for its goal. This amount already exceeds last semester's goal of 2,000 cards.

At the CAB dance, held September 28, trophies were awarded to the highest individual card sellers: Eleanor Smith with a total of 15 for the AWS, and Richard Mahnken with a total of 40 for the AMS. The perpetual trophy went to the AMS, the highest team whose total number of cards sold was 76 as against that of the AWS which was 52.

The AMS team was led by President Norman Durieux and included Don Dotson, Bill Driscoll, Howard Klein, Mahnken, Bill McCormick, and Tom Severson.

The AWS team, led by President Metta Weddleton, included Eleanor Gandert, Kathy Mulligan, Diane Oliver, Carol Olson, Debora Rudder, Anne Smith, Eleanor Smith, Paula Villa, and Louise von Emster.

Appointments For Spring Programs Available At S160

All students who have not as yet seen their counsellors for the making of appointments for planning their spring programs, may do so now in the counselling office, S-160, according to Waddington Blair of the counselling department.

Priority of registration is determined by the order in which students apply for appointments.

Students were again reminded last week of the college's catalogue, and of bulletins and publications of other colleges and universities, available in the library of the counselling office, S-160.

Students in the process of attempting to choose a suitable major, may consult their counsellors about the individual counselling and testing services available here to all students who care to make use of them. These services are intended to help students in learning more about their aptitudes, interests, and motivations as they formulate their future plans, Blair said.

Honor Society Seeks Additional Students

Letters have been sent to all students who are eligible to become members of Alpha Gamma Sigma scholastic honor society here, according to William Richardson, the organization's faculty adviser.

Approximately 175 students are eligible to join this semester. Membership is restricted to those who have completed a minimum of 12 units with a grade point average of 3 (B). No grade can be lower than a (C).

Stanley Kettlewell was named president of the society, with Shirley Hegel, vice-president, and Barbara Zook, secretary-treasurer.

One advantage of membership in AGS is priority in the registration numbers.

Perennial Big Seven football champion Oklahoma has never lost a conference game under Coach Bud Wilkinson.

Former Students Receive Priority Salary Positions

Margaret De la Torre, Charles Leibscher, and William Carter, all graduates last June, have topped the graduates in secretarial training, architectural engineering, and retail merchandising respectively, Joseph A. Amori, placement director here, stated recently.

Miss De la Toree is now with the B. F. Goodrich Company as secretary to the director of industrial relations. She replaced Mary Jones, graduate of June, 1955, as top graduate in the secretarial training division, at the college.

All of the June graduates in secretarial training were placed in a wide variety of industries ranging from communications to insurance. The average salary was $275 per month.

Leibscher is now the liaison engineer with the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company. He received the highest salary of the entire class, which had an average salary of $350.

Carter is now a salesman for the Cluett-Peabody Company of San Francisco and has received the highest salary of all those who graduated from the business department. The average salary paid to the class was $325 per month.

Concert Tickets On Sale

Tickets for the 45th annual symphony series are still on sale at the student bank at special student prices, according to Meyer M. Cahn, college band instructor here.

A limited number of seats, priced at $18 and $24, remain for all sections except the grand tier. Students inquiring at the bank are advised that a diagram of the seating arrangement has been provided to aid them in their choices, Cahn said.

Interested students are reminded that these special student rate tickets will only be on sale until Monday, October 15th, or until the supply is exhausted.

Basic Experience Added To Curriculum As Leading Hotels Hire H&R Students

Hotel and Restaurant students are now being employed by leading hotels in San Francisco as part of the regular curriculum, according to Lawrence Wong, faculty member in charge of the cafeteria.

The course was set up to provide actual work experience in the field of hotel and restaurant management.

Classes meet once a week, on Mondays, to discuss trade problems, trade ethics, the attitude of the employee, customer reaction and general morale of the industry.

As part of the course, students work two days out of the week, eight hours a day. The students are not paid for their work, but are promised jobs if they prove promising.

Among the opportunities available for students are experience in staff planning, front office, personnel office, steward work, budget committee, auditing, purchasing, liquor control and general store.

Members of the H&R department working in the industry are as follows: Sir Francis Drake, Joe Anderson in liquor control, Ray Luchr in auditing and Richard Henderson in the kitchen; St. Francis, John Watts, Frank Well, William Helmer, Olaf Roberts, all working on a rotating basis throughout the hotel; Sheraton-Palace, William Boyd and Bob Petes in staff planning, and John Grist in the kitchen; Drake Wiltshire, Ted Cicttan in auditing; Plaza, Tom Elliott in the front office, and Marcio Germignani in the kitchen; Fairmont, Jay Hurlburt in purchasing; Mark Hopkins, Fred Trupp in front office and Melvin Nosh in banquet service; Clift, Ray Muilio in banquet service.

Social Committee Issues Regulations For Fall Semester

This committee meets every Monday noon in the office of Mary Golding, dean of women. When an organization wishes to hold a college event, a representative must appear before the committee two weeks in advance to obtain approval. All aspects of the proposed event are discussed, such as time, place, cost of admission, publicity, decorations, bands, beverages, police control, and sponsors and chaperones.

After the affair takes place, another meeting is held for the purposes of evaluation. How much money was taken in, how successful the arrangements, and the reaction of the persons participating are taken into consideration.

The members of the Social Committee for this semester and the organizations they represent are Miss von Emster, chairman; Metta Weddleton, Associated Women Students; Norman Durieux, sophomore class; Kathleen Mulligan, freshman class; and sponsors Dean Golding and Ralph Hillsman, dean in charge of student activities.

Stanford To Host College Debaters

Phi Rho Pi will travel to Stanford University this Friday, October 12, to participate in a debate workshop, according to Thomas H. Dutcher, faculty adviser.

The purpose of the workshop will be to explain the mechanics of debate to beginners and to provide experienced people with an opportunity to analyze the current topics. This workshop is patterned after that held last year.

Following the Stanford trip, Phi Rho Pi will participate in its first debate tournament to be held at St. Mary's College, November 2 and 3.

There is still room for more members in this organization, Dutcher said, and he is hopeful that persons who have not consulted him as yet will do so.

Dutcher may be located in his office, C-335B, Monday, Wednesday or Friday at 11 a.m., Tuesdays at 10 a.m. or by appointments. Interested students unable to reach him at these times may leave their name and telephone number under his door and he will call them.

Cheerleaders Chosen For Fall Semester

Six women were elected for the position of women's cheerleaders, Renee Olson, head cheerleader, recently announced.

Tryouts were held here, and 27 women tried for the positions.

Rally Commissioner John Zevas and Miss Olson were judges for the event. The competition was good, he declared, but only five could be chosen for the group. Those who were chosen are Carol Atkins, Audrey Bocck, Sue Hinkle, Portia Goldkind, and Anabelle Welch.

The women, under the direction of Miss Olson, will be at all the Ram games and will run through various routines during time out periods. Their duty will be to draw spirit for all of the college's sporting events.

Conlan Outlines College's Share In Proposition A

By Bob Sims

Highlighting the eighth session of the Student Council was an address by Louis G. Conlan, college president, urging support of the $27,000,000 school bond issue, Proposition A, which will be placed before city voters Tuesday, November 6.

Conlan pointed out that the college share of this issue would provide for the construction of 27 additional classrooms, 10 laboratories, a little theater, a stadium, and greater parking facilities.

This bond issue follows on the heels of the $49,000,000 fund which was passed in 1948 and is just about depleted now, Conlan added. The college share of that issue provided for the construction of Cloud Hall, Smith Hall, and additions to the library, the engineering and bio-chemistry departments.

Proposed college improvements under Proposition A would just about round out the campus except for an auditorium, Conlan further stated, with $3,000,000 expected for these developments.

The council, after hearing this report, pledged their support of the issue and pointed out that a committee headed by Bob Varni had already been appointed to help inform the public on the need for passage of this proposition.

Next order of business concerned an electronic mimeograph machine which was demonstrated to the council by a local British import company.

This machine is reputed to be the latest development in stencil duplicators employing such advantages as automatic regulation of the number of copies produced, margin and heading adjusters which can be used during operation, a new type cylinder eliminating the possibility of getting inky hands when changing stencils, and the possibility of using various ink colors in producing a finished paper.

In the ninth meeting last week, the council returned to a normal business procedure, passing budget requests with no questions inquiries for breakdowns but granting all budgets recommended.

The budgets allocated included a Publicity Committee grant of $1,200, a cut of $1,558.50; a Recreation Association budget of $300, a cut of $124; and a drama budget of $1,100, a cut of $946.64.

Controversy over the drama budget made the afternoon exciting when a council member proposed that the allocation of $1,100 be amended to read only partial. Drama representative Jean Graham pleaded for additional funds, claiming that only one play could be produced with the proposed council grant, but after much discussion, many amendments, and a bit of a parliamentary procedure snarl, the council upheld the initial recommendation.

One Applies For Music Award

Additional voices will be welcomed by the A Cappella Choir, Men's Glee Club, and Treble Clef, which are in the midst of planning their first combined concert to be given Wednesday, December 5, it was announced early last week by Robert Morton, director of the three groups.

Morton also mentioned that Armen Boyd, president of the Men's Glee Clubs, is the only applicant thus far for the music department scholarship, which is to be awarded for the first time this fall. Several students are believed to be eligible, so it is hoped that more applications will be submitted, Morton said.

All students, if qualified, are welcome to join any of the three vocal groups. Members must possess Associated Student cards and be able to meet rehearsal schedules.

Anyone interested in joining is requested to attend and audition during one of the meetings. These are held in Bungalow 6. The Men's Glee Club meets each Monday, Wednesday, and Friday at 12 noon, and the Treble Clef and choir meet daily at 1:10 p.m.

Details and program of the December 5 concert, which will be a preview of the college's 22nd annual Christmas concert, are to be announced later, Morton added.

In California there are 53 state parks, 32 state-owned beaches, 19 historical monuments, and 18 national forests which comprise 1/5 of the state's area.

CAB Declares Off Campus Ruling

Bond Issue May Bring Additional Space To College

By Bob Sims

With the eyes of students, faculty members, parents, building contractors, and financiers glued on the outcome, Proposition A, the $27,000,000 school bond issue, goes before the voting public on Tuesday, November 6.

Twenty-seven million dollars will go toward two new high schools, provide for improvements on existing school facilities, and complete the campus here in every respect, save that of an auditorium, if the proposition is passed.

Supposing that the collective John Q. Publics vote yes on Proposition A, future students here stand to gain improved music rooms, art laboratories, a little theater, some sorely needed parking facilities, athletic facilities, 27 classrooms, 10 laboratories, and an addition to the overcrowded Smith Hall.

Organizations here are currently hard at work publicizing and urging the passage of the proposition with both the Student Council and a committee of faculty members spearheading the drive locally.

On a city-wide basis, the drive to pass the proposition is being led by the Citizens Bond Committee, assisted by a school department committee, the Parent Teachers Associations, and by student and faculty groups at all school levels.

To date, the only difficulty facing backers of the bond issue is that of informing the voters as to the worth of and the need for passing such a proposition.

If past performance may be considered as indicative of future balloting, Proposition A faces some opposition, for it has been stated that nearly every proposed bond issue has received a negative vote of approximately 40,000.

This "no" vote of 40,000 looks slightly less than formidable until one consideration is made; the fact that adoption of a bond issue requires, not just a simple majority, but a two-thirds affirmative vote.

Besides improvements riding on the November 6 ballot, committee members pointed out that there is a presidential race to be decided also.

Committee Okays Two Ballot Proposals For Special Election

Two out of the three proposed amendments to the Associated Student constitution that will be voted on in a special election on Tuesday, November 6, were accepted by the constitutional committee at its meeting held October 9, Jim Kennedy, chairman of the committee, announced last week.

Proposed amendments that will appear on the ballot in November are an amendment granting the president of the AS the power to appoint special officers, and one to change the grade point minimum requirement for members of the Student Council from one to two grade points.

A third proposed amendment, which would have added three new positions to the AS, namely, a permanent college photographer, a window display officer, and a secretary to the cabinet of the AS President, was not approved, Kennedy said.

Scheduled for the next meeting are two additional proposed amendments to be submitted. One of them pertains to the limiting of the total number of units completed by a candidate for AS President to not more than 60, and the other pertains to the resignation of the Inter-Sorority Council from the CAB.

Proposed amendments must be displayed in a prominent public place. This is done by one of two ways, either by posting the amendment on a bulletin board or by submitting them to The Guardsman for publication. Amendments submitted for publication will appear from time to time in later issues. They must be posted and/or publicized not later than one week before the election.

Amendments must be signed by 10 per cent of the AS, and submitted to the Election Committee to be placed on the ballot, or the amendment may be presented to Student Council and accepted by a two-thirds majority vote of those present at voting time.

Appearing on the same day along with the ballot for the proposed amendments will be a "straw" election. This "mock" election for President of the United States will give students a chance to vote for their presidential favorite, along with the rest of the nation, Kennedy said.

Contestants For Homecoming Day Queen Sought

Selection of a Homecoming Queen and her four attendants who will reign over Homecoming Week, November 5-9, is still in progress, Norman Durieux, president of the Associated Men Students, announced recently.

Any woman is invited to enter who is a student at the college, also has completed a minimum of 12 units, and is a member of the Associated Students.

Applications for entry in the contest can be obtained from the dean of women and in the student body office. Deadline for filing these petitions is Thursday, October 8, with a preliminary judging on Tuesday, October 23. The final judging will be held on Friday, October 26.

Winner of the contest will be announced and crowned queen at a special bonfire rally on Thursday, November 8.

On Friday, November 9, a car parade will be held before the game to be played at Kezar Stadium between the Rams and San Mateo.

Homecoming Week will be climaxed on Saturday, October 10, with a semi-formal dance at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel at which time the queen will be presented with her trophy. The band, Durieux added, has been changed from The Villagers to Sal Karson.

Two Conferences Mark Calendar For AS Leaders

Student representatives from California, Nevada, and Hawaii will gather for the United Students Association Conference at Mills College, Oakland, Friday and Saturday, October 26-27, Wayne McFadden, Associated Student President, recently disclosed.

Formal launching of the conference will be at 1:30 p.m., October 26, with the business of the day winding up at 8 p.m. The conference will continue on October 27 starting at 7 a.m. and continuing until 8 p.m. McFadden added that since this date conflicts with the Frosh Ball, activities would end slightly early to enable students to attend both functions.

Those students attending from the college will be required to meet their own expenses to and from Mills College, McFadden stated.

On November 15, 16, and 17, the State Regional Conference will be held at Sacramento Junior College with six delegates representing the college.

As a preliminary to the State Regional Conference, 37 students from this college attended the fall meeting of the Northern Section, California Junior College Student Goverment Association regional conference on October 6 at Stockton College.

Most of the two-year colleges in the states belong to their regional organizations, and some 32 colleges are expected to send varying numbers of representatives to Sacramento.

Student Council To Enforce Policy; Delinquent Organizations Will Lose Privilege, Use Of Campus Facilities

College organizations which do not send a representative to the Club Activities Board meetings will be recommended to Student Council for off campus status starting tomorrow, October 18, Lon Earnshaw, CAB president, announced today.

"Student Council approval was recently received on this ruling," Earnshaw stated, adding that an organization declared off campus will lose the privilege of representation in further CAB meetings and the right to use any of the college's facilities.

"Organizations that have been ruled 'off campus' must appeal to the Student Council, stating their case and reasons for readmission," Earnshaw said.

Deadline for filing petitions for a charter and for official recognition as a campus organization by the CAB is Tuesday, October 30. These petitions must contain the constitution of the club and a complete list of the members. Clubs must have 51 per cent of the members holding AS cards before they can be accepted into the CAB.

In keeping with the policies of past boards, the CAB is planning to submit proposed amendments to the constitution of the Associated Students. Earnshaw could not say what the proposed amendments will consist of.

"When CAB has completed the recognizing of campus organizations, we will draw up the proposed amendments and submit them to the constitutional committee," Earnshaw announced.

Earnshaw requested that the dollar deposited in the Ram Booster Fund by organizations that participated in CAB day held last September 28, be donated along with the petitions. By donating this dollar, he said, each organization that has a representative in CAB will be able to receive an Award Key.

The keys will be presented at the end of the semester, if a dollar is received from each organization.

If he does not receive a dollar from each organization, then the remaining funds received will be refunded. He stated his belief that each organization will contribute its dollar, thus adding distinction to anyone receiving a key for having served on the CAB.

Representatives in the CAB receive college credit, but in order to receive credit they must be enrolled in the CAB by the end of mid-term week, this Friday, October 19.

A Coffee-Social is being planned in the near future by the CAB. All members of the Student Council and the CAB are invited to attend. The exact date will be announced by Earnshaw at the next CAB meeting.

Officers of the CAB are Bob Wendt, vice-president; Joetta Colwell, secretary, and Soledad Camacho, corresponding secretary. Meetings are held every Tuesday and Thursday at 1 p.m. in Bungalow B2.

Alpha Sigs Hold Bluebook Blues Dance Saturday

Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity will hold their semi-annual dance, the Bluebook Blues, on Saturday, October 20, from 9 p.m. to midnight in George D. Smith Hall, Joe Burns, former secretary for the fraternity announced recently.

Blue Book Blues will be strictly coupie, and dress is informal. Tickets are priced at $1.50 per couple and may be purchased from Alpha Sigma Delta members or at the student bank in Smith Hall. It will also be possible to purchase them at the door before the dance.

Highlight of the event will be the announcement and crowning of the winner of the Alpha Sigma Delta queen contest. Although each of the six sororities will have one candidate competing for this title, as of press time only three have been announced. They are Marilyn Gregory, Kappa Phi; Ann Smith, Zeta Chi; and Shirley Stortz, Phi Beta Rho.

Voting for the queen will be this week at the silver pole and in the cafeteria. Only Associated Students can vote, and one vote may be cast for each AS card. Five votes may be cast for each ticket purchased.

Lost AS Cards Replaced At Either Dean's Office

Replacement of lost Associated Student cards may be made through either Dean Mary Golding or Dean Ralph Hillsman and by paying a fee of $1, according to Dwayne Shippey, Associated Student card chairman here.

Only a few of the advantages of buying an AS card were listed by Shippey as follows: free parking on campus, admission and reduced rates to dances, football games, drama productions, rallies, and AS voting privileges.

Shippey also pointed out that the power behind student government here is the AS card holder, and student leaders derive their offices through the actions of the card holders.

Publicity Committee Currently Busy Making Plans To Aid Proposition A

City College's Publicity Committee is currently working to show the general public why a yes vote on Proposition A is essential for a complete and modern campus and a thorough education for its students, according to chairman Denny Delman.

Membership in this committee is open to all journalism and public relations students. The committee meets Fridays during college hour in S-345, and Delman added that the committee would welcome any new members.

Two former members of this committee have recently attained distinction in public relations fields.

Toni Mannina, chairman of the Publicity Committee last year and a former member of the public relations class, has just been named assistant to Al Bacarri, the publicity manager of KPIX-TV.

John LoCoco, another former publicity committee and public relations class member, this week gained recognition in the Pictorial Review section of the Sunday Examiner. LoCoco is now in Hollywood.

Many former members of the college Publicity Committee have received positions in which they have been helped by the experience they received in meeting the public through the Publicity Committee, Delman added.

Delman was elected chairman of the group for this semester. The office of vice-chairman is held by Renee Olson. Other members of this group which is advised by George Muliany are Jan Mowll, Jim Woodburn, Robert Newly, Kenneth Joos, Frank Chew, Chester Lee, Kaj Kristofferson, Dave Velma, and Bob Razura.

Financial Committee Would Enhance Efficiency Of Council

IF NEAR the semester's onset he is reputed to be without a temper, continually grinning, soft spoken and of a gentle nature, then take heed, for the number of facts and figures literally thrown at a budget-burden Associated Student Finance Chairman is enough to encourage Job to arise from his seat of ashes and, following the advice of his wife, . . . "curse God, and die."

However, about this time every semester, it becomes apparent the finance chairman is slowly losing that long lost look. The color returns to his cheeks, and he smiles weakly when he's spoken to. Like the vivid fears and pains of puppy love, the frustrating world of facts and figures fades and is becoming a bitter but enlightening experience.

Bob Varni, AS Finance Chairman here this semester, is no exception, for he has finished reviewing budget requests from 36 college organizations, cutting them down to feasible amounts, and presenting these cut budgets to Student Council for final ratification.

FINANCE CHAIRMAN REVIEWS, SLASHES

Budget requests for this semester originally totaled $30,357.09, from which it was Varni's job to cut more than $5,000 before recommending them to the council for approval. As Finance Chairman, he had personally to examine each of the 36 original budgets and eliminate all expenditures which, in his estimation, were unnecessary or could be postponed until next semester.

A number of times Varni and a few members of the honorary appointive cabinet have been observed losing patience with a Student Council member who requests a breakdown on a budget request. "Tempers flare" between organization representatives and Student Council members, as a council member tries to lighten Varni's job by cutting the already slashed budget again.

We do not reprehend anyone for losing patience when a breakdown is requested. The Finance Chairman has spent weeks preparing each budget, and he has cut each to the minimum before he approves it. It is certainly unlikely, illogical that a council member can discern in the five minutes it takes for a breakdown what other expenditures might possibly be omitted.

BREAKDOWNS IN COUNCIL UNSATISFACTORY

Neither do we denounce the council member who requests the breakdown, for he is sincerely trying to represent the electorate to the best of his ability and to distribute the limited AS income as fairly as possible.

Rather, we think the Finance Chairman is one of the most important positions in the Associated Students, but because of the extensive amount of time and work involved, it is the least desirable. And certainly, the council is not facilitating his task by questioning each and every budget which he is recommending for their approval. Nor are they doing any constructive work, for a council member will not be enlightened on a budget problem during a few minutes of temper flaring debate.

Therefore, we recommend that in the future all members of Student Council be automatically placed on a Financial Committee, which must be established. The committee will be divided into groups of two or three, and each group will be assigned four or five budget requests, which they will investigate and eliminate all unnecessary expenditures from.

INFORMED COUNCIL BETTER REPRESENTS ELECTORATE

Of course, the Financial Chairman will serve as the coordinator of the smaller groups and head of the Financial Committee. Necessary cuts in order to balance the budget will be made by the Financial Committee, before the Finance Chairman recommends the budget to Student Council for final approval.

If this procedure is adopted, valuable Student Council time will not be devoted to pointless bickering. Tempers will not flare between organization representatives and council members. The general respect for the council will be enhanced, for council members will be better informed about what they are voting on. Therefore, they will be better able sincerely to represent the electorate. And finally, Finance Chairmen will no longer be frustrated by brain-baffling budget burdens.

We, The Guardsman, sincerely feel this procedure would be in the best interest of the college, the Associated Students and the various organizations which they represent. We now request Student Council to make the necessary preparations immediately to inaugurate a Financial Committee for the spring semester of 1957 at City College.

Special Election To Focus Interest

BETTER student government here is being facilitated this semester with the inauguration of an especial election for potential amendments to the constitution of the Associated Students.

Previously amendment voting was held in conjunction with the AS officer election. Consequently, many students were not completely familiar with some of the proposed changes and additions to the constitution, they being primarily concerned with AS officer balloting.

However, Wayne McFadden, AS president, and Executive Committee members recommended that an earlier date for amendment elections would help stimuate student interest. This, they felt, would give voters an opportunity to concentrate on potential amendment changes.

Therefore, with Jim Kennedy as chairman, the constitutional committee meets every Tuesday at 11 a.m. in bungalow B-1 and is preparing amendments for the election to be held on Tuesday, November 6.

The Bohemian — Human Intruders Upset Domain Of Tranquility

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

"MOVE along with you," the thick backed soldier grunted as he shoved one of the prisoners back into line.

Once in a while a frightened animal darted across the pathway and sought seclusion in a harboring bush. This mysterious domain of silence and beauty was wrapped in tranquility, which gave it an austere aspect of virginity.

The intruders scuffled along. The sounds of their movements echoed throughout the place, breaking the spell previously cast by complete stillness. Reality was transcending into the world of dreams, causing it to shatter, recover itself and then prepare itself for the worst.

Now and then a grunt of pain, a muffled voice of terror was lifted out of the enclosure and plunged into the quietness ahead; these were the noises brought by the intruders.

A horrid shriek, a brute command, a whimper of misery and the intruders penetrated five hundred more yards into the serene landscape. "Who are they—what do they desire?" These questions the imaginary dwellers of this peaceful paradise asked in frightful wonder.

A careful examination revealed they were outsiders known as human beings. These creatures endowed with the capacity for movement, for forceful action. Yes, these intruders possessed an amazing and marvelous gift. They had life and the faculty of Reason.

The column of suffering men continued its march. Further and further along the plains they crept. Some crawled, others stumbled, while the soldiers went straight shouldered and strong. The soldiers would spasmodically jab their prisoners with bayonets.

The forceful, seemingly superior soldiers sensed their flaw, that of shame and guilt. They attempted to hide it by burrowing themselves into their thick, woolen jackets. But it was a useless guise, for the inhabitants of their foreign world could distinguish between nobility and brutality.

A cruel cry, half animal, half human shouted the command to halt. The band of tragedy had reached their destination. The march was finished. A sigh of relief from the men blended into the music that the swaying of a branch created by a guff of breeze.

"You, stand up! You there, get in line! All of you get in a straight line!" the rough, rasping voices of the soldiers began, thundering an expression of doom.

The hopeless, tired men consented. It was time to rest. They were to forget the cares of a world that subjected them to constant restlessness and wretched grief. They were to be liberated.

A tremendous roar sent vibrations of dreadfulness throughout this once supremely calm countryside. Fear penetrated all corners. Everywhere there was the disruptance of madness. A soft silence once more descended. This time it was one of solemnity.

The soldiers marched down the pathway from whence they had appeared. Their cadence was hurried, as they were eager to leave this strange place and join their own world.

Gentle breezes on their way to the heavens caressed the smoking rifles of the retreating soldiers. But this time a different music was created by their contact. This time it was a song of death.

Rocky's English Helps Boxing Tactics In Ring

A great feeling of dismay is felt for Somebody-Down-There-Hates-Me, Rocky Graziano. Unfortunately Graziano, nee Barbella, did not have the opportunity of the present day college student.

If Graziano had the proper English, a personal interview with the Rock might have gone something like this:

Reporter: "Mr. Graziano, could you tell us a little of your life before you entered the fight business?"

Rocky: "Apparently my life started at the outset of birth, and it would be useless to go before the pre-natal point. My environment was not to the best of advantages to my capabilities. However, I did learn a little of my pugilism on the East Side of New York.

"Trying desperately to escape my surroundings, I took to the ring as a naturalist would. Inspired by the works of Thoreau, Emerson, and Tony Galento, I soon found myself in the limelight.

"Of course, there is a girl in my life; and although she is of a different sect than I, college taught me not to discriminate against others. There is nothing special about her, excepting she resembles Miss Marilyn Monroe a bit.

"In the Zale fight, I bled profusely, and hanging eye tissue hindered my onslaught to some degree. Zale got me mad though, when he started teasing me about the contemporary poetry I had written. This was going too far.

"I disposed of him with a number of solid rights and occasional lefts. Mathematically, I had figured the distance to his chin and found this to be a vulnerable spot. The crowd roared with elation as I won the title.

"My intentions were to hold the title for a long while, but I also received an enormous blow on the lower epidermis of my cranium. For a moment, I was overcome by astronomical bodies. However, I am lucky to have been in the fight game.

"Yes, some professor up at the penitentiary must have surely liked me."

Service Award Winner Back At College

By Carol Harris

Returning to the college after a semester's absence, Janet Mowll, one of the college's most talented art students, will again be responsible for the window displays in the Science Building.

During the 1955 semester, Miss Mowl was the recipient of the outstanding service award, which is given to students not active in student government yet who give service to the college. The award was given to Miss Mowl not for any one display, but for her overall contributions.

Miss Mowll's first job in art was decorating the library of James Denman Junior High School when she was a student there. This was the only art service she engaged in before her entrance into City College, although she was an art major at Balboa High School.

During her first semester here, she pursued a general art course. It was not until her second semester that she became interested in art advertising, and with the aid of William Eckert, art instructor here, she began to do art publicity jobs for various college organizations.

When asked why she enjoyed her work, she replied, "I like to work with my hands and to create things."

One of the outstanding characteristics of her work is simplicity. She never uses an elaborate display, but rather one which will catch the eye of the student as he rushes from class to class, and yet will, at the same time, put the point across at a glance.

Perhaps one of Miss Mowll's most unique displays was for the Shipwreck Dance a year ago. For this display, actual red and green running lights from a ship were used.

On display this week by Miss Mowll are the Freshman Ball and Associated Student card exhibits. These exhibits can be viewed in the display windows on the first floor of the Science Building.

This semester Miss Mowll, besides arranging display windows, will aid any group in publicizing their social affairs. The only stipulation is that a request for her help must be made at least two weeks in advance.

Ram-Oakland Clash Friday As Stockton Tips Gridders

Completions Nil In First Half As CCSF Loses, 18-9

By Lou Lucia

Both City College and Stockton failed to complete a pass during the first half of their Big Eight crucial at Baxter Stadium, but then in the third quarter the Mustangs used two long passes to advantage and beat the Rams by an 18-9 final count.

LeRoy Wieland and Marshall Dragomanovich led a Stockton drive to the eight-yard line. From there halfback Lew Schmid gained the final yardage for the touchdown, with 12 minutes gone in the first quarter.

A Stockton fumble was recovered on the 17-yard line, and two plays later fullback Bill Rathbun scampered the final seven yards to put the Rams on the scoreboard. John Panagakis kicked the extra point, and the San Francisco team led 7-6 at the half.

After the second half kick-off, Stockton travelled from the 32 to the 46 yard line in five plays. Then quarterback Earl Moreno faked to two backs going through the line, faded back and spiralled to Joy Gritts for a total yardage play of 64 yards. Last year's champions led 12-7 and showed they meant to keep it that way.

A short five minutes later the combination of Moreno and Gritts got together again for the third Mustang score. This time the pass play covered 66 yards as Gritts caught the ball on the City College 30-yard stripe and ran the remaining yardage.

As the home team forged ahead 18-7 the Rams surged for their final tally. With three minutes and 15 seconds gone in the fourth quarter, Moreno dropped back to punt and received a low pass from center. He tried to run the play out but was trapped by Ernie Ibarra and Phil Falen for the safety.

Though Ram quarterback Larry Beldon clicked on nine out of fifteen passes during the last 20 minutes of the game, the team was unable to do no more than dent the defense.

Just as Leroy Thomas' pass catching and Gene Craft's runs hindered the Mustangs, the Rams were equally pestered by Schmid. Schmid Intercepted two passes and thwarted the running attack on numerous occasions.

After the game, Coach Grover Klemmer stated to a solemn but full locker room of footballers, "Don't worry, we'll catch up to them." Such a quote would seem optimistic to some observers, but if the Rams can go through the rest of their league schedule undefeated, their chances of overtaking the Mustangs are great.

At Bushrod Park, Oakland defeated Sacramento by a 21-7 score. This week's opponent of the Rams was led by Wayne Schneider, who gained 111 yards on 12 carries. Therefore, the Kezar battle will again find two of the league's roughest opponents colliding for top positions in the standings.

New York Giants' pitcher Al Worthington broke into the majors by hurling two consecutive shutouts in 1953.

Kezar Arc Tilt Marks First Home Play Of '56 For Rams

Underdog Oakland College will have only one thought in mind when they meet the Rams this Friday night in Kezar Stadium, and that is to turn in an upset similar to the one they scored over Stockton last season.

The 8 p.m. kickoff will pit one of the improved clubs in the Big Eight, Oakland, against the Rams' strong squad, which is making a serious bid for the conference championship.

In 1955, Oakland rose up and almost ruined the title hopes of the champion Stockton outfit, holding the highly favored Mustangs to an upset 13-13 tie. It was only this tie that separated City College from Stockton at season's end.

Last week, in their conference opener, Oakland was dumped by that same Mustang team, 15-6, in a game played at Baxter Stadium in Stockton. The winners moved well through the Thunderbird line, netting a gigantic 387 yards rushing, while throwing for only 57 yards against the Thunderbird aerial defenses.

Buddy Allen, a second year halfback, was the standout performer for Oakland, rushing for 48 yards in 7 carries, and saving at least three enemy touchdowns with last ditch tackles.

Six Stockton fumbles and a total of 160 yards in penalties against the Mustangs accounted in great part for the low score, but the Oakland defense played well in the clutch throughout.

The T-birds scored their lone tally of the contest when quarterback Rich Xavier tossed for 69 yards to halfback Wayne Schneider for the touchdown.

Head Coach Gil Callies has nine vets from last year's team, plus three returning servicemen on this season's roster. Among them are Bob Nelson, the 1955 Big Eight All Conference center; ends Rich Gogola and Dave Rinta; tackles Art Leon, Bill Borders and Duane Stuker, and guards Joe Hayes and Jim Anderson.

Since Stockton moved so well on the ground against Oakland, it may be expected that a strong Ram running game may prove to be the difference in this Friday's game.

Folk Dancing Class Added To Sports

Members of the folk dancing group here entertained the Parents Teachers Association of Faragot Elementary School recently, according to Lene Johnson, faculty adviser.

Recreation Association has added a new folk dancing class to their sports program. Folk dancing is a meeting place for students who enjoy dancing, and not a strenuous class, according to Miss Johnson. Jack Skow was elected as manager for the fall semester. All students who are interested in folk dancing on Fridays from 2 to 3 p.m. should see Miss Johnson in the women's gym.

Stanford University was chosen as the site for the folk dancing festival, to be held Sunday, October 21. Students from the Bay Area junior colleges and universities will be represented at this festival.

Two sport days have been scheduled for the fall semester. Co-Ed Sport Day, Saturday, November 3, will be held at Oakland Junior College. Sports which will be concerned are: modern dancing, badminton, and archery. On Saturday, November 17, the sport day will be held here.

Ram Soccer Team Plays Stockton At San Jose Saturday

Playing its second game of the 1956 Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference season, the Ram squad will travel to San Jose State College, where they are to meet the Spartan eleven this Saturday, October 20.

The Ram soccermen met Stanford in the first game of the season on October 13, but results were not available at press time.

Last year, when these two teams met at Balboa Soccer Stadium in San Francisco, the Spartans, playing at their best, came close to beating the college team, but were defeated, 3-2, in the last half of the game by a strong Ram comeback.

Although cold weather has been an obstacle to the practices, the team didn't mind it for the games, which under the conference's rules are to be played under rain or shine.

Work-outs based on fast breaks, passing and new techniques on the offensive as well as the defensive line, have given the team some of the balance they lacked in the beginning.

The college roster will also have on hand Sam Zeiver, Joe Congi, Bob Kelejian, Tony Baranski, Abner Willis and Julio Cabrera, fullbacks; Nick Flores, Wayne Wright, Charles Flores and Bong Koong in the forward line. Six lettermen are expected to direct the team's action, Diedrichsen said. They are Quiteno, R. Carrillo, Valle, Zelver, Kellejian and Nick Flores.

Santa Rosan Hawkins Airs Views On Big 8

FOLLOWING the Rams' impressive 39-13 opening win over Santa Rosa two weeks ago, the Bearcubs' [illegible] director, Ted Hawkins, made some noteworthy comments on the Big Eight scene at large.

Hawkins stated that he definitely felt that his college could not compete with the metropolitan conference teams any longer, and a parting of the ways must eventually come between the Bay Area clubs and their distant partners.

Sacramento College and College of San Mateo have also indicated that they can no longer compete with their faster company, the former desiring to join the Golden Valley Conference and the latter holding preference for a tie-up with the Coast Counties Conference.

Hawkins also mentioned that where as Santa Rosa used to draw a number of its athletes and students from the San Francisco proper district, that college now depends upon home grown talent for its athletic teams.

This situation has been caused by the rapid growth of City College, plus the recent entry of Oakland College into the conference. Since there are three two-year colleges in the Big Eight Conference situated in this area, let alone the colleges of other conferences, the trend is quickly moving to the point where a college must depend on the talent available in its home area for survival in athletic competition.

Santa Rosa, Sacramento and San Mateo are not so weak in basic talents, but rather weak in proportion to the greater population districts which such other colleges as West Contra Costa, Oakland and City College are able to draw athletes from.

Names '56 Rams As Strongest In Years

As an example, the strong Ram team numbers all but seven men on the roster as products of the San Francisco high school system.

In his comments on the college team in particular, Hawkins said that he felt this was the strongest club from San Francisco in the past five seasons, in fact, since the famed 1949 club, led by Ollie Matson.

We haven't been around the Big Eight for quite that long, but In the opening victory, the college team exhibited a very strong set of running backs with a hustling line to lead them, and enough good passing to keep the defense "honest."

But as one of the players put it, "We still need a lot of work." Should the team continue to "work" as they did against the Bearcubs, some rushing marks around here could be replaced by season's end.

Professional Football Brings Good Effect To College Grid—Klemmer

The world of professional football has had a good effect on the college brand of the grid game: that is the belief of Head Football Coach Grover Klemmer, who played under Pro Coach Paul Brown.

Klemmer feels that "pro ball has helped techniques immensely." He also thinks that college players who watch the professionals in action get the confidence to emulate the pros after seeing the way they work their plays. "Plays that are normally impossible are tried and are often successful, and this, Klemmer feels, has "definitely improved the game."

In 1945 Klemmer was stationed at Great Lakes Naval Training Station. The head coach of the Great Lakes service team that year was Paul Brown, considered one of the greatest coaches of all time. While in the service, Klemmer learned some methods and fundamentals that Brown was later to incorporate into his pro coaching.

Klemmer feels that Brown's coaching in the service and the way Brown patterned his professional coaching from it, has also left its impression on the colleges of the nation.

"Brown is an idealist where football is concerned. He is also a perfectionist and a great disciplinarian," Klemmer said.

Klemmer recalls that in 1945 Great Lakes had an initial squad of 300 and after about two weeks of fundamentals and practice it had been reduced to approximately 50.

"We were mostly ex-college players. I played left half and Marion Motley (he later played for the Cleveland Browns and Pittsburgh Steelers) played fullback. We lost our first three games, but Brown was a real scrapper and wouldn't be denied. After losing those three we won seven in a row, and beat Notre Dame in our last game," Klemmer said.

Asked what the topic of discussion was at half time while playing for Brown, Klemmer said, "We usually brought out the chalk and tried to correct our mistakes. Brown was no fiery orator, but applied constructive criticism."

Good material is the basic ingredient of a winning team in any sport, but Klemmer thinks "attitude and desire" also play a big part of the game. "When you have kids that have no desire you have nothing."

Intramural Grid, Cage Play Started

Intramural sports play has begun, Jack Gaddy, director of the program, recently announced, adding that competition is being held within the physical activities classes in basketball and touch football.

The classes have been divided into squads, and are playing a round robin schedule at present. The winners of each instructor's class at the same hour will play off at the end of the semester for the hourly championship. Because of the time involved, the program will end with the selection of an hourly champion and will not continue to a college intramural champion team, Gaddy added.

All men enrolled in a physical activities class will be required to participate in the program, with the exception of Block SF holders.

The tennis classes are now beginning with instructions in the game, which will be followed by a tournament in the second midterm period. The tournament will decide a champion singles player and a doubles team championship. Winners will receive medals at the end of the semester.

The golf classes are also in the process of learning the game, but toward the end of the semester they will play an 18 hole tournament, according to Gaddy. Presently the classes go to the driving range, where use of the different clubs is being taught.

The boxing classes are also learning their sport, and will hold a special tournament later in the semester. It is the wish of boxing coach Roy Diederichsen, that this tourney will be conducted in conjunction with the Associated Men Student Smoker, as it was last semester.

Thespians Make Fall Debut

Far Off Hills To Open Here On November 2

Curtain time for The Far-Off Hills, a three-act Irish comedy written by Lenox Robinson, which is to be presented in the little theater by the college's drama department under the direction of Michael Griffin, will be at 8 p.m. on November 2, 3, 9, 10, 16 and 17.

Admission is by Associated Student card or by tickets available from Griffin.

Set in Ireland, with scene changes to designate the dining room of the Patrick Clancy home and "Pet" and "Ducky's" bedroom, Far-Off Hills is a skillful blending of character portrayal and Irish humor and a lingering thought that the "far-off hills are always greener," Griffin said.

The cast was announced as follows: Stan Weston as Patrick Clancy; Jo Anne Jaklevick as Marion Clancy; Anna Clancy is played by Peggy Powell; and Dorthea Clancy is played by Linda Cripps; Mel Rasmussen as Oliver O'Shoughnessy; Bob Doyle as Dick Delany; Crockett McClanahan as Harold Mahony; Stephanie Koppe as Susy Tyman; Ray Davis as Pierce Hegarty; Dawn Roberts as Ellen Nolan, with Roy Maffei acting as technical director.

Melodrama By Hall, Middlemass Tentatively Scheduled Saturday; Stan Weston Named Play Director

Tentatively scheduled for performance in the little theater this Saturday, October 20, directed by Stan Weston, The Valiant, a powerful one-act melodrama written by Holworthy Hall and Robert Middlemass, may be moved up to a later date, according to Michael Griffin, drama director.

Plot of The Valiant concerns identification of a young man in a death cell awaiting execution for murder, and a lady who has travelled a great distance because she believes him to be her long lost brother.

The condemned man says he is James Dyke. But it is suspected that this is not his real name and that he wishes to keep his true identity forever a secret.

Public interest, in the form of inquiring letters, has focused on the death cell and the unidentified young man, as people from all over the world seek to identify Dyke as a son, a husband, a brother, or blood relative.

On behalf of her mother who is critically ill and anxious to know if Dyke is her son, Josephine Paris seeks him in his cell. Josephine will identify her brother through the piecing together of a selection from Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet which she and her brother recited together as children.

Dyke fails to respond. But the question of whether or not he really is her brother is not satisfied until the play concludes.

Cast for The Valiant, announced by Griffin, is as follows: Bob Doyle as Dyke; Peggy Powell as Josephine Paris; Mel Rasmussen as Warden Hoit; Andy Buonsante as Father Daly, and Louis Bamberger as Attendant.

Guardsman To Drop Issues To 12

Because of a financial cut in The Guardsman budget, the Publications Board at a recent meeting found it necessary to omit the originally scheduled November 21 issue of the newspaper, according to Robert Kauth, board chairman.

Previously The Guardsman was scheduled to publish 13 issues this semester, but the budget necessitated limiting the paper to 12 issues.

Publication dates for this semester were recently approved by the Publications Board. The Guardsman is distributed on Wednesday at 8 a.m.

Other members of the Publications Board are Wayne McFadden, Associated Student president; Maurice Paszkiewicz, managing editor of The Guardsman; Louise von Emster, AS vice-president; Bob Varni, AS finance chairman, and Lou Lucia, feature editor of The Guardsman.

Students, Faculty To Gather During Break October 26

A faculty-student coffee hour will take place Friday, October 26, during college hour, Frances Lloyd, chairman of the Faculty Association-faculty - student relations committee, announced recently.

Weather permitting, Mrs. Lloyd stated, this semesterly event will be held in the open courtyard between Cloud Hall and the Science Building.

"We are hoping that a large number of students will attend," she commented, adding, "The purpose of this coffee hour is for the faculty and the students to become better acquainted."

Coffee and cookies will be served, as well as punch for non-coffee drinkers. Plans are being made to set up a separate serving table for each department. Under this plan, if a student wishes to become acquainted with instructors in the English Department, for instance, he can locate them at their assigned department table. The other departments can be located in the same manner.

Faculty members, with the aid of volunteer student assistance, will serve the refreshments, which are being prepared by the Hotel and Restaurant Department here.

Instructors who are members of the committee are as follows: Mrs. Lloyd, chairman, Ann Casey, John Fawcett, Jules Fraden, Ruth Inskipp, Lene Johnson, James McConnell, Alva McMillan, Beverly Pasqualetti, Al Peterson, Maurice Power, Everett Silvia, Douglas Soule, and Nina Tucker.

Alumni Plan For Homecoming Week

Because of the activity of recently elected officers of the Alumni Association, a well attended participation in homecoming week is expected this year, according to Bob Winegardner, class of '48 and manager of the California book store.

Amendments Pass; Police Budget Tops Previous Semester

By Denny Delman

Passage of constitutional amendments as well as additional budgets took up most of the Student Council's business last week as the group rounded out its tenth and eleventh sessions.

Jim Kennedy, chairman of the Constitution Committee, brought to the floor an amendment removing from the student government the office of Campus Affairs Coordinator. This brought strong protest from both AS President Wayne McFadden and Vice-President Louise von Emster, both of whom evaluated the necessities of this position. The motion lost, three voting for the amendment, five against and four abstentions.

After a brief cross-floor exchange between the council and Campus Police Chief Bill Traynor, the police received $700, their largest budget in some time. A large portion of the money is to be appropriated for uniforms, according to the combined reports of Traynor and Finance Chairman Bob Varni.

A rapid succession of questions and answers between Traynor and Councilman Ron Kramer ended debate on the police budget. Traynor stated that he would have to delete special "insurance" coverage.

Councilman George Pyne then produced an amendment stating that requests for social calendar dates be turned in to the Vice-President a semester in advance.

Again Miss von Emster took the floor calling for the defeat of the amendment stating that it was unnecessary and that such matters should be left to the discretion of the Vice-President. The council compiled, voting down the motion four for, seven against and one abstention.

Additional budgets were passed by the council including AWS, $408; Men's Glee Club, $215; Phi Ro Pi, $375; Treble Clef, $105; Choir, $300; Intramural, $201.50; Alpha Gamma Sigma, $180; Basketball, $1,425.

Student, Faculty Coffee Hour Held Friday

Ten Separate Departmental Areas Set Up In Courtyard; H&R Will Supply Facilities

Over a cup of coffee or punch, students here will get a chance to chat informally with members of the faculty here Friday during college hour when the Faculty Association presents its eighth semesterly faculty-student coffee hour, according to Frances Lloyd, chairman of the faculty-student relations committee.

Weather permitting, the coffee hour will be held in the courtyard between Cloud Hall and the Science Building.

Facilties borrowed from the Hotel and Restaurant Department will be divided into ten separate departmental areas in the courtyard, each marked by a poster so that the difficulty in finding a particular faculty member will be alleviated, Mrs. Lloyd stated.

Coffee hour, since its inception in the Spring semester of 1953, has become a traditional social activity at the college, Mrs. Lloyd pointed out, adding that the major characteristic of past faculty-student get-togethers is the fact that the refreshments always seem to be consumed long before the hour has come to an end.

With free coffee, punch, and cookies offered, plus the chance to become better acquainted with that instructor whose midterm grades left openings for conversation, the event presents many interesting possibilities, students observed.

The only "hitch" in the program appears in the refreshment serving end, where student volunteers have been asked to aid faculty members in keeping cups filled and mouths supplied with cookies.

AS Leaders Attend Mills Conference Friday, Saturday

Eight student leaders here will comprise the delegation to the National Student Association conference at Mills College this Friday and Saturday, October 26 and 27, Associated Student President Wayne McFadden announced last week.

Current problems in higher education has been selected for the theme of the conference.

Discussion groups and panels headed by a special moderator have been selected as the most effective method for indoctrinating the delegates.

Each discussion group will be led by a student and have as a resource person a faculty member or administrator from one of the nearby institutions.

In order to keep the groups about the same size, only a specified number of students will be allowed in a single group. A delegate will have to note the group in which he wants to take part on a special pre-registration card.

Topics to be discussed include, how American colleges can best serve the foreign student, implications of projected increases in college enrollment for organizational patterns of higher education, the meaning of the increasing activity of the federal government in higher education, meeting the student's financial problems realistically, improvement of student health facilities, and the community's effect on the college student.

Dr. Lynn T. White, president of Mills college, will deliver the keynote address Friday afternoon. Banquets and informal entertainment will round out the conference schedule.

In addition to McFadden; delegates from the college will include AS Vice-President Louise von Emster, Alumni Liaison Officer Gerry Roth, Associated Women Student President Metta Weddleton, Publicity Chairman Denny Deiman, and Council members Debbie Rudser and Anne Smith.

Ike, Adlai Votes To Be Cast Early In Straw Ballot

By John Rosso

A straw ballot election will be held here next Wednesday, October 31, and Thursday, November 1, instead of the originally scheduled date of November 6, to give the Associated Students the opportunity to vote for their presidential favorite as well as AS constitutional amendments, according to John Dudley, Election Commissioner.

Slated to appear on the ballot are two candidates: Dwight Eisenhower, candidate for the Republican party, and Adlai Stevenson, candidate for the Democratic party. Candidates from minority parties will not appear on the ballot, Dudley said.

Realizing that students should seize this chance to vote in the election, to make themselves heard to political leaders so they may work towards a better government for us in the future, Dudley urged all AS members to vote.

"It is not every day that college students are given the chance to record their views in national affairs, so they should not take this privilege lightly," Dudley said.

"It has been said," he added, "that a better informed public will take an active interest in national affairs, and this is one of the chances offered to college students, the public of tomorrow."

Ballots will appear on mimeographed sheets, on which voters will mark an X for their choice. They will be distributed throughout the campus at specially designated voting places.

Voting places are located at the silver pole and the second floor in the Science Building, the south entrance to the library, and at the north and south entrances to the cafeteria.

Students are requested to make their choice at the voting place, as the ballots cannot be removed from there, Dudley said.

Results of the election will be published in The Guardsman on Wednesday, November 7.

Members of a special committee appointed to count the votes are Elvera Steiner, Joan Finneran, Ellie Smith, Joan White, Robert Longston, Richard Mahnken, Bill Allen, Paula Villa, Ann Smith, Pat Chapman, Suzan Bellinger, and Debora Rudser.

Skyline New York Film Will Be Shown Friday

Skyline New York will be Friday's college hour film series presentation, and will be shown in S-136, according to Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor here.

This film shows views of New York's harbor, her towering skyscrapers, and the dazzling lights of Times Square, Devlin commented.

Following are films to be shown during future college hours: Discover Jamaica, November 2; Treasures of the Caribbean, November 9; Travel Royal and Majesty in the Air, November 16; Snow, November 30; and Beaver Valley, December 7.

AS Starts Proposition A Drive

YOUTH LEADERS—1956. President-Emeritus A. J. Cloud and four Associated Student officers gather under the newly added letters that spell Cloud Hall, one of two buildings added to the campus from funds voted in the 1948 School Bond issue. Standing behind Dr. Cloud are Louise von Emster, AS vice-president; Metta Weddleton, Associated Women Student president; Renee Olson, Head Yell Leader; Wayne McFadden, AS president, and Dwane Shippey, AS card sales chairman. And the man behind the camera was Ken Malino, 1952-53 Guardsman chief photographer and assistant managing editor, now with The San Rafael Independent-Journal.

Bumper Strips, Demonstrations To Be Utilized

By Carol Harris

Four committees to aid Proposition A, the $27,000,000 city school bond issue in the November elections have been organized by students here, according to Robert Varni, finance chairman.

The committees are delegated to issue bumper tags, arrange a car parade, public appearances and publicity. Co-chairmen of the committees are Louise von Emster, vice-president of the Associated Students, and Varni.

Bumper tag committee is composed of Jim Buckley and Gerry Roth. Purpose of this committee is to issue tags with "Vote for Proposition A" emblazoned across them to students and faculty for display on their cars.

Last Friday, during college hour, members of the various campus sororities and fraternities were on hand to place the tags on the bumpers of those who wished to use them.

Car parade committee includes Kathy Mulligan, Renee Olson, Debbie Rudseer, Paula Villa, and John Zevas. The committee plans to hold three car parades on Wednesday, October 31, Friday, November 2, and Saturday, November 3. Although a police escort will be provided, the parade will be limited to 12 cars so as not to interfere with traffic.

Serving on the public appearance committee are Phil Malnick and Nick Tarse. This committee will arrange public appearances which will give the members of Phi Rho Pi, honorary debate society under the sponsorship of Thomas Dutcher, an opportunity to speak before civic-minded groups on Proposition A.

Handling publicity for Proposition A here is the Publicity Committee with Denny Delman the chairman.

Bumper strips were prepared by students of the art department here, who are also working on posters for the college display cases, under the direction of William Eckert, advertising art instructor.

Sherwood Singer Featured At Frosh Ball Saturday Night

With Autumn Leaves as its theme, the annual freshman ball will be held from 9 p.m. until midnight in the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel this Saturday, October 27, according to Mike Monteith, freshman class president.

Featured will be the 12-piece orchestra of Steve Paul with vocalist Julie Mason of Don Sherwood's show, and a cutest couple contest later in the evening. Admission is by Associated Student card or five dollars without. Attire for the occasion will consist of suits for the men and cocktail dresses for the women, Monteith said.

"We have something different lined up in the way of contest prizes this year," Bill Driscoll, who is in charge of the cutest couple contest, announced. "In the past, we simply awarded a trophy to each member of the winning couple.

"This year we plan to accompany each trophy with an appropriate gift. As soon as the gifts and trophies are available, they will be displayed in a showcase on the south side of the Science Building."

Winners of the cutest couple contest are to be announced and prizes awarded approximately three-quarters of the way through the dance. Both members of each couple participating must be freshman AS card holders, Monteith emphasized.

Contesting couples will be rated according to how well they dance together, appearance, poise, and collegiate attitude. Jim Buckley, John Dudley, Louise Mowry, Tom Severson, and Metta Weddleton will act as judges.

Colorful floral displays, and numerous other decorations depicting the theme have been ordered and are to be arranged by the decoration committee which is composed of the following: Sonya Cohn, Henry Galla, Elise Laubscher, Kathy Mulligan, Carol Simpson, and Bob Walsh, Monteith added.

All Out Drive On To Sell AS Cards

Approaching the goal of 2,400, 2,347 Associated Student cards have been sold as of October 7, according to Dwane Shippey, AS card sales chairman.

In an all-out drive to reach the goal, Shippey is intensifying his efforts to meet with the requests of Bob Varni, who is relying on Shippey to supply him with additional funds to round out the budget requests of campus organizations.

"If the organizations requesting more money for their budgets would back the AS 100 per cent, they would receive, within reason, the money that was recently cut from their budgets," Shippey said.

Cost of an AS card is $5, a small price to pay, according to Shippey, for benefits and privileges that are numerous.

They are free parking in the college parking lot, free admission to all college home athletic games, and discounts offered by various bay area stores, and the right to vote in all AS elections.

Average cost, for those contemplating the purchase of a card, is roughly, five cents per day—the price of a coke.

Cards may be purchased at the student bank, located in Smith Hall, between the hours 8:45 to 11:10 a.m. and from 12:01 to 2:15 p.m.

Proposition A Would Cure Age Old Student Parking Problem

ONE TIME a good many years ago a student drove up to the college at 7:30 in the morning, and he found a parking place in time to attend his 8 o'clock class.

He was quite pleased with himself, of course, and considered it to be his lucky day. Although, as we previously stated, this occurred several years ago, finding a parking place so quickly was the exception rather than the rule.

However, it does not take a discerning eye to see the parking problem has not been solved and still remains with us today. Nor does it take a vivid or radical imagination to see that if something is not done in the near future, the problem will become greater as the years and the cars rolls along.

When asked what the greatest problem he encountered was while attending City College, an alumni from last semester replied, "Trying to find a place to park my car." Undoubtedly, there are many students currently attending the college who consider this to be one of their major problems, if not the paramount one.

Earlier in the semester, many students were using the vacated west campus as a convenient site to park their automobiles. However, the west campus is owned by the Public Utilities Commission. Two reservoirs are going to be constructed on the tract, and it now is classified automobile "persona non grata."

This leaves more than 5,200 enrolled daytime students with only the parking sites adjacent to Smith Hall and the men's gymnasium. These parking facilities are limited to serving a maximum capacity of only 600 automobiles. By simple mathematical deduction we can visualize the confusion which is ensuing. And it is!

Although the present parking facilities are restricted to members of the Associated Students, there are more than 2,200 AS members here this semester, and the previously visualized confusion was not over-emphasized. Scores of AS card holders have complained and are complaining that they are unable to obtain a parking place, even though they did purchase a card in hopes of finding one.

An excellent illustration of this confusion is the ingenious young man who was seen backing his automobile into the exit of the restricted faculty parking area in Cloud Circle. A campus police officer was stationed at the entrance allowing only faculty members and the physically handicapped to enter, so he contrived this means of beating the parking problem and the law.

CITY COLLEGE'S VERSION of a Used Car Lot, as visualized in 1941 by the above cartoon, illustrates that parking in the mud was not uncommon here in '41 because of inadequate parking facilities. Today, 15 years later, the mud is gone, but the inadequate student parking problem remains unsolved.

Undoubtedly, a student with such an acute faculty of cunning will go a long ways in some direction with or without a college education. But he will have to devise another method for solving his parking problems, for we are sure the necessary steps will be taken to prevent this from happening in the future by Campus Police Chief William Traynor.

Of course, the Board of Education and the faculty members of the college's administration are aware of the inadequate parking conditions here. However, their authority to provide a solution is restricted by lack of the necessary financial funds.

Evidently, Proposition A, the $27,000,000 school bond issue, is the only alternative, for it includes among equally vital city-wide school needs the mandatory funds for additional parking facilities at City College. This is only one of the close-to-home reasons why the Associated Students and the college's administration are urging its passage.

Therefore, because we believe it to be the only possible solution which will meet the college's present parking needs and its continual expansion, we, The Guardsman, encourage everyone to support Proposition A and "Vote Yes" when balloting on Tuesday, November 6.

The Bohemian

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

BIG men differing in political, economic and all fancy sounding ideals have looked their antagonists in the eye, spit in it, and then retreated behind a curtain of safety.

Dangers of a hot war are too hot to handle. Yet nasty remarks have to be hurled at the other side or they will think that they are winning the fencing match of sharp words.

Little men, either luxuriously set up in important locations on the globe or holed up in obscurely recognized places have to keep the threatening atom ball swinging by stirring up things to argue about. This keeps the big boys back home happy.

Times are dull; no diplomatic drinking parties taking place. Everyone is busy trying to plug up those dam affairs in the East. Something better happen soon, or the home office will think this bureau is doing a lousy job.

If no substantial report is sent this month, the whisky and cigarette rations will be sharply cut. Worse yet, a secretly sent message expressing urgency will forward bad news. Dreadful news, maybe a transfer to some obscure place where social activities are nil, and the finer things in life are nonexistent.

Orders from the home office: "Find something to raise a fuss about soon, but be discreet about it. Nothing too drastic. Temperature of situations must be kept below freezing point. Big arguments may lead to unwanted kindling of real hot affair between this state and the one of your temporary residence. Be careful!"

Oh, shades of "persona non grata," there goes that reference to temporary residence again! That rings with the warnings of being sent back home.

Not now, just when the acclimatization is in top notch form. The servant has finally learned how to mix a decent drink and to keep away from the file cabinet, where the extra cartons are stored. Besides, the abrupt change of climate would be murder.

Things are at a standstill. All this immunity lying around and not a single use for it. Displeasure has to be expressed somehow after that last sharp cut they gave us.

Time to send the little woman out to do her shopping. If that won't raise trouble, nothing will.

Art Major Here To Exhibit Paintings

Influenced by Rembrandt, Kenn Davis, art major here, has sketched and painted his way toward his second one-man art exhibit to be held November 1-30 at Artists Cooperative at Union and Fillmore Streets.

On display at the exhibit will be a collection of oils and drawings numbering about 25 each. Davis, painting predominantly dark shades, takes out the original setting and puts in one of his own making. He describes this process as "imaginative extension."

Davis began studies here in 1951 and remained for two years until he was called into the service. He returned for a semester and then took a leave of absence for one and a half years.

Back again, Davis remarked, "The art courses at the college equal, if not surpass, the courses of any college in the United States, including the University of California and Stanford." During the time he has been here, Davis has served as art editor of the annual literary magazine, Forum.

"There!" triumphantly exclaimed the editor, as a bullet shattered the window and buried itself in the typewriter, "I knew that was a successful editorial."

Shots At Ramdom

ONE of the major deterrents of inter-planetary flight is the inability of human beings to stop from blacking out. A student in astronomy gets dizzy every time the instructor revolves the similated celestial bodies. Imagine, not even off the ground yet and this poor fellow's blacking out!

Smith Twins Are Prominent In Activities

THOUGH NOT identical twins, confusion remains with reference to the Smith twins, Eleanor (left) and Anne (right), or are they?, are both active in student government. —Guardsman photo by Richard Mahnken.

Red-Heads Show Individuality By Different Dresses

By Carol Harris

Which twin has the Toni? Don't ask Anne and Eleanor Smith, for although they are look-alike twins, it's been a long time since either has had a Toni.

Both liberal arts majors in their third semester, Anne and Eleanor have resided in Northern California for only a year, having come from Southern California.

The "Which Twin Has the Toni" quip is just one of the many vexations one has to face when being a twin. "One of the biggest problems connected with being a twin," they both commented, "is mistaken identity. For that reason we have stopped dressing alike."

One incident of mistaken identity which stands out in both their minds occurred during a picnic the twins were attending when they were approximately four years of age.

Having finished lunch, both went to stand in line to receive the free ice cream which was being dished out, Eleanor being at the head of the line, and Anne near the tail-end. When Anne finally reached the head of the line, the woman giving away the ice cream looked, looked again, looked a third time and announced, "Go away, little girl. You can't have any more ice cream; you've already had yours."

It took both Anne and Eleanor to convince her they were actually twins, and Anne wasn't trying to cheat her out of another free ice cream. Perhaps the old saying about twins is true; Oh pity the twin who comes last. She always has to bear the brunt for the other.

Student activities claim a good deal of their time here. This semester Anne is a sophomore council representative, and Eleanor was one of the winners of the Associated Student card sales contest for being the woman with the highest number of cards sold.

Upon graduation from the college, they hope to leave for the east and enroll either in Mary Washington College for Women or College of William & Mary.

Memory Lingers On Though Pain Flees As Sam Recalls Mid-Term Blue Books

While an antiquated K-car slammed and clanged its way toward Twin Peaks Tunnel one day last week, Sam blurted out his troubles.

It seems that lately he had been counting blue books in his sleep and was willing to give almost anything to go back to counting sheep like a normal human being. He gave several colorful illustrations of ways to fill the blank pages, but dismissed them quickly, saying that his instructors were "always right and he wasn't" and they "failed to share his unique sense of humor."

He pointed out to his companion that blue books and their blues haunted him night and day and he only found consolation in the title of a current hit tune, It Only Hurts For A Little While, to which he added bitterly, "And after that, who cares?"

When Sam had finished feeling sorry for himself, he began a more lengthy comparison between mid-terms and a definite fluctuation in the national economy.

Cigarette sales zoomed upward during exam week, he pointed out. Reader's Digest would soon begin a series on No-Doze Pills: New Threat to Youth, and certainly the coffee prices would be boosted. Yes, America's businessmen were making money "hand over fist," while poor Sam and his colleagues were knocking themselves out.

Perhaps you also will find consolation in Sam's favorite song, It Only Hurts For A Little While, without his added comment. Put away your blue books and your blues until next time.

Ram Soccer Team Defeats Indians In League Start, 4-0

Taking an early lead in the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference, the college booters won their opener, defeating Stanford, 4-0, on October 13 at Balboa soccer stadium.

A non-conference game with Modesto will be played in the valley city this afternoon, and this Saturday the Rams will meet Santa Clara at Balboa Stadium, with game time set for 10 a.m.

It wasn't until after 30 scoreless minutes had been played that the Rams' forward line, led by inside-left Toni Quiteno, displayed good control of the ball, better passing, and combined these neatly to break up the Indians' strong defensive line.

Joaquin Rodriguez, inside right, booted in the Rams' first goal with a well placed 13 yard shot.

Center half Ivan Carrilio, left halfback Al Morales and fullback Ray Davis' defensive work stood out with that of goalkeeper Pastor Valle, according to Coach Roy Diederichsen.

Fifteen minutes after the game's second half had started, the Rams scored the second goal, as center forward Herb Weiss dribbled around Stanford's full back line to get away a shot that went into the net's right corner.

A moment later, Quiteno, the college's inside left, caught up with a perfect pass from left wing Marini Harschel, to kick a 20-yard shot to put the third goal in the Ram's scoring list of the day.

The Ram team, inspired with its successful attack, doubled its efforts to keep Stanford away from the goal post. The forward line didn't let down, and with just a few minutes remaining in the game Weiss scored the fourth and last goal for City College against the tired Stanfords.

"Weiss, a newcomer from England, was just what we needed to make our offense a weapon, and Harschel's last-minute decision in joining the team means an important factor in our front line potency," Coach Diederichsen said of the game result.

Intramural Sports Events Underway

Intramural sports play in touch football and basketball has successfully begun in all physical activities classes, Jack Gaddy, head of the program here, recently announced.

Each class has been divided into squads, Gaddy said, and these squads are playing a round robin schedule. Toward the end of the semester a champion team from each instructor's class plays off for the hourly championship. In previous years, Gaddy added, the play-offs have gone on until a college champion intramural team has been chosen, but because of the time involved the competition ends with the hourly championships.

The golf classes are presently going to the golf range, where proper use of the irons is being taught, Gaddy added. Each student gets a bucket of practice balls and practices on the range. Later in the semester the class will go to Lincoln Park, where they will play a regulation 18 hole golf match, he stated.

The tennis team is doing much of the same, except they use the Balboa Park tennis courts. They are taught the fundamentals of forehand, backhand and volley shots. Most of the semester will be spent on perfection of these shots, but a tournament will take place to decide singles and doubles champions, Gaddy added.

Eddie Arcaro has ridden two Triple Crown winners, Whirlaway in 1941 and Citation in 1948.

Air-Minded Sacramento Tests Ram Ozone Defense Friday Afternoon In Key Contest For College Gridders

Sacramento, harboring an unenviable one win, three loss record, will probable give a good test to the Rams' pass-defense this Friday at Kezar Stadium, after the 2:30 p.m. kick-off.

In order to pass the test, the Rams must contain Panther quarterback Gomez Delgado, who has passed for two of the four Panther touchdowns, and brought the club close to the goal line on the other two. He scored one of the latter two himself to personaiiy account for 18 points.

Even though most touchdowns have come via air-mail, the capital city crew have an able ground game. This may be attested to due to the fact the Sacramento team out-gained both San Mateo and Oakland in total offense though being on the short end of 15-6 and 21-7 scores.

Considering the yardage gained, the Sacramento team can prove one of the toughest in the league, if they convert this yardage into scores.

Obviously, the Sacramentans are able to get deep into the territory of the enemy but can't run the ball over. This is where Delgado shines. His pitches to ends Ardell Hamilton and John Lane, and halfbacks Jim Burroughs and Bill Craft have proved effective so far.

Other backs on the Panther team who have played well thus far are: Manford Beals, Frank Marek, and Linous Allen. Twelve of the 38 players on the roster are veterans, so the Panthers have enough experience to coincide with the newcomers.

Previous to the two Big Eight losses, the Panthers were overwhelmed by Santa Monica 32-0, and emerged victorious over American River by a 14-7 margin.

Coach Grover Klemmer of the Rams is having injury trouble here. If one of three fullbacks, Bob Atkins, Bill Rathbun, and Sam Rios is unable to play, the mentor may switch Jerry Dillard to this position while Dave Tyree moves into the left half spot.

Another change may find Ernie Ibarra at the tackle position for the ailing Al Shelton. The injury list is not too long, but seems to fall at vital positions.

Sam Snead has won every major golf title in the United States with the exception of the U. S. Open.

A Short Essay On The Cons Of Stadium Fans

By Mike Berger

HOW many times have you seen it?

No sooner get your seat for the game when some gal walks in front on her first trip down under, or maybe some fan (normaliy a sane sort, but on game days nuthin' but a tush) feels the urge for a nice cool bottle of you name it.

This guy hasn't come to see the game. How can he possibly watch while he's so busy passing money and beer back and forth? Once he gets enough of the beer down, he doesn't see anything no how, so he's actually paid his three or four bucks to do something it's just as simple to accomplish, at home, and without cover charge.

To get back to our character, though, did you ever notice that this is the guy who knows every player in person, and is right on the spot with up-to-the-minute predictions on just what is going to happen? An amazing quality, since his predicted line plunge went off just as planned, only in the modified form of a punt.

For the sake of simplicity, we'll name our friend Joe, then we won't be offending anyone in particular.

If Joe ... at the game for any sound football reason, it is to act as Supreme Court Justice on all moves by the quarterback. Just let the poor guy make one miss-call and BOY, is he the biggest, hair-brained bum Joe ever saw. At least until the quarterback tosses a 50 yarder two players later.

Never has one man been called so much by so little.

Joe comes back at the start of the season to boo the guy who had a rotten season last year; you see he just found out about it yesterday. The player may be an All-American, tough break that it is, but Joe "remembers" that miserable tackle in the big game last year. Joe's insults only enrage those around him, because the players couldn't hear him (or care less) if his leather lungs were the size of medicine balls. Perhaps it's best to let Joe drink and yell and hope that his saturation point (which he probably left at home) is reached by half-time.

Sometimes even more irritating than Joe are the unseen boys who start the 60 minute roll of beer cans under your seat. This can be fun, though, for with all the kicking one does, it's almost like being in the game.

We really pity the poor slob who gets stuck in the same row with a bunch of eaters, the folks who haven't had a square meal since Grant took Richmond, and do they ever love hot dogs.

The greatest knee-wearing machine in the world is the thousands of people who move endlessly by on their way to the concession stand or other parts of the stadium.

Of course, the potential coronary cases, who pound your back on exciting plays as though it was their mother-in-law, can turn a guy into the first animal case for Dr. Scholl's back pads in no time at all. Add to this type the fellas who don't pound, they simply lean one way or the other (depending on which way the play is going), leaving you with an excellent view of your neighbor's patella. These people are the friends of chiropractors everywhere.

The real tragedy of these pests comes at the end of the game, when (after they are informed of the final score), some friends have the weekly job of assisting them from the field.

We've seen greater cases of shock leave football stadiums than auto accidents, and without blood, yet—externally, that is.

Actually, these obnoxious folks are in the minority, or they wouldn't be so conspicuous, but we sometimes wish that their kind could be parked on a stool for three hours instead of the seat next to us.

College Footballers Awaken In Final Half, Bury Oakland, 25-7, With Explosive Scoring Show

By Mike Berger

An up-and-down Ram team followed a lethargic first half with an explosive final 30 minutes Friday to level the Oakland Thunderbirds, 25-7, at Kezar Stadium.

After a scoreless half, the troops of Grover Klemmer roared back with three touchdowns in the third period and another in the fourth to swamp the Thunderbirds under a second half avalanche of points.

The Rams broke the ice with 3:46 gone in the third quarter when halfback Jerry Dillard bulled his way for three yards and a touchdown. The tally culminated a 41 yard, six play scoring drive. Quarterback John Panagakis' kick was blocked, and the score stood at 6-0.

On the fourth play following the next kickoff, speedster Gene Craft picked off an Oakland toss by Earl Norwood, broke free from two tacklers and raced away from everybody to score a 55-yard interception return for another TD. Panagakis' successful conversion upped the count to 13-0.

Scoring bombs continued to fall on Kezar, as the following kickoff was fielded by Buddy Allen, who reversed to Wayne Schneider, and then Schneider raced to the south sidelines and sprinted by all the Ram defenders on his way to an 85-yard touchdown jaunt.

Marv Andrade passed to Allen for the seventh point, and after 4:20 of the third period a trio of TD's had been scored, with the situation still in doubt at 13-7.

City College went on a long drive after the next bootoff, moving to the Thunderbird three, but a fourth down play failed to pick up the necessary yardage.

On the next play, much to the discouragement of Oakland, Allen fumbled and Pete Morgan recovered for the Rams on the two-yard line. Dillard scored his second touchdown of the night on the next play by smashing the required distance to paydirt. The conversion was again blocked, so the score remained at 19-7 at the end of the quarter.

After Oakland was unable to move the ball at the outset of the final chapter, Andrade punted out on the Rams' 25.

Mike Forrette, the third San Francisco signal-caller to see action, then proceeded to toss a perfect strike to end Leroy Thomas, who took the hide at the Oakland 35 and streaked the remaining distance of the 75-yard scoring play, long gainer of the evening. The low kick held the final score to 25-7.

Cage Practice To Start Soon; First Tilt November 30

Varsity basketball practice for City College will officially start on Thursday, November 1, Head Coach Sid Phelan recently announced.

This is in accordance with the ruling that no member of the conference will start basketball practice prior to November 1, Phelan stated.

Currently scheduled as the varsity's first practice game, the Rams will play San Jose on Friday, November 30, in the men's gymnasium here at 3:30 p.m.

League play for the Rams in the Big Eight Conference will start when they encounter the Santa Rosa Bearcubs on Wednesday, January 9, at 8:15 p.m. in Santa Rosa.

All men students who would like to try out for the varsity squad and have not signed up, Phelan added, are requested to sign up in the men's gymnasium as soon as possible.

Carroll Heads Block SF; Membership Drive On

A membership drive is now being conducted by the Block SF in an attempt to bring membership up to 100 per cent of those eligible, Bill Fischer, head coach of the college baseball team and the club sponsor, announced recently.

Listing of the Block SF officers was announced, and the officers are as follows: Franklin Carroll, president; Bob Gaddee, vice-president; and Gus Chofre, secretary-treasurer.

Schedule of the Block SF meetings was also released by Fischer. Meetings will take place on the following dates: November 2 and 16, December 14, and January 11 all Friday dates.

Taylor, Thomas Two Top 'T' Threats

RON TAYLOR, left, and Leroy Thomas, right, have been designated as the two T's in the Ram T-formation.—Guardsman photo by Dave Gehringer.

By Mario Cassulo

Ends Ron Taylor and Leroy Thomas have been designated as the prime targets for all passing this year in the Ram "T" (Taylor and Thomas) formation.

Both men are lettermen and Coach Grover Klemmer has been using the two as his first string flankmen. Klemmer believes that the two are "the best pair of ends in the Big Eight Conference."

Thomas, at 6-2 in height and weighing 185, is rangy in build and is the faster of the two, while Taylor, 6-0 in height and weighing 195, is more in the rugged and stockily-built vein.

Along with being good receivers, each of the two can play a better than average game of defense. Thomas, who also was on the college track team last season, is deceptive as well as fast, and Taylor represents a formidable figure on defense.

Their ability to excel in two of football's so-called "lost arts" has pleased Klemmer. "Their blocking and tackling is good along with their receiving," he commented. Although he declared that neither one is perfect and that both had "a lot of work to do," he indicated that both have a "great potential."

Klemmer praised "Taylor on his downfield blocking. Thomas, who has made some sparkling receptions in the last two games, also drew his share of the accolades.

With John Panagakis as a passing threat and the receiving of Taylor and Thomas, it is hoped the opposing defense will spread out and give the Ram running attack a better chance to move on the ground.

It is Klemmer's further desire that the two "T's" not only harass the opposing defensive secondary with their pass catching antics, but that they may open up the middle for the backs by going deep for long throws.

Police Receive Reinforcements For Traffic Duty

Since the beginning of the semester, traffic control of the campus parking problem has been at a minimum, for the Campus Police force only had ten officers at work, but with the addition of 15 members appointed as Special Police Officers of the San Francisco Police Department by Chief Francis J. Ahern on October 22, more control and coverage may be anticipated, Fred Fitzgerald, criminology department instructor, disclosed yesterday.

After completing a six-weeks training program, the new campus police officers were ordered to duty yesterday and will be fully patrolling the campus during every college day. Citation books have been issued to the new men, and law enforcement will be stepped up, Fitzgerald said.

College students, as well as members of the college's faculty, are reminded to adhere more closely to the parking regulations; the parking facilities are limited and when parking in new areas, cars are not to be parked on any part of paved roadways. Up to date, citations have come to a six-a-day average, Fitzgerald announced.

The new members of the campus police are Robert Ford, Lionel Hess, John Montgomery, Raymond Nielsen, Roy Panelli, Michael Rokitianaky, Marion Timm, Scott Webb, Bert Witte, Barry Wysling, Herman Huppert, William Sweeney and Fred Plough.

Two pistol teams have been formed, Fitzgerald said, and already have competed in the Western Revolver Association police matches at the Oakland Pistol Club in Knowland Park, Oakland, on October 7.

The first team with William Trayner as team's captain, James Keane, Raymond Nielsen and Ralph Brown, took third place in the competition.

The second team, composed of Julius Karp, team's captain, Robert Ford, Robert Sorbi and Robert Stettle, ended up in fifth place. Both teams scored a 250 point average out of a possible 300 in the marksman class in the Camp Perry scoring system.

Plans are now under way to compete against San Jose State College Police School, and November 16 has been set as a tentative date. Another meeting, this time with Sacramento State College Police School's pistol team, will probably take place on November 25.

October 30 Last Day To File Charters With CAB

Doors close for clubs and organizations not having their charters turned into the Club Activities Board by next Tuesday, October 30, according to Lon Earnshaw, president of the CAB.

Failure to comply with regulations and lack of attendance have led the CAB to recommend to the Student Council that those organizations be declared off-campus. This policy, Earnshaw said, went into effect October 24.

College Debaters Have First Event

First event on the calendar of the college debate team this semester calls for the team to compete at St. Mary's College, Oakland, November 2 and 3, according to Thomas Dutcher, faculty adviser.

The debate at St. Mary's College will be a "closed corporation," that is, limited to the universities and colleges in the northern half of the state.

Some of the other participating colleges include San Jose State, San Jose Junior College, Modesto Junior College, Chico State, College of the Pacific in Stockton, Stanford University and San Francisco State.

At present, the team numbers eight, but as the semester progresses Dutcher expressed the hope that the team would expand as in past years.

A veteran debater, Pat Mahoney, is in charge of the debate team. Besides being debate chairman, Mahoney is also the holder of last year's trophy.

It was pointed out by Dutcher that the team covered 5,000 miles last year in its participation in different debates. The different assignments took the team as far south as Los Angeles and north almost to Portland.

Seven Women Compete Here For Homecoming Queen Title

Seven women are currently competing for the title of Homecoming Queen who will reign over the Homecoming activities, November 8 and 9, according to Norman Durieux, president of the Associated Men Students.

Those seeking the title are Patricia Chapman, Darlene Enfield, Shirley Hegel, Marcia Herrlin, Roxena Roloff, Elvera Steiner, and Paula Villa.

A preliminary judging was held yesterday, with the final judging scheduled for tomorrow. Judging will be on the basis of beauty, poise, personality, and typical college appearance and appeal.

A special bonfire rally, Durieux stated, will be held on Thursday, November 8, for the purpose of announcing and crowning the winner and her four attendants. Prizes totaling $50 will be distributed among the five women.

Homecoming activities this semester will not include the traditional Alumni Association dinner, which will be held prior to these activities.

Events scheduled for Homecoming include a car parade from the college to Kezar Stadium prior to the Ram-San Mateo football game on Friday, November 9. Trophies will be presented to the three best decorated cars.

Homecoming dance, which will be held Friday evening from 9 to 12 midnight in the Rose Room of the Sherman-Palace Hotel, will climax the activities. At this time the queen will be presented with her trophy.

Featured will be the band of Sal Karson, which includes a vocalist. Karson, who specializes in Latin American music, has played successful engagements at such places as the Capitol Inn at Sacramento, New Frontier Hotel at Las Vegas, and Fack's in San Francisco.

Associated Student members will be admitted to the dance free while a charge of $6 per couple will be made to non-AS members.

Today Deadline For Submission Of Proposed Amendments; Balloting Set For Two Days Starting Oct. 31

Deadline date on which proposed amendments are to be submitted to the Student Council is today, October 24, and the dates on which Associated Students are to vote in the election is Wednesday, October 31, and Thursday, November 1, Jim Kennedy, chairman of the Constitutional Committee, announced.

Seven additional proposed amendments to the constitution were submitted to the Student Council for acceptance last Thursday, October 18, he added.

Expecting from 16 to 20 amendments to be placed on the ballot, Kennedy set this date to facilitate the process of posting them for the study of the students.

If accepted, the total amendments to the constitution will be 16, along with the nine received last October 9, Kennedy said.

The proposed amendments accepted included an amendment stating that candidates for any office must have and maintain a 2.0 grade point average; an amendment stating that members of the Student Council must maintain a 2.0 grade point average to stay on the council; an amendment stating that any elective officer on the cabinet of the AS president must maintain a 2.0 grade point average to stay in that office; an amendment granting the AS president power to appoint any officer; two amendments stating that candidates for the offices of AS president and vice-president must have no less than 45 units and no more than 60 units respectively.

Two amendments state that candidates for the office of President of the Associated Women Students and President of the Associated Men Students must have no less than 30 units and no more than 60 units, respectively, and one amendment states that candidates for the office of Freshman President must have no less than 15 units and no more than 30 units when applying.

Proposed amendments that were submitted last week were one granting the Inter-Sorority Council equal power to the Club Activities Board and the Inter-Fraternity Council; an amendment to the effect that the CAB shall have control of campus clubs; an amendment stating that the ISC and the IFC shall send a representative to the Student Council as a liaison officer; an amendment to change course requirements of the Student Council; an amendment, to be placed in the by-laws of the constitution, to delete the parliamentarian from the cabinet of the AS president and make his position an appointive one, in line with Robert's Rules of Order; an amendment requiring that newly appointed members take an oath of office to the AS, and an amendment stating that sophomore members of the council shall have not more than 60 units undertaken to become a candidate.

Petitions For Dropping Courses Due October 31

Last day to file petitions to drop a course is next Wednesday, October 31, according to John Brady, dean of Student Welfare.

Requirements for dropping a course provide that the student has not taken more than the maximum number of unexcused cuts in the class, or the equivalent of the number of times the class meets a week, and also that a student is not assigned an F grade in the course.

Before a student stops going to a class, he should see his counsellor, get a drop slip and have it signed by the instructor concerned, Brady said.

Junior Chamber Of Commerce To See IRC Variety Show

A variety program of foreign entertainment will be presented to the San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce tomorrow, October 25, by the International Relations Club, Joseph Jacobsen, club sponsor, recently announced.

On the evening of Friday, October 26, the IRC Halloween costume ball will be open to both members and guests. It will be held at the YMCA in Stonestown, and prices will be 50 cents for club members and $1 for guests.

Later plans include the International Fair to be held at Aptos Junior High Auditorium Friday, November 16.

With an active membership of approximately 130, the IRC continues to be the largest club on campus. The club is presently campaigning for members, and membership is open to both American and foreign students. An invitation is extended to all interested students to attend the weekly meetings in C-258.

The IRC is offering the opportunity to its members to learn foreign folk dances, taught by instructors who are students from the countries where the dances were developed. Lessons are given to the members Tuesdays and Thursdays in the women's gymnasium, Jacobsen stated.

Newly elected officers for the club are Emile Pavlov, president; Irene Menshikoff, vice-president; Soledad Comacho, recording secretary; Betty Ogilvie, corresponding secretary; Paul Chow, treasurer; Gayle Bornemann, historian; Parviz Arshad, sergeant-at-arms; Borwer Dimond, publicity, and Gayle Bornemann, CAB representative.

Denman Scholarship Applications Due

Deadline for women students here to make application in S-149 for the two annually awarded $125 Denman Scholarships is next Wednesday, October 31, according to Mary Golding, dean of women.

This award is presented to two women who are deemed qualified by a committee of educators, who make their choice on the basis of character, need, scholarship, and participation in college activities.

Judge William Denman and his sister, Mary Cheatham, initiated a trust fund for this scholarship in 1939 in memory of their father, the late James Denman, who was formerly superintendent of the San Francisco Unified School District.

Dean Golding stated that she is also now accepting applications for the Florence Louis Scholarship, the Theta Tau Alumnae Scholarship, and the Square and Circle Scholarship for a Chinese student.

Club Cavalcade: Greek Letter Groups Start Rushing

By Marilyn Gregory

STUDENTS have a glimpse of social activity here this week with the start of campus club and organization first and second "affairs."

Now that rushing is finally under way, the Inter-Sorority Council is busy working on their plans for presents. It will be held Saturday, December 8, in Smith Hall.

Phi Beta Delta held their first rushing affair Monday, October 22, at Veneto's restaurant. On Sunday, October 28, the second affair will be held at John Ross' home. Prospective pledges are invited to this drag picnic.

Beta Phi Beta held a business meeting at Earl Fuller's house recently. Plans for the second affair were discussed along with the traditional golden slippers dance. The dance will be held January 25 in the Empire and Monterey rooms of the Sir Francis Drake Hotel.

Theta Tau sorority has held two work meetings to prepare for firesides. The cake sale to raise funds was termed a success.

Kappa Phi held a joint meeting last night with Beta Tau. Plans for the first affair, Monday, October 28, and the Chinese dinner are keeping the sorority sisters busy.

New officers for the Block SF this semester are Frank Carrol, president and CAB representative; Bob Guddee, vice-president; and Gus Chofree, secretary and treasurer.

The Christian Science Organization welcomes all interested students and faculty members to their testimonial meetings, held on Thursdays at 3:15 p.m., at 124 Eastwood Drive.

At their last business meeting recently, Beta Tau started plans for their annual dance, the Mistletoe Mingle. Also plans for their second pledge affair, a banquet this Sunday, October 29, were brought up to date.

A meeting of Alpha Kappa Rho was held last Monday, at Jerry Redford's house. Plans for a Hawaiian affair to be held November 3 were discussed.

Alpha Lambda Chi will hold all further business meetings during college hour. At a recent meeting, plans for fireside and the second affair were brought up for discussion.

Zeta Chi held a fireside last night at Wynnelle McCarthy's house. There were many pledges getting a glimpse of a sorority affair.

All members of the Chinese Students Club are invited to an afternoon and evening of entertainment at the club's annual house party at 429 Webster Street.

Deadline for all club news is Wednesday at 12 o'clock in The Guardsman office, S304.

Vote Tuesday Decides School Fate

Yes On School Bonds A Boost To Nation's Wealth, Power

IT APPEARS to be rather ironic, this race between our neighbors and ourselves to see who can develop the bigger and better bombs and the most impregnable safeguards against those bombs.

For while billions of bucks in taxes are being spent devising manifold methods for busting a person's body, our true source of wealth and power, that of learning and knowledge, is being neglected because of inadequate finances.

Certainly it is true the best defense is a hard hitting offense, as every football coach will verify. If not for human frailty, then the world situation today necessitates the maintaining of a strong military potential. This is itself self-evident.

But being frustrated by visualizations of possible eventualities, we forget that the biggest paleolithic club was replaced by a sling shot, bows and arrows were obsolete with the addition of guns and powder to warfare's arsenal, and that it was through increased knowledge that these advancements, whether rightly or wrongly applied, were made.

While scampering along in this race for better bombs, we neglect to discern this, our true source of wealth and power. As a befuddled youth who overlooks the girl next door, and stumbles after a buxom blonde, is rebuked and left bemoaning his plight, so we try to scale the fence while the gate stands ajar.

This is the gate of learning and knowledge. This is the way by which all progress is made. And this is the only way by which any progress can be made, whether it be in the form of offensive and defensive warfare, government, moral discernment, or any other.

Certainly then in the United States, the richest country in the world, the best education facilities in the world should be available in order to develop the nation's potential wealth and power to the utmost.

However, in San Francisco, one of the richest cities in the United States, overcrowded school conditions are as common as the common cold. This is not an unknown fact, and previously some primary steps were taken to ward it off.

In 1948 a school bond issue of $48,000,000 for the erection of 35 building projects was approved by San Francisco voters. Of these planned projects, 32 are now completed, with the remaining three scheduled for completion in 1957.

When the '48 bond issue was presented to the voters, the Board of Education specified the proposed expenditure would only be sufficient for approximately five years. Increased enrollment in schools was expected because of the higher birthrate in more recent years and because today children tend to remain in school longer. Enrollment figures here verify the accuracy of this prediction.

Proposition A, the $27,000,000 school bond issue before the voters next Tuesday, is the second bond issue, designed for the next five years. When Proposition A was formulated, allowances for decline in future enrollments and shifting of school populations were considered.

As was previously shown, inadequate education facilities weaken our national defense. It also undermines the structure of democracy, which is built upon the intelligent voting capacity of the plurality of its citizens. In reality, we cheat ourselves when we cheat the child by placing him in overcrowded classrooms, for he is the citizen, the voter, and the leader of tomorrow.

Therefore, as San Francisco voters, we, The Guardsman, invite you to join us in reaching the only feasible conclusion on Tuesday, November 6, by supporting and voting "Yes on Proposition A."

Proposition A Passage Paves Way To Educate Influx In SF Population

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

City-wide campaigning for passage by voters of Proposition A, the $27,000,000 school bond issue recently endorsed by the Mayor of San Francisco, the Citizens' Bond-Screening Committee, and the Board of Education, has been meeting with favorable results, according to Louis G. Conlan, college president.

Conlan heads the Citizens' Bond Committee, working in conjunction with a school department committee, the Parent Teachers Associations and various labor and civic organizations in an effort to convince the voters of the significance of this proposition.

PRESIDENT LOUIS G. CONLAN.

With the enrollment trend reaching such heights that in four years hence, by 1960, the college will need facilities to accommodate at least 7,500 students, President Conlan points to Proposition A as an essential, vital need if the college is to continue effective educational service to the city.

Students here are playing a major role in sparking the drive. The Citizens' Committee has asked the college to organize a parade today, demonstrating student participation. Student Council has formed a committee and campus organizations have joined forces in campaigning.

Part of the apportionment, an estimated $2,500,000 is expected to go toward improving and adding facilities to the college, which, administrative officials point out, is slowly showing signs of suffering a lag in keeping up with onrushing demands, partly brought on by increased enrollment pressure.

The general purpose for the $27,000,000 allocation is twofold: to provide new city schools and additions to existing schools to meet present and future needs, and to modernize older buildings.

A main problem facing the supporters of the bond issue is that of sufficiently and successfully informing the public as to the current necessity of improved educational facilities, President Conlan stated.

The local press has already expressed its backing of this proposal for the modernization of schools. The need, campus bond committees said, for the complete endorsement of such a bond will reach the public's ears and eyes through radio and television programs and other advertising media.

Investigation of previous similar school bond issues will bring to attention the fact that they are not easy to pass. At election time, they usually suffer negative voting reaching such totals as 40,000 no votes.

In view of this trend of substantial opposition regarding the allocation of needy school funds, Conlan urged all students to support their drive, and declared his hope that they realize that the successful passage of bond issues requires a two-thirds majority of affirmative votes.

College Stands To Gain Six-Point Program From Yes On Prop A

If Proposition A is passed, this program will be realized here:

1. General classrooms, little theater, art and music laboratories and offices. This unit will be located immediately to the north of the Science Building and Cloud Hall.

2. Classrooms, auxiliary library and study areas and offices. These are to be located to the west of Smith Hall.

3. Additions to the men's and women's gymnasiums.

4. Conversion of certain classrooms into laboratories.

5. Development of multipurpose outdoor physical education facilities with bleachers.

6. Parking, landscaping, roads and paths and other architectural improvements.

Three Parades Scheduled To Encourage Affirmative Vote

By Carol Harris

Three student car parades, the first of which will take place today, have been planned here to tour the city and encourage a yes vote on Proposition A, the $27,000,000 school bond issue, Robert Varni, finance chairman, announced last week.

The two successive parades will follow on Friday, November 2, and Saturday, November 3.

Scheduled to participte in these parades are the Inter-Fraternity Council, Inter-Sorority Council, and the Club Activities Board. A police escort will be provided for each parade, which will be limited to 12 cars because of traffic conditions. As of press time, the exact route had not yet been ascertained.

A total of four committees has been formed to aid Proposition A. Working closely with Varni as co-chairman of these groups is Louise von Emster, vice-president of the Associated Students.

Each committee has a specific task to perform. The bumper tags committee issues Proposition A strips for display use on car bumpers, while the car parade committee is in charge of the parades to be held.

The public appearance committee arranges for students from the college to speak on Proposition A before civic groups. All publicity connected with Proposition A, including press, radio, and television, is being promoted by the publicity committee.

In addition to these groups, art students here, under the direction of William Eckert, are making posters for the college display cases and have prepared the bumper strips.

Petitions For Dropping Courses Set For Today

Petitions to drop courses must be turned in no later than today, according to John Brady, dean of student welfare here.

A student may not file if he has taken more than the maximum number of unexcused cuts for the course, and therefore has been assigned an F grade, Brady stated. If a student files, he must see his counselor to get a drop slip, and then have it signed by the instructor concerned.

Newmans Slate Dance On Friday

With the theme of Moonglow, the Newman Club will sponsor its annual dance Friday, November 2, in Smith Hall from 9 p.m. to midnight, Sal Abbate, vice-president of the organization, recently announced.

Music for the dance will be by Maurice Walohan, Abbate said. There will be no restrictions as to who may attend. Tickets, priced at $1 a couple and 75 cents stag, are being sold at the door and by some of the club members on the campus.

Head of ticket sales are Abbate, Marilyn Alvarado, and Sue Richards. Dress for the dance will be sport, Abbate added.

The dance committee includes President George Galvin; corresponding secretary, Sue Richards; treasurer, Laura Portillo; recording secretary, Marilyn Alvarado; sergeant-at-arms, Pat Lucy; Diana Wills, Jerry McAsy, Stan Pudlo, Mike Myer, Donna Simpson, Carol Devine, and Jim Ginella, Abatte said.

Decorations, Abbate said, will be in accordance with the season and with the theme, Moonglow.

Veteran Reports Due In Early; Nov. 2 Deadline

Veterans must fill out their monthly report blanks between today, November 31, and Friday, November 2, in the Dress for the dance will be sport, Abbate added. veterans affairs office, S-134, according to Robin Dunn, assistant in charge of veteran affairs here.

The usual deadline of the fourth day of the month was charged because this date in November falls on a weekend. Veterans who have dropped units during this period may expect a delay in their subsistence payments, Dunn warned.

Dunn stressed the importance of veterans maintaining their attendance because of the emphasis placed thereon by the Veterans Administration.

Art Students Create Big E Display

Work on a colorful window display at the downtown Emporium last week, in conjunction with Proposition A, provided three ambitious art majors here with invaluable on-the-job experience, according to William J. Eckert, advertising art instructor.

Arrangements for window space for the display were made through Walter Rowley, Emporium display director, who offered encouragement and suggestions as he supervised both planning and installation. Rowley, with the aid of Janet Mowll, Marcel Guilliams, Chuck Mullen, and James Stettler, worked out the details. However, Stettler was unable to go because of a conflict in his class schedule.

The display was set up on October 26, and will remain until this Friday, November 2.

Center of attraction is a giant-sized red letter A, designed by Winston Chin and made of plywood. Constructed and painted by student carpenters in the shops here, the A is seven feet tall, five feet wide, and one foot in depth, weighing nearly 75 pounds.

Featured in the display is a desk with two manikin children provided by the Emporium.

Photography work makes up part of the background with a series of pictures generally emphasizing a need for added classrooms and other improvements directly related to the bond issue. These pictures, 16 by 20 enlargements, were made and placed on mounting boards in the college photo lab by Beverly Pasqualetti, instructor, with the help of his staff.

Vote Yes On Amendment 22 To Facilitate Council Efficiency

ALTHOUGH it will slightly increase the amount of time and work involved for council members, we, The Guardsman, sincerely feel the passage of amendment 22 and thus the addition of it to the constitution of the Associated Students in the election held today and tomorrow would greatly enhance the efficiency of Student Council.

In an effort to alleviate the present inefficient system of investigating and cutting budget requests which was recently revealed in this space, an editorial was condensed into the form of this amendment 22.

If the amendment is approved at the polls, in the future all elected council members will automatically be members of the Finance Committee, which will be directed by the Finance Chairman. Working in groups, committee members will investigate and make adjustments in original budget requests before relaying them to the Finance Chairman, who will continue to review each budget prior to submitting it to council for final ratification.

Of course, this procedure will lighten the present overburdening task of the Finance Chairman, for he will have some help in reviewing the original budget requests. However, the major advantage will be that Student Council will have first hand knowledge concerning the budgets which they are responsible for approving.

A few council members will be familiar with each of some 36 budgets, which are submitted every semester. Therefore, they will more readily be able to discern what additional cuts, if any, could possibly be made in budgets because of insufficient Associated Student funds.

As budget proceedings now stand, valuable Student Council time is devoted to unenlightening debates between organization representatives and council members concerning additional budget cuts. During these temper-flaring moments of debate, council members are expected to gain an insight into budget problems, which of course is an impossibility without first hand knowledge.

After fifteen minutes of logical persuasion, Student Council members proved their willingness to facilitate student government here by unanimously approving amendment 22 for consideration to the AS voters, who will make the final decision in the current amendment election.

Certainly if this procedure is adopted and enforced by a strong-willed Finance Chairman, Student Council members will be better able to represent the electorate sincerely, for they will be somewhat familiar with the budgets which they are debating about. This will, of course, increase the power of the council, for in the allocation of the Associated Student funds lies the power.

However, only with the support of you, the AS voter, can this advancement in student government be made. Therefore, The Guardsman urges you to "Vote Yes On Amendment 22 Today!"

Prop A Solves Expansion Here

College Alumni Dads Team With Students In Bond Drive; Issue Is Designed For 2000 More In 1960

By Kai Kristoffersen

If City College continues to grow in years ahead as it has in the past 20 years, it should have from 7,500 to 8,000 students enrolled by 1960—four years hence.

The college has come a long way since it opened in 1935 with an enrollment of 1,500 students and a faculty of 80. Through the next five years as many as 25 buildings in all parts of the city provided classrooms for the rapidly-expanding college. And from its early struggles for recognition, it has grown into one of the finest two-year colleges in the nation.

Enrollment has risen and fallen through the years. It reached its lowest ebb in 1943 because of war. Contrast [illegible] or even the original 1,500, with at present 5,280 day students and 1,277 attending evening courses. Compare the count of 80 instructors with the present figure of 240 daytime instructors and 35 evening instructors, and growth of the college becomes a stunning realization.

In 1964, the college is again expected to be "splitting its enrollment seams." Because then the "war babies" who are now struggling through primary and secondary schools throughout the nation, will descend upon colleges and universities in full force.

The problem of expansion was realized as far back as 1938, when Proposition 4 was submitted to the voters. To meet the crisis, the San Francisco Board of Education approved a building program to meet the growing needs of the college.

Acquisition of the 65-acre campus in Balboa Park marked the first step. And the first buildings, the Science Building and the men's and women's gymnasium were occupied in 1940.

Driving forces and inspiration of past and present were summed up aptly in a motto engraved over the entrance of the Science Building—The Truth Shall Make You Free.

Just as from the day of his inauguration Dr. J. J. Cloud led the fight for a single campus, so President Louis G. Conlan has worked unceasingly to develop that sight.

Alumni, 20,000 strong, have made their way through all phases of life as they have established themselves in the ranks of engineering, law, medicine, and other professions as well as many of the semi-professional fields.

One generation meets the next as fathers and sons strive to interest voters in the current bond issue, Proposition A, which is to provide two and one-half million dollars for the long sought fine arts building and additional music, art, and science laboratories.

These fathers and their sons have plenty to talk about concerning City College, then and now.

As colleges count their years, City College is young. It only recently celebrated its 21st birthday. But by the same token it's old enough for a young father to hold his young son up to view the scroll of scholars—the Alpha Gamma Sigma in the entrance hall—and point with pride to daddy's name as "one of the boys who made it."

The Bohemian

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

WHEN the Industrial Revolution revolted it broke the bounds of an archaic system of living, in which the efforts of thinking and acting had to be done by human beings. It really kicked up a lot of dust, and when it settled, it left machines in control of everything in an envirohment of smog.

Man invented the machines; they did not come about by spontaneous generation. Although many an intelect, synonym for one of the masses now, might believe that like generators produce like off-springs, this theory was proved false when it was found that generators don't discharge springs.

Two dominating factors can be noted as a result of this revolution, so unlike others in that it is still praised and no counter measures have been taken to crush it.

One is the unhalted rise to power of the female. This part of the dangers of the modernistic age we will not dispute, as yet. For it's no fun to go stag to the dances.

But words of offense and ire must be hurled at the other usurper of free men's actions. This one arose from the sparks of the Industrial Revolution. That is the mechanization which is here. It has complete control of the lives and wills of the fading reign of protoplasm. It rules the destinies of mankind.

In ancient days, the mere mention of such names as Ghenghis Khan, Attila, and the little fat corporal, Napoleon, brought much fear and respect from the multitudes of homogenized sapiens.

Now mankind has such respect for machines, that men have become its servants. We bow salaam by getting under their bellies, that of the machines, and by keeping them well nourished with barrels of oil and gasoline.

And who dares not fear the bomb, ovie poof and all is gone, fathered by that powerful daddy known as the cyclotron?

Nature has had to undergo changes to accommodate the new kingdom of the machines. Machines don't breathe in the same air as the living species. So in place of fresh air, which is harmful to them because it tends to form rust, these domineering instruments have mixed gases more congenial to their tastes. They work best in smog.

And so on, a list of complaints and warnings of the evils of the spreading rule of mechanization over humanity should be brought to light before we mortals lose our faculty of sight.

Yet, the gravest grievance against machines is that they tend to be unfaithful, untrustworthy and perfidious. Man, they're just plain crooked!

Last night, in desperate need of coffee and cigarettes, we poured our unsuspecting nickles and dimes in, and all that was returned was a mocking clunk. Frankie Machine is the only one who gave us a fair deal.

Music, Women Join Forces

Band Here Breaks Male Dominance Pattern For Concert Status Goal; Seven Women Presently Enrolled

Music and women—of the former the college band has always had plenty but was lacking in the latter until this semester.

Although one or two women have been members of the band in previous years, this semester they will be used extensively for the first time. Not only is the band being thrown open to women, but an appeal is being issued to get women to join.

One of the main reasons for this lack in the band was the pattern it tried to follow. When the band was first organized in 1940, it established the University of California band as its model, and in the following years tended to follow this pattern. Since any university band is predominantly male, City College followed suit.

Now, one may justifiably ask, if the college band has tried to pattern itself after the University of California band for these many years, why the sudden decision to utilize women?

The answer is that the band has changed its format. Instead of being a band which plays only at college games, its goal now is to become a concert band. To be able to do this the band must grow in both size and quality. Thus women are now being added.

When Meyer Cahn, director of the band, was asked what instruments, in his opinion, women were prone to play, he replied, "I don't know. We've never had many women in the band before, so it's all new to me."

He added that at the present time there are seven women active in the band. Of these, two play saxophone, three clarinet, and one the drum. A drum majorette is also included.

On Friday, November 30, this band, attired in uniforms of red coats and white trousers, will hold its first concert during college hour here on the campus. The band will also participate in the 22nd annual Christmas Concert to be held on Thursday, December 13.

Shots At Ramdom

By Lou Lucia

IN A RECENT Student Council meeting, Mike Monteith, Freshman Class president, announced that he needed some attractive help in the form of beautiful girls to fold dance bids for the freshman ball.

Dean Ralph Hillsman, asking for a point of clarification, wondered if male students were also considered to be qualified for the job. Monteith dejectedly answered that they would. Moral: There are two sexes to each side of the story.

TOP TO BOTTOM: A recent headline in a San Francisco daily read, "Indians Buy Two Padres." Don't start cleaning your musket, though, because it only meant that the Cleveland Indians baseball team bought two players from the San Diego nine.

CINDERELLA STORY: The queen of homecoming week will reign at a large palace. It will only be a one-night stand, though, as her majesty will reign at the Sheraton-Palace (Hotel) for the dance.

THERE'S ADVICE FOR YOU: Grayce Sanchez, an attractive redhead, took the advice of a recent story printed in The Guardsman concerning colds. The article recommended that the best way to cure a cold is to catch pneumonia, for it has a sure fire cure.

Miss Sanchez did just that, and is reportedly gunning for the writer who aided her quick recovery through pneumonia. Guess they just ain't growin' them grateful people no more.

DISTRUST GALORE: Most instructors separate students at least one seat apart during examinations. One person is rather disgruntled at this move and states, "A part of college education is moral training, so why can't we sit next to each other; besides, I'm short-sighted and can't read his paper from way over here.

Walking Skeletons Rattle The Skinned Humans On Halloween

This ghost and goblin stuff is just so much gobbledegook. In our modern scientific world no one actually believes in witches on broom sticks or walking skeletons (see below), or haunted houses, for all have been disproved a thousand times.

Of course the fact that bonfires are lighted in the hills of Scotland on Halloween proves only that people there are rich in custom, not that they are necessarily superstitious.

Symbols associated with Halloween in this country might create an aura of mock superstition but nothing that can be construed to be serious.

Displays tonight of black cats, jack-o'lanterns, skeletons and ghosts are not taken as indications that people here are superstitious; but who can explain that strange magic that takes hold of Halloween practical jokers resulting in all manner of pranks, trick-or-treat and the like.

Something unexplainable happens on this night to the youth of the land, not to mention the adults. They are possessed; some released force causes such irregular behavior as wearing masks, costumes, and attending parties where this attitude is shared by all.

Maybe the old superstitions handed down from generation to generation are not completely false after all, for everyone certainly seems to be bewitched, at least behaviorwise.

So before we discount the ancient legends, it might be advisable to observe just what consequences we suffer on this night of ghosts and goblins.

Rams Drop Panthers, 13-0

Aerial Circus Due Friday As Rams Meet Modesto

An aerial circus may take place this Friday night, at the City College team travels to Modesto for their Big Eight game against the Pirates, with the kick-off time scheduled for 8 p.m.

The reason for the speculation on the long gainer is accounted for by a weak Modesto secondary in three losses out of four games, and the delayed passing attack the Rams may have found through the right arm of Mike Forrette.

Pirate Coach Stan Pavko will probably use his two ends, Gary Bengston and Dick Miller, to a great extent. The tall but not rangy flankers are both 6'4" in height and weigh in over the 200-pound mark. With this length and poundage at ends, Pavko could either use them for blocking as halfbacks sweep the ends, which has proved successful thus far, or to tower over the defenders for pass catching.

Quarterback Emmett Lee is the top signal caller and halfbacks Andy Mizener, G. W. Wingo, and Don Jardine sweep the ends while fullback Dave Eckhoff tries for the short yardage.

Thus far into their schedule, Modesto lost to Long Beach 34-25, were on the short end of a 13-0 El Camino score, trampled West Contra Costa 20-7, and lost to Santa Rosa 26-7, and Stockton, 13-7.

In most of the contests, passes were prevalent either in the win or the defeat. If the defense of the Pirates is as weak as reputed Ron Taylor and Leroy Thomas could possibly have a field day.

Current Big Eight leader Stockton barely edged the Pirates by a 13-7 score last week. This may either show improvement on the part of the Modesto team or a decline in the Mustang spirit. The Rams no doubt hope it is the latter.

Beside this losing battle, the Pirates impressed against West Contra Costa with the defense a major factor in their only win. The Pirates held the Comets to 179 total yards while gaining 331 net yards themselves. Pacing the offense was Lee, Wingo, fullback Jaek Goodwin, Jardine, and Miller.

Signups Still Accepted For Basketball Squad

Signups for the varsity basketball team are still being accepted in the office at the men's gymnasium, according to Head Coach Sid Phelan.

Official team practice sessions will begin tomorrow, Phelan announced, and will continue until just before the initial game of the 1956-57 season against San Jose, to be played at the men's gym here.

Block SF Meet Set For Friday In College Hour

During the last Block SF meeting a number of topics were discussed, and these discussions centered on three main points, the Block SF banquet, additional Blocks for the members, and the obtaining of Block SF athletic pins.

Next meeting for the Block SF will be this Friday, November 2, during college hour in C-260, according to sponsor Bill Fischer.

A committee was appointed to plan for the procuring of athletic pins and emblems for the members. The date and site of the Block SF banquet was chosen. The semi-annual affair will be held on Monday, December 3, in Smith Hall.

A petition was also drawn up and will be presented to the council for ratification. The petition asks that an additional award be given to Block SF members who have lettered in the same sport more than once.

The drive to make the Block SF a 100 per cent membership is in full swing and to date the Block SF total is 56 members.

RA Plans On Coming Coed Sport Days Here

Plans for sport days in Recreation Association and coeducational sports here are being discussed by students and officers, according to Lene Johnson, faculty adviser.

On Saturday, November 17, the coed sport day will be held here. Sports planned for that day are archery, volleyball, tennis and fencing. Students interested in signing up for the coming sport days should see Miss Johnson in the women's gymnasium.

Plans for the high school play days to be held here are discussed Fridays, during college hour in the women's gymnasium.

Craft Is Rams' Top Running Threat Despite Lack Of Size

By Jim Rohrer

On appearances alone he may not strike fear into the opposition, but Gene Craft is certainly not taken lightly once he gets rolling on the gridiron.

Craft is one of the reasons why the City College Rams are still in contention for Big Eight Conference honors, even though the team bowed to Stockton's defending champions weeks ago.

Although he weighs only 150 pounds, the scat back uses his speed and deception to weave past would be tacklers, and the combination of his offensive and defensive prowess lends added emphasis to the fact that Craft is currently one of the top athletes on the club.

Craft is also a standout in basketball and baseball, and received honorable mention, all-city, in all three major sports, football included, while playing for Galileo High School in San Francisco. Craft said that he would definitely try out for the baseball team here next spring.

In four games, Craft has carried the ball a total of 38 times for 312 yards, and a sensational 8.2 net yards per carry. His best game to date was against Santa Rosa, where he ripped off an amazing 178 yards in seven carries in leading the Rams to a 39-13 victory. His longest run was in this same contest, where he raced 76 yards for a TD.

In contrasting high school and college football, Craft was quick to point out that all games are rough, but, "I think college ball is tougher."

A rather modest young man, Craft stated quite frankly, "I really like playing for the Rams. Everyone gets along fine and no one is trying to grab all the glory, which makes it a much better team in the long run."

Sacramento Blanked; Tyree, Panagakis Shed Sunlight Into Dreary Day With Sturdy Play

By Mike Berger

City College put on another last half scoring burst at Balboa High School field last Friday to blank Sacramento, 13-0, before a smattering of enthusiastic fans sitting under a blanket of enthusiastic clouds.

Halfback Dave Tyree rushed for 98 yards, leading a tough Ram running game to the win, which kept the college team hot on the heels of the Big Eight leader, Stockton. (See conference standings.)

The game, originally scheduled for Kezar Stadium, was changed at the last moment to the Balboa site because of heavy rainfall which lasted all morning, turning the Kezar turf into something resembling a rice field.

Just like the week before, the first half ended in a scoreless deadlock, as both clubs were content to try and grind out the yardage rather than take needless chances in the sloppy going.

Early in the second quarter, the Rams apparently had scored on a 15 yard end sweep by Tyree, but a costly holding penalty instead put the team back 15 yards.

Another drive late in the first half took the Rams as far as the Panther six, but on fourth down and with less than one minute to play, Sacramento hurled back the San Francisco bid for a first down, and the initial 30 minutes ended with no scoring.

Nine minutes into the third period, City College was forced to punt. The kick was fumbled by quarterback Gomez Delgado of the Panthers, and after a few hectic moments of further fumbling, the ball twisted into the end zone, where it was recovered by Sacramento for a touchback.

Delgado just couldn't escape being the goat, for on the first play from scrimmage at the Panther 20, his flat pass was intercepted by opposing quarterback John Panagakis.

The Ram signal-caller wasn't taking any chances. He grabbed the loose end of the towel used to dry his hands, thus avoiding a possible trip-up, and fled, ball in hand, cloth in the other, 24 yards to score the touchdown.

Panagakis then booted the conversion which gave the Rams a 7-0 lead after three quarters of play.

In the final period, San Francisco drove for 68 yards in 13 plays for the clinching score. After a two-yard loss, Panagakis completed a 28-yard pass to Tyree, a play which moved the ball to the Sacramento 42.

It was on this play that Tyree was shaken up and left the game. He had received a facial cut earlier in the fray.

After that effort, the Ram running attack punched its way down the field, pausing for one other pass completion, Panagakis to Leroy Thomas.

Two consecutive shots at the center of the line by halfback Norm Somoza took the pigskin over, the scoring play coming on a two-yard burst. The conversion attempt was blocked, but the Rams had the game tucked away at 13-0.

Sacramento fumbles and some terrific line play by the Rams did not allow the Panthers to even move inside the City College 45-yard line until less than four minutes remained in the game.

Tackle Tony Jones and center Josiah Williams, who subbed for the injured Bill Barrington, were both highly instrumental in the rugged performance of the Ram forward seven. Panagakis was also outstanding, both in his quarterbacking and in his jarring tackles and fine interception from the defensive halfback post.

Ram Booters Beat San Jose, 5-2; Play Cal Team Saturday

An undefeated Ram squad, after its second game at the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference, obtained another victory on October 20, beating San Jose State, 5-2, at San Jose.

The Ram booters will meet an undefeated and not yet scored-on (as of October 20) University of California eleven this Saturday, November 3, in a crucial game for the college's title hopes at Balboa Soccer Stadium.

Breaking fast on the Spartans' defensive line three minutes after the game started the college team, led again by the passing duo of Toni Quiteno and Herb Weiss, got its first scoring opportunity. Weiss booted home the day's best shot, a 30 yard kick fired at an angle into the Spartans' goal, but that was all the Rams could do in the game's first quarter.

The team seemed to have "too much self-confidence," Coach Roy Diederichsen was quoted as saying. "There's no small enemy in this sport; anyone can surprise and give us a bad time."

That was just what the Spartans did, taking advantage of the situation to score two consecutive times and take a 2-1 lead over the Rams in the second quarter.

Tom Irasmi, City College right wing, connected on a corner-kick to even the score and, as the second half was about to end, Toni Quiteno scored to put the Rams ahead, 3-2.

In the second half, Quiteno again combined with Weiss to score his second goal of the day, the fourth for the Rams. With only 16 seconds remaining in the game, Weiss kicked another spectacular shot to ice the Rams' second straight victory with no losses, which keeps them in the league's first spot, tied with California after the action of October 20.

In a preliminary event, the Ram junior varsity defeated the San Jose JV's, 3-0, as Joe Flores scored twice and Julio Cabrera tallied once.

Santa Clara's Broncos and the Rams clashed last Saturday, October 27, but results of that game were not available at press time.

RAMBLINGS

By Mike Berger

IT'S a little early to be predicting who will play whom in the 1957 New Year's Day Bowl games, but one thing seems to be apparent: there will be a motley collection of teams contesting for post season honor.

For reasons owing to illogical game contracts, which prohibit teams from performing more than one year in a row, the probable first and second football clubs in the nation, Michigan State and Oklahoma, will not play in any bowl games next year.

Spartan and Sooner players must be content with turning the channel selector to the proper station, where they can watch other players vie in the games which they, the top two teams, should be appearing in.

But because of overly generous alumni (those large, rich men with cigars and Jaguars), other top teams will also be spared the great expense of traveling to these bowls.

Southern California and Ohio State, to name two, are forbidden to go to the Rose Bowl, but some narrow-minded observers have hinted of other places which the Trojans and Buckeyes might go to, although these have hardly been well-received in Los Angeles and Columbus.

At this time, it's not beyond reason to say that Oregon State and Michigan, a pair of third place teams, will clash in the Fading Rose Bowl of 1957. An injury-ridden Stanford team is also very much in the running.

The Orange Bowl has another dilemma, in that Colorado, which comes due for its annual walloping at the hands of Oklahoma this Saturday, will probably be the representative of the Big Seven.

Duke, the squad most popularly thought of as the Atlantic Coast Conference title winner for this year, will probably be the other Orange Bowl entrant. The Bluedevils managed to drop three games through October 20, and showed great promise of improving that record before season's end.

So we have Colorado, beaten by Oregon 35-0, and Duke, trounced by Pitt (among others) 27-14, in the annual meet at Miami. By the way, Stanford defeated Oregon, 21-7, and Cal topped Pitt, 14-0, so it's easy to see that the Orange Bowl is going to be a real swell game.

The Sugar Bowl shapes up as a battle between 22 southern white-supremists, whether the game's segregated status suits them or not. Georgia Tech and Mississippi or Tulane are the present favorites for these distinguished roles.

Easily the best contest appears to be headed for the Cotton Bowl, where the Southwest champ, Texas Christian or Baylor, may meet the probable Southeastern champ, Tennessee. The Texas Aggies are not eligible to play in this game, since a few athletes were again found to be receiving "illegal" payments.

Should Tennessee emerge as the SE winner over Georgia Tech, the Vols may choose to play in the Sugar Bowl, if invited.

Duke vs. Colorado; Oregon State vs. Michigan; and Georgia Tech vs. 'Ole Miss or Tulane is anything but a tempting array of bowl talent.

It is about time for the NCAA to throw away musty game contracts, add the eager "paying" alumni to the trash, and adopt a new set of financially feasible athletic standards.

Unless some fast steps are taken, collegiate football will become the biggest joke since that chicken crossed the road.

Curtain Rises This Friday On Little Theater's Production Of Irish Comedy, The Far Off Hills

Curtain time for the first of six performances of The Far Off Hills, a three-act Irish comedy written by Lenox Robinson, is scheduled in the little theater at 8 p.m. this Friday, November 2, according to Michael Griffin, director.

In addition to the November 2 date, the play will also be presented on November 3, 9, 10, 16 and 17, with a special performance in Burlingame on November 8.

The Far Off Hills is set in Ireland and has as its central theme the thought that "the far off hills are always greener."

An unusual aspect of the play is that while it is an Irish comedy, several student players who portray the various characters are from scattered parts of the world.

Peggy Powell plays Anna Clancy, Bob Doyle plays Dick Delany, Ray Davis appears as Pierce Hegarty, Stephanie Koppe portrays Susy Tyman, and Crockett McClanahan plays Harold Mahony.

Other characters are Stan Weston as Patrick Clancy; JoAnne Jaklevick as Marion Clancy, Linda Cupps as Dorothea Clancy, Mel Rasmussen as Oliver O'Shoughnessy, and Dawn Roberts as Ellen Nolan.

Those who are working behind the scenes are Ron Tongetti, Fred Anderson, Tom Mandas, Gary Smith, Virginia Lees, Louis Yetter, Kathy Day, Chuck Mullen, Roy Maffei, and Jo Anne Jaklevick.

A fact that should make the play more appealing is that the little theater is being completely redecorated, and Griffin states that this job will be finished by curtain time Friday.

Admission to the play will be by Associated Student card, and tickets priced at $1 will be sold to non-AS card holders.

400 Graduation Petitions Filed

Figures compiled on October 5, the closing date for filing this semester's graduation petitions, showed 400 student here are expecting to graduate, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

To obtain an Associate in Arts degree upon graduation students must meet all college requirements and maintain a 2 grade point average, the equivalent of a letter grade of C.

As recently as the opening of the fall semester some 400 students were refused the privilege of re-enrollment into the college because of higher standards presently enforced.

The two greatest reasons for the denial of graduation are a unit shortage on the part of a student and a lack of grade points. Last semester some 867 petitions were filed. From that number, 160 were denied.

"An interesting thing to note," Miss Learnard stated, "is the fact that a great number of petitions are denied because of student failure to satisfy the requirement in political science."

Queen Of Homecoming Week To Be Announced At Bonfire Rally Nov. 8; Car Parade, Game, Dance Featured

Announcement of the name of the Homecoming Queen will take place at a bonfire rally Thursday night, November 8, Norman Durieux, Associated Men Student president, stated last week.

Audrey Bocek, Carol Campbell, Elvera Steiner, Paula Villa and Ann Villanova were named as the five finalists by Durieux.

Twenty-six women participated in the contest, and the final judging was held last Thursday. On the judging staff for the contest were Mrs. J. Keene, secretary of the Women's Auxiliary Junior Chamber of Commerce; Mrs. William Welsh, a member of the same organization, and Ann Young, teen editor of the San Francisco Examiner.

Merchandise worth $50 plus four additional prizes will be distributed among the queen and her four attendants. These prizes are donated by the Joseph Magnin Company department store. The merchandise prizes will probably be in the form of wearing apparel, Durieux said.

On Friday, November 9, the homecoming game between the Rams and San Mateo will be played at Kezar Stadium. Prior to the game, a car parade will start from the college and proceed to the stadium, where, Durieux added, trophies will be awarded for the three best decorated cars.

Homecoming activities will be concluded with the homecoming dance to be held Friday night, November 9. At this time, the queen will be presented with her trophy.

The dance is scheduled to be held in the Rose Room of the Sheraton-Palace Hotel. Dancing will be from 9 p.m. until midnight to the music of the Sal Karson band, which features a vocalist. Dress for the affair, Durieux declared, is semi-formal.

Admission to the dance is by Associated Student card. A charge of $6 per couple will be made to non-AS members. City College Alumni Association members and San Mateo College student card holders will be charged $2.50 per couple.

Today Is Deadline For Applications For Denman Award

Deadline for filing applications for two Denman Scholarships to be given to the outstanding women students who have at least a 3 point (B) average and are graduates of a San Francisco public high school, is today, according to Mary Golding, dean of women here.

Two $125 awards will be presented to the women students who in the eyes of the Denman award committee are most deserving.

Members of the Denman award committee include Louis G. Conlan, President of the college; Lloyd Luckmann, coordinator of Instruction; Archibald J. Cloud, president emeritus of the college; John Brady, coordinator of Student Welfare, and Dean Golding.

Martha Lozar won the scholarship in the Fall of '55 and Anita Guerra was awarded it in the spring of '56.

The award was established by Judge William Denman and his sister, Mary Cheatham, in the Fall of 1939 in memory of their father, James Denman. He was Superintendent of San Francisco's public schools during the latter part of the last century, and later President of the Board of Education.

AS Cards Need 36 Sales To Meet Goal Of 2400

Only 36 Associated Student cards remain to be sold in order to reach the 2,400 card goal, according to Dwane Shippey, AS card sales chairman.

Since the beginning of the semester, a total of $11,820 has been received from the sale of cards and an expected $250 more has yet to be tallied in the results.

Shippey also specified the requirements for campus organizations with regard to AS cards. He said that all budgeted activities must have a showing of 100 per cent AS cards to receive allocated budgets. He also mentioned that fraternities, sororities and clubs must have a 51 per cent card backing to be ruled on campus by the Student Council.

Among the benefits derived by an AS card holder are discounts on gas, theater tickets, auto supplies, cleaners, clothiers, and sporting goods, to mention a few, Shippey said.

Six Campus Clubs Declared Delinquent In CAB Attendance; Student Council Investigates Case

By Bob Sims

Presenting to the Student Council a list of six organizations currently delinquent in attendance at Club Activities Board meetings, CAB president Lon Earnshaw reminded council members of their power to rule such organizations off campus.

Earnshaw's list included the campus police, drama, Sigma Tau Sigma, Acacia, chess, and the Merchandising Club. An off campus ruling by the council would result in the loss of Associated Student monetary support for these organizations, Earnshaw noted.

CAB requires each chartered organization on campus to send a qualified representative or a proxy representative to each meeting so that the activities and affairs of each may be coordinated, Earnshaw added that simply by submitting a letter stating the name of the proxy to the CAB, an organization may ask a representative already in attendance to represent it and the obligation will be fulfilled.

A committee headed by Debbie Rudser was then appointed by AS president Wayne McFadden, who suggested that she contact faculty sponsors of the delinquent organizations and request their presence at a future meeting of the Student Council so that their positions might be explained before an official ruling is made.

As discussion ended on off campus rulings, McFadden remarked that maybe he should appoint a committee to investigate the whereabouts of the campus police representative who hasn't attended a council meeting since his organization's budget was passed. This suggestion met approval, and Elvera Steiner was assigned to the investigation.

Constitution chairman Jim Kennedy, on completion of his duty to submit proposed amendments for council approval, received applause, both verbal and actual, for a job well done. The council passed four proposed amendments, completing the list of 22 which will be voted on by AS card holders today and tomorrow.

Additional plaudits went to John Zevas, rally commissioner, who received the congratulations of council faculty sponsor, Dean Ralph Hillsman, because of the large turnout of college students at the Ram-Oakland football game October 19.

Other council business found McFadden introducing new cabinet appointees Richard Max, Awards Commissioner, and Joe Welsh, Athletic Commissioner. The new officers were accepted by the council and took the oath of office immediately.

Nominations for representatives to the State Conference Convention was the next council action with eight persons named as possibilities to fill the two positions as yet open. A secret ballot was suggested and results will be presented at today's council meeting.

The final order of business on the council agenda last week found George Pyne, freshman class council member, introducing a proposal to adopt an AS Scholarship Award.

Providing for a $25.00 purchase order at the AS book store, the measure would give an award to the Associated Men Student freshman and sophomore, and to the Associated Women Student freshman and sophomore with the highest grade point average in their respective divisions.

Audrey Bocek Reigns At Homecoming Festivities

Queen Crowning Highlights Tomorrow's Bonfire Rally

By Carol Harris

Winner of the Homecoming Queen contest is Audrey Bocek, who will reign as queen over the homecoming festivities tomorrow and Friday, Norman Durieux, president of the Associated Men Students, announced today.

Her four court attendants and runners-up are Carolyn Campbell, Elvera Steiner, Paula Villa, and Ann Villanova.

Chosen from a field of 27 women, Miss Bocek is a second semester student. She is an active member of Kappa Phi sorority. Majoring in business, Miss Bocek plans to work as a secretary upon graduation from the college.

A member of Delta Psi, Miss Campbell is majoring in education.

Social welfare is the vocation Miss Steiner has chosen. She is a member of Phi Beta Rho.

A native of Italy having been here only two years, Miss Villa is a member of Zeta Chi. Merchandising is her major.

This is Miss Villanova's first semester here. She plans to go in to the secretarial field and is now in the process of rushing for a sorority.

A merchandise order totaling $50 has been donated to the queen by the Joseph Magnin Company department store. Each of the four attendants will also receive a merchandise order from Magnin.

The first activity on the homecoming agenda will be the bonfire rally to be held tomorrow evening at 8 p.m. on the archery field. All the campus fraternities have volunteered to help build the bonfire.

Highlight of the rally will be the crowning of the queen and introduction of her court by Durieux. Professional entertainment for the rally will be in the person of Don Sargeant, recording star and blues singer.

Miss Bocek will be officially crowned Homecoming Queen by Norman Durieux, Associated Men Student president, at the annual bonfire rally to be held tomorrow from 8 to 9 p.m. in the archery field.

Several numbers will be played by the college band, which will include one by Renee Olson and the pep squad. Grover Klemmer, football coach, will speak on this semester's football team.

Louis Baccalona and Tony Conti, accordionists, Portia Goldenichd and a jazz combo, all students of the college, will also provide entertainment for the rally.

This Friday, November 9, a car parade will proceed from the college to Kezar Stadium, where the homecoming game will be played between the Rams and San Mateo. The parade, which will be led by the queen and her court, will assemble at the front of the college at 1 p.m. and will depart at 1:30 p.m. for the stadium.

Route of the car parade will be down Ocean Avenue to 19th Avenue, over 19th Avenue to Lincoln Way, and then on Lincoln Way to the stadium.

At conclusion of the parade, the three best decorated cars will be awarded trophies. A police escort for the parade will be provided, Durieux added.

Climax for homecoming activities will be the Homecoming Dance which is scheduled to be held in the Concert Room of the Sheraton-Palace Hotel, located at Market and New Montgomery Street. Dancing will be from 9 p.m. to midnight to the rhythms of Sal Karson and his band.

Dress for the homecoming dance, Durieux declared, is semi-formal, with cocktail dresses for the women and dark suits for the men.

Admission to the dance is free to Associated Student card holders. Non-AS members will be charged $6 per couple. City College Alumni Association members and San Mateo College card holders will be admitted at the reduced price of $2.50 per couple. Durieux added that no AS cards will be sold at the door.

500 Students On Carpet Through Failure To Meet Grade Requirement

Total Drop Lower Than Last Spring Because Of Tighter Scholastic Policy

By Kaj Kristoffersen

Five hundred students whose first mid-term grade point average fell below C— are currently explaining their deficiencies to John J. Brady, coordinator of the Division of Student Welfare here.

Six hundred students found themselves in a similar situation at the end of the first mid-term last spring. Their re-registration was held up pending an appeal to the College Re-Admissions Committee, but 200 of them have since been re-admitted, Brady said.

"Most of the 400 who were flunked out," Brady explained, "had already been given their second chance. They were already on probation which ended last spring.

"We may assume," Brady continued, "that the drop of 100 students from last spring's total of 600 is due to the fact that tighter scholastic requirements weeded out 400 students who sought to re-register for the present fall semester."

In keeping with the new grade point evaluations recently inaugurated in other institutions of higher learning, the college has put into effect a four-point grading system, Brady said.

Summer session and succeeding grades were posted under this new system that basically differs from the old in that there is a grade point distinction between a D and an F. This gives the F recipient a deficiency never before existing.

Under this evaluation, A grades will give students four grade points per unit, dropping down to F's which yield no grade points.

At a glance, the student may believe that this system will be to his advantage, since he will now receive a one-point credit for D grades and his grade point average will be boosted. He should hold in mind a two (C) grade point average must now be maintained in order to graduate, Brady warned.

JOHN J. BRADY, coordinator of Student Welfare, announces tightening of regulations.

Kenton Orchestra To Stage Concert Here This Month

Stan Kenton and his orchestra will stage a jazz concert in the men's gymnasium on Tuesday, November 20, at 3:30 p.m., according to Associated Student Vice-President Louise von Emster.

Capitol's ace recording star is touring the leading colleges in the Bay Area during big game week and has scheduled this college for his third appearance, Miss von Emster said.

In the field of jazz, Kenton has received several awards and honors including the title of Modern America's Man of Music. His band, consisting of five trumpets, six trombones and five saxophones, plus four men in the rhythm section, has consistently been voted the band of the year.

Kenton has repeatedly launched new endeavors in the field of music. Presentations in Progressive Jazz and Innovations in Modern Music were his latest attempts in modern music.

Both of these ventures met with success, the latter climaxing the efforts at the Hollywood Bowl in 1950 when 16,000 people gathered to hear and applaud his concert.

In an effort to keep the nucleus of his concert orchestra together, Kenton reformed his 20-piece dance orchestra after the Bowl performance and met even greater success.

Acciamations accorded the dance band during past engagements at theaters, clubs and ballrooms prompted arrangements for his current tour.

Tickets for the concert here can be obtained at the student bank in Smith Hall, or from members of the student council, at a charge of $1 with an Associated Student card and $1.50 without.

Film Friday Features Caribbean Travelogue

Treasures Of The Caribbean will be presented in S-136 this Friday during college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m., according to Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor here.

Jamaica and other travel spots in the West Indies will be visited in the the travelogue, which features the tribal customs of the natives and citizenry on the islands.

Far Off Hills To Be Presented For 2nd Week-End

The Far Off Hills, a three-act Irish comedy by Lenox Robinson, which opened its run here last Friday, will be presented again by the thespians on November 9, 10, 16, and 17 at 8 p.m. in the little theater, according to faculty director Michael Griffin.

Scene changes to designate the dining room of the Patrick Clancy home and "Pet's" and "Ducky's" bedroom will be made in this comedy which is Ireland.

The play has a skilful blending of character portrayal and Irish humor and a theme that the far off hills are always greener.

Griffin announced the cast as follows: Stan Wesfon as Patrick Clancy, JoAnne Jaklevick as Marion Clancy, Peggy Powell as Anna Clancy, Linda Cripps as Dorthea Clancy, Mel Rassmussen as Oliver O'Shoughnessy, Bob Doyle as Dick Delany, Crockett McClanahan as Harold Mahony, Stephanie Koppe as Susy Tyman, Ray Davis as Pierce Hegarty, Dawn Roberts as Ellen Nolan, and Roy Maffei as technical director.

Remodeling of the little theater has been completely finished and the new lighting techniques and new curtain which has been added should aid in the production of the play.

Admission will be by Associated Student card or special tickets obtained from Griffin at $1 for non-student card holders and guests.

Ike Wins In Straw Balloting; Voters Okay 18 Amendments For Changes In AS Constitution

Associated Students voted into law 18 amendments to the constitution, and picked Dwight D. Eisenhower as their choice for President of the United States, in a combined amendment and straw election held here Wednesday.

From a total of 366 votes cast, Republican presidential candidate Dwight D. Eisenhower received 228 votes against 138 votes cast for the Democratic candidate, Adlai E. Stevenson. Richard M. Nixon, Republican candidate for vice-president, won by a close majority with 114 votes against 100 votes cast for the Democratic vice-presidential candidate, Estes Kefauver.

Approved by a two-thirds majority vote 18 out of the 22 amendments were passed. Amendments 6, 11, 12, and 14 did not pass.

Of the amendments that did not pass, No. 6 concerns the number of units required for the office of AS Vice-President; 11, concerns the position of Parliamentarian; 12, also concerns the Parliamentarian, and 14 would have stated that elected officers will not be required to take any special course. Two Women Students Win Alumnae Awards

Two women students were awarded scholarships here last week, according to Mary Golding, dean of women.

Patricia [illegible], business major, planning to work in the secretarial field later on, was awarded the Theta Tau Alumnae Association scholarship. Mildred A. Johnson, a student majoring in education, received the Florence Louis scholarship.

Both $25 awards carry Associated Student card privileges and, according to Miss Golding, are given as tokens of appreciation to the college by their donors.

Miss Louis is a graduate of the college, and the award has been given to the college's outstanding women students for four years.

John J. Brady, coordinator of Student Welfare, and Miss Golding selected the students awarded.

Library Invokes New 'Open Stacks' Policy

A change of considerable significance has been made regarding the operation of the library this semester, according to Irene Mensing, reference librarian.

Students in the past have been able to enter and leave "open stacks," by two different directions, but as of this semester, there is only one means for entering and leaving.

"This system has been adopted, in order to secure better supervision over the "open stacks," Miss Mensing said. Students also are now required to enter the stacks without their own binders and textbooks.

AWS Fashions, Tea November 30

To honor the women of San Francisco's public schools and to acquaint them with the college, the Associated Women Students will hold their annual fashion show and tea on Friday, November 30, according to Metta Weddleton, AWS president.

The fashion show, presented by H. Liebes, will be held in the library in Cloud Hall, with the tea following in [illegible] Hall.

Chairmen of the committees for the fashion show and tea were already appointed by Miss Weddleton as follows: Anne Smith, models; Darlene Enfield, invitations; Beverly Monderer, publicity; Louise Geers, programs; Virginia Hase, serving; Sue Richards, food; Deborah Rudser, hospitality; Kathleen Mullegan, decorations, and Marilyn Schoolman, registration.

More than 80 women signed up with committee chairmen to help with the fashion show and tea in the AWS meeting programmed for October 26.

Special invitations will be sent to every woman student holder of an Associated Student card and to the 300 nurses taking courses here.

ACP Classifies The Guardsman All-American For Spring '56

NOT as a blushing blonde Norse bride do we shyly stutter and stammer. Nor as some seemingly humble instructor do we casually make passing reference to our achievements, while concealing our bursting pride behind the guise of false modesty.

Rather as the proud citizen who praises the glory and strength of his government, so we take pride in announcing that on October 29 notice was received that The Guardsman was honored for the sixth consecutive semester with the distinction of being awarded an All-American rating for the spring 1956 semester by the Associated Collegiate Press.

This is the 25th time in 30 semesters of membership The Guardsman has received this, the highest of all ACP awards. Only six other two-year colleges in the nation were classified as All-American for the spring '56 semester.

Each semester, member papers of the ACP, which totaled 395 members during the spring '56 semester, are judged and rated in the All-American, First, Second, Third, and Fourth Class categories. This is determined by judges in ACP headquarters at the University of Minnesota.

During the judging period, point ratings are assigned to all phases of the newspaper, including news coverage, content, and use of typography. When totaled, the assigned point ratings determine the member newspaper's classification. The newspapers which won ratings are then divided into classes according to college enrollment and frequency of publication.

Without appearing here to be too boastful, we wish to state sincerely that we are proud of our paper, its achievement record, its staff members, and its faculty advisers. We feel that as City College is rightly proud of its noted Hotel and Restaurant Department, so it should justly be proud of its journalism department.

Certainly students in the Bay Area interested in pursuing the field of journalism are offered an efficient, effective two-year boost at City College of San Francisco. This offers to them an immediate advantage over many of their contemporaries, who are not so fortunate as to have a college in their immediate vicinity which is noted for its journalistic products.

Of course, in order to achieve such a worthy record, it is of utmost import to have outstanding journalism instructors. This The Guardsman has in George Mullary, journalism instructor, and Joan Nourse, The Guardsman's faculty adviser who has served in this capacity during all of the 30 semesters of ACP membership.

Their outstanding qualifications are that they both enjoy working with students and are interested (devoted to) the journalistic field. They are also compelled to condone this editorial, which is not according to the newspaper's policy of frowning upon and editing all Rha-Rha material before publication, or they may falsely be accused of hiding behind the guise of false modesty.

Nor should Mike Berger, last semester's editor-in-chief who is presently serving as The Guardsman's sports editor, go unmentioned, although he may be blushing like a modest young dairy-maid. As the editor-in-chief, Berger was directly responsible for coordinating members of the newspaper staff into a coherent group.

In addition to this, Berger's editorial, Self Government Here Will Die If AS Neglects Voting Rights, enabled The Guardsman to win first place in this year's nation-wide Best College Newspaper Editorial Contest, which was conducted by The Going-To-College Handbook, that is produced by Outlook Publishers, Richmond, Virginia.

However, all the credit cannot be given to just the members of the journalism department. For without the reliable news sources, we certainly would not have been able to keep the student body informed on college activities. Therefore, our thanks to the students, instructors, and administrators who supplied us with the news.

Before closing, we, the students who hope to pursue journalistic careers, wish again to thank our advisers for their patience, interest, encouragement, and especially for their criticism. And to City College of San Francisco which supplied the efficient, effective journalistic facilities for our training, thank you.

Cool Deal In Refrigeration Department

Air Conditioning Systems Checked On Graphic Panel

By Kaj Kristoffersen

Cool deal—development of the college refrigeration department which is located in the basement of the Science Building, has been kept on ice until recently.

This course is directed by Donald C. Bryant, engineering instructor here since 1946. Bryant, whose dream of many years was to provide a course of this type, was helped considerably in the inception, design, and construction of the laboratory.

A large graphic panel portrays the air conditioning system and its accompanying pneumatic control system. The panel is in color and aids both instructor and student in visualizing and checking operation of the air-conditioning system at any point of any given time.

This graphic control panel allows the operator to set any condition in the laboratory by the use of control stations located on the panel and integrated into the pneumatic control system. The number of industrial controllers is utilized on the panel for regulating, indicating, and recording temperature and humidity conditions throughout the laboratory.

An asset to the student in working out air conditioning problems, the graphic control panel is a natural for a teaching aid as well. Ability of the student to set up a problem, change the conditions, record the changes and results gives him a quick and accurate picture of the complete situation.

All types of safety and interlock control equipment are utilized, not only to protect equipment in the laboratory, but to teach the student the need for such equipment and its method of utilization.

Fundamental principles of air-conditioning, refrigeration, and operating engineering, are thoroughly dealt with throughout the program of study. Emphasis is placed upon their practical application.

Students perform all the maintenance on the air-conditioning and refrigeration equipment as part of their instruction.

Upon satisfactory completion of the two-year course of study, they are prepared for employment in the air-conditioning and refrigeration industries as installation and servicing technicans, junior designers, field engineers or salesmen. Graduates are also prepared for employment as assistant operating engineers.

Employment possibilities are virtually unlimited. They include work in public buildings, hospitals, schools, factories, and a variety of industries.

So the next time someone asks you what's new at the college, tell him that in the basement of the Science Building is a cool deal—no longer on ice.

Clinton Taxes Face Via Cigarette's Background Of Man Unsmoked

By Bob Sims

Ever notice the picture that graces the government tax stamp on a package of cigarettes? That perturbed looking man, one hand propping up his head, is DeWitt Clinton.

Clinton no doubt was a great statesman, serving as a senator, as mayor of New York City, and as governor of New York, but the look of suffering on his face needs some interpretation.

Old DeWitt can't be debating whether or not to risk lung cancer by partaking of the tobacco contained in the package bearing his countenance, for medical science has developed that theory only in recent years.

He might, however, be suffering from acid-indigestion or better yet, he could be contemplating his defeat to James Madison in the presidential race of 1813.

Another possibility is that he is in the midst of composing his speech to be made at the ground-breaking ceremonies which initiated the digging of the Erie Canal, his big claim to fame, before cigarette tax stamps appeared.

Luckily for DeWitt, he wears no beard, for it is certain that some modern day journalist would be averse to the picture of bluebeard which is carried in the purse of many a brave young woman today.

One consolation for Clinton is that his picture is carried by many more persons than the pictures of many of the great presidents. For after all, a package of cigarettes is commonly more popular than a $5 bill.

College's Motto Praised As Apt

Commenting on the aptness of the college's motto, The Truth Shall Make You Free, Al Baccari, publicity manager for KPIX-TV, revealed its versatility in a speech to student journalists here on October 26.

After being introduced to the audience by Toni Mannina, assistant publicity manager for KPIX-TV, who previously served as Publicity Committee chairman at the college during the fall 1955 semester, Baccari addressed the student group on the topic, Newspapers and Public Relations.

During his speech, Baccari recalled that upon arriving here his attention was attracted to the college's motto, which is embiazoned across the frontispiece of the Science Building and serves as an ultimate goal for students as they strive for truth through knowledge.

Further stressing his point, Baccari said that the ability to be a real person, the ability to be sincere, or more clearly the ability to be straight forward and truthful, are necessary in public relations or any other professional field today.

"Yes, the truth shall make you free," he said, "and it will enable you to become a more desirable business associate and a better man."

The Bohemian — Freedoms Of Atom Age Spawn Juvenile Rebels

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

TO THE already established names denoting young rebels of society, France has the "voyous," England recognized hers in a new and upcoming cliche of misdemeanor makers, the "Teddy Boys," we have contributed the "punks."

Each Western country has had to cope with the increasing rise of juvenile delinquency. Huge amounts of money and countless hours of effort by social organizations have been put out in a defense to curb the wrong attitudes, actions and modernistic views which the young ones abide by and fanatically follow.

What is the cause for this seemingly total discard by youth on an international scale, of the moral standards with which Western Civilization has generally been identified?

Times have changed. Freedom is on everyone's lips as it has never been before. Economic advances by the masses have earned them the right to act socially the way they please.

The greatest sole influence on men's moral activities, religion, has indeed suffered a drawback. Fantastic developments in the practical benefits of science have played a dangerous part in leading men's minds astray from religious standards.

Perhaps this trend was inevitable with the coming of the Atom Age, and some breakage of the religious bonds is justified, but total abandonment spells disaster. Religion may still be the factor enlightening men with temperance and consideration for their fellows.

Another great influence on men's actions in society is that of literature. Romanticism now seems to be a thing unheard of in the writings which reach the public's grasp.

Writers like Flaubert and Emile Zola erupted the gentler poetic pattern of Romanticism and idealistic thinking by bringing stark naturalism into literature. They played a heavy role in influencing the realistic school of writing so popular today.

This is not to say that idealistic formulas, in keeping with the goal for a blissful and compatible order among human beings, have been abandoned in these writings. There are traces of moral motives and values. Yet they are so intertwined by acts of violence that the untrained reader is left with only the superficial impressions.

The economic progress of the West giving the woman opportunity to maintain her own and allowing her so to support himself has loosened paternal ties. Or perhaps the hidden flaw may be found in our system of educating the young.

The hidden flaw, the detrimental factors which nourish the breeding grounds of these punks, must be found out and corrected, or the majority of future world citizens may be ones to fear instead of rightly admire.

Ram-San Mateo Teams Vie Friday For Traditional Tom-Tom Trophy In Homecoming Contest At Kezar

By Jim Rohner

If San Mateo can just produce the final offensive thrust that will count on the scoreboard, it could prove to be a tough afternoon for host City College, when the two teams meet this Friday in the Homecoming Game at Kezar. Kickoff is slated for 2 p.m.

Although held scoreless in two games, and to one touchdown in each of three games, the Bulldogs point to statistics to prove that all that is lacking is the ability to negotiate that last bit of yardage to pay-dirt.

Sparked by the running of Johnny Treu and the passing of Don Covarelli, the Royal Blue and White will throw a fairly balanced attack at the opposing Rams. Halfback Treu, who averages approximately six yards per carry, will be the man to contain. At 160 pounds he is the lightest man in the backfield. Halfback Ron O'Rourke and 205 pound fullback Gerry Meyer add power to the ground attack.

To keep the Ram defense honest, Covarelli mixes his running game with aerials aimed chiefly at end Paul Rau and halfback Bud Murray, who have accounted for considerable yardage. Against Santa Rosa, Covarelli completed seven passes for 104 yards.

Coach Jesse Freitas is working with only six returning veterans from last year, but as the team moves deeper into the season his freshman players are gaining experience and the Mateans are proving a more formidable foe.

With a forward wall that averages 200 pounds, the Bulldogs will be out to stop such breakaway threats as Dave Tyree and Gene Craft. The two tackles, second year George Gerbing and 220 pound Ormand Kline, plus left guard, Mat Medrano, are the workhorses of the Bulldog line.

With the Tom-Tom Murphy trophy hanging in the balance, the Freitasmen will be out to avenge last year's 38-0 mauling at the hands of the Rams. They will also remember that in the past two years they have been unable to score upon City College. It could well prove to be a wide open, high scoring game with the possibility of an upset not to be discounted.

FOR some reason we have always gotten an extra bit of pleasure from watching an athlete perform who KNOWS what he is doing.

There aren't enough football fields in the world to hold the many halfbacks who found it unable to go for yardage unless an opening resembling the Wawona Tunnel was laid out before them.

Few are the players who possess reflexes to burst through small holes in the line, stay BEHIND their blockers or run at different speeds.

Until a couple of weeks ago, there were two outstanding backs in the nation who had all these talents, but unless some new phenom has come on the scene since then, we doubt if there is one such player now active at the collegiate level.

In our opinion, Clarence Peaks of Michigan State and Jon Arnett of Southern California were these men.

To the best of our knowledge, at this moment Peaks is in a hospital bed in East Lansing awaiting surgery on a knee injury that may never let him run as well again. Peaks suffered his blow in the recent Illinois game.

And, also to the best of our knowledge, Arnett is currently serving a five week sentence for listening to friendly alumni with his palms outstretched, a most serious offense.

With these men out of circulation for the remainder of the season, it appears that the two best change-of-pace runners to weave across the college scene in several years will have to wait until the NFL or Canada beckons before showing their wares again.

It is certainly apparent that Peaks and Arnett have been the best running backs to play in the Bay Area this year, and, providing Peaks' injury is not serious, both should be high choices in the coming NFL draft.

By the time this is in print, the bubble may have burst, but through the games of October 28, the football formation that "couldn't work" in pro ball was working to the tune of four wins and a single loss.

Because the pro people are not disposed to letting the quarterback take any more hard knocks than is absolutely necessary, the hazardous split-T was thought to be unworkable until the Chicago Cardinals were posed with the problem of having a quarterback. Lamar McHan, who wasn't an outstanding passer, but who was better than average in running and ball handling.

The obvious answer made the skeptics wince, but the more than obvious results (through October 28) had made Cardinal players, coaches and fans wild, wild about the "new" McHan and wild about the "new" split-T formation, the system that couldn't work in professional football.

Nine Colleges To Attend Sports Day

Sport days for this semester's Recreation Association here are being planned by the sports council, according to Lene Johnson, faculty adviser.

Nine two-year colleges will attend a sports day here on Saturday, November 17, according to Miss Johnson. Archery, volleyball, fencing, tennis, and badminton are sports planned for this day. Visitors will take part in the activities in the men's and women's gymnasiums.

Meetings for the Recreation Association Council have been changed to Thursdays from 3 to 4 p.m., in the women's gymnasium. Officers of the RA and all sport managers must attend meetings, since plans for the semester's activities are discussed during these meetings.

Enrollment of the Recreation Association has gone up considerably this semester, according to Miss Johnson, and co-ed sports are still open for sign ups in the women's gymnasium.

A demonstration of the co-ed folk dance group at Shriners Children Hospital will start the Christmas activities planned for the group.

3 Quarterbacks Outstanding In Modesto Game

By Lou Lucia

Sparked by John Panagakis, Larry Beldon, and Mike Forrette on offense, and an outstamding defense, the Rams blanked Modesto, 18-0, last Friday night at the losers' home field.

Panagakis and Forrette threw touchdown passes, while Beldon, who had previously only seen action as a quarterback, entered the game in the second quarter for the injured Dave Tyree and kept the Rams first goal line march in progress.

Early in the second quarter the Pirates halfback Phil Peterson punted out of bounds on the Ram 25-yard line. Beldon ran for 10 yards and a first down to the 35. Panagakis pitched to Leroy Thomas for a 30-yard gain, and seconds later with a fourth down on the Modesto 26, Beldon picked up the additional yardage for the first down.

Panagakis and Taylor collaborated for another long gainer, this time for 15 yards to the eight. On the very next play Beldon wriggled through the defense for the touchdown. Eight minutes were left in the half when Gene Craft was to hold for the extra point try by Panagakis, but a low pass from center was dropped and he was stopped in this tracks.

Later in the same period guard Josiah Williams intercepted a pass thrown by quarterback Emmett Lee and returned 11 yards to the Modesto 34. Fourteen running yards by Craft and an equal number of passing yards from Panagakis to Ron Taylor placed the ball on the six.

After three plays the Rams had lost two yards and were on the eight when Panagakis hit Thomas with a perfect toss in the right side of the end zone. Panagakis' attempt for the extra point was blocked with only 1:15 left in the first half.

The 12-0 lead remained until only 1:25 were left in the game. Forrette's six-yard pass was caught on the eight-yard line by Dennis O'Connor, who ran the remaining distance for the third touchdown. Craft's 32-yard run after an interception of Lee's pass had set up the score. Forrette fumbled the direct pass from center and was tackled for the Rams' third futile attempt at the extra point.

On the last play of the game, Bob Roper receipted for the fourth Ram pass reversal, catching the ball on the City College 45 and warding off three would-be tacklers, and finally being caught on the Modesto two as the gun sounded.

Ernie Ibarra led a strong defensive line which held the Pirates to 20 net yards in rushing. To give a true indication of the defensive prowess of the Rams it is noted that Modesto had the ball in San Francisco territory for only four plays during the whole game.

Basketball Team Prepares To Open Practice Season Here November 30 Aided By 24 High School Aspirants

After basketball practice started on November 1, Coach Sid Phelan has expressed high hopes for his new Ram squad, which opens the season on Friday, November 30, against San Jose.

Phelan, now in his second year as varsity basketball coach, led his 1955-56 team into second place in the Big Eight Conference, winning ten and losing four.

SID PHELAN, pictured above, will lead the Rams into their basketball season on November 30, his second year as head coach here.

While losing most of last season's squad, Phelan has three returning veterans in Al Mock, voted by his last year's teammates as the most valuable player on the Rams' squad and who was unanimous all-conference guard; Speed DeConti, the 5'5" dribbling sensation, and James Bryant, who also saw a considerable amount of action last year.

New members of the Rani squad are Bob Tealer, highly regarded ex-Cal Frosh and all-city performer at Mission High School; Wilford Gasper, a 1955-56 first team all-city selection from Polytechnic; John Bates, Don Carstain, Leroy Collins, Bill Flanagan, Ed Giles, Chade Gilzean, Don Kelleher, Alan Kaeier, Malcolm McCormick, Garry Merritt, Raul Morales, Doug North, Mike Prusoff, Stan Rosenberg, Rich Russell, Ted Solis, Tom Spotwood, Keoru Suto, Aubrey Tendell, Bernie Quinteros, Bill Wooten and Stonewall Jackson.

Coming here from the armed services are, John Henry, from Polytechnic; Jim O'Connor, a Serra High School product; and Al Vidal, former cager from Mission High School.

The Rams will open their practice game schedule with San Jose here in the men's gymnasium at 3:30 p.m. and will play their first league game when they encounter the Santa Rosa Bearcubs on Wednesday, January 9, at 8 p.m. in Santa Rosa.

All men students who would like to try out for the varsity squad and have not signed up, are requested to sign up in the men's gymnasium as soon as possible.

College Booters Defeat Broncos 6-1; To Face San Francisco State Friday

By Pastor Valle-Garay

City College's easy-going soccer squad continued its game-winning chain with no losses on Saturday, October 27, at San Francisco's Balboa soccer stadium when the booters defeated the University of Santa Clara Broncos, 6-1.

Next scheduled game for the Rams in the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference will be played this Friday, November 9, with San Francisco State at the State field.

Coach Roy Diederichsen, in describing the Santa Clara game action, said the Rams gave "a most brilliant show of ball control and passing."

It was just another game for the Rams, but as far as the rapid combination of Herb Weiss-Tony Quiteno, in cooperation with Tom Irasmi, was concerned, they were out, literally, "to get a kick out of playing."

Weiss, the Rams' center forward, put the team ahead in the first half of the game after consecutively scoring three spectacular shots against the helpless Santa Clara fullbacks.

As the second half of the game started, Morales was switched to the inside left position and a moment later gave the college booters their fourth goal with a 30-yard kick.

Less than 60 seconds were gone in the final frame when Quiteno, inside right, making a fast break through the Broncos' defensive line, tallied the Rams' fifth goal.

Santa Clara was determined to avoid a shut out. Corning back, Manual Garcia, the Broncos' center-half, taking advantage of a ball that bounced out of the Ram goalie's hands, booted in the first and only goal for his team.

Not satisfied with the 5-1 beating the Rams were giving Santa Clara, Joe Flores connected on a 20-yard shot into the Broncos' goal post to complete the college's scoring list of the day, half a dozen successful attacks on the Santa Clara goal.

Two weeks ago, October 24, the Rams traveled to Modesto for a non-league game against Modesto College. Rene Carrillo, Tony Baranski, Flores and Orlando Dona tallied one goal each to give the college a 4-1 victory.

Off-schedule games will be played at Balboa soccer stadium on Thursday, November 8, with Modesto College, and on Saturday, November 10, the Rams will meet the Cal Aggies at Sacramento.

The discovery of the North Pole proved that there is no one sitting on top of the world.

Hard Running Of Dave Tyree Noted By Grid Mentors

Halfback Dave Tyree, possessing hard driving power, has become one of the mainstays in Coach Grover Klemmer's Ram backfield.

With fullbacks Bob Atkins and Sam Rios out of action because of injuries, Klemmer has had to juggle his starting lineup around, and Tyree has become an important factor in this cause.

The switching of halfback Jerry Dillard to the fullback slot early in the season left a vacant spot in the injury riddled backfield, and Klemmer then nominated Tyree to complete the first string quartet.

Tyree has proved to be a big help to the Ram running game. In five games he gained 253 yards and had a rushing average of 7.4 yards per carry. His performances have been pleasing ones to Klemmer and the coaching staff.

His slashing and driving runs were key factors in the Rams' 13-0 win over Sacramento. The Sacramento game may have been his best game to date, for even though he suffered a slight head gash and also injured his right knee, he remained in the game, and scored a touchdown, but it was nullified.

Tyree gives all the credit to the coaching staff and the rest of the team. "We get along great," was his firm reply in answer to a question about the team's spirit.

Asked what he thought was the big point in this year's running attack, he said, "We have good boys up front." He also stated that "they consistently open up holes, and are terrific blockers downfield.

100 Students Will Participate In International Relations Club Fair At Aptos High Next Week

More than 100 foreign students will participate in the third International Relations Club fair, to be held this year at Aptos Junior High School Auditorium on Friday, November 16, according to Joseph M. Jacobsen, foreign student adviser here.

Folk dances and music of the world will be featured at the event which is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. Admission will be 50 cents for students and $1 for the general public.

Proceeds will be used to promote international scholarships at the college, and tickets may be purchased at the student bank or in S-155, Jacobsen announced.

Countries to be represented include Arabia, Burma, Yugoslavia, Estonia, Finland, Greece, Jamaica, Persia, Peru, the Philippines, and Spain.

Participating students will present entertainment unique to their native lands. In addition, foreign students will exhibit handmade art goods from their countries, which will sell at cost, and special food delicacies typical of their homelands.

Recently, the International Relations Club fair proved greatly successful. During the past two years it has become established as one of the college's major social events. Based on this success, the club planned a more extensive program this year and will feature more exhibits and food samples than ever before, Jacobsen said.

Highlight of the program will be a fashion show of party dresses from Austria, China, India, Italy, Japan, the Philippines, Sweden, and the United States.

A sample program of the fair will be displayed during college hour on Friday, November 16.

Testing Helps In Choosing Majors

A wide variety of testing services are available to those in the process of attempting to choose a suitable major at the college, Waddington Blair, counsellor here, announced.

Testing services of this sort were set up to guide students in choosing a major and to evaluate the capabilities of each student. They were patterned after the services of adult counselling centers and are similar to the services offered by the University of California testing center.

Services have been drawn up to test new students and old students in the fields of engineering, business, criminology, mathematics, psychology, and many other fields.

"The only request that I will make to students interested in availing themselves of these services is that they make an appointment with their counselior," Blair said. "He will judge the best tests to be taken and send them to the testing office."

High school graduates, Blair said, may use the testing services after they file an application for admission. Many try-out courses are available for high school graduates interested in attending the college.

Students Return From NSA Meet, Prepare For California Conference

College To Send Six Delegates To CJCSGA Session

Six Associated Student leaders here will represent the college at the fall session of the California Junior College Student Government Association Thursday, Friday and Saturday, November 15, 16 and 17 in the capital city, according to AS President Wayne McFadden.

Representing the college at the conference will be McFadden, AS Vice-President Louise von Emster, Associated Women Student President Metta Weddleton, Finance Chairman Bob Varni, State Information Service Chairman Phil Malnick, and Council member Jim Kennedy.

Special attention will be given to the workshop discussion, since the effects will be pertinent to the California two-year colleges.

Ted D. Morse, president of the CJCSGA, has distributed to each member a code of conduct, listing the basic responsibilities, regulations of conduct and disciplinary action, all to be in effect at the conference.

In preparing these rules of conduct, Morse stated, "Since it is fundamental to the continuance of the CJCSGA that the rights of the majority shall not be jeopardized by the actions of a few, this Code of Conduct will be adopted."

WAYNE McFADDEN, AS president here, will be the leader of the six-man delegation attending the CJCSGA fall session in Sacramento.

National Group Seeks College As New SF Member

By Denny Delman

Specialized workshops concentrating on the field of higher education occupied the major portion of the United States National Student Association Western Region Congress, October 26, at Mills College.

Lynn T. White, president of Mills College, keynoted the conference the previous night, listing for the delegates ways and means of strengthening student government on the college campus.

Student government in general received a working over Saturday morning when a panel headed by Barbara Sweetland, editor of the Mills Weekly, poked into its varying aspects.

"Busy work," a term coined at the conference referring to the usual student business, was the subject of many comments made by the panel members.

The consensus was that legislative and executive actions should extend more into increasing student participation in government and delving into matters concerning educational problems on an universal basis.

Following Saturday's plenary session, the conference broke up into several morning discussion groups.

Talk concerning federal aid in education presented views tending to favor government grants on a limited basis. Discussion on academic freedom suggested that controversial political figures should be allowed on campus. Here, caution and good taste were stressed.

In other workshops, aid to the students in the form of scholarships by the NSA, student mortality (drop outs) rates, health facilities, and the college's role in world affairs brought out facts and figures which, in some cases were almost unbelievable.

Active participation in the NSA by this college is still in balance in lieu of many questions still unanswered by the student organization. San Francisco appears to be the only major city in the nation in which the NSA is not represented.

Los Angeles City College at present is the only California two-year college in the NSA. The Los Angeles delegation praised the NSA and asked that this college join.

Budgeted Groups Warned To Meet 100 Per Cent Rule

All organizations have been granted their budget requests for the current semester, but the money cannot be spent until all members have Associated Student cards, Bob Varni, finance chairman, announced recently.

According to the constitution, all members of budgeted organizations must meet the requirements of AS card representation before the money can be released, Varni stated.

Funds for the AS organizations come from card sales, AS bookstore, vending machines, athletics and miscellaneous activities. The total income is estimated from these activities, and funds are granted after the AS activities submit their requests.

This semester's budget is the highest of any Northern California two-year college, Varni stated. "On this basis, we plan to have one of the most successful student activities programs of any two-year college in Northern California."

College Photographers Soon To Take Part In Press Meet

In cooperation with the college, the 4th Annual Series of Pacific Coast Short Courses in Photo Journalism will open in San Francisco, at the Bellevue Hotel, 505 Geary Street, Friday and Saturday, November 15-16, Emmet Smith, photography instructor here, announced recently.

Sponsored by the National Press Photographers Association, the two-day program includes discussions on all phases of photo journalism, both from the editor's and the photographer's viewpoint, Smith further added.

Designed to help exchange ideas, find inspiration, and gain a better insight into the problems of the profession, this year's course is a result of several years of planning and experience by photographers and editors who make up the attendance, as well as the persons who are instrumental in planning the program.

Included in the program are speakers from the Denver Post, Life Magazine, New York Mirror Magazine, Milwaukee Journal, Los Angeles Mirror-News, Eastman Kodak Co., United Press and the United States Air Force.

Students who wish to enroll in the short course can do so by writing to Gordon Peters, 114 Oak Crest Road, San Anselmo, or by consulting Smith during his office hours at C-126 at the college. Enrollment is $15 for the two-day course, or $7.50 for one day only.

Council Continues Investigation Of CAB Attendance

Delinquency in attendance at Club Activities Board meetings was still the major issue before the Student Council last week, although the success of the freshman ball stole the limelight, and Mike Montieth, freshman class president, received council applause.

Reporting on an investigation of the CAB meeting absences, Debbie Rudser, special committee chairman, stated that sponsors and presidents of the delinquent organizations have been asked to attend the next council meeting and explain their position.

Agreement was unanimous among council and cabinet members that the freshman ball was a success. Final figures are not yet available on attendance, but estimates held that the total would exceed 1,500.

Montieth did reveal that he had received many inquiries as to the conducting of the cutest couple contest held at the dance. Bill Driscoll, freshman council member in charge of the contest, suggested that in the future a more complete statement of contest regulations be published and that judges and class officers should meet a few days prior to the dance.

Results of the vote on representatives to attend the state conference for two-year colleges were revealed by Associated Student Vice - President Louise von Emster. Metta Weddleton and Jim Kennedy were the victors and will accompany previously selected representatives Wayne McFadden, Miss von Emster, Bob Varni and Phil Malnick.

Further council activity found Malnick, state information service chairman, disclosing information on questionnaires sent out to California colleges early this semester. Information received will contribute to a handbook containing a list of California two-year colleges with pertinent facts concerning their history and traditions.

Men's Glee Club Invited To Sing For School Group

Men's Glee Club has been invited by the Schoolmasters to perform Tuesday evening, November 20, in Smith Hall, according to Robert Morton, vocal group director here.

An organization composed of male school [illegible] Schoolmasters have one dinner and meeting a year. The Glee Club will perform after dinner, according to Morton.

Interested music majors who have not yet applied for the music scholarships, made available by proceeds from sales of Music Listener's Guide, can still apply.

An award of $100 is provided for a third semester music major with a B average in music and a B average in other subjects, who has demonstrated outstanding leadership in performance courses, Morton stated.

Morton can be located in his office, C-339D, or in B-5, the group of temporary buildings behind Cloud Hall, Monday, Wednesday or Friday at 11 a.m.

Preference Given To Veterans For Post Office Jobs

Twelve hundred men students, both veterans and non-veterans, were screened recently for a variety of jobs for Christmas post-office work, Joseph Amori, placement director, announced last week.

Seven hundred veterans who had previously worked with the post-office were given priority to work as postal clerks and heavy truck drivers. The jobs pay $1.85 per hour with a ten per cent overtime pay for late shift workers. Amori added that opportunities for overtime are good.

Non-veterans will be given an opportunity to work if there is need for their services. Veterans will be processed for the full week. If there are still vacancies at the completion of this period, a quota will be assigned to the placement bureau to fill these jobs. Three hundred non-veterans were given jobs in the post-office last year.

Other Christmas jobs are still available, provided applications are turned in as soon as possible for processing, Amori stated.

Students can apply for one of the following jobs that are still open: railroad handlers, department store sales clerks, and distributors at trucking concerns.

These applications are being taken by the placement director here and by several other Christmas period job employers in the San Francisco bay area.

Amori advised interested students to file their applications in S-188 between 10 a.m. and 12 noon and 2 to 4 p.m. immediately.

Thanksgiving: A Day To Express Thanks For American Way Of Life

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

MORNINGS are getting chilly this time of year, and humans, with their usual aptness for self-preservation, protect themselves by having warmer holiday feelings.

The coming holidays are those which remind us that time must be taken out to count our blessings and pay reverence. Thanksgiving Day is one of these.

With our spirits swirling about in the winds of everyday cares, we tend to dart into enclosures and seek harbor. The setting aside of such a Thanksgiving Day is our way of recognizing that some of our ships of distress have found safe refuge.

Yet the cares, some petty, some valid, that surround us in our movements through this world are not easily cast aside, even for a few days. We must condition ourselves to look at the dividends coming out of the kind of life we are fortunate enough to enjoy.

Tradition has it that we feast on Thanksgiving Day. An historian would quickly reason this is a carry-over from the Pilgrims' first banquet of gratefulness. And he would be right, for the Pilgrims came to the land for the nourishment of their ideals.

An avid gourmet might add his own renditions, concluding that one cannot help but be thankful after eating one's fill of a delicately prepared meal. He offers food for thought.

As for the common man, he may explain this unusual period of thankfulness by expressing his relief. The trek to the fields of work was postponed for a day. Some students may regard it in the same manner.

A housewife, viewing the coming kitchen maneuvers could rightly feel cheated out of a day of rest. Turkeys find themselves in awkward positions just about this time. But for the efficiency of the butchers, we would no doubt hear similar squawks from these birds.

Of course, this is the wrong attitude to take. It is hard to break the routine of selfish reasoning that seems to come to us as a necessity.

Let's stop for a look at the landscape, and with the modest bearing of the Pilgrim Fathers, consider our innumerable privileges, carrying the word Thanksgiving out to its fullest sense. The turkey might even taste better.

Special exhibition dances will focus on each of the following national groups: Greek students will dance the Kreaton, Tsamikos, and Hasapikos, around a statue of Athena; Israeli students will dance the Hava Nagila and Lech Lamidbar; Philippine students, the Tinakling (bamboo dance), Bao (cocoanut dance), and Bulakiakan (flower dance); Latin-American students will dance the Cha Cha, Mambo, and Argentine Tango; students from the United States will present exhibition square dancing.

Students from Arabia, Burma, Jamaica, and Peru will present entertainment unique to their native lands, Jacobsen said.

Highlight of the program will be a fashion show of party dresses from Austria, China, India, Italy, Japan, the Philippines, Sweden, and the United States.

A snap-shot preview of the program will be presented by foreign students in the cafeteria during college hour on Friday, November 16.

Chairmen for the countries represented at the IRC fair are as follows: Arabia, Lee Botto; China, Jane Lenz; Estonia, Bill Lohmus; Fiji, Husain Khan; Guam, Soledad Gamacho; Gypsy, Lydia Norwood; Greece, Irene Vagames; Israel, Gayl Borneman; Croatia, Natalie Zalesson; Finland, Anna-Lisa Domars; Japan, Toriko Kuwahara; Mexico, Mayra Martinez; Persia, Parviz Arshad; Peru, Luis Origi; Spain, Miguel Rios; The United States, Ed Leion.

Committee Plans Scholarships From Bookstore Profits

A recommendation to offer scholarships to worthy students if profits from the student bookstore, The Ramporium, exceed $10,000 is being considered for presentation to the bookstore committee, Oscar Anderson, co-ordinator of Educational Management, disclosed recently.

Although this plan is still in the drafting stage, Anderson pointed out that the student bookstore has had an annual profit in the past few years in excess of $10,000, and that this extra revenue was used in student activities.

Certain legal questions will have to be studied, Anderson added, and the matter would need approval by the bookstore committee, of which Harold Spears, superintendent of schools, is chairman. Also on the committee is Louis G. Conlan, president of the college; Anderson, and two men from the office of the superintendent of schools, Tom Hounsley and Joseph McElligott.

Before a recommendation goes to the bookstore committee, it will be discussed at the Student Council. Anderson encouraged students at the college to voice their opinion, either by writing letters to The Guardsman, or by talking with class officers.

Kenton Orchestra Presents Concert Here On Tuesday

Stan Kenton, along with his 20-piece orchestra and new vocalist, Ann Richards, will appear here next Tuesday, November 20, according to Anne Smith, chairman of the Associated Student Kenton Arrangement Committee.

This special performance, which is part of a tour of bay area colleges, will be presented between 3:30 and 5:30 p.m. in the men's gymnasium.

Tickets are currently on sale at the Student Bank in Smith Hall for $1 with an Associated Student card and $1.50 without. Tickets will also be sold at the door, Miss Smith added.

Highlight of the program will be a fashion show of party dresses from Austria, China, India, Italy, Japan, the Philippines, Sweden, and the United States.

Charleston Era To Highlight AWS Tea Nov. 30

YES, it's the same Metta Weddleton, AWS president, pictured above minus her Charleston attire, which will be worn during the semi-annual AWS tea and fashion show to be held here on Friday, November 30, from 2:50 p.m. until 5 p.m. to acquaint high school senior girls with the college.

By Carol Harris

Plans are now being completed for the semi-annual Associated Women Student tea and fashion show, there of which will be the Charleston era, and which will be held Friday, November 30, from 2:50 to 5 p.m., according to Metta Weddleton, AWS president.

Honored guests at the affair will be the graduating women seniors from the San Francisco public high schools. The reason that no parochial seniors will be in attendance, Miss Weddleton explained, is that only those students graduating this semester are issued invitations. Parochial high schools hold graduation only once a year in the spring.

The purpose of the fashion show and tea is to enable the graduating seniors to become acquainted with the college and some of its faculty and students.

H. Liebes Company department store will present the fashion show which is scheduled to be held in the library of Cloud Hall. Commentator for the fashion event will be Pam Havner, president of Delta Psi sorority.

Now and Then will be the theme for the show. "Then" referring to the Charleston era. This theme, Miss Weddleton stated, will be carried out by the hostesses and committee members who will wear costumes reminiscent of 1920.

The "Now" part of the theme will be represented by the fashions from Liebes to be shown. These fashions will include everything from sports-wear to formal and evening dress. Entertainment will also be provided.

Models will be women students of the college. There will be 14 models in all, seven sorority members and seven non-sorority women, and a tea will be held following the show. Besides tea, cookies, cakes, and petits fours will also be served.

All AS members are invited to attend and will receive special invitations. Three hundred nurses who are currently taking courses here have also been invited, Miss Weddleton added.

Committee chairmen for the tea and fashion show include Darlene Enfield, invitations; Eleanor Gandert and Virginia Hase, food and serving; Elise Laubscher, entertainment; Beverly Monderer, publicity; Louise Mowry, programs; Kathileen Mulligan, decorations; Deborah Rudser, hostess; Marilyn Shooiman, registration, and Anne Smith, models.

Three AS Groups Now Subject To Budget Fund Suspension For 100 Per Cent Card Rule Failure

Because of their failure to meet the 100 per cent Associated Student membership rule, three AS groups are presently subject to budget fund suspension, Bob Varni, finance chairman here, revealed last week.

These delinquent groups are Alpha Gamma Sigma, campus police, and the band and orchestra.

Every organization that receives AS funds is subject to the AS constitutional ruling that each member must be an AS card holder, Varni stated.

At present, only 45 to 65 per cent of the members of these delinquent organizations have cards. The campus police, for example, have only six card-holding members, Varni noted, yet this group was granted the largest budget of its history this semester.

There is no reason for a student not to have an AS card, Varni asserted, as those financially unable to purchase a card may use an alternative method of satisfying this requirement.

This alternative consists of signing a pledge to earn the card by doing six hours of constructive work for the college or the AS. To obtain further information on this matter, interested students were referred to Dean Ralph Hillsman in S-148.

Originally, budget amounts granted to the delinquent organizations were as follows: Alpha Gamma Sigma, $180; campus police, $700; and band and orchestra, $540.

Four Clubs Ruled Off Campus As CAB 'Gets Tough'

In keeping with their new "get tough" policy, and with four clubs recently ruled off campus, a Club Activities Board committee last week suggested fining all clubs that failed to turn in charter petitions by last Thursday's deadline date, Lon Earnshaw, CAB president, announced.

Clubs and organizations participating in college activities to be recognized on campus must be chartered by the CAB, Earnshaw explained. Failure to submit a petition would result in an off campus recommendation by the CAB resulting in loss of college recognition and use of its facilities, Earnshaw further stated.

This fate has already been meted out in Student Council action, since four clubs delinquent in attendance at CAB meetings were ruled off campus last week.

All four received notice of the pending council action, with the Chess Club and the Sigma Tau Sigma not responding and the Merchandising and Acacia Clubs failing to organize this semester.

By recommending that a small fine be assessed for late petitions, Earnshaw feels the CAB will command more respect from campus organizations and increase a treasury which is practically non-existent since budgets were slashed early in the semester.

Proposed fines would, of course, not be legal except by constitutional amendment, Earnshaw pointed out, adding that this proposition must be introduced as a possible amendment by the Student Council, approved and then receive the affirmative vote of the AS before any action can be taken by the CAB.

"I feel," Earnshaw concluded, "that the adoption of this measure would be constructive and would contribute much to the standing of the CAB in college government here."

Modernization Of College To Begin

With the recent passage of Proposition A, the $27,000,000 school bond issue, this college can now look forward to much-needed modernization and addition, Louis G. Conlan, college president, revealed recently.

The first project on the agenda, Conlan stated, will be the remodeling of a laboratory in the Science Building, which will commence sometime this semester.

Planning for the construction of new buildings will be started soon, although the actual construction itself will not begin for approximately two years.

This delay is due to the time involved in obtaining necessary plans and specifications, Conlan pointed out.

"I want to express my appreciation for the generous and enthusiastic assistance which was rendered by the faculty and student groups here who participated in the support of Proposition A," Conlan stated.

New Policy Of Modern Moral Values In Government More Befuddling Than Machiavellism

MORAL values in "modern" governments and international dealings—and since when was this policy adopted? It certainly is as surprising to us, as it would undoubtedly be to Niccoli Machiavelli. In fact, he would be literally flabbergasted.

"You must be guided by your moral values," shout members of the United Nations at Egypt, France, Great Britain, Israel and Russia.

"We are only striving for what is morally correct," declare Egypt, France, Great Britain and Russia in return.

"'Egyptian soil, sovereignty, and its very existence'" are being threatened, Egypt announces, and in return from other nations she wants "'food, clothes, Money, and medicine.'" She is, of course, morally innocent of provoking any of the warlike affairs.

Who could be so narrow-minded as to accuse her of attempting to strangle Israel economically out of existence by preventing her from using the Suez canel? When Egypt mortgaged her cotton crop for two years to Russia in return for military supplies, she was only trying to arm herself against big, brutal Israel.

Nor was the Egyptian shipload of arms, which was stopped by France while on its way to North African rebels, intended to encourage a revolution. The arms, no doubt, were to be used only for deer hunting in the spring. And not to be aimed at the heads of Frenchmen, as Machiavelli, a truly pessimistic young fellow, would think.

Now France and Great Britain, they are led by their moral values. They were only attempting to keep the Suez canal open to traffic and to protect feeble Israel. That's why the canal will be closed to traffic for a number of weeks and an Israeli aircraft operating in the Gulf of Suez was intentionally shot down by the British.

Israel, too, is a firm believer in moral principles. That's why she attacked Egypt and gained additional land, which she is now hesitant to return. No, no one could be so foolish as to propose that humble Israelites envision a future resurrection of the kingdom of David and Solomon.

And Russian, she would like very much to see moral principles enforced in Egypt (Suez), as they were so adequately enforced in Hungary. In fact, Russia voluntarily crushed the Hungarian government, army, and people just in order to set them on the true pathway to moral enlightenment.

Of course, all the member nations of the UN are governed in their actions by humanitarian motives. Such as: honesty is the best policy for the other fellow to have; love thy neighbor if he's bigger than you, and if not, then love his wife; alms for the poor is the best policy, especially when you're poor. That's why no one, not even one of the Arabian bloc, offers any form of asylum opportunities for some 100,000 destitute Arab refugees living on the Gaza strip for a number of years.

After noting the frustrating confusion which is ensuing with "modern moral governments," Machiavelli, being indeed a rather cynical fellow, would probably suggest a revamping of our moral values. Or maybe the international dealings would be facilitated if all nations would just adhere to the same code of moral principles.

However, after considering and being befuddled by the popularity of warlike scrimmages, we think: More heads may roll, but at this stage of the game the better form of national and international politics seems to be Machiavellism.

Stan Kenton, Orchestra Give Concert As Ann Richards Swings To Rhythm

ROCK'N, Roll'n and Romp'n, Stomp'n Elvis Presley won't be there, but one can't expect everything for a dollar with an Associated Student card and a dollar and a half without.

As one of the major attractions of the semester, Stan Kenton and his 20-piece concert band will perform in the men's gymnasium next Tuesday, November 20, from 3:30 p.m. until 5:30 p.m.

The hip swinging and swaying department will be handled by songstress Ann Richards, who is reputed to shake a shaplier leg than Presley. And photographs reveal her to be a blonde, with longer hair than Presley's. No doubt, the concert will be quite good. Rather, that is.

For the performance, the Kenton Orchestra will receive 90 per cent of the gate receipts. The remaining proceeds of 10 per cent will be turned over to the Associated Students who will manage have made the necessary arrangements for the concert.

With the limited amount of AS funds available, it would be impossible for the AS to finance a concert of this caliber because of a possible apathetic attitude by the student body. However, if enough interest is shown by students and faculty members, similar big-name bands or celebrities may be encouraged to try this arrangement more often, according to Ralph Hillsman, dean of student activities here.

Therefore, as an additional inducement for attendance, regular Kenton concert ticket prices were cut almost in half and are now on sale at the Student Bank in Smith Hall. A record turnout of students and faculty members is anticipated by the Associated Students.

Here is the opportunity to hear modern jazz at its finest and to judge it, as it is being presented by one of the nation's better known groups of instrumentalists.

The Bohemian — Weeds On Other Side Of Them Thar Hills

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

OPTIMISM is what keeps men going despite the hard luck which prevails during their existence.

The human character is conscious of the circle that holds him to the dreariness of his every day life. One is constantly scheming how to break the bounds of an imagined, exaggerated poverty of social or economic prestige.

An individual explores life as he knows it. In doing this he much resembles a fish imprisoned in a small pond, constantly seeking an outlet into a promising stream that flows into a realm of magnificent waters.

He accepts his position in society with a grumble. Usually no forceful manifestations, caused by strained resentment or bitterness, erupt because he is gradually accustomed to his state. But in the process of maturation it dawns upon him that he has somehow been left out. He wants more gravy.

No one is really ever satisfied. We are gluttonous in our wants out of life. Success is only a label that the supposed possessor of it uses to hide his disappointments, that the destitute ones use as a goal.

Man's nature does not allow for success, in the sense that our thirst for improvement is never quenched. It is doubtful that perfection in anything can really be achieved. Our vanity steps in and hurries to deny this.

There are ways to acquiesce to this fervor that always burns within us. Material gain is one of the least gratifying means. Money, money, everyone struggles for its accumulation. When they have it, they want more and so on in an endless current which never quite reaches the magnificent waters of happiness.

Things are dreary, but hopes of a prosperous future keep one alive, so to speak. When these scapegoat dreams are fulfilled, alas, others replace them and one keeps going in that circle.

Sometimes events occur or influences are projected into the individual so that he totally loses his infatuation for these goals, dreams. But others quickly take their place and the comedy on the stage that is life begins anew. We are the unfortunate protagonists.

The far-off hills are always greener. As soon as we succeed in grazing upon some of their grass which feeds the state of satisfaction, happiness, we discern other slopes. And these look so much more tempting and promising.

If these harsh words have by any chance shaken the student from his blissful state of unawareness and have sprinkled his unfaltering character with blemishes of pessimism, we apologize.

One way for him to lessen this activated tension would be by attending the college's little theater production of Lennox Robinson's, 'The Far-Off Hills.'

He could watch the drama of other people's search for better grazing grounds. And so he may relax in a this-could-never-happen-to-me state.

It is doubtful whether we will come to realize that weeds also grow in the green grass of them thar hills.

Advantages Of Horse, Buggy Era Noted

It's A Long Way From Model-T's To Fishtails, But College Parking Problem Stays At Victorian Level

By Renee Olson

Back in the good old days of the horseless carriage, a Model T Ford was the epitome of wealth and prestige. It is interesting to note the changes each motor company makes over the years; from the three-pedaled four-cyclinder engines to the one-pedaled eight-cylinder models complete with modified fishtails.

One thing the years haven't changed is the parking problem. Even in 1926, the total number of registered cars in the city and county of San Francisco was 106,400. Today, the number is doubled and more, reaching a registration high of 252,700.

Of course, in the late Victorian age, there weren't the modern parking lots or spaces paid for by pennies and nickels, or were there multi-decked garages mooring sports cars and Mark II's; but there was still a scarcity of parking spaces along the populated avenues and sand dunes.

Today, parking is a major sociological problem, reaching from New York to Los Angeles. Even at the college, parking has become a topic of conversation and concern. Entering one of the three lots in the early morning hours is a problem of frustration and disappointment. With 650 spaces and 1,600 parking permits, students appear haggard in the morning classrooms, no doubt tired from searching for parking places.

The interesting thing to note about the college is that the problem actually has never been solved. Even dating from 1940 when the Science Building was constructed, the difficulty was evident. In those years, the only spaces available were on opposite ends of the Science Building—now Hurley Village and Smith Hall—plus 240 other spaces along Phelan Avenue.

This was all very well during the dry seasons, but with the advent of the liquid sunshine period, the "lots," devoid of marked spaces, were transformed into veritable mud holes. At least one can say that the college did have a modified swimming pool.

Now, with the highest enrollment in the history of the college, parking difficulties are at a crux. There seems to be no alleviation with the estimated future enrollment figures. One of the few unquestionable problems is the future scarcity of parking spaces.

Some straight-laced Victorians predicted that the horseless carriage would be useless in the modern world. In a sense, cars will be useless unless the parking problem can be solved. Perhaps the ancients were right. Maybe it would be advantageous to return to the horse and buggy era. Then again, although cars eat gas, at least they don't wear feed bags.

Now that Proposition A has been passed, perhaps students will no longer have to rely on their chauffeurs to bring them to the college.

One Slip Leads To Opportunity

In this twentieth century, a totally new and unprecedented athlete has come to the fore—the hospital athlete.

These great sportsmen have never really made the team, but they can boast a tremendous record of truly Olympian encounters at their local clinic.

One of the leaders in this field is a student here who, while running out on the football field during his third period physical education class, slipped on the wet grass. He was taken to the hospital with a wrenched back, whereupon he dramatically reported to the doctors that he was injured on the football field of the college.

His medical file also shows such important injuries in basketball, baseball, and ping pong.

Now, everyone can have just as dramatic a record. The only requisite is simply being an opportunist.

If Joe College trips and pulls a muscle while buying a hot dog at the college track finals, he shouldn't say to the doctor that he had an accident while buying a hot dog. He should say proudly that he pulled a muscle at the college track finals.

Wages the admiring glances, extra attention and cleaner bandages he gets.

Big Leap This Year

Ratio Gives Edge To Women Here In Wedding Race

By Bob Sims

Breathe easy men; though it's still leap year, chances are that the joyful state of bachelorhood will be retained by those who started this semester in a like manner —especially at the college.

Current enrollment figures reveal that women students at day classes are outnumbered by a count of 3,738 to 1,504. Mathematically speaking, the ratio is 2.485305 mpw (men per woman) or approximately two and one half to one.

The fellow who succumbs to the call of matrimony this year has only himself to blame, for with one and a half "fall" guys for every gal, no self-respecting bachelor should take the plunge.

If, however, there are a few social-minded lads on campus, the enrollment split has its disadvantages. Dates are at a premium high. The college female now realizes that she can always go out with the other one and a half if her man fails to meet the standard.

Competition should be keen now that the male student must have a one and one-half times newer car, one and one-half times more money, one and one-half times more personality, and be one and one-half times better looking than his rival and a half, if he hopes to stand a chance with the college Miss.

Advantages for the college lass are almost innumerable. She can look forward to exhausting the resources of not one, not two, but two and one-half males this semester.

Because of her scarcity on campus, she may command more favors, get more attention, be less inhibited, and certainly she will be appreciated much more than she would otherwise.

This all boils down to one fact. If the college were located in Massachusetts, where the ratio of women per man is seven to one, this story could have never been written. Ah, yes, bachelors, breathe a sigh of relief.

The next time the class met, instructor Marjorie Cullen asked the masculine group to write on The Attributes Of The Perfect Gentleman Before college authorities cry out in anguish, it must be noted that the two incidents had no connection whatsoever.

Rams Trample Bulldog Rivals, 34-0

Ramblings

By Mike Berger

RED SANDERS has attained more than his measure of football honors, both in his coaching at Vanderbilt and UCLA, but the 1956 season is already his most talented achievement.

If results in the won-lost column as a direct consequence of coaching are any guide to success, then Red Sanders is the coach of the year.

After the bloody path of PCC penalties had hacked its way through the heart of a UCLA club that had an outstanding season in 1955, the prospects for this year were about as bright as a democrat's in Hungary.

Gone was Ronnie Knox, the talented tailback with the terrible father; Tom Adams, a possible all-coast end; and another standout lineman, Deany Caruncho. To add to the carnage, the insult of proclaiming six seniors as half-innocent and half-guilty was made. These players had the generous choice of picking any five consecutive games in the schedule to play in, with the penalty of sitting out the others.

Small wonder that when the final verdict on the Bruins (and others) came in, Sanders was heard to mutter, "Why did I ever leave Vanderbilt?" He may not have, had he known that during his Pacific Coast reign as king of the coaches, the Pacific Coast Conference would suddenly expose what had been going on under its nose for many years.

With this bleak situation at hand after five seasons of peace, prosperity and progress, a lesser man would indeed have returned to Vanderbilt, or any suitable place, as long as it was far, far away from Westwood. Not Sanders.

The season opened on a shaky, if winning, note as the Bruins edged Utah, 13-7, a count which might have stood at the end of one quarter in '55. After an horrendous trouncing at the hands of Michigan, it looked as though the "hate Sanders" clique was going to have a banner year, if the Bruins weren't.

But the leaky defense suddenly grew up after the Wolverine loss, and promptly held Oregon and Washington State scoreless; ruined the Cal passing en route to a 34-20 smashing; had a brief second half let-down against Oregon State which meant a 21-7 loss; but rose up again to smother Stanford, 14-13.

This defense has been the greatest single point in the phenomenal doings of Sanders and UCLA this year.

It now appears that the Bruins will have something close to a 6-3 season in '56, just a fair year for most recent UCLA squads, but in our opinion the finest piece of coaching and leadership exhibited in any college under such adverse circumstances. To add to the wounds, all USC and UCLA prospective '57 senior players were recently declared ineligible by the conference.

Oh, we know, Bud Wilkinson of Oklahoma is a great coach with a great team, and he will probably win the vote as the outstanding mentor for this season. The Sooners don't have penalties for illegal payments because, luckily, that vogue hasn't caught on in their area.

We think it appropriate to end this piece with a quote from a gridiron definition by Dan Parker of the New York Daily Mirror. UPRIGHTS: Colleges that claim to be purer because their payoff checks don't bounce.

Rams Host Falling Comets At Kezar Friday; Costans May Try Upset Via Passing

By Jim Rohner

In what could conceivably be one of the finer passing displays of the season, West Contra Costa moves into Kezar Stadium to meet the City College team this Friday at 2 p.m.

With nothing to lose, the Comets may well take to the air early in the game to get past a rugged Ram defense that is improving with every game.

Coach Don Doll, who may be remembered for his professional football days with the Detroit Lions, Washington Redskins and Los Angeles Rams, has two fine quarterbacks whom he may alternate in an attempt to upset a heavier, better balanced Ram squad.

Carl Taliaferro has shown that he is a good clutch passer and capable of running with the ball, while George Mitchell is still considered as the best long distance passer on the Comet team.

Of course, the Comets will be seeking ways to spring touted halfback LeRoy McNear, who is a deceptive broken field runner and the leading ground gainer for the club. With Rudy Jackson or Jim Gary at the other half, and Jim Handy at fullback, the Comets could test the Ram defense on the ground also.

Employing a rugged line composed of Charles Bruce at center, Jim O'Donnell and Sam Mullenax at guards, and Bill Carr and Fag Brown, tackles, there are plenty of big, fast-moving blockers to support either a running or passing game. Ends Bob Greer and Johnny Lucas will be the favorite targets of the air arm.

Injuries to the Comet squad have been a serious problem since the outset of the campaign, and have been the chief factor in their sputtering offense.

West Contra Costa sported an unenviable 1-4 conference record through the games of November 3, and recently lost to league leading Stockton, 36-13.

Soccermen Top Cal By 2-1, Face State In Friday Crucial

San Francisco State's hard-to-beat booters will host the Ram's undefeated soccer squad next Friday, November 16, in a game that involves the college's play-off hopes in the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference and a shot at the league's title.

While the Rams have won all of their games, to take a 4-0 lead into last week's NCISC's standings, the Gators proved a surprisingly strong eleven when, early in the league, they played a 1-1 tie against the eight-consecutive-years defending champions, University of San Francisco Dons, now in the conference's second place after winning two and tying State, with no losses.

"City College has to defeat San Francisco State to assure ourselves of the playoff," Coach Roy Diederichsen said.

On Saturday, November 3, at Balboa soccer stadium, the Rams put up a battle in order to maintain themselves in the conference's contention, and defeated the University of California booters, up to then undefeated and unscored on, with a 2-1 minimum count.

Sixty minutes and more than half time was gone before Rene Carrillo, City College's left wing, put the Rams ahead as he booted home the game's first goal in a thrilling display of ball control. Both teams' defensive lines were tight, Joe Congi, the Ram's star goalie, impeccable in his post while the forward lines staged consistent attacks on the fullbacks.

Tony Quiteno, inside left, gave the Rams a boost as he scored a penalty kick to increase the college's count to a 2-0 lead over the Bears. Ten minutes later, in the game's first quarter after bottling up the Rams, Pablo Dibos, Cal's center forward, scored the first goal for the Bears on the game's second penalty kick.

From then on, both teams increased continued drives to perforate the other's net in desperate efforts by the Bears to tie and, if possible, win.

Of the Rams-USF match, to be held at the Dons' field on November 24, and which is to be the season's last game before playoff call, the college's soccer mentor declared, "Despite the fact of the Dons' close wins and their tie with the Gators, USF has the conference's most powerful soccer squad."

The line-up against San Francisco State College will be Congi, goalkeeper; Roy Davis, left fullback; Lon Earnshaw, right fullback; Al Morales, center half; Ivan Carrillo, right halfback; Paul Oryall, left fullback; Rene Carrillo, right wing; Gustavo Ortiz, inside right; Joaquin Rodriguez, center forward; Quiteno, inside left, and Tom Erasmy, left wing.

Air Force Academy May Get Jr. Rose Bowl Bid

Coach Buck Shaw's Air Force Academy team may be offered the eastern bid to the Junior Rose Bowl in Pasadena on December 8.

Pasadena officials last week asked Colonel Robert Whitlow, athletic director for the Falcons, if the academy would be interested in participating in the normally all-two-year college affair.

Shaw and Whitlow replied that the Falcons, who have averaged 46 points a game in compiling a 5-0 record, would have to wait until the end of their season, on November 24, to make a decision. The academy is expected to accept if still undefeated.

Although playing small four-year colleges this year, the Falcon team is made up only of freshmen and sophomores and thus was tendered the bid.

Mutt And Jeff Combo Helps Boost Ram Line Through 1956 Campaign

By Mario Cassullo

A surprising Mutt and Jeff combination has helped to bolster the Ram line this fall, and the men in question are Pete Morgan and Bill Barrington.

These two have several things in common: they are both linemen and both products of Lincoln High as well as being first string at the tackle and center slots.

Morgan, who weighs 235 and is 5'11" in height, is the biggest man on the squad. Barrington, who is in complete contrast to Morgan, weighs only 155 while standing 5'10" in height.

Injuries in both the line and backfield have plagued the Rams all season, but Morgan and Barrington have helped to patch up Coach Grover Klemmer's defensive and offensive units.

Barrington, playing center, seems almost incredible considering his weight. As the smallest man on the squad, he plays one of the toughest positions on the field. A player weighing 155 is often thought to be too light for the backfield.

Asked if he would like to play in the backfield, Barrington declined, saying that he has been playing center ever since the eighth grade. Being small is considered a disadvantage in playing a line position, but Barrington claims he has an advantage in that he can move around faster than most big men.

Another surprising point is that he feels that blocking for the passer is his easiest chore. This usually means trying to block several rushing opponents who are bigger than he is.

Klemmer was asked if he thinks that the size and height is a handicap to Barrington. "The only handicap is that he is playing first string without much substitution help," he replied.

Morgan, who possesses a scholarly look and is stockily built, was asked what football assignment he enjoyed the most. He stated that cross-blocking and double-teaming an opposing lineman on trap plays is "interesting."

Asked how he thought the Rams would fare in the final game of the season, Morgan summed it up by saying, "We think we'll win the last one but it will be tough."

Dillard, Craft Runs Lead To Third Shut-Out Win

By Lou Lucia

Receipting for its third consecutive shutout, the City College football team literally ran over San Mateo by gaining 428 yards rushing to down the Bulldogs, 34-0, last Friday at Kezar Stadium.

Led by Jerry Dillard who gained 158 yards in five carries for a 31.3 average per carry, the Ram rushing attack struck for four of the five touchdowns.

Big Eight Grid Standings

Team—	Won	Lost	Tied
Stockton	6	0	0
Rams	5	1	0
Santa Rosa	4	2	0
Oakland	4	2	0
Modesto	2	4	0
Sacramento	1	5	0
San Mateo	1	5	0
W. Contra Costa	1	5	0

While the college team ground out yardage, the Bulldogs started the game with a pass, and their last play of the game was also a pass, throwing 42 more passes in between. The 44 attempted passes must be close to a league record, if it does not surpass the old mark.

Appropriately, Dillard first put the Rams on the scoreboard with a 78 touchdown run around his own right end after taking a pitch-out from quarterback John Panagakis. Only 4:25 were left in the first quarter when Panagakis' kick split the uprights to make the score 7-0.

Later in the same period, Gene Craft took off on a 60-yard jaunt to the San Mateo 33. Panagakis passed to Dick Chute for 27 yards and a first down on the six-yard line. Craft finished what he had started by going over the goal line from there, with only eight seconds left in the opening quarter. Panagakis' kick was blocked by Rich Giusti, and the score was 13-0.

With Craft, Dillard, and Norm Somoza carrying, the Rams took the second half kick-off and marched 80 yards in seven plays to gain a substantial lead. Craft scampered the final 20 yards behind a host of blockers to account for his second touchdown. Panagakis converted and the score was 20-0.

Another third period touchdown came after Tony Jones recovered a Bulldog fumble on the City College 32. Panagakis passed to Larry Beldon for 26 yards, and the ball rested on the San Mateo 42. Panagakis again went back to pass, and as the line rushed, he ran past them, cut to the north sideline and, after receiving a valuable block from Leroy Thomas at the 18, went the rest of the way untouched. He then accounted for the extra point and the Rams led 27-0 with six minutes left in the period.

The final scoring came with 4:45 left in the final period. The college team was delayed a number of times but would not be denied as they scored on a Panagakis to Ron Taylor pass to eat up the final 13 yards needed. After the 11-play march, Thomas took over conversion honors by booting from the 10 to account for the 34th and final point.

Block SF Meets In College Hour

The next Block SF meeting will be called to order this Friday, November 16, in C-246 during college hour, Bill Fischer, sponsor of the group, recently announced.

During the meeting several topics of discussion will be brought up on which debate began in a previous meeting. Top matter is the drafting of an amendment to put before the Associated Students for the next college election. The amendment will provide for the college to award a jacket or sweater to the winners of a second Block SF.

Also to be discussed will be the adoption of a design for watch chains. They will be uniform in size and will have the Block SF crest on their face. They would be available to all Block SF awardees at a nominal fee, Fischer stated.

Squad Cuts Mark Cage Activity As Opening Tilt Nears

After five practice sessions head coach Sid Phelan has cut his 45-man squad down to 28 members to make the squad smaller and easier to work with.

With the first practice game drawing closer, in which the Rams encounter the San Jose Jaguars here on Friday, November 30, at 3:30 p.m. in the men's gymnasium, Coach Phelan hopes to have his team well prepared.

Only 15 members of the 28-man squad will compose the Ram traveling team which plays five practice games and seven league games away from home. The present roster is as follows:

Clarence Grider and Al Martino are the only members of last year's team who went on to finish their collegiate careers in basketball. Grider, the ex-All-American ace from Lowell High School, is now playing up north at Oregon State, while Martino is finishing his collegiate career at San Francisco State.

Guardsman Publication To Resume December 5

Because of the Thanksgiving Holidays and a previously determined cut in the budget of The Guardsman, this will be the last issue until Wednesday, December 5, according to Bob Kauth, editor of The Guardsman.

The official college calendar calls for no classes on Thursday and Friday, November 22 and 23, because of the Thanksgiving Holidays, and classes will resume on Monday, November 26.

Mid-term week ends on Friday, November 30, and the college hour for this date will feature the regular club meetings, according to Ralph Hillsman, dean of men.

Annual Christmas Concert Scheduled For December 13

Preparations are under way for the 22nd annual Christmas Concert, which will be held Thursday night, December 13, in the Cloud Hall library, according to Robert Morton, vocal group director here.

Singing and instrumental groups participating in this annual affair are the following: A Cappella Choir, Men's Glee Club, Treble Clef and the band.

In addition to the singing and instrumental gronps, there will be four vocal soloists. R. H. Millis and Joyce Preston have already been chosen with an additional man and woman yet to be selected, Morton stated.

The concert will consist of traditional Christmas music with emphasis on Christmas carols. The Hallelujah Chorus from The Messiah; Joseph and the Angels, from scenes of the Holy Infancy, by Virgil Thompson, the text taken from the Bible will also be heard, according to Morton.

The concert will be repeated in an abbreviated form during college hour Friday, December 14, in the Cloud Hall library.

Two Films Marked On College Hour Schedule

Travel Royal and Majesty In the Air will be shown during college hour, 10:40-11:20, this Friday in S-136, under the direction of Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor here.

Emphasis in Travel Royal is on the British people and their historic background, their traditions and their spirit.

Majesty In The Air deals with bygone eras of British history.

Three more movies will be shown in this series, Devlin said. They include Snow, November 30; Beaver Valley, December 7; and Petrified River, December 14.

Placement Office Seeks Qualified Workers For Christmas Vacation Employment; Job Variety Offered

By Art Madamba

With approximately 2,500 students placed in the Bay Area for the approaching Christmas season in a wide variety of job assignments, the college placement center is still in search of qualified workers for the vacation period, Joseph Amori, placement director, announced recently.

Department stores and specialty shops are expecting one of the largest Christmas spending crowds in years because of the Christmas inventory which is at a new all-time high, Amori said.

As a consequence, there is heavy hiring on the part of all employers for the holiday rush, which is expected to start during the Thanksgiving recess period and reach a peak around December 15.

In addition, all mail handlings facilities are also expected to reach a new height this year, Amori said, adding that many extras have been processed by all government agencies for work as mail handlers, carriers, truck drivers and in other capacities.

Qualified workers for jobs such as freight handling, sales and wrapping, are needed for specialized business firms. Male students who can do heavy work, are physically strong and weigh around 165 and up, desiring this kind of work are requested to report to the placement service in S-187.

Especially needed are women students who have had experience in fancy wrapping. Finger dexterity is the requirement for inexperienced workers; Amori declared, and jobs pay from $1.45 per hour and up, depending upon previous training and experience.

Hiring is still going on, and Amori expects it to continue through the Christmas vacation season.

New Play Makes December Bow

Mooneys Kid Don't Cry, the first student directed play to be staged at the college this year, will be presented sometime during the first two weeks of December, according to Mel Rassmussen, student director.

Stan Weston, as Mooney, plays the part of a dreamer who loves the outdoors, and doesn't like being tied down by marriage.

Dawn Roberts, a newcomer to the college presentations, portrays Jane Mooney, a commercial minded money saver.

Final performances of The Far Off Hills will be presented Friday and Saturday nights, November 16 and 17, at 8 p.m. in the little theater.

Council In Debate With Police Over Report Procedures

Pointing out that the Campus Police is a budgeted organization possessing privileges and obligations no different from other college organizations, Associated Vice-President Louise von Emster voiced Student Council opinion toward the indifference of Campus Police Chief Bill Traynor here last week.

This address occured when Traynor, an infrequent visitor to council meetings, was asked for his weekly report by Miss von Emster, Traynor replied that he thought a report and his weekly attendance at council meetings was unnecessary.

Immediate protest was voiced by Bill Roberts, sophomore president, who reminded council members and Traynor that the constitution requires all cabinet members to report each week before the council on the business of their respective departments. To this Traynor replied that he hadn't meant to shirk his duties and would answer any questions which council members might have about the Campus Police.

In the discussion that followed, one council member stated that an organization which accepts a semesterly budget should at least report on expenditures. "We should not have to ask questions," Miss von Emster agreed, "for it is the duty of the cabinet member to be ready to report on all functions of his department each week."

Expressing his opinions on reports and council meeting attendance, Traynor said, "I just haven't the time to sit down here for two hours a week listening to discussions over what color flowers will be worn at the next dance, while waiting to give a report."

Argument mounted upon argument with neither the council nor Traynor succeeding in impressing their points as the meeting ended with the promise of much debate in the future on this subject.

Six AS Officers To Represent College At Statewide Meet Of Student Government Heads

By Denny Delman

Six Associated Student leaders will comprise the college's delegation to the 22nd bi-annual California Junior College Student Government Association Conference at Sacramento beginning tomorrow and lasting through Saturday, Wayne McFadden, AS president, announced last week.

McFadden, Louise von Emster, AS vice-president; Metta Wedleton, Associated Women Student president; Phil Malnick, State Information Service chairman; Bob Varni, Finance Chairman, and Jim Kennedy, Sophomore Council representative, will represent the college during the next three days.

During the course of the conference student leaders throughout the state will present their problems to their constituents and thrash out among themselves the needs of students and the basic ideologies of student government on the two-year college level, McFadden said.

Workshops covering all phases of student activity have been set up in the conference giving each delegation well diversified representation throughout the discussion sessions.

Revision of the financial code will occupy the major portion of the finance workshop discussion for those colleges whose budgets exceed $25,000. The revision concerns payment of dues and certificates of membership to the CJCSGA conference.

Other discussion topics in the finance workshop will include sources of income such as student card sales, student bookstore receipts, gate receipts from athletic contests, vending machine and social activity profits.

Discussion in the student government workshop will center around student understanding of the campus constitution and government, and the stimulation of students towards greater participation in college affairs.

Student organization, orientation, and tradition will lead off the discussion period in the activities workshop, followed by actual student activities such as rallies, dances and assemblies.

Administrative decisions concerning the possibilities or impossibilities of state football playoffs head the list for discussion in the athletics workshop.

Other topics on the agenda include participation in national sports associations, intramural sports programs, athletic finances, sportsdays, booster clubs, and athletic grade point averages, McFadden said.

A new workshop to be created this semester will be tabbed discussion workshop. Eight areas in education will be covered in this workshop, including general versus vocational education, teacher crisis, increased enrollments, need for additional facilities, student activities program in opposition to the academic program, costs of a two-year college education, admission standards and causes of drop outs.

Campus Police To Compete In Dual Shooting Matches

The Campus Police pistol team meets with San Jose State this Friday, November 16, in the first of two pistol matches scheduled for this month, the second match being held Sunday, November 25, with Sacramento State, according to Fred Fitzgerald, criminology instructor here.

Two pistol teams have been formed and have already competed in the Western Revolver Association Police Matches at the Oakland Pistol Club in Knowland Park on October 7.

Competition in this match was keen, but the men from the college proved themselves equal to the situation, taking third and fifth place honors.

Both teams, out of a possible 300 points, came through with 250 point scores showing that practice sessions held in Colma are well spent. These practice sessions are held on the men's own time, Fitzgerald said.

The team members are William Traynor, captain of the first team; Julius Karp, captain of the second team; James Keane, Raymond Nielsen, Ralph Brown, Robert Ford, Robert Sorbl and Robert Stettle.

Many more matches are being looked forward to and according to Traynor this marksman group intends to stay in the black, even if it only means the Bull's Eye.

Most Americans do not own hippopotami because none of the department stores have thought of selling them on the lay-away plan.

Lerner, Public Relations Man, To Address Journalism Forum In S100 At Friday College Hour

Speaking on the theme, new techniques in public relations and how does the public benefit, Harry Lerner, public relations counsel, will address a public relations forum during college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m., this Friday, December 7, in S-100.

All members of the faculty and students are invited. Tickets may be obtained from any journalism major.

HARRY LERNER, noted public relations counsel, will address a public relations forum during college hour this Friday.

Sponsored by students of journalism and public relations, in cooperation with political science students represented by John M. Selig and Alfred Tapson, political science instructors, the forum is an attempt to obtain a first hand analysis of propaganda practices now in vogue in California. Lerner is eminently equipped to lead such a discussion.

Representing the Associated Students will be Wayne McFadden, AS president, and Phil Malnick, state information service chairman. The journalism department will be represented by Kaj Kristoffersen.

Following a spectacular newspaper career, Lerner established his own public relations firm here in 1949. His firm, Harry Lerner and Associates, took the opposing side in the recent bitterly contested Proposition 4 campaign.

According to the San Francisco News, the public will not soon forget the amazing flow of publicity on Proposition 4, which flooded the state's mails, newspapers, billboards, radio and TV stations. They will quickly recall such items as 200,000 auto bumper stickers, a million-plus pieces of "literature" to unions, and thousands of 10, 30, and 60-second TV hogs, owls, and blurbs.

Lerner's interest in young people is known as constant and practical. He originally contributed $1,000 to the Press Club scholarship campaign, and he has consistently donated to annual professional awards conducted by the Press Club for newspapermen.

College In Line For Accreditation By Western Board

A five-man Accreditation Committee representing the Western College Association made an evaluation of the college on November 13, 14 and 15.

Prior to 1951, two-year colleges were not accredited by the association. That year, it was decided to inaugurate this practice. All California two-year colleges were then given a blanket accreditation pending formal evaluation.

City College is one of the last to be evaluated. The college was notified last spring of the intended visit.

It was necessary for College President Louis G. Conlan and his staff to prepare an accreditation application for submission to the association. The application was edited by Herald Miller, an instructor in the engineering department here.

Following their visit here, the committee turned its report over to the association. The college will receive word of the outcome following the spring 1957 meeting of the association.

Chairman of the accreditation committee was Forrest Murdock, president of El Camino Junior College. Other members included C. Conrad, director of the Bureau of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation for the State Department of Education; Peter Knowles, vice-president of Sacramento Junior College; Ralph Nielson, professor of physics at Pacific University, and William Sanders, director of adult education at Shasta Junior College.

Finance Committee Returns 3 Groups To Fold In As 100 Per Cent Ruling

Return[illegible]e to fair [illegible]ona fide [illegible] and various cultural seminars throughout the semester.

Associated Student member organizations are three campus groups which had been threatened with budget fund suspension, Bob Varni, finance chairman, stated recently.

Because their AS membership wasn't a full 100 per cent, the Alpha Gamma Sigma, campus police, and band and orchestra organizations failed to satisfy the constitutional requirement for budget groups, Varni noted.

All three organizations perform valuable services on campus and a loss of budget funds would have seriously curtailed their performance, Varni claimed.

Alpha Gamma Sigma is a state-wide honor society made up of the top scholars here. The group sponsors a lecture

Functions of the campus police include traffic control, issuance of parking tickets, and policing of many college events. Student police are paid for their duties, however, Varni declared, so the organization cannot fall in the same service category as other groups here.

College band and orchestra groups also provide services to the AS, playing at rallies, during college hours, and at many sports events and special affairs.

Justifying the constitutional ruling, Varni said, "Buying an AS card seems the proper thing to do for members of groups who benefit from AS funds, for then they help support their own organization."

Music Groups In Preview Of Yule Program Today

Featuring the A Cappella Choir, Men's Glee Club, and Treble Clef members, a preview of the college's 22nd annual Christmas Concert is being given for students of Mission High School there this morning at 11:15 a.m., according to Robert Morton, vocal group director.

The traditional performance here, to which the college and the general public are invited admission free, is scheduled for 8 p.m. Thursday evening, December 13, in the Cloud Hall library, Morton said.

With emphasis on Christmas carols, and sponsored by Associated Students, the Faculty Association, and the music department, this year's concert will consist of a wide selection of appropriate Christmas music.

Beginning the concert, a selection of carols played by the concert band will be followed by the choir's processional number, Adeste Fideles, according to Morton.

Highlights of the evening will be the Hallelujah Chorus from the Messiah, and Joseph and the Angels, from Scenes of the Holy Infancy, by noted contemporary composer Virgil Thompson.

Four soloists, announced as Dianne Wills, soprano; Joyce Preston, contralto; Jerry Jodice, tenor; and R. H. Hillis, bass; are being rehearsed by Flossita Badger, voice instructor here and founder of the choir and Christmas Concerts.

They will sing Virgin's Slumber Song, Birthday of a King, Jesu Bambino, and Gounod's Nazareth, and will participate in a special arrangement of O Holy Night near the conclusion of the program. Solos will be accompanied by Lloyd Carroll, pianist, Morton stated.

At the request of Dean Ralph O. Hillsman, in charge of student activities, an additional short performance will take place in the library during college hour Friday morning, December 14.

Reading Speeds Student Toward Improved Grades

In order to develop speed and comprehension in reading among students, the Harvard Film Series is being shown every Friday during college hour in C-245, Grace Brown, English instructor here, announced.

A two speeds system, slow and fast, is being followed by Mrs. Brown to help students who do not belong in the advanced group. At the beginning of the series, a rate of 180 words per minute were required, and now even in the slow speed group, the rate has increased to 260 words per minute, Mrs. Brown said.

The Harvard Series has been shown here for four semesters, always with very good results, because at the same time that the students increase their speed and understanding in reading they have usually increased their point averages in their other courses.

At present there are nearly 40 students attending the film series.

Three-For-One Sale Adds To AS Budget

Commissions received from a special three-for-one sale staged here before Thanksgiving by Liggett and Myers Tobacco Company were added to the Associated Student budget, according to Oscar E. Anderson, co-ordinator of Educational Management here.

Bob Cornett, college representative for the firm, held the sale at the cafeteria in Smith Hall. With every purchase of two packs of L&M's or Chesterfields, one free pack was given away. The firm also conducted a survey.

In addition, Cornett is expected to give away free cigarettes for the Boxing Smoker, which will be held tomorrow night, Anderson stated.

Student-Directed Drama Scheduled For College Hour

Mooney's Kid Don't Cry, the first student-directed play at the college this semester, will be presented this Friday, December 7, during college hour, starting at 10:30 a.m., according to Mel Rasmussen, student director.

Admission will be by Associated Student card only. The play will have only one performance.

This drama, in which there are only two characters, Mooney, played by Stan Weston, and his wife Jane, played by Dawn Roberts, concerns the trials of a young married coupie who have completely differing interests.

Mooney is a dreamer and likes the out-of-doors, while Jane is a commercial - minded realist and appreciates home life.

Rasmussen has appeared in many of the college's drama productions, but this will be his first attempt as a director.

December 10 Deadline To File AS Office Petitions; 2 Declare Candidacy For President's Post

By James Rohner

Candidates for Associated Student offices have six days remaining to file petitions, according to John Dudley, election commissioner here.

Deadline for filing petitions for office is Monday, December 10, no later than 2 p.m. Petitions are available at the dean of men's office, the AS office in Bungalow B, and The Ramporium, Dudley added.

Two students have declared themselves contenders for the office of AS President, Dudley pointed out. Those in the race at this time are Norman Durieux and Bob Varni.

Three petitions have been accepted for the posts of sophomore council members. Included are Eleanor Smith, Hugh Aanonsen and Joan Finneran.

In filing petitions, the AS card number of each candidate must be confirmed by the election commissioner. Accompanying each petition, candidates must submit a signed statement of candidacy and qualifications for the office, naming a campaign manager, if any, at that time.

Petitions for executive offices of AS President, AS Vice-President, Associated Men Student President and Associated Women Student President must be signed by 15 members of the AS. At least 10 members must sign the petition as sponsors for other office contestants, and they must be from the same class as the candidate.

An election kit is being distributed at the same spots as petitions, and it includes a complete list of regulations, Dudley said. A petition for candidacy makes up the last page of the kit.

Approval of posters by the election commissioner will be between Monday, December 3, and Monday, December 10, in the AS office. Posters shall not exceed 14 by 22 and will not be placed on doors, buildings, stairs, or the flagpole. All posters will be removed by Friday, January 4, at 2 p.m.

Manning the polls during the election will be a problem, Dudley said, since there will be six polls operated six hours a day, requiring two students at each poll for the three-day election. Volunteers to serve on the election committee should inform Dudley by leaving a note in the AS office.

447 Re-Register After Clarifying Grade Problems

Out of a total of 508 students, who went before the College Readmission Committee to explain grade difficulties, 447 were allowed to re-register for the spring semester, according to John J. Brady, co-ordinator of Student Welfare here.

This semester's total of the number of failing students is almost 100 fewer than last semester. The improvement, Brady declared, can be traced down to the new and tighter scholastic policy, involving the four-point system of grading and restricting the amount of credit evaluated for the repetition of courses failed by students here.

The reason for the college's adoption of this new system, Brady explained, is that many universities use this grading policy and thus grades can be more easily transferred.

A College Readmission Committee, composed of three faculty members, has been set up. Failing students go before this committee and explain the reasons for their below average scholastic work. To re-register for the following semester, a student must convince this board that he can show improvement, Brady said.

ISC Presents Set For Saturday Night

Formal presentation of sorority pledges, sponsored by the Inter-Sorority Council, will be held this Saturday, December 8, from 8 to 11 p.m. in Smith Hall, according to Mary Golding, dean of women here.

Attendance at the "Presents" is by invitation only, and only sorority women and fraternity men will attend. Escorts for the women pledges are provided by the fraternities.

Committees in charge of the affair include Kappa Phi, programs; Zeta Chi, invitations; Alpha Lambda Chi, clean-up; Gamma Sigma Sigma, Phi Beta Rho, and Theta Tau, decorations; Delta Psi, punch; and Delta Sigma Tau, flowers.

Four Officers See Classes In Action In Ford Program

Four retired officers, part of the San Francisco Unified School District's project for recruiting and training teachers, will observe classes here during the next two months, according to Lloyd Luekmann, the college's co-ordinator of Instruction and for the project.

As the project swings into its third year, attention is focused on a special class of 13 retired officers who seek teaching credentials in mathematics and science.

From this class, three retired Naval officers and a retired Army colonel will attend classes here through December and January. They are Elmer J. Broad, Ned D. Harrell, William B. Hawthorne and Joe M. Whitaker.

Previous to the Thanksgiving holidays, six retired Army officers, one of them a Brigadier General, attended similar classes, thereby setting the program in motion. They were Bienvenudo Alba, Ernest A. Barlow, Ernest F. Cutler, Roy Kaylor, William E. Long, and Jose E. Olivares.

Twenty-three teacher training projects are provided throughout the United States by special grants from the Fund for the Advancement of Education. In the spring of 1951, this fund was established as an independent corporation by the trustees of the Ford Foundation.

To counteract a growing shortage of teachers in San Francisco, the current Teacher Recruitment and Training Program was inaugurated in the fall of 1954, under the supervision of Dr. Mary C. McCarthy. It was made possible through a five-year $350,000 grant from the Fund.

This grant provided that a limited number of fellowships be awarded each year to graduates of liberal arts colleges, who had little or no experience in professional courses, mainly because they had not originally planned to become teachers, Luckmann pointed out.

Club Activities Board Accepts Four Charter Bids For Campus Recognition

With the recent ruling of the Student Council declaring four clubs off campus, the Club Activities Board announced the acceptance of charter petitions of four new clubs and organizations into the CAB, Lon Earnshaw, board president, announced last week.

The new clubs and organizations that filed their charter petitions to the CAB are the French Club, the Hawaiian Club, the Ram Cam (a campus camera group), and the City College Chapter of the California Student Teachers Association. All were accepted into the CAB last Wednesday. They now have the right to sit in the meeting of the CAB, and are duly recognized, Earnshaw explained.

"These four banned clubs, the Chess Club, Sigma Tau Sigma, the Merchandising Club, and the Acacia Club, are now permanently off campus and will not be recognized or have the use of college facilities," Earnshaw said, adding that, "They may file another charter petition during the forthcoming semester, if they wish to do so."

Deadline for final filing of petitions was last Thursday, November 29, and any club or organization wishing to be recognized must wait until next semester.

A recommendation that the CAB set a fine against those filing late petitions could not be imposed because such action would require a constitutional amendment, Earnshaw said.

Council, Bookstore Committee Action Necessary To Lift AS Scholarship Award Off Table

FOR THE LAST two semesters and thus far this semester, a potential scholarship, which would be financed by Associated Student profits received from The Ramporium, has been kicked about the campus.

Originally the scholarship suggestion was brought up during the fall '55 semester. Dean Woods, AS president at that time, and Student Council considered it and then placed it "on the table" (shelved), where it remained, like an unwanted jar of jelly, for the remainder of the semester.

Again during the following semester, spring '56, the Associated Student scholarship was considered by Bill Cirimele, AS president, and the council. A committee was appointed to investigate, and council again tabled the idea, where it again remained for the remainder of the semester.

Earlier this semester, Wayne McFadden, AS president, appointed a committee under the direction of George Pyne to investigate and bring forward recommendations concerning the potential scholarship. Again the motion was tabled by the council, and there it lies.

In the preceding issue of The Guardsman, published November 14, Oscar Anderson, co-ordinator of Educational Management here, said that the scholarship depended to a large extent on whether The Ramporium can continue to exceed the $10,000 profit mark, adding that he would welcome student opinion concerning this scholarship.

Before the scholarship can be established, it would need the approval of Student Council, which is empowered to allocate AS funds, and the Bookstore Committee, which is headed by Harold Spears, superintendent of schools, according to Anderson.

Because student opinion was requested, The Guardsman takes this opportunity to state that we believe it is time to lift this motion from the table and take some definite action. Certainly the major obstacle which seems to be hampering this scholarship, that AS profits from The Ramporium exceed $10,000, can be overcome.

This can be accomplished if at the end of each semester in which profits exceed that sum, which they have for the last few semesters, Student Council would approve scholarship funds to be awarded during the following semester.

However, if the scholarship's approval is being delayed for other reasons, then we urge that they be revealed during a council meeting and thus called to the attention of the student body. Certainly before approving funds for the scholarship, the council should consider the student interest shown toward the other scholarships presently being awarded here, which has in many instances been apathetic.

Regardless of the ultimate outcome, Student Council and the Bookstore Committee should take immediate action to lift this scholarship from the drafting stage, so that it may not remain on the table, like an incubus, for the remainder of a semester again and for no apparent reason.

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

• Parking Problems Here

Editor, The Guardsman:

In the editorial of the October 24 issue of The Guardsman regarding the parking dilemma at City College, you stated that the only solution to this problem was the passing of Proposition A.

The passing of this proposition indeed helps relieve the situation by providing an additional 500 parking spaces when they build the new auditorium.

However, since there are over 5,000 students attending the college now and the enrollment is increasing greatly each year, we feel that the 600 present parking spaces plus the additional 500 will still be inadequate.

We believe the facts should be obtained regarding the number of students who bring automobiles to school. This could readily be accomplished by taking a survey at registration time to determine:

1. The number of students who drive to school.
2. If their cars are needed for travel to work.
3. Where each student lives (distance from school).
4. Number of persons per car.

With these facts, we could elaborate upon the subject.

Encouraging the use of car pools by reserving special parking spaces for bonafide car pool groups would also ease the situation.

Another suggestion is to make streetcar and bus traveling more attractive. The way this can be done is to make it cheaper. This can be accomplished by allowing City College students to use streetcar tickets that are good for 10 rides at a cost of only 50 cents.

The parking situation is a serious problem and will not be solved by any one method. It can be alleviated, however, if many of us who drive to school unnecessarily would revert to the ancient, but still effective art of walking.

Cops Should Know Cameras To Succeed

Photo 'Shots' To Replace Gun In Crime Chase

By Kaj Kristoffersen

Telling the story with pictures has become a primary tool of law enforcement, and thus increased the importance of the crime photography department here to such an extent that the course will soon be officially required of all criminology majors.

Police photography, taught by Beverly J. Pasqualetti, is an unofficial requirement at present. The course is designed to acquaint students with basic fundamentals, and proper care and use of expensive equipment.

One exercise, for familiarization purposes, is to "shoot" a fire hydrant and go through the entire process. In the beginning of the course, this exercise requires several hours. At the end of the course, it requires about 10 minutes.

Crime photographs have two primary functions in relation to law enforcement. They aid in the actual criminal investigations. They are often introduced as physical evidence in court.

Telling the story of the crime through pictures is the main objective. Details that would otherwise take hours to collect are shown by a series of photographs. An added advantage is that usually nothing has been disturbed before the photographer arrives on the scene.

One technique is to begin at the outside entrance and fix the geographical location of the crime. Then take a picture of the method of entrance, the doorlock, broken window, and perhaps a hallway leading to the actual scene of the crime.

At the scene itself, take a picture from the doorway at eye level as a normal person would see it. Then begin in a clockwise direction, using any number of different angles, until the entire room is encompassed, being certain that no details, however slight, they may appear at the moment, have been omitted.

A rough sketch is then made to show distance relationships which a photograph does not portray. Thus the sketch becomes the skeleton, the photographs become the "skin and flesh" aspect and both supplement each other to give a complete picture of the scene of the crime.

Three rules govern presentation of photographs in court. Pictures are not accepted as physical evidence unless they conform to these standards.

First, the material shown by the photograph must relate directly to the crime and must be of definite material value before it may be considered as physical evidence.

Second, the photo must not incite prejudice or undue emotion or attempt by so doing to influence the judge or jury.

Third, whatever the scene may be, it must not be distorted by the photograph.

Four Eyed Monsters Make Debut

Detroit Hatches Longer, Lower Blobs Of Metal

By Bob Sims

Longer, lower, wider, and possessing such fearsome looking grilles that pedestrians can be seen scurrying in a half-shocked state from their paths, the '57 issue of Detroit's master technicians is upon us.

Yes, new cars are longer, in fact those persons owning a pre-war two-car garage can just barely squeeze one '57 model in—that is if the garage is wide enough to permit entry. In fact, the hottest idea in the building field is one offering a solution to this very problem. In the blueprint stage is a new top-loading trestle, a device which will enable two-car garage owners to park one of their new lower cars on top of the other.

A change in grilles, the traditional motor industry modification, seems certainly one for the worse. Accenting huge blobs of moulded metal instead of simplifying and smoothing out the lines appears to be the obvious failure of some manufacturers who stress smoothness in all other points except for the most prominent.

Tires are getting smaller and the next innovation will be seven-inch wheels allowing the spare to be carried in the glove compartment. Dual headlights are coming in and the only change this can lead to is the installation of huge searchlights up front which will be guaranteed to blind all oncoming motorists for at least three days following a countryside drive.

Detroit may have the answer in '58 when cars promise to be even longer, lower, wider, and more gruesome than ever.

Polish Freedom Light In Danger Of Blackout

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

IN POLAND, the Russians directed the major part of economic activities toward heavy industry, mostly of arms, diminishing at the same time the agriculture production by an insane persecution of the Polish peasant.

Polish coal goes to Russia at a price that is 20 per cent lower than the world price. The country is financially indebted to Russia, but the Poles did see very little of German war indemnization, collected by Russia.

Russian interference in all important affairs of the new socialistic state is still greater than their economic domination. K. Rokossowsky, the Russian Marshal of Polish origin, governed the country like a Russian province. Polish sense of greatness could be sustained solely by the consciousness that Poland is the third power in the Communist family, after Russia and China.

When the workmen of Poznan went on the streets this last spring, asking for bread and shouting "Down with the Russians," the Polish Communists understood that something was wrong somewhere.

Gomulka, a Titoist martyr, succeeded in attracting the Secretary of the Party, Edward Ochab, to his ideas. Gomulka pronounced by radio a two and a half hour speech, denouncing in bitter terms and with a lot of statistics, the disastrous results of the Stalinist system in Poland and promised all kinds of liberties in the frame of a purified Communism.

After the speech, Gomulka, already acting as secretary of the Polish Politburo, proceeded to reorganize all of the governing entities. He also promised that the Russian officers would leave the Polish army, and that the secret police would be given a more human touch.

Gomulka was proclaimed by many as a kind of national hero-faute de mieux . . . If so, his heroicity must be considered as being greatly diluted, the same as his "Titoism."

In spite of his intentions of putting some national hues in the red of Polish Communism, he can only go so far as the Russians permit. The smile-offensive came to an end in Hungary, and the Kremlin's horrid grimace revealed its true intentions. Gomulka and his breath of independence can be choked at any moment by the Stalinists of the Kremlin.

The events in Poland gave origin to the Hungarian national bloodbath, but they look rather pale in the sharp, blood-injected light of the Hungarian fight for freedom.

RAMBLINGS

Ibarra Deserving Of All Conference Spot

By Mike Berger

JUDGING from the past aggregations, the forthcoming Big Eight All Conference team could consist of nearly any player who has worn colors of the league's octet of clubs.

If any selection could be termed truly just, they would be the picking of quarterback Earl Norwood of Oakland and tackle Ernie Ibarra of the Rams to the first club.

Ibarra has certainly been the unmentioned stalwart of this season's college line, and his play throughout the year has been as steady as AT&T. The Balboa graduate has come to the college team after a two-year sojourn in the service. Ibarra, 6-1 and 225, started the season at guard, but was shifted to tackle early in the schedule and has remained at that position to spark the Ram running.

Much of the 1,963 yards netted by the team on the ground can be credited to openings laid clear by one Ibarra, certainly deserving of the all-conference nod. We would also like to add halfback Gene Craft and flanker Leroy Thomas to that list before anyone thinks we have overlooked their attributes. (See previous Guardsman sport pages.)

Ibarra was recently named to the San Francisco Examiner's Big Eight All-Conference team, together with Thomas. Both Ibarra and Thomas were also selected to the Examiner's All-Northern California squad as second team picks.

Norwood's rise to prominence has really been the doing of an enterprising nurse in an East Bay hospital. Now, wait-a-minute, before calling for the white jacket, and hear us out.

After a spirited practice early in the season, Norwood broke a leg. The leg, however, was wooden, courtesy of a commie land mine in Korea. Norwood was wounded during Marine action in the recent police action.

A rough sketch is then made to show distance relationships which a photograph does not portray. Thus the sketch becomes the skeleton, the photographs become the "skin and flesh" aspect and both supplement each other to give a complete picture of the scene of the crime.

Three rules govern presentation of photographs in court. Pictures are not accepted as physical evidence unless they conform to these standards.

First, the material shown by the photograph must relate directly to the crime and must be of definite material value before it may be considered as physical evidence.

Second, the photo must not incite prejudice or undue emotion or attempt by so doing to influence the judge or jury.

Third, whatever the scene may be, it must not be distorted by the photograph.

Miss Nurse's efforts, promptly went out over the wires, and soon every publication that had a yellow page to its name went on the newspath. All in all, it's been a nice year, publicity and football-wise, for one Earl Norwood.

Can't think of a more deserving man for the job, so we cast one vote for Norwood.

There are simply too many All-American and All-Nothing teams rattling around these days, so we have decided to add something truly unique to the All-Star football team. We proudly announce the first annual All-Berger 1956 Football Team. Included are the 22 top offensive and defensive men we have seen this year.

OFFENSE: Ends—Ron Kramer and Tom Maentz, the touchdown twins of Michigan, both the best flanker-receivers we saw in '56. Tackles—Paul Wiggin of Stanford and Lou Michaels of Kentucky. These two are both demons at ripping up holes for the backfield stars. Guards—Jim Parker of Ohio State and Dan Currie of Michigan State. Center—Jim Matheny of UCLA. Quarterback—John Brodie of Stanford, the finest passer in the history of western football. Halfbacks—Jon Arnett of USC, a great change of pace artist; and Tommy McDonald of Oklahoma, a great speed artist. Fullback—Jim Brown of Syracuse, who combines blinding swiftness with the power of a lineman.

DEFENSE: Ends—Pete O'Garro of UCLA and Joe Walton of Pitt, two real quarterback haters. Tackles—Alex Karras of Iowa and John Witte of Oregon State. Linebackers—John Matsko of Michigan State, Don Shinnick of UCLA, and Jerry Tubbs of Oklahoma. Wingbacks—Paul Rotenberry of Georgia Teach and Don Dobrino of Iowa. Safeties—Paul Hornung of Notre Dame and Bobby Cox of Minnesota.

We pick 22 men because it's our belief that, one platoon or no, the best man at each phase of each position deserves mention. Wonder how many of these gentlemen will make good in the real test, pro ball.

Cagers Tip Jaguars 58-55; Play Napa Next, Don Frosh Saturday

By Mario Cassulo

Paced by Bob Tealer and Al Mock, who scored 24 and 20 points respectively, the Rams opened their basketball season on a winning note by defeating San Jose 58 to 55 on November 30 at the men's gymnasium.

The Rams meet Napa at 8 p.m. tonight at the latter's home court. Coach Sid Phelan's crew also plays the highly regarded USF Frosh this Saturday night, December 8, at Kezar Pavilion with game time set at 6:15 p.m.

USF is led by Fred LaCour, the ex-prep star from St. Ignatius. The Don yearlings won their opening game against the Cal Frosh, 47 to 46, with LaCour's 17 points paving the way.

In the first half of the San Jose game the Rams, sparked by Tealer and Mock, opened up a big lead, which at one time registered at a 20-9 count in favor of the home five. But the scoring punch of Jerry McDonnell and Ron Wyrsh enabled the Jaguars to come back from an eleven point deficit to a close 29-24 halftime score favoring the Rams.

McDonnell and Wyrsh led the scoring for San Jose with 17 and 14 point performances.

Midway in the second half the Jaguars took a one-point lead at 34-33. Mock then tied the game with a free throw, and seconds later Mel McCormick, who played most of the game at center, hit a field goal from about 10 feet out and gave the Rams a 36-34 lead. The Rams were never behind after that.

During the rest of the game the Jaguars trailed by at least seven points, until the last three minutes. A late rally cut the margin down to 55 to 53 in favor of the Rams, who couldn't seem to stop the surge.

Bob Oehler, Armando Moreno, and Curt Schwartz chipped in with some last minute field goals that helped to narrow the margin.

At this point the Rams put on a stall with guard Rich DiConti dribbling all over the court. The frustrated visitors repeatedly fouled DiConti in an effort to get the ball, and he scored three free throws to ice the contest.

Both teams substituted freely throughout the game. The only surprise of the contest was the absence of forward Will Gaspar, who has an injured knee but should be ready for this Saturday's game.

Ram Booters Lose Title Tilt To Champ Dons, 4-2

After leading early in the game, the Ram soccermen were overcome by the University of San Francisco Dons, who won their ninth straight conference title with a 4-2 win, in the championship game on November 28.

Joe Njoka-Obi led the USF offense with three goals, while Rene Carrillo and Toni Quiteno starred for City College. The Dons will meet a conference all-star team this Saturday at Balboa Soccer Stadium.

Overpowered by the University of San Francisco booters, the City College soccer squad was handed its first defeat of the season, a 4-0 score on November 24 at the Don's field.

Benny Razon and Arnold Calonje scored all of the Don's four successful shots, and the defeat put the Rams in the league's second spot in the final standings with a five-won, one-lost game record. Since the Dons and the Rams were the 1-2 clubs in the conference, they played for the championship on November 28.

Earlier in the season, on November 16, the college team pulled out of the fire what looked to be a lost game against San Francisco State. The Rams overcame a 3-0 halftime deficit and staged this year's best offensive performance to beat the Gators in a thrilling second half rally by the final score of 5-4 at the State field.

Rene Carrillo and Orlando Dona, the City College forwards, tallied two goals each while Al Morales, the Rams' star halfback, switched to the inside-right position, also booted home a goal as the college soccermen dented the Gator net five consecutive times.

Comets Fall To College Eleven In 41-6 Finale

By Mike Berger

The Rams won their most convincing victory of the year on November 16 at Kezar, ending the current football season with a 41-6 margin over West Contra Costa, but these heroics only left the team in what might be called its accustomed position in the final standings.

Stockton College won its second consecutive Big Eight championship, and a Potato Bowl bid, on the same afternoon by whipping Sacramento, 53-13, and so City College had to be content with second place and a 6-1 final mark in the conference ledger.

Playing relaxed football against an out-manned club, City College rolled for 350 yards on the ground to completely dominate the West Contra Costa contest. Most noteworthy aspect of the game was that the stubborn college defensive unit, which had not allowed a score in three games, finally gave in and yielded a touchdown to the Comets in the last three minutes of play.

The first couple of San Francisco scores came on long punt returns of 82 and 80 yards, respectively, by halfbacks Gene Craft and Larry Beidon. Another score came on a short 21-yard push following recovery of a Comet fumble, with Bill Rathbun going over from the one to tally. Quarterback John Panagakis kicked his second conversion, Beidon having added the extra point to his TD jaunt, and the home team had a 21-0 lead at the intermission.

Dave Tyree, Jerry Dillard, Rathbun and Craft gained 310 of the Rams' 350 total rushing, and these men formed the crest of a five-play, 77-yard scoring series to open the second half. Craft ended the drive by cruising through center for 17 yards and the TD. Leroy Thomas kicked the point this time, and it was 28-0 with 6:00 gone in the period.

Within another three minutes of playing time, the college team had struck for another score, Tyree bursting over left guard for the clincher of a 48-yard, four-play drive. It was Ron Taylor's turn to boot the conversion, and he did with 9:15 elapsed in the 3rd quarter to up the count to 35-0.

Just before the end of this stanza, the Rams ended their pillage for the day and the season. On a first down play from the City College 45, Rathbun took a handoff from quarterback Mike Forrette, ran through the area where the Contra Costa line was supposed to be, and went right down the middle for a 55-yard TD trip as the gun sounded to end the period. Beidon's kick was wide, but the score had soared to 41-0.

Lefty Peeler counted for the Comets on a two-yard buck midway in the final quarter, ending the scoring.

Craft ended the conference season with a team-leading 567 yards rushing in 64 carries, an average of 8.1, and end Thomas finished up with a Big Eight mark of 16 receptions for 313 yards and three touchdowns.

Soph Queen, King Petitions Ready

BILL ROBERTS, sophomore president, currently is making plans for the traditional Sophomore ball to be held on Saturday, January 12.

Roberts Plans Traditional Dance, Basketball Game To Highlight Week's Activities

Applications for the sophomore queen and king contest are now available in the offices of Dean Mary Golding and Dean Ralph Hillsman, according to Bill Roberts, sophomore class president.

Deadline for filing these applications is next Wednesday, December 12. Any sophomore student who has completed a minimum of 30 units and is a member of the Associated Students is eligible to enter the contest, Roberts stated. AS card holders will cast their votes for king and queen on Tuesday, January 2, at voting pools located at the silver pole in the Science Building and in Smith Hall.

On Friday, January 11, the semi-annual Soph-Prof basketball game will be held in the men's gymnasium during the double college hour scheduled for that day.

Any male sophomore student interested in participating in the game may sign up now in the AS office, Roberts said, adding that "The students are now getting ready to dismember the faculty team." The winning team will be presented with the traditional "shaving mug" at the Sophomore Ball.

Concluding the sophomore activities will be the Sophomore Ball scheduled to be held on Saturday, January 12, at the Surf Club. Theme for the ball is Moments To Remember.

Dancing will be from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight to the rhythms of Stephen Paul and his band. Highlight of the ball will be the coronation of the king and queen, who will also receive their trophies at this time, Roberts added.

Sophomore class officers for this semester are Roberts, president; Debbie Rudser, vice-president; and Dorothy Baciocco, secretary. Serving in the capacity of faculty advisers are Frances Lloyd and Harry Frustuck.

Janet Mowll New Publication Vice-Chairman

Publications Board efficiency was facilitated with the appointment of Janet Mowll to the position of vice-chairman, Bob Kauth, board chairman, said last week.

Miss Mowll, an art student here, as vice-chairman will, along with the board's chairman, approve all posters which are to be posted on the bulletin boards. Posters are required to be initialed by the board's chairman or the vice-chairman before they are posted, Kauth said.

Another additional ruling adopted by the Publications Board in a recent meeting requires that posters shall not be larger than 14 by 22 inches. This ruling was accepted so that enough bulletin board space will be available for all posters.

In an effort to keep the bulletin boards cleared and up to date, Miss Mowll will clear the bulletin boards in the Science Building of all out-dated material every Tuesday.

Louise von Emster, AS vice-president and a member of the Publications Board, will clear the bulletin boards in Cloud Hall every Tuesday.

The Publications Board was formed in 1938 in order to review any material which is to be published and distributed to the students of the college or posted, other than official publications.

Scholarship Forms Available In S150

All students interested in applying for any of the 50 scholarships awarded each year by the University of California at Los Angeles, should report to S-150 to obtain the necessary application forms, Mary Golding, dean of women here, announced recently.

These scholarships, which are awarded through the college's Committee on Undergraduate Scholarship and Prizes, range from $100 to $500 per year.

Applications for the scholarships must be postmarked on or before March 1, 1957, and it was specified by Dean Golding that absolutely no late applications will be accepted.

Fraternity Council Cancels Fall Dance

A lack of time, space on the social calendar, and finances have resulted in the postponement of the traditional Inter-Fraternity Ball until the spring semester, according to Ken Woodruff, vice-president of the Inter-Fraternity Council.

Plans are presently underway for a formal dinner-dance, which will be held sometime next semester in one of the large local hotels. The ball is the traditional annual event for the IFC and is held for all fraternity members and their dates.

The council, comprised of Jim Buckley, president; Woodruff; Milt Anderson, secretary, and Charlie McPartlind, treasurer, with the help of fraternity representatives, is currently busy with the results of hell week and checking of the constitutions of the fraternities.

Free Symphony, Concert Passes Given To Ushers

Free symphony and concert passes are still available for the fall season in exchange for ushering for the concerts, Mary Golding, dean of women here, announced recently.

Six men and six women will be sent to each performance as ushers. Interested students may apply in Dean Golding's office, S-150, for tickets.

Concerts remaining this season are as follows: February 11, Three Broadway Opera Hits; March 11, Chicago Opera Ballet; and April 1, Obernkirchen Children's Choir.

Fraternity Affair, Conference Reports Keep Council Busy

By Bob Sims

From reports on the state convention to the delegating of disciplinary authority in the case of a misbehaving fraternity, Student Council action featured variety and novelty in sessions during the past weeks.

In his report on the state convention, Jim Kennedy, sophomore council representative, related some of the many resolutions passed by workshops set up in various categories of college interest.

A publications workshop agreed that all students participating in college newspaper work receive journalism credit.

Athletics workshop voted to uphold a state code banning the participation of imported athletes from inter-college competition. Another athletic decision was to resolve that post season state playoffs be instituted on a try-out basis in 1957.

All resolutions and opinions of this convention are made public, and while they have no power to make policy changes, the recommendations are submitted to authorities who do have this power.

In later council business a slight fraternity "scandal" was revealed by Jim Buckley, Inter-Fraternity Council president. The affair occurred prior to the Ram-San Mateo football game when members of a fraternity here were apprehended by San Mateo campus police after some Ram slogans had been inscribed in paint on College of San Mateo property.

Students involved maintained their innocence, Buckley said, insisting that the evidence was merely circumstantial. A request by Buckley to let the IFC investigate the incident and render punishment if necessary was granted by the council.

Council procedure ended on a humorous vein last week when some old business was being reviewed. A young student from Japan had written to student authorities here asking for a belt buckle featuring the college emblem and name.

Asking what had been done about this request, Bill Driscoll, freshman council member, was informed that no buckle could be found and that a letter had been written to the Japanese fellow explaining the situation. To the rescue came Bill Roberts, sophomore class president, who offered to alleviate the whole situation by donating his own emblemed belt buckle in pursuance of proper college foreign policy.

AS Membership Passes Semester Goal By Nineteen

Reaching and passing the goal of 2,400 set by Bob Varni, Finance Chairman, at the beginning of the semester, 2,419 Associated Student cards have been sold as of November 29, according to Dwane Shippey, AS card sales chairman.

Of the 2,419 AS cards sold, 13 were replacements for cards lost by students during the semester, which makes a total of 2,406 students holding cards, Shippey said.

Planning to sell still more cards, Shippey is drafting a letter to send to students who will graduate this semester. In this letter Shippey will point out that a $5 rental fee for cap and gowns will be charged to students not holding AS cards. Students who are holding cards will have free use of cap and gowns, among other things, Shippey said.

To those who have not already purchased a card, Shippey pointed out many benefits to be gained, such as free parking on campus, free admission to dances, football games, drama productions and rallies. He also stressed that the motivating force behind student government here is the AS card holder with power to cast a vote in AS elections.

Club Meetings, Movie Scheduled For College Hour

In addition to the regular club meetings which are scheduled to be held during college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m. this Friday, Walt Disney's true life adventure, Beaver Valley, will be shown in S-136, according to Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor here.

"This film proved successful here when it was shown during college hour last spring," Devlin said, adding that for this reason it has been returned for a rerun. Last year it was necessary to turn away many of the students who wished to see this film because of insufficient seating facilities.

For this reason, Devlin encouraged all students wishing to see Beaver Valley this year to come early, for it will be shown on a first-come, first-serve basis. The film features many exciting and thrilling scenes of wild life, Devlin said.

San Francisco To Co-Host Fall 1957 California Junior College Student Government Conference

By Denny Delman

A motion allowing San Francisco to house and co-host the fall 1957 meeting of the California Junior College Student Government Association Conference was unanimously passed last month at the 22nd session of the state convention in Sacramento.

Nearly 300 student leaders from 50 California two-year colleges were present for the three-day session on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, November 15, 16 and 17, in the capital city.

As one of the last official acts of the conference, the delegates approved a bid by this college, along with East and West Contra Costa, San Jose, Oakland, Modesto and San Mateo, to co-host the 24th semi-annual meeting in San Francisco. As there was no visible opposition, no vote was called for.

Workshops occupied the major portion of the conference, allowing the representatives to thrash out a varying degree of internal problems plaguing the respective colleges.

In the finance workshop, a stalemate prevailed as the backers and opponents of 100 per cent mandatory card sales could neither pass nor defeat the motion proposed.

Resolutions brought out from the publications workshop furnished uncontestable proof for the need of qualified representatives from journalism departments to have exclusive rights in attending the workshop meetings.

A motion asking for an investigation of the possibilities of joining the Associated Collegiate Press or other college press groups, one recommending a waiver of journalism prerequisites in favor of immediate credit for incoming high school students, and a resolution calling for special information blanks were presented by the workshop delegation, only 30 per cent of which were qualified journalism students.

Parliamentary wrangling between debate sessions forced the final assembly of the conference into overtime Saturday, which prompted Los Angeles City College to move that the state meeting next semester in Los Angeles be three full days instead of the present two and a half. The meeting concluded as the motion passed overwhelmingly.

It's The Yuletide Magic That Seeps Into Hearts Of Men

OF ALL the holidays observed throughout the year, there is some magic quality which makes Christmas stand prominent above all the rest.

As the Yuletide season draws near, there is an enchantment which seems to seep into the hearts of men. The most cynical fellow may for a moment wallow in the comforts of sentimentalism and perchance confidentially acknowledge a love for his fellow men. And it was on a Christmas Day that Scrooge — indeed the most pessimistic fellow there ever was — even he was made to smile.

There's that strange something about Christmas. It's not that you can really touch it or see it, nor can you really smell it. But you can feel it. And it's there: in the home and in the department store; on the street corner and on the thoroughfare; in the store window and on the roof top. It's in the way that people walk and in the way that people talk.

Old acquaintances are remembered as card and letters, too long overdue, are written, sent—and received. Ornaments and decorations are carried down from the attic, as the Christmas tree goes up. Not to be forgotten, other days are recalled when Christmas trees were bigger, and dreams were larger still.

It's on the children's faces. No longer do they scream and shout. What an angel he seems to be, that culprit with his cherub face. For he loves his mother almost as much as Old Saint Nick. And he borrows mother's stocking to hang upon the wall because, after all, it is longer.

Now the skidrogue—never has he seen so many smiling faces, so many generous hearts. Never has he had so much attention, and with a toothless grin he cheerily shouts, "Merry Christmas, Mac!" And he jingles change in his pockets.

It's a crowded time for churches. Not since last Christmas has the attendance been so large. For the churches are filled to capacity what with so many folks recently remembering their religion. They must have come to hear the story of the birth of Christ retold and the Christmas carols sung. And as Holy Communion is held, last year's resolutions, which were made and broken, are recalled.

There's that strange something about Christmas. It's peace and goodwill. It's brotherhood. It's Christmas carols, the children and Santa Claus. It's family reunions. It's the richly ornamented suburbs.

It's the knowledge or hope for better things after death — for something more than life. It's the Yuletide Magic, that's what it is.

Durieux, Varni Vie For Top AS Post In Student Election

By James Rohner

Student elections are scheduled to commence on Monday, January 7, and conclude on Wednesday, January 9, with petition filing completed last Monday and plans for the coming election in full swing, according to John Dudley, election commissioner here.

On Friday, January 4, during college hour, an election rally will be held in Smith Hall. At this time, candidates for executive offices will be introduced and will give a short statement of qualifications, Dudley added.

Two students have declared their candidacy for the office of AS President, Dudley announced. Contenders for the top office are Norman Durieux and Bob Varni.

In the race for AS Vice-President there are also two contenders. Metta Weddleton and Ginny Hase have both filed petitions as candidates for this office.

Mike Monteith and Walt Schultz are engaged in the contest for president of the AMS. Debbie Rudser and Tillie Gandert are in the race for president of the AWS.

At this time a complete list of all candidates for other posts was not available, but early confirmation included John Zevas for sophomore class president and Kathy Mulligan for freshman class president, according to Dudley.

Included also in an incomplete list were candidates for council positions. Those who have submitted petitions for sophomore council members are as follows: Eleanor Smith, Hugh Aanonson, Joan Finneran and Lilly Kowalski. For freshman council members, only one name has been confirmed thus far, that of Richard Daffner.

During the Christmas holidays, a letter will be sent to each member of the AS. Included in the letter will be a sample ballot to familiarize voters with the candidates, Dudley stated.

Publicity stunts will be allowed in the form of minor parades and speeches, provided approval is granted by Dudley and Dean Ralph Hilisman.

Campaign expenditures for executive committee candidates must not exceed $20. Candidates for class offices must not exceed $15. A cost of $1 will be assessed each candidate to cover janitorial services.

Six polls will be open to the voters, he declared. Two will be at the silver pole, and one each at the entrances to the library, the first floor of Cloud Hall, the bookstore, and the cafeteria.

Special Poll Today May Decide Future Of AS Program

A special student poll will be conducted here today and tomorrow through physical education classes to aid future Associated Student financial and legislative planning, Bob Varni, finance chairman, announced recently.

Open to all students, the poll will include questions such as whether students would like to have big-name bands appear here, and whether students who are veterans would be interested in forming an organization of their own, Varni stated.

A spot will be left open on the questionnaire sheet for miscellaneous remarks. "We will appreciate any practical suggestions which students may have," Varni said, adding, "We expect to reach approximately 3,500 students through the physical education classes."

On Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, January 2, 3, and 4, the same poll will be taken in the veteran affairs office to get an opinion from as many as possible of the 1,500 veterans now in attendance.

Usually, a survey of this type which deals with AS affairs would be open to only AS members. This time, all students are being included, Varni stated.

It is felt that if all are allowed to make recommendations for future AS activities, more students will be attracted to join the AS, Varni said, adding that "an over-all program for more students is our goal."

Members of Tau Chi Sigma will aid Varni in conducting the poll.

Christmas Concert Tomorrow Night

A Cappella Choir, Men's Glee Club, Treble Clef, Band Features Of 22nd Annual Program In Cloud Hall Library

By Kaj Kristoffersen

Four soloists and 75 choral group members will participate in the 22nd annual Christmas Concert in Cloud Hall library tomorrow night at 8 p.m., according to Robert Morton, vocal group director.

Major musical event at the college this season, the traditional performance Thursday night will be sponsored by the Associated Students, the Faculty Association, and the music department.

Fifteen Associated Women Students will usher, Metta Weddleton, AWS president, said.

This year's concert, to which the general public is invited admission free, will emphasize Christmas carols and consist of a wide selection of appropriate Christmas music, Morton announced.

Beginning the program, a selection of carols played by the concert band will be followed by A Cappella Choir's processional number, Adeste Fideles. As highlights of the evening, the choir will sing the Hallelujah Chorus from the Messiah, and Joseph and the Angels, from Scenes of the Holy Infancy, by noted contemporary composer Virgil Thompson.

Announced as Dianne Wills, soprano; Joyce Preston, contralto; Jerry Jodice, tenor; and R. H. Hillis, bass, the soloists will be directed by Flosuita Badger, voice instructor here and founder of the choir and Christmas Concerts. Among the solos will be Birthday of a King and Gounod's Nazareth. The soloists will participate in a special arrangement of O Holy Night near the conclusion of the program, Morton said.

Concert band selections will include What Child Is This, an old English carol set to the tunes of Greensleeves, and Break Forth O Beauteous Heavenly Light.

Men's Glee Club will sing five numbers including Deck The Halls, and Adoremus Te Christe. Trebie Clef will sing four numbers including Stars Lead Us Ever On, a Sioux tribal carol, and the French 16th century carol, Sing We Noel: Solos, Men's Glee Club, and Treble Clef, will be accompanied by Lloyd Carroll, pianist, Morton further stated.

Featured among A Cappella Choir selections will be Coventry Carol, Ring Christmas Bells, and Hark The Herald. The choir will conclude the concert with Silent Night and We Wish You A Merry Christmas.

A Cappella Choir officers this semester under Bill Roberts, president, include Miss Preston, Pauline Cordes, Sue Bellinger, Larry Vargo, James McClung, Glenda Booth, Elaine Hall, and Linda Cripps.

Officers of the Men's Glee Club, under Armen Boyd, include Hillis, Al Camilieri, Lewis Maunupau, Bob Swenson and Vargo.

Barbara Grenup heads Treble Clef, with Miss Cripps, Ellie Smith and Vargo assisting.

Band officers are Bill Huber, student director, Thomas Gray, Leonard Barnette and Edward Murney.

Pre-Concert Dinner Planned For Faculty

The annual Faculty Association pre-Christmas concert buffet supper will be served tomorrow at 6 p.m. in the faculty dining room of Smith Hall, Madison Devlin, social chairman, announced.

William Richardson of the counselling department will play the piano, and there will be community singing of Christmas carols.

Tickets are available at $2 for adults and $1 for children under 12. Social committee for the supper includes Gertrude Norgard, co-chairman, and Laurine Bergin, decorations.

Soph King, Queen Applications Due For Filing Today

Deadline for filing petitions for the sophomore king and queen contest is today, December 12, according to Bill Roberts, president of the sophomore class.

Balloting will be held on Wednesday, January 2, with voting polls located at the silver pole in the Science Building and in Smith Hall. Only Associated Student card holders will be eligible to vote.

The traditional soph-prof basketball game is scheduled to be played during a double college hour on Friday, January 11, in the men's gymnasium.

The winning team will be the recipient of the traditional "shaving mug." It is still possible, Roberts said, for men sophomore students interested in participating to sign up for the student team in the AS office.

Moments To Remember is the theme for the Sophomore Ball which will be held on Saturday, January 12, at the Surf Club at the beach. Stephen Paul and his band will provide the music for the festivities from 9 p.m. to midnight.

Dress will be semi-formal, with cocktail dresses for the women and dark suits for the men.

Admission to the dance, Roberts announced, is by AS card. A charge of $5 per couple will be made to non-AS members.

Foreign Exchange Students To Visit Here For Concert

Five foreign exchange students will visit the college and attend the 22nd annual Christmas Concert tomorrow night.

They are Aesche Kayaaip, from Turkey; Gernid Monsehonwer, from The Netherlands; Martha Poettschacher, from Austria; Shahroh Rustomji, from Pakistan; and Uwe Tietze, from Western Germany. Doris Hauser, from Switzerland, also a member of the group, will be unable to attend.

Kaj D. Kristoffersen, journalism major here, will act as host to the visiting students. During the Berlin Philharmonic concert last November 10, he made the acquaintance of Miss Tietze and Miss Hauser, who were working as ushers at the San Francisco Opera House. They expressed an interest in visiting an American college. "That's how it all began . . ." Kristoffersen said.

Sponsored by American Field Service International Scholarships, the six students are living with foster families and are currently enrolled as seniors at George Washington, Lincoln, and Lowell.

Through these scholarships, 800 European high school students visit and live in America for one year. They graduate and receive their diplomas from the American schools before returning to Europe.

Beta Tau Members Selling Tickets For Mistletoe Mingle

Beta Tau fraternity will present their annual dance, Mistletoe Mingle, this Friday, December 14, from 9 to 12 p.m. at the California Club at 1750 Clay Street, according to Ralph Hirk, fraternity president.

Dan Shulman and his six-piece band will provide the music, Kirk said, and dress will be cocktail dress for the women and suits for the men. Price of admission for one couple will be $2.25.

Tickets will be on sale around campus this week and may be bought from any Beta Tau fraternity member. They may also be purchased at the door, Kirk said, adding that this event has become an annual one since 1940 when it was first inaugurated.

Fraternity members working to make the dance a success include Vic Bogo, Ron Limneos, Doug Tanner, Chuck Young and all fraternity officers, which include John Frisk, Jeff Roddin, Dave Taylor, Vince Camps and Arleigh Greenblat.

Kirk also added the fact that the Christmas tree which their fraternity puts up by the silver pole every year will go up sometime this week.

Editorial: Mental Giant Is Scholarships' Tiny Tot

THE GENIUS, the uncommon man as he is sometimes referred to, is the foundation on which civilization is built.

It is of paramount import, therefore, to society and each of its members that these mental giants of today receive an opportunity for an education, so that their mental faculties may have the chance for development to the utmost.

No doubt this is not startling news to the average college student. For he is aware of the fact that if it were not for the few thousand geniuses who have existed, civilization would undoubtedly be set back many centuries. In fact, we, the common men, would likely be lounging around in tiger skins telling tales of the dinosaur who got away, while the women would be trying to light the fire by beating two rocks together.

One of the methods originally designed to encourage and enable the mental giants to receive an education is the scholarship. By educating them, we, the intellectually mediocre, bring them up to date on previous discoveries so that they may not squander their time uncovering knowledge with which civilization is already familiar.

After they uncover a new universal law, we learn from them and utilize this new-found knowledge practically and on a mass production basis. In this manner, civilization and each of its members are able to benefit individually.

However, in recent years the basis for awarding scholarships has been widened to include participation in social activities. It is now felt by some that the recipient of a scholarship should be mentally efficient and Socially active. Scholarships have almost become a popularity contest, with instructors and students serving as the judges.

Now there may be some merit in this system, for the highest scholastic standing does not necessarily signify the greatest creative ability. Rather it may be the result of conformity. For there are some instructors at every college who would rather lose a ten dollar bill than assign an A or B grade to students who differ with their opinions or cannot compete with doctrinal ideas.

They condemn intolerance, while they themselves are intolerant. They laugh at "the softer pedagogy," while they are verbose, bona-fide members. A grade of B from one of these instructors usually connotes A work, while an A grade is given to the student who conforms or is currently more mentally acute than the instructor.

Nevertheless, the true mental giant is able to overcome this flaw in the educational system to some degree. Although he may not conclude his education with the highest scholastic standing, he certainly will be a permanent member of the college's honor society, which requires a 3.3 (B) grade point average for at least three out of four semesters.

Therefore, this criticism is not reason enough for awarding scholarships on any other than a Scholastic and Need basis. Need, of course, must be considered, for it would be foolhardy to award a scholarship so that a student can make the last payment on his pink and black Cadillac.

Recently an Associated Student scholarship was "lifted from the table" and reconsidered at a Student Council meeting. The scholarship would be awarded on a Need, Scholastic standing, and Social activities participation in at college basis. From what has been shown, it is clear that this scholarship should not be approved if one of its prerequisites is to be participation in social activities. But there are additional reasons for which it should be condemned.

It seems there are a number of similar scholarships being awarded here and at every college on a similar basis. Apparently the student attitude toward these scholarships has become listless, for the applications are few in comparison with what should be expected. In many cases, the scholarship recipients are of mediocre mental capacity, like us—although they are undoubtedly more popular and less cynical.

This apathetic attitude should be enough discouragement against the establishment of any more Social scholarships. However, because the mediocre are as expendable as a nut or a bolt, this allocation of Social scholarship funds is a needless expenditure. Our education is personally beneficial to us individually. It does not benefit each member of society, civilization or the Associated Students.

Certainly the education of the mentally mediocre strengthens a nation on the whole. But this is neither the job of the Associated Students nor are scholarships the means.

It is the responsibility of the state and nation to strengthen itself by educating its citizens. This can best be done not by scholarships but through providing more, better and inexpensive educational opportunities for those with the initiative and desire to take advantage of them.

If Student Council is going to award the AS scholarship on any other than a Need and Scholastic basis, the money spent is indeed an exorbitant sum.

Certainly with all the budget cuts which were necessary earlier in the semester, it is apparent that the council, which is one of the most sincere and efficient groups of student leaders observed by us in the last four semesters (this is not a weak attempt at flattery but an objective appraisal which can be supported by fact), could find a more beneficial project for the Associated Students and the college in which to invest AS funds.

Beauty From The Skin Out

Short-Tall, Stout-Slender Girls Trap Unwary Men, Learn The Tricks In Home Econ Course

By Carol Harris

Fashion courses and men usually don't mix, and this old adage certainly holds true in the case of Home Economics G15.

No males of any size, shape or color are allowed or tolerated in G15, which is a course in wardrobe planning, selection and construction. Also covered are personal analysis, study of the individual figure, posture, facial characteristics, grooming, color selection, ensemble planning, clothing expenditures, and the making, purchasing, and care of clothing.

The first step of the course is the analysis of skin and facial characteristics. As Frances Lloyd, instructor for the course, stated, "We start right at the base of things by starting from the skin and then working our way out."

Facial characteristics are analyzed, with the good points being emphasized. Then comes training in the selection of soap, make-up, and the correct use of lipstick. Professional advice for this part of the course is in the person of a cosmetician who actually shows the women how to apply their cosmetics.

Hair enters the picture when the women learn how to choose hair styles most flattering to them.

Next in line, the actual planning and construction of a wardrobe is worked on. Emphasis is placed on color selection, ensemble planning and the use of lines.

Tall women want to be short, short women tall; the stout want to be slender, and the slender stout. By learning the proper selection of clothing, it is sometimes possible to create an illusion of the desired effect. For example; if the short woman wears dresses cut along simple lines, she will appear to be taller than she actually is.

Although in the long run students have found it more economical to make their own clothes, few persons realize there are occasions when it is more practical to buy them.

A good wool suit ready-made costing $30 can sometimes run up to $40 or more if made at home. On the other hand, a specialty item can be made inexpensively. A formal selling for $40 can be made for $25.

Don't be discouraged, men, if you've had the patience and intestinal fortitude to read through this discourse on femininity, for you haven't been forgotten. Although there are no clothing selection courses for men, there is a new gadget which has come out that is helpful in selecting harmonizing colors.

All one has to do to find what colors to wear is to turn a small circular cardboard disc to the color suit that is to be worn. The tie and sock colors which harmonize with the suit are shown next to it. Some say this eliminates the need for a wife.

Thus, with clothing selection courses for the women and the automatic color selectors for the men, the college should have the best-dressed group of students to be found anywhere.

Penal Code 6260, California State Vehicle Act, Chapter XVIII, paragraph 187, reads: "It is a misdemeanor to shoot at any kind of game bird or mammal — except a whale, from an automobile or airplane."

Adam Gets Rib In

(ACP)—A couple of shorties picked up from The Statesman, published at the University of Minnesota Duluth Branch:

Adam was the first electronic engineer, mainly because he furnished spare parts for the world's first loudspeaker.

The young man who just received his college degrees rushed out and said: "Here I am world! I have an AB!" And the world replied, "Sit down, son, and I'll teach you the rest of the alphabet."

AGGIE (don't call me Agnes) Roberts pointed out a male student and said that he had the map of Italy written all over him. He was blue-eyed and had light hair, so she was naturally questioned. She pointed to his clod-hoppers and smiled gleefully, "He's wearing boots isn't he."

EVERYONE AT COLLEGE seems to want Christmas work, and since there are more students than jobs, we have some suggestions for future occupation. For instance: Making holes in doughnuts, counting the 20,000 filter traps in cigarettes, writing a freelance novel on Spread A Little Hate Each Day, or composing a song to rival the late record, I Saw Esau On The See-Saw.

In the above sentence "late" refers to new but from what has been heard of it, "late," meaning deceased, could very aptly apply.

The Bohemian

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

SILVERY rays of stars cut into the blanket of a soft blue that formed the sky. The gentle breezes of this miraculous desert night caressed all who would receive them, leaving a sigh of peace.

The message had been heralded by the divine light which with a spark had penetrated corners of evil, igniting good. Flashes of gold continued to reverberate toward the horizon, painting a shrine against the heavens.

Threading of three camels, interrupted the mysterious stillness and left a trail of glory on the smooth, bronzed sands.

As the small and humble group passed, a pious spell was cast around them. Faintly audible singing descended upon them. Voices from a celestial choir bidding welcome.

A large, luminous star also seemed to draw closer and followed a pathway along the firmament, offering guide to the enlightened group below.

The three men rode with their heads bent in reverence, their hands clasped in prayer. They were caught in a feeling never before experienced by man. Hope and love filled their once straining souls, leaving them in a blissful state, unconscious of fear and misery.

These three were mighty men in their own realms. Wise leaders struggling hard against the evil forces gaining might in a disruptive world. For selfishness and intolerance had become so great that the meek lacked a defender against the oppressors of justice.

These three men, who now knelt humbly in front of the seemingly desolate shack, were not strong enough to raise their fellows from the chaotic state of their souls. Here now lay their hope. Here they would find the inspiration needed to reinstate humanity with the lacking faith in goodness.

Choruses of blessing blended with beautiful light seemed to sound out the triumph of the pilgrimage's end.

The three kings had come to celebrate the birth of the King of all kings.

TV Breakdown Causes Intense Family Crisis

Rabbit ears are gone and so are singing commercials, dramas, Mickey Mouse and Rin Tin Tin.

The one thing that had held the family institution together has vanished. The television set has been carried away to the repair shop for an expensive operation or quiet burial.

What can one possibly do when the center of family activity is gone? Surely, the cinema is available with all its varied entertainment, or the open road with a tank full of petrol, and even the library is accessible to interested eggheads, but nothing seems to replace the billion dollar industry of Disneyland, Judge Roy Bean, and owl movies extracted from the files of 1930.

TV viewing is a habit just like so many of the so-called "vices" and is just as hard a habit to break. Hollywood could make millions producing a film starring Frank Sinatra in The Man With The Golden TV Set, or I Was A TV Addict For The FBI.

Looking out across a wide expanse of uninhabited land is a sin to some citizens who, in truth, would rather be home watching someone else discover the land expanse on an old western film replete with Apache Indians.

It's a good thing a certain gentleman in 1492 didn't have this attitude, or else TV sets wouldn't be here today—or anything else for that matter.

Back to the family. With the TV missing, the homestead is left in a state of sheer exhaustion and embarrassment. Junior can't play outside because he's overweight from eating snacks while viewing, and Mom and Dad are at a loss for words, having previously only spoken briefly to one another to direct picture clearing and channel changing.

That smoking, smelly mass of broken antenna and tubes accomplished nothing except to ruin a quiet evening at home. However, there is one consolation. Perhaps the set will be beyond repair and then the family will have to buy a larger screen. Maybe even 10 inches this time.

New Firehouse Sirens To Drown Out Instructors; Bilko Takes Over

Long gone are the horse and carriage days of fire fighting, but the march of progress continues.

A new firehouse, occupying the corner of Ocean and Phelan Avenues, is scheduled for completion late next year.

Already the prospect of its effects on the college are being explored to determine if there will be a marked change in routine here.

Much anticipation awaits the first wail of sirens down Phelan Avenue in regard to reaction from students in classrooms. Incidentally, protocol demands that you do not rush to the window, without first being certain that the instructor has an advantageous view.

Do you think that it will be frowned upon to start a "Sgt. Bilco type" pool on how many alarms the firemen will respond to in a week? Of course, you will have to take into consideration the matter of false alarms that constantly harass the department. An added incentive would be to conduct an extra kitty on the longest call of the week.

An interesting feature would be the Phelan Avenue Timing Association, whose purpose would be to clock a certain engine from the station to a point along Phelan Avenue somewhere past Riordan High School. Closest guess to the time would be awarded a free ticket to the Fireman's Ball.

It will be no small task for the hook and ladder boys to roll out on an alarm at 8 o'clock in the morning, while students are jockeying for positions as they head for the same parking area.

Fire engines cause considerable noise when answering an alarm, so if you are scheduled for an exam, bring some cotton to stuff in your ears, so that you will not be disturbed. The only drawback to this scheme is that you might miss the oral explanation preceding the exam and flunk it.

For any of you who might possibly be stimulated by this adventurous life, you may apply downtown with Civil Service. This would give you a stock retort to that age old question, "Where's the fire?"

Cagers Meet Gael Frosh Today After Downing Napa, Dropping Pair To Cal Blues, Don Frosh

It was a mighty cold evening, last Saturday, both outside and on the Kezar Pavilion floor, as the USF Frosh eked out a 51-40 win over the Rams in a game that saw the Dons and City College count but 36 field goals between them.

This afternoon at 3:30, the Rams host the St. Mary's Frosh, and on Friday the USF JV's will play City College at the men's gym.

AL MOCK, one of two vets from last season's cage club.

Next Tuesday, December 18, the Rams play the Cal Frosh at Berkeley, and then on successive Thursdays they will engage the Santa Clara Frosh at San Jose, and East Contra Costa, at men's gym, respectively. The cagers will then open the new year by playing in the annual Modesto Tournament, from January 3-5.

The real difference in the USF tilt came at the foul line, as City College put through only six charity shots all night, while the Dons hit on 13. Since both teams were so very frigid from the floor, the contest was limited to a defensive one, with the clubs rebounding of USF a telling factor.

Fred LaCour took home the high scoring totals for his team and the game with a 14-point performance. Bob Tealer was the top scorer for City College with 10 markers.

After the Dons had built a slim 23-20 halftime lead, the margin between the clubs climbed to 11 points midway in the final half, and USF held that advantage until the finish.

The college cagers won their first road game of the season when they defeated the Napa Chiefs by a 79-42 score on December 5.

Forward Mal McCormick led in the scoring department with 14 points, and teamed with center John Henry to control the rebounds during most of the game. Helping McCormick in the point production were forward Bob Tealer with 11 points, Henry with 10 and guard Al Mock with 11.

The Rams had a height advantage, dominating the boards and leading all the way. Napa forward Bob Gillium was the Chief's one bright spot, and scored 18 points in the first half, but was held to a free throw in the final 20 minutes.

City College had a 37-28 halftime lead and held a 33-point margin at one point in the second half, a 67-34 count.

In the preliminary game, the Ram JV's won a 57-55 sudden death overtime win over Napa High School. Bob Bates scored on a driving lay up to give the young Rams their first victory. They had lost previously to Sacred Heart and Galileo high schools.

On December 4, the Rams dropped a 74-49 decision to the Cal Blues on the home court. The Blues were paced by Joe Kapp, who netted 21 points, mostly with a deadly jump shot.

Paced by Rich Russell with 15 points and Al Mock with 14, the Rams played very close to the Blues until midway in the second half, at which time they trailed 51-45. Then Kapp and Bob Dalton, with 15 points, broke loose and sent the visitors on a scoring spree that continued to the final buzzer.

At the half the Rams trailed 33-30, but tallied 14 points at the free throw line and were not hitting well from the floor.

Vet Makes A U-Turn From End Of Road

RAMBLINGS

By Mike Berger

FIVE MEN entered the dimly-lit restaurant. Nobody noticed them. All the customers were busy munching on $5 steaks or sipping on $1 drinks.

Obviously, the men were in as dark a mood as the room which they had just entered. Just a few dejected salesmen, one might think, but no. There was something familiar about their manner, and their faces, or what could be seen of them.

Then they were recognizable as five players on the visiting pro football team, and the reason for their gloom was self-evident after a glance at the evening paper which read "Rams Bury 49ers, 30-6."

There was one balding fellow seated in the booth who seemed to be lower than a lizard's navel. Oh, sure, the rest of his friends were depressed, but he in particular, for he was a man whose pride and confidence had been dealt body blows for many weeks. The paper who was making a U-turn from the end of the road, heading back for the bright places he seemed to have passed.

Again, this may be wrong, but we get the impression that the recent acceptance of the Gator Bowl bid by Georgia Tech is a back-handed slap at Louisiana Governor Earl Long and his racial-supremacy policies.

You see, the New Orleans Sugar Bowl is limited because the game committee may offer bids only to teams without negro players. This situation is caused by a law which Governor Long had rushed through his state legislature after Georgia Tech and Pittsburgh had played in the first non-segregated Sugar Bowl last January.

Prior to this contest, feeling among Southern observers ran high, in fact, to the point where Georgia Tech students had to riot in order to show their insistence that the game go on, politics or no.

Once again in 1957, Georgia Tech and Pittsburgh will meet in a post season game, but this time it's the Gator, and not the Sugar Bowl. No reflection on the Gator Bowl, mind you, but we can't help but think that the Yellow-jackets would be battling Tennessee in a New Orleans re-match were it not for the bigotry in Louisiana politics.

IFC Volleyball League Cancelled After Third Try

Because of lack of participation, the Inter-Fraternity Council volleyball league has been canceled, Joe Welsh, organizer of the activity, recently announced.

Three schedules had been made up, Welsh added, beginning early in November. The latest attempt at a beginning for the league took place last week, he said, but most of the fraternities involved asked to have certain games cancelled because of other activities.

The original plan for the semester was to have four leagues, Welsh declared, but the clubs had not taken enough interest to sign up to participate in their league. The leagues would have included the Inter-Fraternity Council, the Inter-Sorority Council, the Independent League, which would have included any organization that is chartered in the Club Activity Board, and the Hotel and Restaurant League.

The Inter-Fraternity Council scheduled its first game early in November. The first game had a turnout of only two full teams, and after several repeat performances of this type, Welsh said he cancelled the games and brought out a new schedule, which was also cancelled.

Next semester, Welsh said, he is in hopes of having a basketball league. Last spring there was a basketball league that was very successful, he added, with full participation of all of the fraternities, clubs and other groups.

Star defensive lineman Art Donovan of the Baltimore Colts is the son of Arthur Donovan, famed boxing referee who officiated many of Joe Louis' fights.

revealed his 5 for 13 passing average in the game, and the most recent blow was right there in news type, printed all over his disconsolate face.

As the writers around the circuit would say, it looked as though the veteran was just about at the end of the road.

One of his buddies was trying to laugh off the day's events with not-so-humorous remarks. Perhaps he laughed too much . . . he was cut from the team in the morning.

But the bald one did not laugh; he could hardly talk. It was apparent that he was trying to think of next week's game, and another chance to prove that the smart guys were wrong.

Next week came, as did a revelation in the veteran's performance, a startling 14 completions in 20 attempted passes, plus a touchdown via the ground.

Another week came, and another game, and another starring day's play, accented by 15 completions for 210 yards.

And then came the contest of two weeks ago, and 14 for 18, 284 yards and two touchdowns.

We may be wrong, we have been before, but on the television screen that day, Mr. Y. A. Tittle looked like a man

Track Team Shy On Sprinters; Workouts Begin Next Month

By Jim Rohner

A quick look at the college track team potential for the coming season shows a number of returning lettermen, plus the addition of a few outstanding high school stars, according to Lou Vasquez, track coach here.

Leroy Thomas, 6-4 high jumper, who placed second in the state meet last year, will be back for another season. Ray Batz and Roy Buckman are expected to add strength to the distance runners by their return.

LOU VASQUEZ, head track coach here.

Three members of last year's relay team will be on hand again this season. Myron Zimmerman, Ron Anderson and Ken Richter have all stated their intention to return, Vasquez added. George Jones, outstanding Ram hurdler last year, will be missed this season, since he enlisted in the Army a few weeks ago.

Bob Guddee will be back in the hurdles and broad jump as will Herm McKee, who was injured a good part of last season. Sprint champion Clint Redus has moved on to San Jose State.

Newly arrived high school stars who will bolster the strength of the returning lettermen include the following: Bob Roper, Catholic Athletic League sprint champion from Riordan; Will Gaspar, all-city pole vault and high jump ace from Polytechnic; Bill Barrington, 440-yard dash, and Pet Morgan, weights, both from Lincoln; and Ed Degliatoni, pole vault, returning from the service and formerly of Riordan.

Emphasizing that this list represents only those whom he has personally contacted, Coach Vasquez urged all men who have had high school track experience to come out. Sprinters are especially needed, Vasquez added.

Informal workouts will begin after the first of the year, with official practice beginning approximately February 1, since the first meet is in late February, Vasquez also stated.

Soccer Club Led By Foreign Stars

Toni Quiteno, the Rams' inside left and team captain; Al Morales, right halfback; and fullback Ivan Carrillo, the college's outstanding players in the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference, received their All-Conference awards from Coach Roy Diederichsen at the Block SF's semi-annual banquet, held in Smith Hall on December 3.

Defeated only by the University of San Francisco Dons in the league's last game and, later in the playoff, the City College booters captured second place in the NCISC final standings, after playing and beating four-year colleges such as Stanford (4-0); San Jose State (5-2); Santa Clara (6-1), University of California (2-1) and San Francisco State College (5-4).

Men from various points of the world were in the Ram soccer squad again this year, with Nicaraguan students leading in number. Morales, right half; fullback Carrillo and his twin brother, Rene, the college's left wing; Orlando Dona, center forward; Rafael Soto, and goalkeeper Pastor Valle are all natives of Nicaragua.

Another Central American country, El Salvador, contributed to the starting lineup with the booter's "most valuable player," Quiteno, Joaquin Rodriguez, inside right; and forwards, also brothers, Charles and Joe Flores. Poland was represented by Sam Zeiver and Toni Baranski; Mexico by Gustavo Ortiz, right halfback; Great Britain by fullback Roy Davis, and Korea by Bong Koong.

Closing the Rams' '56 soccer season, 22 members of the squad were presented with Block SF awards at the college's society banquet.

Placement Center To Stay Open During Yule Holiday Processing Job Applications

With approximately 2,500 students employed in the Bay Area for the Christmas vacation season, the college placement center is still processing job applicants for a wide variety of jobs for the holiday recess, according to Joseph Amori, placement director.

The holiday season hiring started early in September and gained momentum through October and reached a peak during the Thanksgiving recess. Training schedules in department stores were held on Saturdays during the college semester when hundreds of student workers were processed and trained for the heavy sales ahead. More women were hired than men, with a ratio of about ten to one.

All department stores have ceased hiring for part time and night jobs. The only jobs available are for day time workers from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. in all classifications, Amori said.

As in past years the San Francisco Post Office and the U. S. Postal Transportation Services hired the largest number of workers, approximately 1,500 men from the college, with both veterans and non-veterans on the payrolls. This also includes the 300 truck drivers for the truck division of the U. S. Mail Service.

While the wage scale for all mail classifications have remained the same, there has been a five per cent raise in all classifications in department stores. The beginning rate for sales clerks is now $1.22 per hour, Amori said, adding that all government workers receive a ten per cent pay increase for work performed after 6 p.m.

For the benefit of both applicants and employers, Amori said, the Placement Center will remain open after the closing of the college on Friday, December 14. Students who need job assistance, those who are changing jobs because of layoffs in certain firms, and others who desire job counselling can seek the aid of the placement office. The office is located in S-188 and is open from 10 a.m. to 12 noon and from 2 to 4 p.m.

Whitney First In Debate Tournament

Win In 5 Rounds Credit To College

By Carol Harris

William Whitney, a fourth-semester student here, took first place in all five rounds of the discussion category in the Northern California Forensic Association debate tournament held recently at St. Mary's College. Also participating in the two-day event were John Pruyn and Jerry Bickov.

When asked why he enjoyed public speaking and debating, Whitney replied, "It adds another dimension to expression. It makes the things you read about mean more to you and gives people a chance to exchange ideas."

Majoring in letters and science, Whitney has always been interested in international affairs and reads a great deal in that connection.

In summing up Whitney's achievement, Thomas Dutcher, sponsor of the debate team, stated, "By taking first place in all five discussion rounds, there certainly was no doubt as to the winner. Whitney is a tribute to the college, and the college should be very proud of the way Whitney has represented it."

Subject of the discussion was What Should The United States Role Be In the Middle East?

BILL WHITNEY captured first place in all five rounds of discussion in a recent debate held at St. Mary's College.
—Guardsman photo by Dave Gehringer.

Five rounds were held on this subject, with five to seven members participating on each panel. Each round was devoted to a special phase of the subject. Round I was composed of becoming acquainted with the subject and agreeing upon definitions and limitations; Round II, analysis of the problem; Round III, possible solutions; Round IV, evaluation of solutions, and Round V, reaching agreement on the solutions.

The conclusion the teams reached about the Middle East situation was that the United States should sponsor a resolution in the United Nations for the purpose of establishing a special subcommittee under the auspices of the United Nations Atoms for Peace Commission. The purpose of such a committee would be to promote research and development of atomic energy to raise the standards of living of the various people of the Middle East.

Some of the other colleges participating included Chico State, San Jose State, San Jose Junior College, College of the Pacific, Modesto Junior College, Stanford University, and the University of San Francisco. The University of San Francisco took first place, while College of the Pacific was second and Stanford University third.

Inter-Member Wrangling Limits Council Action; Much-Shelved AS Scholarships To Be Investigated

By Bob Sims

Approval of an Inter-Fraternity Council proposal to stage a drive during which clothes for a needy North Dakota Indian tribe will be collected seemed to be the only measure on which Student Council members could wholeheartedly agree in meetings held here last week.

Dissension first became apparent when Bill Roberts, sophomore class president, found fault with the financial administerings of fellow cabinet member John Zevas, rally commissioner.

Zevas, already the recipient of some $547 in Associated Student funds, asked for an additional $80 to pay overdue bills. After a heated discussion, the council allocated $55, ruling out a $25 reimbursement to cheerleaders who purchased their own blouses.

Other council disagreements arose over whether to endorse a proposed amendment which would create a cabinet office to coordinate foreign student affairs, and whether to enclose a fraternity dance reminder in letters being sent out to AS members publicizing the forthcoming elections. Neither question was settled in last week's sessions.

Guardsman editorial opinion set the wheels of council machinery rolling just prior to weekend adjournment when Walt Schultz, freshman council representative, suggested that an investigation of the much-shelved AS scholarship fund be conducted.

Channeling this idea into a productive area, Wayne McFadden, AS president, then appointed Schultz to the chairmanship of a committee to explore the possibility of adopting the long awaited fund, asking Metta Wedleton, Associated Women Student president, to assist him.

AGS Plans Dinner, Dance January 12

A dinner dance to be held at the New Tivoli Restaurant has been planned by Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society, to take place Saturday, January 12, according to William G. Richardson, faculty adviser.

It was decided by the committee for arrangements that a deviation from the customary dinner should be taken in favor of a dinner dance at which awards consisting of gold pins, silver bars, and silver pins will be given to those eligible to receive them.

It was estmated by Richardson that about 15 gold pins, 11 silver bars, and 30 silver pins will be given. Price of admission will not exceed $5 a couple, and members are allowed to bring guests.

A coaching service to aid students desiring help in their classes is also being planned by the society for next semester, Richardson said.

Steno Training For Men To Start Here

Because unlimited job opportunities are now available for men secretaries, James McConnell of the business education department here, announced that the start of a new course to train men stenographers will begin next semester.

Meeting with the requests of many leading local business companies seeking men secretaries to fill positions of ever increasing demand, the course will be a step in the right direction, McConnell said.

Labeled by him as the "door of opportunity," he said, "This course will open the way to executive positions as many company executives started as men secretaries."

In support of the administrative action that inaugurated the course, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the State Department informed McConnell that they are urgently needing qualified men secretaries, both at home and abroad.

Further details regarding the course can be best explained by McConnell in his office, C-338F, during office hours or by special appointment.

Smith Hall Site Of Filipino Dance, Christmas Fantasy

Members of the Filipino Club will present their first formal dance, Christmas Fantasy, Friday, December 14, from 9 p.m. to midnight in Smith Hall, Ronnie Cacas, president of the club, announced recently.

Jackie Coon and his five-piece dance band will furnish the melody for the occasion. Attire will be black and white or dark blue suit with bow-tie for men. Ballerina dresses will be appropriate for women. Club members will wear their native costumes, the Barong Tagalog for men and Balintawak for women, Cacas stated.

Admission to the dance is $1.75 per couple, and tickets may be purchased at the student bank in Smith Hall or at the door before the dance, Cacas added. Highlight of the affair will be surprise entertainment which will be presented during the intermission. Refreshment will be served to the guests free of charge.

Official hostesses of the evening will be the presidents of each club, fraternity and sorority here which were invited. Acting as patrons and patronesses will be the invited Filipino Club officers from University of California, Stanford University, University of San Francisco and San Francisco State College.

An approximate crowd of two to three hundred is expected to attend the dance. Different committees are busy preparing for the complete plans of the affair. Chairman for decoration is Jimmy Ventura, and Norman Montez is in charge of refreshment.

Other officers of the club for this semester are May Martinez, vice-president; Luming Crispo, secretary and treasurer, and Napoleon Engalla, sergeant-at-arms. Adviser of the club is faculty member John Fawcett.

16-Day Christmas Break Cuts Guardsman Issues

Students here will be given a 16-day Christmas vacation from studies starting Monday, December 17, with classes commencing again on Wednesday, January 2.

This will be the last issue of The Guardsman for the current year, according to Bob Kauth, Guardsman editor-in-chief. Two more issues are scheduled after Christmas vacation, Kauth stated.

Vet Report Filing Due

Monthly reports must be filled out by veterans between Wednesday, January 2, and Friday, January 4, 1957, in the veterans affairs office, S-134, according to Robin Dunn, veteran affairs adviser.

Any veterans who have dropped units will take a subsequent loss in pay, Dunn said, adding that any students planning to attend another college should make out the proper forms for transferring subsistence payments.

Section 74, State Housing Act of California reads: "No horse, cow, calf, swine, sheep, goat, rabbit, mule or other animals, chicken, pigeon, goose, duck or other poultry shall be kept in any apartment house or hotel or any part thereof."

The Time Of Your Life Opens On January 4

PEGGY POWELL, who acted as Mrs. Fosley in the little theater production of Suds In Your Eyes last spring, is cast as Nick's daughter in Saroyan's The Time Of Your Life presentation here.

The Time Of Your Life, a three-act fantasy by William Saroyan, will be presented here at the college's little theater on January 4, 5, 11, and 12 at 8 p.m., according to Michael Griffin, faculty director.

Scenes are laid in Nick's Place on Pacific Avenue in San Francisco in the year 1937.

Central theme of the play concerns the time of one's life—the instant in which the real person really exists and lives. It does show that there is badness in life and that people should live and see the badness but not abhor it. They should see the goodness in people and try to foster this goodness.

Price of admission will be $1 general admission, 50 cents for students with student body cards from other schools, and free to students here who are members of the Associated Students.

Griffin announced the cast as follows: Ron Allen will appear as Willy, Louis Bamberger as the Arab, Bob Bryant as Tom, Andy Buonsate as Harry, Lyn Cripps as the Newsboy, Ray Davis as McCarthy, Bob Doyle as Kit Carson, Jeanne Graham as Elsie, Leigh Guerre as Willy, George Hubbard as Bliek, Bill Henderson as the society man, Jo Anne Jaklevick as the society lady, Ken Kitch as Nick, Stephannie Koppe as Mary, Virginia Lees as the Killer, Crockett McClanahan as Saroyan, Peggy Powell as Nick's daughter, Mel Rasmussen as Krupp, Dawn Roberts as Kitty, Ruie Treptou as killer's sidekiek, Josephine Wall as Laurene, and Stan Weston as Joe.

Designer of the set will be either Chuck Mullen or Miss Koppe. Both have turned in very good designs and it is hard to choose between them, according to Griffin.

Either Rich Barulich or Miss Koppe will be the designer of the costumes. Stage manager will be Tom Mandas, properties manager Pat Dulcich, and promotion manager McClanahan.

AS Election Polls Close Today

Norm Durieux Issues Campaign Pledge

CITY COLLEGE as a society of individuals has many problems. Each activity, whether it be educational, social, athletic, will not and cannot be a success unless it has support.

My goal, if I should be so honored as to be elected president of the Associated Students, would be to draw all interest groups into college activities and have successful participation by the whole student association.

There are many problems to be solved at City College, and I am not going to state positively nor make any claim that all of these problems can be solved; but I would do my best to see that many of these problems are solved as soon as possible.

I feel that I am well qualified to work on student problems because I have been an active member of student government since my first semester. I served on the rally committee and the Club Activities Board. I was elected president of the freshman class during the spring term of last year, and I am currently serving in the office of the Associated Men Student President. I have attempted to take a lead in arranging a diverse program sponsored by the AMS, from freshman orientation, homecoming queen contest, game and dance, to college hour drama productions. Therefore, I urge you to weigh my qualifications for this office. It is my desire to assist all students of the association to benefit from a well planned program of college level activities, and by electing me your president you will put me in a position to do so.

NORMAN C. DURIEUX.

January 17 Date Set For Vote On AS Amendments

An amendment election will be held on Thursday, January 17, to add further changes to the constitution of the Associated Students, according to Jim Kennedy, chairman of the constitutional committee.

To be placed on the ballot, amendments must be signed by ten per cent of the AS, and submitted to the Election Committee to be placed on the ballot; or it can be done by presenting the proposed amendment to Student Council and having it accepted by that body by a two-thirds majority vote of those present at voting time. The amendment then becomes effective if ratified by a two-thirds majority of the votes cast on the amendment.

Inviting AS members to submit proposed amendments, Kennedy warned that they must be posted not later than tomorrow, January 10. According to constitutional rules, proposed amendments must be posted not later than one week before the election.

On the shelf, awaiting action by Student Council, is an amendment that will award block sweaters to athletes having receive block letters for two consecutive years.

Scheduled to appear on the ballot are two amendments approved in the last meeting of the Student Council. One of them will add to the cabinet of the AS president the position of International Relations Commissioner. The other proposes to include in the list of elected officers of the AS the positions of rally commissioner and yell leader.

Among the amendments voted down in the last election that are scheduled to reappear on the ballot are two dealing with the parliamentarian in the president's cabinet, and an amendment changing the requirements for qualification of the AS vice-president.

Different Colored Cards Issued Next Semester

Plans for issuing two different colored Associated Student cards for men and women are now in the making for the forthcoming semester, Dwane Shippey, AS cards sales chairman, announced recently.

The cards are now in the process of being drawn by students in the advertising art department.

Designed to put a stop to the practice of interchanging AS cards among men and women students, the cards will undergo additional changes. Among the changes will be the dropping of "sleepers" from the list of firms offering discounts.

Pending further action from Dean Ralph Hillsman, special "spouse cards" will be slated for adoption next semester. Their main feature will be that married couples on the campus will be able to share one card jointly and thus save money, Shippey said.

35 Vie For Top Student Posts, Council Seats

By Denny Delman

Entering its third and final day, the current Associated Student elections, featuring a record number of candidates, may set new records in the amount of balloting taking place.

Without wading through burdensome amendments, the voters have been favored with simply marking a check after any one of a choice field of contestants, led by presidential candidates Norman Durieux and Bob Varni. Durieux goes into this contest with two previous victories, one of which was over Varni.

Durieux, in the past, has served as president of the freshman class and the Associated Men Students.

Varni is completing his term as AS finance chairman, receiving plaudits from many sources in the monetary division of the college.

Ginny Hase and Metta Weddleton have provided a highly contested race for the office of AS vice-president. Both women have a semester of experience behind them, Miss Hase having served as president of the Inter-Sorority Council and Miss Weddleton as president of the Associated Women Students.

There is no doubt as to next semester's AMS president, since Mike Monteith, currently freshman class president, was the only candidate to meet the requirements and is thus unopposed.

Debbie Rudser and Eleanor Gandert are opposing each other in an effort to gain the office of AWS president.

In the races for the class presidencies, Gordon Beal and John Zevas have opened a two-man fight for leadership in the sophomore class, while Kathy Mulligan tries to follow in the footsteps of Marilyn Siccote and become the second woman to lead the freshman class. Joe Welsh has provided her opposition.

Twenty-four hopefuls are vieing for the 14 council seats, 14 seeking sophomore seats and 10 seeking freshman quarters.

Those declared eligible by John Dudley and his Election Committee for sophomore seats are Hugh Aaronson, Audrey Bocek, Betty Bone, Archie Briggs, Soledad Camacha, Joan Finneran, George Galban, John Kelly, Lily Kowalski, Jane Lenz, Carol Olson, Jerry Redford, Eleanor Smith, and Bob Teller.

Vieing for the freshman posts are Bev Castellacci, Francine Christen, Richard Daffner, Marlene Hannon, Freddie Hicks, Linda McArdle, Jack Patterson, Esperenza Santos, and Patsy Tokarski.

Booths have been set up in the Cloud Hall library, the Silver Pole in the Science Building and in Smith Hall. The times, as announced by Commissioner Dudley, are from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. All voting is being done by machine.

GINNY HASE is candidate for AS vice-president.

METTA WEDDLETON is candidate for AS vice-president.

Student Officers To Hold Awards Dinner

Student government officers this semester will be honored at the council awards dinner to be held in Smith Hall's faculty dining room tomorrow at 6:30 p.m., according to Louise von Emster, Associated Student vice-president.

Newly elected officers for the coming semester will be sworn in at this occasion when the outgoing cabinet and council members are presented with keys. The AS president-elect will also be sworn into office.

Also receiving honors and a pin at this dinner will be a student, not active in student government, who has contributed the most in service to the college this semester, Miss von Emster stated.

The hotel and restaurant department will prepare the dinner.

Bob Varni Issues Campaign Pledge

THE SUCCESSFUL FUTURE of the Associated Students of City College of San Francisco lies in the proper planning of events and policies desired by the majority of the students. With regard to this I have outlined a policy which will give more opportunities to more students.

My first point is aimed at bringing closer unity among the various organizations on campus, which is the nucleus of school spirit.

Secondly, I would like to see a scholarship program worked out which would give deserving CCSF students some type of reward. This scholarship program could also be offered to top ranking high school seniors, thereby giving them more incentive to attend CCSF.

Big name entertainment has always been welcome at CCSF, and I would like a larger program of entertainment inaugurated here with college hour and evening productions.

The discount privileges on the Associated Student card are now used by a large number of students, but with proper handling the number and variety of these discounts could be increased, offering a greater saving for a larger number of students. My final point is of primary concern to the 1,200 veterans now attending CCSF. I would like to see an organization formed solely of veterans which would give them an opportunity to have social events as they might desire.

The foregoing are my chief aims and express the policies toward which I will be working in the coming semester.

BOB VARNI.

Special Student Poll To Change Soph Ball Dress

Acting on results from the recent special student poll, the Sophmore Ball will again be a formal dance here, according to Bob Varni, finance chairman, who conducted the poll.

Plans for the event were changed when it was noted that of the 1,507 votes counted, students voted Yes by a vote of three to one on the question which read, "Would you like a format dance at CCSF?"

Of those polled, 1,001 were Associated Students. Thirty-four per cent indicated participation in athletic programs, 90 per cent read The Guardsman, and 40 per cent indicated membership in organizations on campus, Varni said.

Thirty-eight per cent indicated they were familiar with the organization of student government. Sixty-five per cent felt that student government properly served their interests.

Voters balloted 80 per cent in favor of student-sponsored scholarships, and 60 per cent would use an academic coaching service provided by the honor society if such service were available, Varni added.

Fifty-five per cent of the AS card holders use the discount privileges, 60 per cent attend athletic events, 60 per cent attend dances, 25 per cent attend drama productions, and 90 per cent purchase their books at the bookstore, the votes indicated.

Open to all students, on December 12 and 13 the poll was first conducted through physical education classes.

Attempting to form an opinion from as many as possible of the 1,500 veterans now in attendance, the poll was also taken in the veteran affairs office on January 2, 3, and 4. The results of this vote were not available at press time.

Debate Society To Hold Contest Here

With the topic, American Foreign Policy Abroad, a debate contest will be held here on Thursday, January 17, according to Thomas Dutcher, faculty adviser of Pi Rho Phi, debate society.

Formed to provide experience for speech majors and other students interested in public speaking, the contest is open to everyone, he said.

Outline for the program provides that debaters read an article for two minutes; then a five-minute period will be devoted to the main topic.

Winners will have their names inscribed on a perpetual trophy. They will also receive a trophy of their own.

Those wishing to enter the contest are requested to sign up in C-335, Dutcher's office. The contest will be held at 2 p.m. The meeting place will be announced by Dutcher.

Engineering Day Held Tomorrow

By Art Madamba

Private industry and government recruiting procurement teams from the Bay Area will convene here tomorrow, January 10, in the second annual Engineering Recruitment Day program, Joseph Amori, placement director here, announced recently.

Forty-five firms, representing a wide range of engineering activities, will bring to the campus more than 100 personnel managers and engineers who will screen, interview, and select candidates from the February and June engineering graduating classes.

The program will commence at 8 a.m. with a breakfast in the faculty dining room in Smith Hall where Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, will welcome the guests. Instructors of the engineering department, together with the college administrative staff, will participate in the early morning program. Amori and Louis Batmale, dean of semi-professional Courses here, will lead the discussion following the breakfast.

A complete schedule has been planned, whereby every engineering graduate will receive a personal interview with as many firms as he desires, Amori said. All firms have been assigned special interviewing rooms in Cloud Hall.

All graduate will have personal records compiled prior to the interviews, including a personal data sheet and three personal rating sheets. These will be available to each recruiting and procurement team.

William Mayo, engineering department chairman, and his entire staff of instructors, including the eight specialized training program instructors, will work with the placement director and the administrators.

Since the Engineering Recruitment Day program was judged a success last year by both students and recruiters, Amori said, there has been a very heavy demand this year for invitations from business, industry and the government. The selection committee has screened all requests, Amori said.

Veterans Affairs Office Sets Transfer Deadline

Veterans planning to transfer to another college during the next semester must file a petition for transfer benefits before Sunday, January 20, in S134, Robin Dunn, veterans counselor here, announced recently.

The office is now open to all veterans and will remain open until January 20, Dunn stated. Transfer forms are now available at the office for those who want to file their application.

All veterans intending to transfer next semester must file their application as early as possible to avoid complication on this matter and to help them clear their doubts concerning it, Dunn said.

Self Government Here Will Die If AS Neglect Voting Rights

(Editor's note: Because of the apparent logic and sincerity with which it is written, the following editorial which won first place in last year's nationwide Best College Newspaper Editorial Contest has been reprinted, and it is hoped that it may encourage more Associated Student voters to show an interest in their student government here by voting in the election today. The editorial was written by Mike Berger, The Guardsman's editor-in-chief last semester and sports editor this semester, and previously published in the May 23, 1956 issue of the paper. The contest was conducted by The Going-To-College Handbook, which is produced by Outlook Publishers, Richmond 19, Virginia.)

EVEN the most precious of possessions become neglected and misused if they are taken for granted, and in this nation of freedom it is necessary all too often to remind the people of their rights.

Perhaps the best way to make freedom a little more important to an apathetic populace is to take it away periodically. Since this is impossible, an editorial tap on the shoulder is needed to impress the voting duty upon the Associated Student card holders.

Nothing is ever gained by standing still, but one can lose everything by running away from responsibility. It is the easiest thing in the world to simply ignore the AS elections, or any elections, and indeed such lack of action is the best formula for throwing government and civil rights to the dogs.

The dangerous thing about this trend is that once it is allowed to take hold, possessions slip away like quicksilver, with the only chance for regaining these rights being a long succession of battles for freedom.

In the more specific case of college student government, it takes only enough people who think about how little their vote counts, and not about the betterment of the institution, for this sacred freedom to be lost.

Freedom is the most precious human right, and may exist in a myriad of forms, one of which is the right of self-government. Since there has been increasing discussion concerning the qualification of the 18-year-olds to vote, it seems to us that student government is an excellent opportunity for the younger voters of the nation to prove or disprove this argument for themselves. If college students are unable to fill their voting duty in student elections, it hardly seems logical that they be given the right to vote on the national level.

Representative showings by the student voters, however, is the best possible evidence of their interest and ability to fulfill their right to vote.

Overall voting totals in AS elections here have, unfortunately, been poor. Last semester, however, the percentage took a rise for the first time in several years. It is hoped that this trend will continue this week and next, as the AS voters decide on their officers for the fall semester.

What this nation has accomplished in past decades now stands ready for our consumption. Whether we will consume and leave only waste in our path, or consume, benefit and show progress instead is for our generation to decide. A measure of that decision will be reached next week.

Engineering Recruitment Day Offers Students Here Professional Guidance

ON BEHALF of the student body, we welcome the more than one-hundred personnel managers and engineers from private industry in the Bay Area to the second annual Engineering Recruitment Day to be held at the college tomorrow.

Inaugurated by Joseph A. Amori, placement director here, the Engineering Recruitment Day will commence with breakfast in the faculty dining room at 8 a.m. During a short orientation period, Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, will officially welcome to the college the "procurement officers," who represent the different departments of some 45 firms.

Following the breakfast, the group will adjourn to Cloud Hall. Working with eight training program instructors from the college, they will give personal interviews to each of the prospective February and June engineering graduates.

As this program has proved to be successful in the past, so we hope it will continue to be in the future. A year ago, E. J. O'Grady, representing the telephone company, in a letter to Amori stated, "The men (30) we employed in our plant department are well qualified in the electrical and electronic field as a result of the training they received in your technical classes."

This is, of course, a tribute to City College, but a tribute primarily merited by its engineering department and placement service. Working together they have been able to guide the college's alumni in the direction of satisfying one of the major incentives for the acquiring of an education. And that is the student's desire for adequate employment opportunities.

The Bohemian

Shakespeare Characters Meet In Modern Site To Clash In Philosophy Of Life Discussions

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

"MIND if I sit here?" the young man politely asked, somewhat disturbed by the looks of the company that circumstances had chosen for him.

The middle-aged man, lounging on the seat, was obviously drunk. His looks blended into the environment as fittingly as the empty beer bottle by his side. He wiped his mouth with a habitual gesture, twinkling his eyes.

"I would be honored by your presence," he finally replied. His tone implied mockery. Courtesy in a place like this? A splendid jest, giving rise for an occasion to order another drink.

Hamlet wondered why he, of all people, should find himself in such a place as this, surrounded by misfits of society, his label for the occupants of the tavern.

He was a student of philosophy and was proud of his cultural background. Perhaps this had an influence in shaping his intolerance of those who led a carefree life of ignorance.

Hamlet had made an appointment with a colleague, Horatio, whereby they should meet here and later depart to a place more conducive to intellectual discussions.

Now he was next to this coarse, gruff man, who was offering him a drink. He looked at him and regarded the man's features, searching for some sign of character behind such a mask of total joviality.

"Why do you hesitate?" the person representing a class unknown to Hamlet asked. "Let me tell you something," he continued, "never hesitate in your decisions. Especially, when someone offers you a free drink."

"I don't like to drink," was the reply.

"That's an absurd statement," the older man said. "One must enjoy all the pleasures, scarce as they are, that this life condones for the sorrow predominating it. Live and be merry, I say. If one tries to remove the veil enwrapping life's meaning, one will only encounter bitter frustrations.

"But I don't suppose that you're one of us?" Falstaff, as was the man's name, queried with an overly dramatic sigh of despondency.

"If you mean that I'm not one of those who believes in letting his faculties rot by wasting the precious time that human life is allotted, you are most certainly right," Hamlet answered, speaking like a man protecting his honor.

It is a man's duty to meet and try to add to the deeds that the great men in the past have executed. Not everyone has the qualifications to do this, but every man is indebted to civilization, and he should constantly strive to keep it going. Without this inherent goal, mankind would not lose time in becoming barbarian," Hamlet said.

"Then you must bear great disgust for a character such as mine?" Falstaff interjected with a look showing much need for sympathy and understanding.

"What I disapprove about your type is that you lack the courage and self-determination to struggle for a cause, an ideal, and keep at it regardless of the consequences," Hamlet said.

"That is the supreme challenge of life, and you refuse even to accept it. Of course, one must first be thoroughly sure, or at least convinced that the course about to be taken is right before the enterprise can be carried out," Hamlet blurted out.

There was a feverish burning in Hamlet's eyes as he said this. His knuckles showed white, he grasped the bottle with great force. Falstaff shifted uneasily. He was amazed at the violent change in this youth who had appeared so mannerly.

"God, how I hate my step-father," Hamlet unconsciously said, getting up suddenly when he spotted Horatio entering the tavern. They greeted each other and left right away.

Falstaff's face was decorated with a sardonic smile, one characteristic of a combetant after discovering his enemy's hidden flaw. He poured himself another drink, shrugged his shoulders and said self-assuringly, "Oh, well, I'll read about it in tomorrow's newspapers."

Modern Art?

Limp Timepiece Presents Timely View Of Society

By George Grasso

Modern art seems to be under heavy fire by the general public and many critics, on whether or not it makes any sense.

Artists adopted a more radical form of expression because they wanted more originality. They needed a more "poetic" way to express their deep feelings, mainly because it was getting pretty hard to beat Da Vinci and Michelangelo.

In the old days of artists like Da Vinci, Mona Lisa had a mystic smile on her face—now it would be on her forehead. Besides placing smiles on foreheads, and putting both eyes on one side of the head—if the modern artist can get three dimensional lines in his painting, with possibly limp watches over the edges, he has a potential masterpiece.

Once upon a time the sheer perfection of Michelangelo's David was cause enough to turn one's head to look at it. But modern civilization has developed a mania for motion, and now mobile room ornaments must jump up and down to get your attention.

But the question remains — does modern art make sense? And the people best qualified to answer it may be the contemporary artists themselves.

Stuart Davis, in defense of modern art, asks if modern thought, or modern scientific method, or even modern civilization make sense. He further states, "It looks different from past art because the modern artist lives in a society which looks at life differently."

Another contemporary, Thomas Benton, says, "Modern art has been moving away from human meaning—even the compositional meaning is lost."

Whether modern art makes sense or not is still debatable. But, along with modern insanity, it is definitely on the increase.

Shots At Ramdom

Sports May Contribute To Future War Efforts

By Lou Lucia

NO STRIKES may be called, but the opposition may be put out by one toss of the new baseball grenade. Of course there will not be a willing catcher, but then too who would umpire the affair?

Dr. Cecil C. Fawcett has a patent for a baseball-style hand grenade, of spheroid size and shape, which the average serviceman can throw to 60 feet or as close as 15 feet without being injured.

With the advent of this new weapon of destruction, baseball players may have found themselves training without realizing it. Infantry platoons need no longer be called number 199 or the like, but could pick up such colorful nicknames as Cleveland Indians No. 15.

However, war of any type is no joking matter. Thus far the grenade sounds good, but what of misfires? For instance, if a grenadier pitches his baseball up to the top of a hill and it doesn't explode, it may roll right down to the bottom of his feet. A very precarious position indeed: With the old pine cone shaped type, the grenade would only roll around in a circle and not come back like a yo-yo.

Misfires in grenades are not usual, and perhaps Dr. Fawcett's pellet has some kind of an indentation to prevent rolling, but what of dropping the baseball grenade?

The old form was easy to grab, but try to pick up a baseball fast and throw it. Ram baseballers could attest to the fact that many times the grasp on the ball is not what it should be and the ball slips through the fingers.

It is seldom that the armed services get ideas from sports, and it is ironic that an amusement may take its place in the part of future wars. Individual infantrymen can also receive an aid from professional football.

Although the radio phones to the quarterback have been deleted from the coach's manual of deception, the Marine Corps has adapted football type helmets with the radio inserted. This last phase also is not a reality yet, but at the cost of $80 per individual could be considered cheap in this day and age.

With platoon leaders calling the plays and the foot soldier doing the pitching, future battles may alleviate the worries of the armchair quarterbacks (Generals).

IF CITY COLLEGE had been located in France a number of years back or in early American times, the above incident may have token place.

First, though, let's have a little background. The student received what he believed to be a poor grade in his final examination. He slapped the instructor across the face with his glove and ordered his seconds (two other flunkies) to make arrangements. The instructor obviously couldn't back down because he believed in the adage Spare the Foil and Spoil the Child.

By disarming his opponent, the professor demonstrated that experience is the best teacher. Incidentally, the student lost the match and accepted a D . . . for Disarmed.

Today, the art of sword-fighting is gone. It has been replaced by viewing sports in the United States, and cherchez la femme in France.

Thomas, Ibarra, Max, Craft On All Conference

By Mike Berger

Three Ram linemen, end Leroy Thomas, a key to the pass attack; and tackle Ernie Ibarra and guard Rich Max, equally vital cogs in the running business, were recently named to the 1956 Big Eight All Conference football squad.

In addition, halfback Gene Craft was selected to the second team, completing the quartet of City College gridders who made the all-star team.

The bulk of all conference honors went to the champion Stockton club, which placed seven men on the first and second teams.

Besides winning the Big Eight title, their second in as many seasons, the Mustangs also defeated Orange Coast College, 20-14, in the annual Potato Bowl at Bakersfield.

At 6-2 and 190, Thomas was the best of all receivers in the conference, flagging down 16 passes for 313 yards in seven league contests. He teamed with all conference flanker Rich Piazza in 1955, and this year, coupled with another standout end in Ron Taylor, type helmets with the radio inserted. This last phase also is not a reality yet, but at the cost of $80 per individual could be considered cheap in this day and age.

Ibarra, a 6-0, 220-pound army vet, played most of the year at tackle after switching from the guard slot early in the season. Ram Head Coach Grover Klemmer more than once singled out the rugged tackle as a valuable man up front. This not only from the standpoint of opening up running room on the offense, but closing same on the defense.

The 215-pound Max was an outstanding lineman at Riordan High School two years ago, and was impressive with the Rams in 1955, his first season here. He was particularly outstanding on defense, and was a solid second string replacement for All Conference center Bill Canihan. This year, Max turned in a fine all round performance which earned him the all league honors of his predecessor.

It took lots of squeezing to leave Craft, the 150-pound scatback from Galileo, off the first team. The busy little runner was both the leading rusher and scorer for the Rams this season. His 521 yards in 64 carries for a sky-high 8.1 conference average, plus a total of 42 points scored on seven touchdowns certainly speak for themselves. Both marks are sparkling facets in a spectacular season's work.

The complete All Conference football team follows:

FIRST TEAM

Ends: Leroy Thomas (CCSF) and Bruce Bryam (Santa Rosa).

Tackles: Ernie Ibarra (CCSF) and Carlton Kammerer (Stockton).

Guards: Rich Max (CCSF) and Mathias Medrano (San Mateo).

Center: Bill Limeburger (Sacramento).

Quarterback: Nat Carasali (Santa Rosa).

Halfbacks: Charlie McDonald (Santa Rosa) and Wayne Schneider (Oakland).

Fullback: Lew Schmid (Stockton).

SECOND TEAM

Ends: Jim Coveney (Stockton) and Joy Gritts (Stockton).

Tackles: Bill Carr (WCC) and Clarence Beedle (Santa Rosa).

Guards: Paul Vaz (Santa Rosa) and Ken Castles (Stockton).

Center: Ed Vegely (Modesto).

Quarterback: Earl Moreno (Stockton).

Halfbacks: Gene Craft (CCSF) and Buddy Allen (Oakland).

Fullback: Marshall Dragomanovich (Stockton).

LEROY THOMAS, above, was named to the first string all league club.

GENE CRAFT, above, was selected to the second team as a halfback.

Baseball Signups Thursday; Block SF Meets This Friday

Baseball signups will start tomorrow afternoon at 3:15 p.m. in the men's gymnasium, according to Bill Fischer, team coach.

Seeking his second straight conference title, Fischer will have only a few returning veterans.

Fischer has also called a Block SF meeting this Friday during the double college hour in Annex B below the men's gymnasium.

The main order of business, as described by Fischer, will be the election of officers for the spring semester.

Rams Place In Modesto

Edged By Hancock 64-61; Open Big 8 Play Tonight

By Mario Cassulo

Coach Sid Phelan's rejuvenated Rams almost pulled a big upset last Saturday night in the championship game of the annual Modesto Basketball Tournament, but their effort fell short against Allan Hancock College by a 64-61 final score.

The Rams play tonight at Santa Rosa in their Big Eight league opener, and they meet Stockton here on Friday at 8 p. m. in the Men's Gymnasium.

RAMBLINGS

By Mike Berger

THERE must be a certain amount of championship magic that goes with the hallowed ground of Yankee Stadium in New York.

Of course, the baseball Yankees won their annual American League pennant last fall at the Stadium, and also added a World Series triumph to their collection, winning three of the four victories on the home field.

Then the football New York Giants moved their base of operations to the home of champions this season for the first NFL title in 18 years.

The only championship that has taken place in Kezar Stadium is the annual title contest for the local high school grid loop.

Prevailing conditions being what they are in this city, it doesn't look as though there is any field around these parts that can bring home a championship to San Francisco.

Other stadiums throughout the country have much the same kind of heritage, a prime case in point being Forbes Field in Pittsburgh. There hasn't been a pennant of baseball or football vintage in this lonely spot for over 30 years, and there is an excellent chance of another decade or so being tacked on to that record.

Needless to say, the Pirates haven't scared the jello out of anyone in their yearly battles to escape the depths of the National League second division. And so far their gridiron prototypes, the Steelers have failed to win even a division title in their entire existence of over 20 seasons.

* * *

Most laughable quotes of 1956: "We could go all the way."—Bill Rigney, manager of the baseball Giants, who finished sixth. "Mr. Patterson will leave the ring within eight rounds."—Archie Moore. He didn't know how truly he spoke. And then there were all the folks who doubled up with guffaws when Frank Albert said, "I think we can win six games this year." He only missed by half a game.

Best blooper of '56 went to the channel 13 crew, who thought a game-winning single had gone over the fence, and were three days trying to explain why the batter had gone back to the dugout instead of circling the bases.

We'd mention Roy Storey, but there just isn't enough space for all his quotable (and unquotable) statements.

City College defeated College of Sequoias, San Jose and Modesto to reach the final round of the tourney, and Phelan said that he was "proud and satisfied" with his club's play.

Hancock, owner of a 28 game winning streak and winner of three preseason tournaments, was favored to win, and experts called the Bulidogs the best team in the tourney.

It looked like the game might develop into a rout at the outset. Dick Hickox and Paul Howard, the two stellar guards who stand at 5-7 and 5-11 and who shoot with radarlike accuracy, began tanking their seemingly unstoppable shots.

Ram forward Mel McCormick hit a free throw to put the Rams in the scoring column, but it looked like a long and hopeless night, as with four minutes played the score was 8-1 in favor of Hancock.

Then guards Rich Russell and Al Mock, as well as forward Bob Tealer, began hitting from the top of the key and from the baseline. Center Doug North started rebounding strongly, and he and McCormick began taking the play away from the giant 6-9 Hancock center, Dale Hyatt. The result was a 39-34 Ram lead at halftime.

The college five couldn't hold the advantage and when Hancock got a four point lead early in the second half, they put on a semi-stall.

This slowed-down play continued to the end, the final margin of difference being three points, 64-61.

San Jose, in earlier foe of the Rams' schedule, was the opponent in the quarter-finals contest, which went to City College, 60-41. Russell put on his first big scoring burst to star with 18 markers.

The Rams then moved into the semi-finals, against home team Modesto, and, with North doing a fine defensive job on the high-scoring Pirate center, Jim Thomas, the college five pulled a 64-56 upset.

Mock was selected to the All-Tournament team, with center Thomas of Modesto, forward Bill Cowan of Bakersfield and the Hancock guards, Hickox and Howard.

Comets Favored In Cage Race As Big Eight Starts

By Dan Curley

With the Big Eight basketball conference starting this week, the teams have completed the preseason practice schedule and are ready for action in league play.

West Contra Costa, Modesto and City College, the top three clubs last season, are expected by observers to form the leading trio of contenders for the conference title in 1957. The following is a brief rundown on the league for the coming season.

West Contra Costa: Last year, the Rudy Hansen-coached Comets won the Big Eight championship with a 12-2 mark, dropping their only two tilts to City College and Modesto.

Coach Hansen has lost two big men in his lineup, namely forward Clyde Hardeman and center Joe Dorsey, a pair of all-conference choices. The Comets have made up for that loss this year with the addition of big J. D. Banks, a 6-4 forward who played on the 1954-55 WCC title club, but who was ineligible last season.

Joining Banks in the starting five are forwards Liso Dixon and Babe Williams, plus guard Jim Coivin, all returning vets from '56.

Modesto: The Pirates, who finished in a second place tie with the Rams last season, winning ten and losing four, again show themselves as top contenders for the title.

Modesto's roster shows numerous standout players from the New York area, the stellar performer being forward Shelly Palmer. Center Jim Thomas and scrappy guard Rey Maduro, two more Easterners, form the bulk of the offensive.

The loss of star players Milt Kane, Dave McAnulty and Frank Niebaum have weakened the Pirates, but not to the extent of knocking them from championship contention. Center Vic DiGiovanni, still another New Yorker, and freshman forward Fred Nugent from Turlock are expected to bolster the lineup.

Stockton: The Mustangs have lost their two top scorers of last season, guard Dave Klurman, who now plays for College of Pacific, and center Bob Cena. These gaps in the starting five have taken much of the scoring punch from the Stockton aggregation, and the added disadvantage of inexperience should count heavily against their team this year.

Santa Rosa: Tom Underhill is the lone returning veteran from last season's Bearcub team, and seems to be in top form, together with newcomer Ray Waters, who has been the high scorer for Santa Rosa in their preseason games.

Other first year men who have shown well in recent games are Bill White, Forest Ammons and footballers Dolph Camilli and Charley McDonald. With White and Ammons doing the rebounding and Underhill and Waters leading the offensive drive, the Bearcubs are expected to improve their 7-7 league mark of 1956.

San Mateo: Here is another team with lack of experience, and in addition a club that lost its top offensive star in forward Ned Fitzgerald, who was one of the highest point-makers in the loop last year.

Sacramento: Looking for a better season than their 2-12 cellar record of last year, the Panthers seem to have come up with a well balanced attack this year.

The loss of forward Ray Davis and guard Ed Pierce will hurt the Panthers, but 6-7 Ted Stabbert and Fred Bennett are regarded as capable replacements for the former pair.

Oakland: The Thunderbirds have lost forward Hal Theus and guard Bob Haggerty, but five returning vets, Bob Moorehead, Jim Wallace, Grant Munz, Landon Vernon and Dave Johns, make the picture bright for 1957.

Another pleasing newcomer is guard Cleveland McKinney, who played for McClymonds High in Oakland, and is currently the hottest scorer for the 'Birds.

Considering the returning vets and new prospects of the league's octet of teams, we predict the following outcome of the 1957 Big Eight basketball race: 1—West Contra Costa; 2—Modesto; 3—City College; 4—Santa Rosa; 5—Oakland; 6—San Mateo; 7—Stockton; and 8—Sacramento.

Cagers Win Five Pre-Season Games

The Ram basketballers wound up their December non-conference games by winning three and losing two in five contests from December 12-27, and copped a total of five tilts in pre-season play.

On December 12, the Rams overpowered the St. Mary's Frosh at Kezar, 68-60, in a game sparked by Al Mock's 24-point effort and Bob Tealer, who added 17.

Leading 40-28 at the half, and apparently getting stronger, the Rams were surprised by a resurgence from the Gaels, but that's when Tealer opened up with his deadly jump shot to keep the Rams in front.

High point man from St. Mary's was Jerry Brennan, who worked the nets for 17 points, and added spark to the Gaels when it appeared the Rams were running away with the game. Others who turned in a strong game for the Rams were Mal McCormick, Rich Russell, Doug North and speedy Rich DeConti.

Coach Sid Phelan's Rams defeated the U.S.F. JV's by a 56-43 score at the men's gymnasium on December 14. Every man on squad scored, with McCormick and Mock leading the way with 12 and 10 points. The game was close during the first half only. The Rams broke the game wide open after they scored four field goals and two free throws, while U.S.F. was held to three points in the first six minutes of the second half.

Jim Cunningham and Jerry Robinson were high point men for U.S.F., as they hit for 15 and 10 points in the scoring column. Cunningham's strong board play kept the Golds in the game during the first half, with the halftime score being 20-18 in the Rams' favor.

Paced by Tealer and Mock, the Rams won a hard-fought 63-58 game on December 18 from the Cal Frosh. The contest was decided in the last few minutes when Stan Rosenberg scored three points to ice the game.

The game was played on the Cal court as a preliminary to the big California-Kansas clash at the same gymnasium. Although the Frosh game was close, the Rams led all the way. They were in complete control of the game and left the floor at halftime with a 30-25 lead.

Tealer was the game's top scorer with 18 points. Mock hit for 16, Jerry Mann and Earl Schneider were the big guns for the Cubs, with 17 and 15 points.

The Rams ended their pre-season road campaign at Santa Clara. An undefeated Santa Clara Frosh won a 66-54 game from the college five at San Jose on December 20, and the last game of 1956 was a 65-54 losing effort to East Contra Costa.

Coronation Ball Honors Soph King, Queen

DEBBIE RUDSER, vice-president of the sophomore class, has been working closely with other officers in preparations for the Soph formal dance.

Annual Soph-Prof Basketball Game To Begin Festivities For Traditional Class Week

By Carol Harris

Highlight of the Sophomore Ball this Saturday, January 12, will be the coronation of the king and queen, according to Bill Roberts, sophomore class president.

Election of the king and queen took place last week. Those seeking the title of queen, Roberts said, were Fannie Mae Huff, Margie Morec, Diane Oliver, Shirley Payton, Elvera Steiner, Ildiko Vegvary and Paula Villa.

King contestants are listed as Joe Banovich, Sam Franzella, Jeffrey Rodden, John Roth and Ken Woodruff.

Moments To Remember is the theme for the Sophomore Ball which will conclude the sophomore activities. The ball is scheduled to be held this Saturday, January 12, from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight at the Surf Club located at 660 Great Highway. Music for the dance will be provided by Stephen Paul and his orchestra, Roberts announced.

As a result of a recent student poll conducted here by Bob Varni, AS finance chairman, the dress for the ball has been changed from semi-formal to formal. "The students want a formal college dance, and since the Sophomore Ball is the concluding dance of the semester, we have decided to make it formal," Roberts stated. The women will wear formals, while dinner jackets, tuxedos, or dark suits with bow ties will be appropriate for the men.

Admission to the dance is by Associated Student card. A charge of $2.50 per couple will be made to non-AS members, Roberts added.

The traditional soph-prof basketball game will be played this Friday, January 11, during the double college hour in the men's gymnasium, according to Roberts.

No Ten O'Clocks Friday

Regular college hour schedules will be waived this Friday for the soph-prof basketball game and a double college hour, which will be from 9:50 to 11:20 a.m.

Friday's college hour will follow the regular pattern except for the elimination of the 10 a.m. classes.

BILL ROBERTS, sophomore president, makes plans for sophomore week.

H&R Department To Manage St. Francis Hotel On Friday

Operation St. Francis, the hotel and restaurant department's annual hotel day event, will again become a reality this Friday, according to Lawrence B. Wong, instructor in charge of hotel and restaurant placement.

Celebrating the fifth anniversary of hotel Managing Director Dan E. London's "brain child," fourth semester H&R students from the college will occupy 24 key stations in San Francisco's famous hotel. Beginning at 8 a.m., Bob Peters will work with London, Wong announced.

From the position of general manager through the ranks including Mural Room captain, purchasing and personnel departments, sous chef, chief engineer, and others, students will work in close cooperation with members of the hotel staff regularly assigned these jobs.

Glenn Valerga, a student in hotel management, will serve as publicity manager under the direction of Elizabeth Bell of the St. Francis. Assisting him will be members of journalism and photography classes here.

Assuming the duties of the publicity and promotion department of the hotel, they will photograph and interview key members of the staff and their proteges for the day. Staff members will also explain the internal operation of the hotel to engineering majors.

Students will lunch in the Mural Room with their department heads. Throughout the day, group tours will be guided by members of the hotel staff to show how the St. Francis operates from the cleaners on the top floor to the basement pastry shop. At 5 p.m., all students and department heads will meet again for a social hour during which they will evaluate their experiences.

Student General Manager for the day will be Peters. His staff will include Assistant Managers Keith Hardman, Tommy Kilmoney, and Ray Luehr; Front Office Manager, Richard Henderson; Resident Manager, William Boyd; Financial Manager, Bob Romer; Catering Department, Frank Wells and Joseph Anderson.

Executive Chef, John Grist; Sous Chefs, Harvey Hollenbeck and Bob Mackessy; Pastry Chef, Norman Kope; Auditor, Melvin Mosk; Credit Manager, Fred Trupp; Purchasing Department, Jay Hurlburt; Assistant Manager Stewards Department, William Helmer.

Beverage Department, Ted Detton; Publicity Department, Valegra; Personnel Department, Aluff Roberts; Grill Room, John Watts; Banquet Captain, Marcello Gemignani; Mural Room Captain, Ray Mullio; and Cashier, Thomas Elliott.

All participating students met at the hotel and restaurant department last Monday for an initial briefing during which they discussed plans for "Operation St. Francis."

"Fundamental purpose of the event," Wong said during the briefing, "is not only to acquaint students with their chosen vocation but also to give members of the student hotel staff and allied departments pointers on better hotel operation.

"Proving the success of 'Operation St. Francis,'" he added, "it might be noted that in past years many suggestions from staff members of the hotel have been incorporated into our study program here. But most important, and this cannot be over-emphasized, are the ethics, character, and personality of the students who have chosen this vocation."

Administration Adopts Air Raid Dispersal Plan

In the event that a dispersal alarm is sounded here, administrative officials have adopted the following Air Raid Dispersal Plan:

Students, faculty members and others on the campus will immediately go to the parking lots, where all automobiles will be loaded to capacity and directed to proceed to the Herbert Hoover High School in San Jose, via Highway 101.

All traffic leaving the campus will proceed to Ocean Avenue, turn right (west) on Ocean, turn left (south) on Plymouth, then travel south on San Jose Avenue and continue on El Camino Real to the city of San Jose.

All students are expected to inform their parents or guardians of these plans as they may give other directions, which they can do if they so wish, for evacuation is voluntary. The Administration of the college, according to E. Anderson, coordinator, Division of Educational Management, will assume that during a dispersal all students will know the wishes of their parents and will act accordingly.

It should be remembered, he added, that all traffic will be required to move south and west and that all streets will be one-way during an emergency.

Posters containing the above dispersal plan will be posted in classrooms and bulletin boards throughout the college.

Saroyan Fantasy In Local Setting Resumes Friday

William Saroyan's three - act fantasy, The Time Of Your Life, will continue its run here at the college's little theater on Friday and Saturday, January 11 and 12, according to Michael Griffin, faculty director.

An interesting aspect of the play, he declared, is the fact that the scenes are laid in San Francisco. Most of the action takes place in Nick's place, a bar at the foot of Pacific Street in the Embarcadero.

The play tries to show that in every person there is some "badness" but people should not be condemned for it. The central theme of the play actually concerns the instant in which the real person lives and exists.

Admission will be free to holders of Associated Student cards and $1 for non-card holders. There are no student rates for this play, Griffith emphasized.

Casting is as follows: Ron Allen will appear as Willy, Louis Bamberger as the Arab, Bob Bryant is Tom, Andy Buonsate as Harry, Lyn Cripps as the newsboy, Ray Davis as McCarthy, Bob Doyle as Kit Carson, Jeanne Graham as Elsie, Leigh Guerre as Willy, George Hubbard as Blick, Bill Henderson as the society man, Jo Anne Jakelevick as the society lady, Ken Kitch as Nick, Stephanie Koppe as Mary, Virginia Lee as the Killer, Crockett McClanahan as Saroyan, Peggy Powell as Nick's daughter, Mel Rasmussen as Krupp, Dawn Roberts as Kitty, Ruie Treptow as Killer's sidekick, Josephine Wall as Laurene, and Stan Weston as Joe.

Set designer is Chuck Mullen and the costume designers are Miss Koppe and Rich Barulich. Tom Mandas is stage manager, properties manager is Pat Dulcich, and promotion manager is McClanahan.

For those who miss these performances, the play will be presented again next semester on February 1, 2, 8, and 9, according to Griffin.

AWS To Initiate Big Sister Plan

Initiation of a big sister program for the spring was the result of the Associated Women Student board-delegates attendance at the Northern California Intercollegiate Conference, held in November at Reno, Nevada, according to Metta Weddleton, AWS president.

The college was guest at the convention, and it was the first time a two-year college was invited. Invitation of other two-year colleges for future meetings was considered by the delegates.

Big sister programs as a part of orientation was one of the main points of discussion in the conference along with programs, rules, and activities concerning the AWS.

Feminine Fling Set January 11

Plans are now complete for the semi-annual Feminine Fling dinner which will be held this Friday, January 11, from 6:30 to 9 p.m., in the faculty dining room of Smith Hall, Metta Weddleton, president of the Associated Women Students, announced recently.

Inaugurated last semester, the Feminine Fling is sponsored jointly by the AWS, the Inter-Sorority Council, and the Recreation Association. This affair provides all the women of the college with an opportunity to get together before the end of the semester, Miss Weddleton stated.

The newly elected presidents of the AWS, ISC, and RA will be announced at the dinner by Miss Weddleton.

The Margaret Dougherty Award winner will also be announced. This award is presented each semester, in honor of Miss Dougherty, former dean of women here, to the sorority with the highest scholastic record for the current semester.

Mary Gordon, TWA stylist, will present an hour-long program on tips for traveling, including style and luggage-packing suggestions. TWA will also furnish decorations for the dinner.

All women students are invited to attend the dinner free of charge, Miss Weddleton said. Pedal pushers will be the appropriate attire.

Council Tables AS Scholarship Award, Makes Additional Budget Allotments

By Bob Sims

With only two more meetings scheduled for the Fall '56 edition of the Student Council, Associated Student President Wayne McFadden urged members to clear up old business, pass last minute budget requests, and select a candidate to receive the semesterly service award in the past week's session.

Old business was headed by a discussion of the proposed AS scholarship award which was tabled pending committee investigation at a previous meeting. This scholarship question will more than likely be settled at the next council meeting, though a complete revision is possible.

Originally the award suggested included a $25 book order at The Rampotium for the man and woman "active" AS members with the highest grade point average in both the freshman and sophomore classes. At a later meeting, however, Jim Kennedy, sophomore council member, asked that a committee be set up to investigate the possibility of making one scholarship award of $300 such as that which is given to high school students by the University of California.

Other old business included council action on five more constitutional amendments, with January 17 announced as probable election date, if the number of proposed amendments warrant a special vote. This matter, too, was postponed until the following meeting when a final word will be handed down.

Supplemental budgets passed last week included $150 to the basketball team for warmup uniforms, and in a complete reversal of form, $150 to the campus police for additional uniforms. Passing of the police budget with only token controversy seemed to indicate that council either had forgotten their semester-long feud with this organization or were still flushed with holiday spirit.

Selection of the service award candidate consumed most of the council time as seven nominees were submitted and short speeches made in behalf of each. Voting for the candidate were the AS President, Vice-President, council members, and members of the President's Cabinet.

McFadden reminded voters that the selection should be a student who does not hold an office in student government and who has served the college without recognition. Voters were then instructed to pick three of the nominees in order of preference with final tabulation of the votes made by AS Vice-President Louise von Emster.

Sidelights in council reports brought forth sophomore president Bill Roberts' disclosure that the shaving mug, the perpetual trophy awarded to the winner of the soph-prof basketball game, has been lost. Planner Roberts revealed that he has conferred with Granat Brothers in search of a replacement for this annual award but thus far no choice has been made. All other arrangements for upcoming sophomore activities are set, Roberts assured.

Beal, Mulligan, Rudser, Monteith In Executive Posts

By James Rohner

Bob Varni and Metta Weddleton won unprecedented decisions in their bids for Associated President and Vice-President respectively in last week's election.

A total of 685 votes cast represented only an approximate 25 per cent of the number of AS card holders, yet it constituted an increase of nearly 23 per cent over the total poll from last semester's student elections, according to John Dudley, election commissioner here.

Varni, who is completing his term as AS Finance Chairman, received the largest student support of all candidates, with his winning total of 468 votes. His opponent, Norman Duricux, outgoing Associated Men Student president, captured 184 votes in the race for the top AS office.

In the balloting for AS Vice-President, Miss Weddleton was elected with 367 votes, against the bid of Virginia Hase, who received 250 votes.

Mike Monteith held the distinction of knowing ahead of time that he was Associated Men Student President, since he ran unopposed for that office. Debbie Rudser defeated Tilly Gandert for the post of Associated Women Students President by polling 395 votes.

Gordon Beal, with 396 votes, won the post of Sophomore President, defeating John Zevas. Receiving the second highest number of votes cast for a candidate, Kathy Mulligan was elected Freshman President with 458 votes, defeating opponent Joe Welsh.

In the race for seats on the Student Council, the margins of victory narrowed, with seven seats being contested from each class.

Of the 14 students in the running for the sophomore council seats, Ellic Smith captured the most votes, 416. Following her, in the order of descending number of votes, were John Kelly (342), Lily Kowalski (333) Carol Olsen (330), Betty Bone (320), Audrey Boeck (295), and Soledad Camacha (278).

Richard Daffner led the way for the freshman council seats with 414 votes, followed by Freddie Hicks (411), Francine Christen (386), Marlene Hannon (375), Linda McArdle (359), Jack Patterson (358), and Beverly Castellacci (348).

Losing sophomores were Archie Briggs (270); Joan Finneran (269), George Gallban (243), Jerry Redford (238), Bob Tealer (215), Jane Lenz (198), and Hugh Aanonsen (72). Losing freshmen were Patsy Tokarski (303), and Esperanza Santos (217).

Diamond Finance Chairman, As Shippey Heads AS Card Sales

Newly elected Associated Student President Bob Varni began forming his cabinet last week, naming Brower Diamond to the top ranking post of Finance Chairman.

Varni followed this appointment with that of Dwane Shippey as AS card sales chairman for a second semester.

This semester's AS Vice-President, Louise von Emster, received the chairmanship of the State Information Service, while outgoing chairman Phil Malnick has been mentioned by Varni as possibly taking over the job of parliamentarian. Nothing definite was said.

Filling other openings, Varni named Lon Earnshaw, retiring Club Activities board chairman, as Awards Commissioner; Hiram Koakua, Junior Chamber of Commerce representative, and Jim Woods, Alumni Liaison Officer.

Vacancies in the two secretary positions were filled as Varni tabbed Eugina Lary and Anne Smith Recording Secretary and Corresponding Secretary respectively.

Three other appointive cabinet posts have tentative appointees in Joe Welsh, Campus Affairs coordinator; Bob Tealer, Athletic Commissioner, and Hugh Aanonsen, Election Commissioner. Confirmation of these appointments is still forthcoming as Varni was unable to issue any statements affirmatively concrete.

Used Text Book Purchase Starts At Ramporium

Students will be able to sell their used text books to the Ramporium book store beginning today until Friday, February 1, according to Dick Main, general manager.

A 50 per cent discount cash refund will be made on all books which are returned in reasonably good condition, Main said. Paper bound books or work books will not be included.

Because of a quota in the number of each type of book to be resold, students are warned to expect a drop in re-sale price after the quota has been reached. Students are urged to come early, Main stated, adding that a first come, first serve policy will be in effect.

Identification either by Associated Student card, driver's license, or some other valid means, will be necessary, Main said.

If a student wishes to re-sell a book now, he must have in his possession either a drop slip or a leave of absence. This insures the student protection against having his books picked up and being re-sold.

After the beginning of the next semester, used text books will not be able to be re-sold. If a student has purchased a new text book and then decides to drop the course, the full purchase price of the book will be granted, if the student has both the sales ticket and the book sticker in his possession.

Students who have had their books lost or stolen should inform the book store and an effort will be made to try to locate them, Main said.

H&R Society To Vote For New Semester Officers

The Hotel and Restaurant Society will hold its election for next semester's officers today and tomorrow, January 16 and 17, in Smith Hall, according to Dick Griffin, society president.

Two nominating committees were selected by the president of the society to make nominations, which were presented to the student members of the society.

Candidates for offices are as follows: President, Dave Hagar and Jim Genelin; vice-president, Hank Meyer and Dick Rodby; secretary, Virginia Whitlatch and Sven Romelt; treasurer, Lynn Godfrey, Kenneth Olesen and Jerry Englehaupt; historian, Carl Castro and Ted Anastapolis.

The purpose of the society is to promote good fellowship and relations between students of the department and the hotel and restaurant industry, Griffin said.

Phi Beta Rho Wins Scholarship Award

Phi Beta Rho sorority is the winner of the Margaret Dougherty scholarship award for the fall, 1956 semester.

The award was presented at the Feminine Fling, which was held last Friday. The Feminine Fling is sponsored jointly by the Associated Women Students, the Inter-Sorority Council and the Recreation Association.

This award, in honor of Margaret Dougherty, former dean of women here, is given semi-annually to the sorority with the highest scholastic record for the semester. Each of the sororities had a grade point average of C or better.

Runners-up, in the order of their scholastic standing, were Delta Psi, Kappa Phi, Gamma Sigma, Zeta Chi, Theta Tau, Alpha Lambda Chi, and Delta Sigma Tau.

This is the seventh semester this award has been given. Past winners have been Delta Psi, four semesters; Theta Tau, one semester, and last semester's winner, Kappa Phi, one semester.

New AS President Confirms Pledge In Victory Statement

By Carol Harris

Heading the student government for the spring, 1957 semester is Bob Varni, newly elected Associated Student president.

This semester, Varni has executed the duties of Finance Chairman. A member of Tau Chi Sigma fraternity, he has served as president and vice-president of his fraternity.

Upon graduation from Jefferson high school in Daly City in 1951, Varni served for three years with the army. Most of his army activities centered in Europe, particularly Germany. He came to the college in the spring of 1953 after his release from the army.

The special student poll conducted here by Varni recently gave students a chance to voice their opinions and make suggestion. The first result of his poll was changing the dress for the Sophomore Ball from semi-formal to formal. Varni added that during his term of office he hopes to act on these suggestions.

In his victory statement, Varni said, "I would like to extend my sincere thanks to those who supported and aided me in the elections. I will do my best to give the students the kind of representation they want. Also, I will try to follow through on the results of the student poll and have the type of government and activities they desire."

Upon graduation from the college, Varni plans to attend a bay area college and then go into the field of industrial engineering, which is his major.

Soph King, Queen Are Crowned

SAM FRANZELLA and SHIRLEY PAYTON were recently elected sophomore king and queen. Crowning of Franzella and Miss Payton took place at the Sophomore Ball held last Saturday.

New Photo Course To Be Added Here In Spring Semester

Learning "how to handle models without touching them" will be one objective of a new course in photographic modeling to be offered here next semester, according to Charles Lamp, photographic instructor.

Concentrating on the three fields of modeling, which are publicity, fashion and illustration, the course was first offered last fall and is open to 8 or 10 models and photographic students. Classes are tentatively scheduled for Tuesdays from 12 to 1 p.m., with a two hour laboratory in addition to the weekly one hour lecture.

Designed to develop the model's self-confidence in front of lights and camera, the course also gives instruction in posture, corrective make-up, costuming, personal appearance, and the fundamentals of portrait posing.

From the photographer's point of view, the course aims at developing his confidence and understanding of the model and teaching him the principles of photo composition. Thus the course serves the dual purpose of bringing harmony between the two groups, Lamp added.

Lee Ann Meriwether, Miss America 1955, gained experience working as a department model for one year prior to her entering the contest, Lamp said, adding that "we cannot, of course, guarantee that our models will be future Miss Americas."

Service Award Goes To Bill McCormick

Winner of the Outstanding Service Award for this semester was Bill McCormick, who accepted the honor at the semi-annual Student Council dinner, held in the faculty dining room here last Thursday.

Presented by Wayne McFadden, AS president, the award is given to a non-office holder who has been outstanding in college activities during the semester.

McCormick, a sophomore, served as a parliamentarian earlier this semester, and was instrumental in arranging the State Information booklet. He was also a leader during the AS finance committee card sales drive, besides being available for numerous activities during the past semester.

Elmer Gentry New Guardsman Editor

Elmer Gentry, news editor of the Guardsman this semester, was elected Editor-in-Chief for the spring 1957 semester at a recent meeting of The Guardsman editorial board.

Lou Lucia, currently feature editor, was elected to the position of sports editor. Reporters advanced to editorial posts are Carol Harris, who was named managing editor, and Bob Sims, who was named feature editor. Advanced from cub reporter to news editor was Kai Kristoffersen.

Applications For Draft Deferment Being Taken Now

Men students who have completed their first academic year and who anticipate deferment from the draft should report to the student welfare center, S-130, before the end of this semester, John J. Brady, coordinator of Student Welfare, announced recently.

To be eligible for a deferment application, a student must have taken at least 15 units of work per semester during each college year, Brady pointed out.

"Filing of an application does not necessarily mean deferment," Brady said. The applicant in his first academic year must be in the scholastic top-half of the men students in his section. The second year student should be in the upper two-thirds of his division.

Vets To Report Monday

All Korean war veterans are due in the veterans affairs office, S-134, finals week, Monday, January 21, to Friday, January 25, to fill out their monthly report forms for the month of January, according to Robin Dunn, veterans counsellor here.

Those veterans who plan to transfer to another college or who are on a "special certificate" must fill out a report form that dates January 1, 1957, to January 25, 1957. To avoid a delay or loss of benefits, Dunn suggested that these veterans file this form no later than this Friday, January 18.

Editorial: Piece-Meal Learning Educational Flaw

THE GUARDSMAN strongly doubts the validity of charges brought against the education system by Arnold O. Beckman, president of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce and the conclusion drawn by one of San Francisco's leading newspapers.

Speaking before the State Chamber of Commerce recently, Beckman charged that too few high school students are becoming proficient in mathematics, physics and other so-called "hard" courses because America's schoolteachers are largely incompetent.

If instructors are included, we must note that the majority of instructors here are adequate, although many students feel they could show more student appreciation at times. So it also seems to us that the "majority" of schoolteachers are adequate, and it must be acknowledged that every profession or trade encompasses some incompetents.

Working from Beckman's hypothesis, a leading newspaper concluded students are avoiding "hard" courses and taking the so-called "cinch" or "pipe" courses in the modern curriculum because ". . . of adolescent inertia, the natural tendency of youth to flee disciplines and take it as easy as possible," rather than the incapacity of teachers. Again we strongly doubt the validity of the proposal.

For it does not seem to us that inertia is restricted to the adolescent. It appears to be the natural tendency of anyone, youth or adult, to avoid disciplines, including the professional soldier who thoroughly enjoys his passes and leaves away from his chosen duty.

Rather it is likely the student interested in English is avoiding geometry, trigonometry and calculus because, after he has received a passing grade, this knowledge will be as useful to him as a 25 cent cigar during a calculus examination.

We believe the student is avoiding the "hard" courses for they, in many cases, are of no transferable value to him, while the "pipe" courses sometimes are. And we charge that encouragement of enrollment in courses of no future value to a student, judged according to his abilities and future plans, is the major flaw of the education system today.

In short, we believe in the instruction of The Practical. By The Practical we mean any course which is of future value to the student not only financially but also socially and personally. Certainly no one can deny that the humanities and speech and so on are of Practical value to all students personally and/or socially.

It is possible to discourage learning by going too far in an effort to assure complete understanding, and yet this is being done in most of our classrooms today. The schoolteachers and/or instructors in many cases judge the value of a piece of knowledge by their own interest in the subject. And the encouragment of too much piecemeal learning seems to be the objective of many of our education leaders today.

Everything In Excess Places Booze Ban On Eager Teen-Ager

PINK and black Cadillacs, blonde, blonde women and booze. This appears to be the primary objective of the red-blooded American man and/or boy. Not that we don't like Cadillacs, blondes and booze, but the emphasis placed upon them draws not a pretty picture and reveals the lack of social advancement from the stone age to the atom age.

Yet it's a fact that we must acknowledge, for the world has more to fear from the idealist than the realist, as is now apparent in Hungary. And conversationally and editorially this subject arouses the most interest.

Therefore, because many students have requested it, we will concern ourselves here, in the last editorial of the semester, with the question of whether 18 year olds should be legally permitted to purchase alcohol.

"Well, why do you think they should?" a number of 18-year-old students were asked. And the soundness of their replies proves discouraging.

"In order to escape the pressure of final examinations," answered one bright young member of the intelligentsia.

"To have fun," another said as he snickered facetiously.

"Maybe we're just trying to get the right to vote in a round about way," she said, who had to be a blonde, for only a blonde could hope for favorable results by attacking a problem so indirectly.

These ingenuous replies can lead us only to suppose that the state law as it now stands is correct. But undoubtedly if the older folk were questioned as to why they should be permitted to booze it up, the majority could find no better reasons. It is furthermore unlikely that mental maturity can be measured by chronological age in years, any more than it can be by the height or weight of an individual.

In our present society, the pseudo-social five o'clock cocktail seems to be a necessity for social acceptability. Society does not condemn the before or after dinner drink; it is rather overindulgence that is frowned upon. Because the young tend to overindulge in everything except learning, some restrictions have been placed upon them.

However, we conclude that as the individual develops social poise and discernment by dating frequently, attending social gatherings and being active in community affairs, so he must learn to drink socially or moderately, as the five o'clock cocktail appears to be growing in its social eminence. This we believe because experience is the greatest teacher, and no amount of sound advise or wisdom will replace it.

As an adult, in the traffic and all law courts he would be treated without leniency because of age, which is often times the case. Panty raids and property damage would be judged at face value and not as adolescent pranks to be considered with tongue-in-cheek. The draft age would be lowered to 18, and the grade requirements for deferment raised to include at the most the top 25 per cent, which now includes the top 66 1/3 per cent.

Our deduction that mental maturity should not be judged by chronological age will not convince many folk. And the only person who can convince them is the 18 year old. He can do this by conducting himself in a mentally mature manner now—that is, by seeking moderation and shunning overindulgence which is characteristic of immaturity.

We sincerely believe that when the 18 year old driving a sportscar is no greater risk (insurance or otherwise) than his father, he will find society more than willing to accept him as an adult and thus lower the drinking and voting age.

Civil War Vets Join College

Silent Cannons Sound Off Tune Of "Old Soldiers Never Die" As They Get Sammy Ram Vigilance Posts

By Bob Sims

Like the caissons in that old military song, those two cannons now located in Hurley Village go rolling along.

Dating from the year 1865, the two Civil War relics last saw active duty at Watsonville's Camp McQuade during World War II. It is rumored that both cannons were retired in 1946 when they failed to fire the daily reveille blast, causing base personnel to sleep through a full day of duty.

The two blushing behemoths were later placed in the care of Raymond Milani, gardener here, who evidently believes in the song Old Soldiers Never Die. Milani brought the cannons to the old west campus in 1946 and later had them moved to their present location when the old campus was closed.

Now, it seems, Milani has finally overcome his attachment for the cannons and has decided to give them to the college. Present plans are to move them to a position flanking the redwood Ram statue in front of Smith Hall.

Although the cannons will at last be occupying a place of real prominence here, their retirement might not be too secure. Suppose that in the future they might be needed to spearhead an Associated Student uprising against a tyrannical local government.

Or, better yet, when at some distant date autos are finally banned from the streets of this fair city and horses return as public conveyance number one, these very Civil War antiques could serve as faculty hitchposts.

Yes, many things could happen to put a damper on the security of these two ancients, but in all probability, their retirement will remain uneventful. One thing for sure, if these cannons are moved, this last tour of duty will be a long, long tour for the two old soldiers.

Da Vinci, Edison Butt Of Many Jokes

Every day, hundreds of tired students stop to rest and smoke under the ever watchful eyes of the college's two court yard statues.

May we introduce them? The man with the shaggy beard is Leonardo Da Vinci, and the clean shaven chap to his left is Thomas Alva Edison.

Ah, if the statues of these two inventors were only alive now, they would probably combine their great genius and come out with a great new machine—a machine that would pick up the mountain of cigarette butts that snow down all about them during the year.

The Bohemian

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

JUAN RAMON JIMINEZ, honored with the Nobel Prize in literature last year, is relatively little known to the non Spanish-reading public.

His poetry, produced under a high spiritual pressure, needs an equally gifted translator, and these, rare by themselves, are busy with their own creations.

J. R. Jiminez was born 75 years ago in a small Andalusian town, Moguer, which he depicted in all its loveliness in Plater and I, a prose written idyllic evocation of days and the death of a humble donkey.

Plater transports the author on its velvety back around Moguer, across Moguer's fields and vinyards, helping him to look for the secrets of beauty and goodness. The little burro is like Rocinante, the famous mare of Don Quixote, only, spoken of by a Saint Francis.

The publication of Platero y Yo, the Spanish title for this enchanting little book, was preceded by the appearance of various collections of poems, under rather romantic titles. Violet Souls (Almas de Violeta.), and Sad Melodies (Ninfeas) are both manifestations of attachment to the romantic vein of Spanish poetry.

Some traces of the French symbolists and of the brilliant Nicaraguan, Ruben Dario—the best of the French and Spanish poetry of that time—can be detected on routes Jiminez was taking in pursuit of his proper poetical shape.

Diary of a Newly Wed Poet (1917) is a collection of delicate lyrics, inspired by and dedicated to the poet's American wife, who played an important role in his literary activities.

In a much higher degree than The Diary, the second anthology, The Unity (1925) and Succession (1932), all works of very high artistic level, helped to establish the predominance of Jiminez in the contemporary poetry of the Spanish language.

Only the influence of Antonio Machado, deceased in France during the Spanish Civil War, could be compared with that of J. R. Jiminez. Perhaps the poetic form of Machado is not so purely crystalized as that of our poet.

But the intensity of Machado's feelings and the profound emotion captured in an ascetically simple and penetrating expression is admired by the young Spanish generation at the same degree as the whispering, insinuating lyricism of Jiminez.

J. R. Jiminez knows all the secrets of the verbal alchemy of Gongora, or Paul Valery, but he developed his own personal technique. Every one of his poems is as if it were embroidered in rare colors, on a delicate web of poetical dreams.

This poetry is like an oriental rug seen by the moonlight. It is rich in sensualities, blended with a supreme artistic measure in the atmosphere of high spirituality.

Shots At Ramdom

A pre-Christmas announcement over the college broadcasting system said that Santa Claus couldn't come to the cafeteria because of the dishes piled in his way, and if they were removed he would come here.

Some people believed this to be one of the most juvenile spiels attempted at the college—which is designed primarily for young adults, not children. The broadcasting system sometimes gets as many grimaces as this column. Students sneer, look at each other, then chuckle at the forced humor that is intended.

Fortunately this is not always the case. Previous to Stan Kenton's arrival at the men's gymnasium, some of his music was played in a low tone along with the announcement he would play here, and this added capably to the sound quality.

However, recommendations could only be given by Solomon, and he isn't here right now so we'll leave it to the discretion of the announcers to delete what is too childish for the college student.

Hood Got Away With Murder

There has been much argument, as to whether Robin Hood really existed. Recent information from Okeefenokee University says no. They claim that Robin Hood was created out of generations of frustration.

Down through the centuries, when stories were told about robbers and highway men, there was always one inevitable end. The crook got his. There was always someone around to give him a shot in the head, or if he eseaped, he fell into quieksand, stumbled over a cliff, or got caught in an epidemic of the Black Death.

The truth of the matter is that children down through the centuries wanted the crook to get away—just once. Thus someone broke the tension nicely by creating Robin Hood.

Okeefenokee U. says this is all fantasy. They claim if there was such a person in Jolly Old England, he would not have such a faney name as "Robin Hood." They claim it would be something closer to Sir Herringbone Tweed.

Secondly, extensive research has been conducted at this university. For three years Professor Herman Katz has been firing arrows into a banana tree, and never has one arrow split the rear of another. (Then again, Katz hasn't hit the tree yet either.)

In conclusion, it was assumed that Robin Hood wouldn't give the money he stole to the poor. He would have had expenses, like new uniforms, food, and band-aids. No—the best he could have done was to rob from the rich and make everyone poor, thus causing Prince John a national depression.

Rams Beat Cubs, Mustangs; Tie For League Lead; Clash With Panthers, Comets Next

By Mike Berger and Mario Casulo

Making their 1957 conference start a good one, the Ram hoopsters smothered Stockton, 58-49, last Friday night at the men's gymnasium, after easing by Santa Rosa, 39-32, on Wednesday evening in the road opener.

These two wins put City College in a tie for the Big Eight lead, with the Modesto five also sporting a 2-0 mark after the first week's play.

Two more conference tilts mark action this week, as the Rams travel to Sacramento for a game this evening, and on Friday night when the contending West Contra Costa five invades the men's gym. Both contests will begin at 8 p.m.

Stockton was never in the game from buzzer to buzzer, although they closed the margin to nine points with numerous foul shots in the closing minutes. The Rams took a 13-3 lead early in the contest, and with center Doug North showing the way, increased the count to 31-14 at halftime.

San Francisco superiority in rebounding was asserted by forwards Bob Tealer and Mal McCormick, and North, who bucketed 12 of his 14 markers in the first 20 minutes.

Tealer and McCormick took over the scoring load for the second half, and with Head Coach Sid Phelan cleaning the bench, the team coasted to the victory.

City College muffed nine charity tosses, while the frigid visitors missed on 17 attempts, and this was the big statistical edge, as Stockton out-shot the Rams from the floor, 19-17.

Guard Al Mock, who has been a steady performer all season, drew special praise from Phelan for his hustle in the college quint's second league win.

In the conference opener at Santa Rosa, one of the lowest scoring games in recent seasons took place, with the free throw shooting of the Rams telling the difference in a 39-32 triumph.

The Bearcubs jumped off to a 6-2 lead and steadily increased their margin, holding a lead of seven points with six minutes left in the first half. Then, with Tealer, McCormiek and Rosenberg providing what little scoring they did, City College pulled up to within one point and a 16-15 halftime deficit.

Throughout most of the game, the Rams used three guards in the lineup to facilitate ball control, and with this strategy finally went into the lead to stay with four minutes left in the tilt.

High point man for the game was McCormiek with 11 points, followed by Tealer and Rosenberg with 10 each. The home team's chances might have been affected by the loss of guard Dick Underhill, who was out of the game with a sprained hand.

Ray Waters, high scoring Santa Rosa forward, was held to eight markers by the Rams' tight defensive play.

Baseball Squad To Stage First Workouts Shortly

The baseball team has started its sign ups for this year's team, Bill Fischer, coach of the squad, recently announced. He plans to have several meetings in the men's gymnasium, with workouts to begin shortly.

Only veterans remaining on the team are Blair Le Mire and pitcher Bob Bandettini. Last year Bandettini was named to the all-conference team, along with two team mates, to represent the league champion Rams. He was the only unanimous choice for the team, showing well as an outfielder and also as a relief hurler.

This year, Fischer said, there are many fine prospects, but he declined to name any, saying, "all positions are still open; this isn't a cut and dried affair."

Cagers Enter Thick Of League Race As Title Contenders

After the Ram basketballers engage Sacramento and West Contra Costa this week, they will plunge into the heart of the Big Eight schedule, which coneludes on March 2.

Next Tuesday, City College will play at Oakland, and on the following Friday evening, February 1, will travel down the peninsula to meet College of San Mateo. All conference home and road games start at 8 p.m.

The Rams then meet Modesto here on Tuesday, February 5; host Santa Rosa on Friday, February 8; play at Stockton on Wednesday, February 15; and then journey to Riehmond on Tuesday, February 19 to tangle with West Contra Costa in what could be a pivotal game in the league slate.

If their strong showing in the recent Modesto Tournament is any indication of things to come, the college five can be expeeted to challenge for the conference title, whieh has eluded them since 1952.

In tourney aetion, the Rams defeated the strong Modesto elub, 64-56, and off that win figure to give a good account of themselves against any other contending teams in the Big Eight. West Contra Costa, Santa Rosa, Oakland, Modesto and City College are expected by observers to form the bulk of competition for the league pennant.

Contra Costa won the championship last season, while Modesto and the Rams tied for the runner-up slot with identieal 10-4 records.

Block SF To Handle Refreshment Stands

The Block SF is presently selling candy and refreshments for the high school basketball games being held in the college gymnasium during this month, Bill Fiseher, group sponsor, announced.

Last year, the athletie society carried on the same program, Fiseher said, and it proved a success. In the one game so far this year, the sales were very good, he said. On January 22, 23, and 24, the group will again handle concessions for the games.

Soph-Prof Tilt Ends In Tie, Protest Lodged

By Bob Sims

In one of the zaniest basketball tilts of all time, the Sophs and Profs battled valiantly to a protested 19-19 tie before a sparse but rabid crowd in their annual grudge match played here last Friday.

The protest was lodged after the final whistle by Dean Ralph Hillsman of the Prof team who charged Sophomore President Bill Roberts had used players who were not technically members of the sophomore class. "They were using seventh and eighth semester students against us but still couldn't win," Hillsman said.

Almost before the start of the contest, Hillsman's Professors grabbed a psychological edge as they postponed their appearance on the hardwood until the second half of the double college hour had started. Sophomore strategy sought to combat this attack with free and multiple substitution, using a total of 18 players in all.

Such was the sophomore plight in the early stages of the game that they were found guilty of having six men on the court resulting in two gift technical foul shots scored by Prof floor captain, track coach Lou Vasquez.

Then, as the hoopfest developed into a ball control debacle, referee Bill Fischer ruled that the sophomores were using three football players at one time, an unpardonable sin in Soph-Prof play. This ruling resulted in another technical foul against the Soph team.

Despite the technical fouls, however, the free substituting, hard running sophomore team left the court at the intermission on the long end of an 8-7 count largely due to the steady play of footballers John Panagakis and Ron Taylor.

Before the game was resumed, college hour had come to an end, most of the spectators had departed, and the Prof team had vowed to keep intact its undefeated record in Soph-Prof basketball competition. Sophomore hoopsters had other ideas, though, for they quickly jumped to a six-point lead when cage coach Sid Phelan, Klemmer, and Vasquez all committed fouls early in the second half.

Field goals by Phelan and business education instruction Harry Buttimer kept the Profs within striking distance in the next few minutes but when Hillsman's two-pointer was matched by the Sophs with less than two minutes remaining, Roberts thought his team had it in the bag.

Supplying the heroies for the Professor studded team, Vasquez scored a layup, stole a pass and scored again, dashing sophomore upset hopes in the final seconds, however. A dejected Roberts, the picture of a frustrated coach, then announeed that the game trophy would be presented at the sophomore ball despite protests and lack of a winner.

RAMBLINGS

Editor Out On Limb For His Final Effort

By Mike Berger

THIS being the final effort for this semester, and for all time on The Guardsman, (was that a sigh we heard?) kindly 'scuse please if all the jabber that follows doesn't fall into a pattern. It isn't supposed to.

Just so you can say we were the first culprits, here are some completely uninformed opinions on the coming sports year:

The Yankees will win the American League flag by 15 plus games, and will meet the National League champion Cincinnati Redlegs for the World Series. (A bunch of the boys at the Examiner have selected Cincinnati and Detroit as their sentimental choices for the pennants.) The Seals will again have an entry in the PCL, but we won't venture beyond that statement.

Chicago's Cardinals and Washington's Redskins, with ex-Rams Ollie

OLLIE MATSON

Matson and Diek Stanfel as key figures, will contend for honors in the Eastern Conference of the NFL. If there is such a thing as luck changing, and Tony Morabito will dispute this, the 49ers will have a winning season in 1957.

John Brodie will eventually become just as big a success as Paul Hornung will a failure in the roie of a pro football quarterback.

Add things we'd like to see happen:

Either junk the PCC - Big Ten contract or turn the Rose Bowl into a bull ring. . . . Let the national mags make their subscribers wait until the January issue before announcing those so-called All American teams. At least the players could then be observed in more than just a couple of tilts, as is now the case. . . . Give Sid Phelan a medal for bringing back a little defense into this exhausting style of track-meet basketball now played in the Big Eight.

It would be fun to see Don Newcombe win a World Series game just once, but think of all the good copy he'd be depriving the writers of. . . . It can't happen, of course, but we'd like to see all the men on the "weak" Yankee hurling staff pitch the kind of ball they are capable of. It adds up to 124 wins, and that's as good as the Broadway Damn Yankees.

Another very interesting experiment would be a ball club composed of Jackie Robinson, Pewee Reese, Billy Martin and Ferris Fain in the infield; Enos Slaughter, Jim Piersall and Hank Bauer in the outfield; Clint Courtney behind the plate and Sal Maglie or Allie Reynolds firing away. All this pepper, plus Charlie Dressen and Eddie Stanky on the coaching lines. A real scrappy outfit, that's for sure, but we wonder if there would be one game of 50 in which all could play together, what with fines, suspensions and umpire-baiting still legal in this country. We'd need nine more guys just to take the place of the ones who'd have to sit in the clubhouse for most of the year.

Just couldn't resist a couple more quotes from 1956:

"No one beats John Landy," said Jim Bailey, Oregon miler from Australia. (Bailey did, in 3:58.6). . . . "We'll be smarter than last year, but not a first division club." — Forest Evashevski, coach of the Big Ten champs, Iowa. . . . "We have a going program at the University of Dayton and I hope to see it through. I will not accept the coaching job with the Eagles."— Hugh De-

SID PHELAN

vore. (Who promptly signed with the Eagles next day.)

And now, Lou, I'll get the heck outta here and turn things, such as they may be, over to you. Lottsa luek.

Tennis, Golf, Track Prospects

Spring Sports Outlook Revealed

Signups for the tennis team will take place during registration, with practice beginning the following Monday, February 11, according to Roy Diederiehsen, tennis coach here.

Returning to this year's team are Jaek Kletzman, who held the number five position on the club last year; Pete Schwartz, number four player and Bob Norwood, up from last year's junior varsity team.

Paul Fisher, number three man last year, is another possibility for the coming season, Diederichsen added. Nick Schaef, from Washington High School, is also expected to make the team.

On Friday, March 8, the college will open its league play against Sacramento. During the remainder of Mareh, the team meets San Mateo, West Contra Costa and Stockton in that order on successive Fridays. During April the team competes against Modesto, Oakland and Santa Rosa.

On May 10 and 11, the tennis players will travel to College of Sequoias to compete in the Northern Sectional Junior College Championship. The college will play host on May 17-18 for the northern State Championships.

Stressing the need for team players, Diederichsen pointed out that the average player will be welcome to join the squad. The college has both a varsity and a junior varsity team, whieh plays a high school schedule.

At this date there are four students who have stated they will definitely turn out for the golf team this coming season, according to Grover Klemmer, golf coaeh here.

All four golfers shoot in the mid and low 80's, and three of the four are veterans of last year's squad. Only Mike Evans, who was here in 1954, was not on the squad last year.

Phil Palen, Frank Hubert, and Don McDowell compose the trio of golfers who are already lettermen and intend to also return, Klemmer stated.

There is room on the squad for more golfers; the only requirement is a fair score, below 90. The college plays quite a few matches with other colleges in the area and presents an interesting season.

Any time between now and the change of semesters signups for the team will be conducted in the gymnasium office duing the day. Any student who is interested is urged by Klemmer to come out.

Track coach Lou Vasquez has also expressed a desire that all prospective candidates for this spring's squad contact him at the men's gymnasium immediately.

Leroy Thomas, Ray Batz and Roy Buekman are all expected to prove valuable additions to the squad, as are three members of last year's relay team, Myron Zimmerman, Ron Anderson and Ken Riehter.

Offieial practiee starts on Friday, February 1, and the first meet is slated to be held late that month.

CAB President To Present Service Awards At Coffee Social Tomorrow

Announcing January 17 as the date on which the Club Activities Board will present this semester's service awards to deserving members, Lon Earnshaw, CAB president, recently disclosed that the presentations will be made during a 1 p.m. coffee social held in Bungalow 1 and open to all interested parties.

Awards will consist of engraved keys for the honored board members and engraved gavels for the CAB president and vice-president, Earnshaw said.

In all probability another highlight of the awards program will be the announcement of new CAB officers for the spring semester.

Aside from the service awards and the probable announcement of next semester's officers, the program will include much coffee drinking and a good measure of back-slapping in celebration of the success of such activities as CAB Day, the CAB dance, and the acceptance of several new organizations this semester, Earnshaw declared.

The awards social marks the third coffee event held by the CAB this semester, a near record performance for any such group and just reward for the hard work put in by board members, he coneluded.

Books Due Back In Library Tomorrow

All library books and magazines must be returned by tomorrow, January 17, according to Irene Mensing, reference librarian here.

If students do not return library materials due, their names will appear on the library delinquent list, with resulting penalties, Miss Mensing added.

According to administration rules, dances cannot be held during the week scheduled for final examinations, Fuller explained.

Final Student Council Action OK's $250 Scholarship Grant, Approves Delta Sigma Tau On-Campus Bid

Business as usual was conducted in final Student Council action here last week with members finally getting around to passage of the long awaited Associated Student Scholarship Award along with approval of the on-campus status of a new sorority and a donation to Hungarian Relief.

Sporting a claim to the title of "most tabled motion of 1956," the scholarship award had met disapproval in many previous sessions because council members couldn't agree on a list of qualifications In the hands of AS Vice-President Louise von Emster, however, the measure finally found success.

As passed, the measure provides for two $125 scholarship awards to be presented to a man and woman student each semester out of regular AS funds. A board, composed of the Dean of Student Activities, the Dean of Women, the Coordinator of Student Affairs, the AS President, the AS Vice-President, and the Finance Chairman, will choose candidates for the awards on a basis of 40 per cent scholarship, 35 per cent need, and 25 per cent service.

In case of a tie vote on the board, Student Council will make the final choice. To be qualified for the award the student must be regularly enrolled here, carry a minimum of twelve and one-half units, and be an AS member.

Delta Sigma Tau, the new sorority now on-campus was accepted unanimously by the council after Inter-Sorority Council President Ginny Hase disclosed that ISC had studied their constitution and found it all right.

Student Council's approval of an AS donation to Hungarian Relief caused a slight bit of embarrassment to Bob Varni, finance chairman, who informed council members the $250 scholarship award passed earlier might have depleted his dwindling treasury. Recognizing this as a possibility, council member Debora Rudser amended the proposal to read "the donation will be made if the money is there."

Applause filled the final minutes of this last session when Miss von Emster congratulated retiring AS President Wayne McFadden on his fine leadership of the council this semester.

Sign-Ups This Semester For A Cappella Choir

Students wishing to try out for the spring semester's A Cappella Choir should sign up this semester for choir, according to Robert M. Morton, director of the choir.

New officers of the A Cappella Choir will be announced next semester.

When the better books are suppressed more people will read them.

Students may register either in the day or evening by seeing Dean Sandys in his office, C-302. No student who attends part time or full time day classes can register for an evening class without Sandys' special permission, and failure to obtain permission results in possible expulsion, Sandy warned.

Finals week and registration week schedules for the cafeteria will be from 7:30 a.m. to 10:15 a.m. and from 10:45 a.m. to 1 p.m. The fountain will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Shippey Nears Goal In AS Card Sales; AWS, AMS To Begin Contest Next Week

A total of 1,422 Associated Student cards have been sold as of February 18, according to Dwane Shippey, AS card sales chairman here. This semester's goal has been set at $8,500, of which $7,110 has been received.

Spouse cards are being used for the first time this semester, Shippey stated. If a husband or wife buys an AS card at the regular price, the student bank will stamp it. This stamped card entitles both husband and wife to the benefits of an AS card, although only one has actually bought a card.

Some of the benefits derived from an AS card include free campus parking, free admission and reduced rates to dances, athletic events, drama productions, rallies, and AS voting privileges. Graduates with AS cards will receive their caps and gowns free, while a rental charge of $5 will be made to non-members. In addition to this, various Bay Area stores offer discounts. Shippey warned that all budgeted activities must have a showing of 100 per cent AS cards to receive their funds.

The traditional Associated Men and Women Students contest commenced on Monday. The winners of the contest will be presented with their trophies on Friday, March 5, at the CAB dance.

Working closely with Shippey on the AS card sales are Paula Villa, vice-chairman, and Pat Jones, secretary.

Music Major Boyd Wins $100 Award For Scholarship

Armen Boyd, a third semester music major here, was announced by Robert Morton, music instructor, as the winner of the first $100 music scholarship at the college.

To be eligible for the scholarship, the student must be a third-semester music major with a B average in music and in his other studies. He must also demonstrate outstanding leadership in performance courses.

Morton pointed out that in addition to filling the requirements, Boyd has an outstanding character of leadership and potential for meeting success in music.

Boyd is interested in all phases of music and has not decided in what field he will specialize. He has tentative plans for studying music at San Francisco State College in the fall semester.

Since the age of four, Boyd has been studying piano and classical music. He is also interested in modern music, particularly in contemporary jazz.

A veteran, Boyd is married and the father of two children.

The scholarship which Boyd won is made available from the profits from sales of Music Listeners Guide, which was written by Meyer M. Cahn, college band instructor.

Debate Society At COP March 1

Phi Rho Pi, the college debate society, will participate in discussions a student congress, and the model United Nations this semester. The discussion topic will be, "What foreign policy should the Middle East pursue to best achieve their own end?", according to Thomas E. Duteher, debate coach here.

Phi Rho Pi, presenting Iran's point of view, will participate in three different discussions, the first one taking place at the College of Pacific on Friday, March 1. A committee will meet on Friday, April 5, to prepare policies for the student congress, which will meet on Thursday, May 16.

At the same time they will be representing The Netherlands at a model U. N. being set up at Stanford University. Any member of the Associated Students can participate by applying to Dutcher in C-336B.

This semester's president is Bill Whitney and helping him is John Puyn, vice-president.

Veteran Attendance Forms Due March 4

All students attending the college under Public Law 550 are strongly urged by Robin L. Dunn, Veterans Counselor for the college, to report to the Veterans Affairs office by the last college day of February or, at the latest, the afternoon of Monday, March 4, to sign their monthly certification of attendance forms for the month of February.

If these forms are left unattended to, checks will be stopped. Hours for the Veterans Affairs office, Room S134, are from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. and from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. every school day.

Guardsman Schedule Announced By Editor

Proposed publication schedule of The Guardsman for this semester was approved recently by the members of the Publications Board, according to Elmer Gentry, board chairman and editor of The Guardsman.

Thirteen issues are planned, subject to final decision of the board, with the tentative publication dates as follows: February 27, March 6, 13, 20, 27, April 3, 10, May 1, 8, 15, 22, 29, and June 5.

Members of the board this semester, appointed by Gentry, are Bob Varni, Associated Student president; Carol Harris, managing editor of The Guardsman; Metta Weddleton, AS vice-president; Brower Dimond, AS finance chairman; and Lou Lucia, sports editor of The Guardsman.

Enrollment Nears 6500 Students

Incomplete enrollment figures at the college for Spring 1957 as of February 19, show a total of 6,467 students of which 1,228 are registered in the evening sessions, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

These figures, although not final, show a present decrease of 3 students in the day division, and a decrease of 49 in the night division, compared with the fall enrollment which had a total of 6,519, with 1,277 in the night classes.

Of the present enrollment of 6467 students, 3,429 of them are students who are returning to the campus.

Campus Blood Drive Now Under Way; First Of Kind In Bay Area Colleges

LOUISE VON EMSTER, vice-chairman of the publicity committee, is currently working in that capacity for the blood drive. She was last semester's vice-president.

Faculty Urged To Join Students In Attaining Goal

First of its kind among Bay area colleges, a blood drive designed to include all campus personnel is now under way here, according to Phil Malnick, recently appointed chairman.

It will reach its climax on March 26 and 27, when a mobile unit from the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank will be here to receive donations.

"Members of the faculty, Alumni Association, and employees of the college are all invited to participate," Malnick said. "Our minimum goal is set at 300 pints of blood. But in that connection, I would like to be known as a pessimist," he further stated.

Tentative plans for the drive include three trophies to be awarded one each to the Inter-Fraternity, Inter-Sorority Councils, and the Club Activities Board. Each of these organizations will then in turn present its trophy to the respective fraternity, sorority, or club with the highest percentage of blood donations.

Inspired by a story in the Call-Bulletin, to the effect that there were only 12 pints of blood for the entire city of San Francisco, Malnick began organizing the drive early in the current semester.

Assisting him is a seven member Blood Committee announced as follows: Archie Briggs, Bill Driscoll, Bob King, Bob Rodriguez, Beverly Schroth, Louise von Emster, and Bob Wendt.

Miss von Emster is working as vice-chairman of the college Publicity Committee.

PHIL MALNICK is serving as chairman for the blood drive. Malnick also holds the position of parliamentarian.

Hillsman Releases College Hour Sites For Club Meetings

Clubs and organizations have been scheduled to meet this Friday during college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m., according to Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities here.

Bids For New AS Scholarships Due

Two new Associated Student scholarships of $125 each, obtained from AS funds, are being offered to a man and women student here, following action taken by Student Council last semester.

Deadline for turning in applications is Tuesday, March 12. Students will be chosen on a basis of 40 per cent scholarship, 35 per cent need, and 25 per cent service.

Applications for the Denman scholarship, which is offered to a woman student during the fall and spring semesters, also must be turned in by Tuesday, March 12.

Students can obtain applications for University of California scholarships in Dean Mary Golding's office before Friday, March 1.

Winners of the Chinese Scholarship and the Florence Louis Scholarship are Jane Wong and Ann Boddy, respectively. Money for the Chinese Scholarship is raised by the Chinese Sweetheart Ball every semester. The Florence Louis Scholarship is awarded to a woman student who has completed 15 units of study.

Faulty Attendance, Grades Causes For Disqualification

To be able to stay regularly enrolled in City College, students here must maintain at least a 1.5 grade average and must strictly heed the attendance regulations, according to John Brady, coordinator of Student Welfare here.

The total number of absences of a student in any course, regardless of whether or not the absences have been officially excused, should, in no instance, be greater than twice the number of times the particular course meets weekly, Brady said.

If a student in any course has been absent more than twice the number of times the course meets weekly, and has also exceeded the number of unexcused (emergency) absences allowed, he may be dropped by the instructor and assigned a final grade of F. A student who wishes to appeal such disqualification may file a written petition with Brady.

However, Brady added, if a student in any course has been absent more than twice the number of times the course meets weekly, but has not exceeded the number of unexcused (emergency) absences allowed, he may be permitted to drop the course without penalty.

"Failure in a required course is another cause of disqualification, Brady added.

If Brady or the readmissions committee approves, the student will be allowed to continue at the college but will be on probation.

Last semester a total of 589 students had their registration held up, either because of poor scholarship or because they had their registration cancelled.

Of these 589 students, 280 of them appeared before Brady or the committee to explain their difficulty.

Of the 280 who appealed, 27 were disqualified, leaving a total of 253 students who were readmitted.

Permits Necessary For Campus Parking Areas

With the inauguration of a new parking permit enforcement policy, which began last week, the campus police have clamped down on students without permits, according to Fred Fitzgerald, erminology instructor here.

Starting last Wednesday, students without parking permits were not permitted to enter the student parking areas. Campus police have been stationed at all entrances to the lots until 8 a.m., allowing only those with official red and white stickers to enter.

Fitzgerald said that parking citations will not be handed out until Monday, March 4, and that students have until 2 p.m. Friday, March 1, to obtain a permit.

Parking permits may be obtained by presenting an Associated Student card accompanied with the driver's operating license and automobile registration certificate at the Campus Police office, C120, between 8 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Three areas have been set aside for student parking. The first area, designated as Area A, is bounded by Phelan Avenue and the Cloud Hall Circle, adjacent to Smith Hall. The second, Area B, has its entrance on Geenn Avenue and is bounded by the athletic field. The last, Area C, is bounded by the archery field and the men's gymnasium, located just below Cloud Hall.

Stipulating that no student may park in the Cloud Hall Circle or behind Smith Hall, Fitzgerald stated that these sections are reserved for the faculty only.

Particularly emphasized by the campus enforcement agency was a regulation prohibiting parking on the paved roadways in any of the above areas, or outside the marked stalls.

Citations issued by the campus police are regular San Francisco Police Department citations payable only at the City Hall traffic fines bureau, Room 164.

Membership In AS Brings Big Return For Small Investment

MOST COLLEGES and universities in this nation require that each student pay certain tuitional and student card fees while he is in attendance. Few colleges operate otherwise, for obviously there must be some source of revenue.

City College operates under a unique set-up whereby the city provides funds for the salaries of the instructors and the operation and upkeep of the buildings and grounds.

However, anything considered as extra-curricular — including dances and other social events, athletic team equipment and travel, and innumerable other items, including the operation of this newspaper — must be paid for by the Associated Students.

It follows, then, that the AS must have ways of raising money. The two largest sources of income are derived from sales profits realized at the Ramporium bookstore, and funds received from the sale of AS cards.

The revenue contributed by the bookstore is a reliable source of income, for obviously students require textbooks. Since the purchase of an AS card isn't required here, a problem is created. How can students be induced to buy cards?

For one thing, an interesting and diversified social program is offered here. Also, a "spouse card" has been inaugurated this semester, enabling married students to attend AS functions with their wives or husbands at no extra charge.

As an inducement for the mercenary-minded student, special discounts have been obtained for card-holders at many business establishments. For example, if a student needs a typewriter, he can buy one at a sizeable reduction.

Many other items and services can be bought at a reduced price, including jewelry, household appliances, auto parts and tires, sporting goods, movie theatre tickets, laundry and cleaning, clothing, and gasoline and oil.

With all these benefits, however, it is still difficult to obtain enough AS members. We can offer no over-all solution to this fund-raising problem; however, a suggestion might be in order.

In his first semester here, a student forms many new opinions, including an opinion of the methods of salesmanship used to sell him an AS card.

We refer, of course, to the coercion which is applied to new students by card salesmen during registration. The student is erroneously advised that he "must have" an AS card before he can complete his registration.

Many of these same students, embittered by the trickery employed upon them, never buy another card during their remaining semesters at the college.

From a business standpoint, this high-pressure salesmanship is highly illogical. Assuming the average student is here four semesters, it doesn't seem advantageous to gain one sale and lose three more possible ones.

Any way you look at it, AS membership is a bargain. This is obvious when you compare the low $5 purchase price with the high rate of return. Therefore, we feel that high-pressure salesmanship is not practical, or necessary.

Foresight ... But Studio One Play Tried Too Hard

By Carol Harris

A PROMINENT college personality is on the television horizon in the person of Dr. Lloyd Luckmann, coordinator of Instruction here. Dr. Luckmann is currently appearing each Wednesday evening at 8:30 on KQED in a series entitled Great Ideas. Each week the program explores ideas fundamental to man's everyday life. Tonight Dr. Luckmann will discuss Liberal Education In Relation To Labor and Leisure.

For those interested in the problem of juvenile delinquency, KQED offers a program each Thursday at 8 p.m.— Searchlights On Delinquency. The program consists of interviews with delinquent children, film clips, and case studies. Guest experts describe the characteristics and causes of various kinds of delinquency. Tomorrow night's program will feature The Broken Home.

A view of college life as seen through the eyes of a playwright was recently presented by KPIX on Studio One. The result was a hodge podge of truths and distortions.

Entitled A Walk In The Forest, it is basically a psychological study of a young college student who is brilliant in the field of science. Unfortunately, as happens to many young persons, he becomes torn between his desire for knowledge and the fear of losing out on the more tangible pleasures of life. Naturally, his better side wins out at the conclusion.

Although the basic idea was good and the acting more than tolerable, the distortions about college life kept the production from being entirely successful.

The roommates were presented as being the hale and hearty type, full of slaps on the back and guffaws. They were trying too hard to be what some of the public erroneously construe to be typical "Joe College."

The height of incredulity was reached when during an examination the young man sat doing nothing. When reprimanded by his instructor and asked why he wasn't at least trying, he replied, "The questions don't seem to need answering." This is a trick yet to be employed by most students. Of course, he was trying to flunk, but very few would choose this method of doing it.

If more care had been taken in preserving the more realistic aspects of college life, A Walk In The Forest could have been one of the outstanding plays of the season. After viewing it, it probably left some people with the impression that all college students are frustrated misled know-it-alls. However, it was a unique television experience in dealing with the psychological problems of a student caught in the spree of undergraduate life.

Some day a newspaper editor is going to achieve lasting fame by publishing stories as interesting as the fillers.

Olympic Winner Top St. Francis Chef

Debes Leads US To International Culinary Fame

By Denny Delman

When a hotel, such as San Francisco's St. Francis, is world renowned, there is a necessity on the part of hostelry students to find out how and why this universal recognition is attained.

What makes the downtown monarch of Managing Director Dan London the unique hotel it is, rests in its blend of tradition and precedence. The decorum, while taking on a definite modernistic touch, inevitably gives way to the traditional setting of the stately structure greatly respected by so many—all of which hotel students here discovered when they "operated" the St. Francis for a day last January.

Contributing largely to the hotel's magnificence is the culinary artistry of its cooks, led by the executive chef, Paul Debes, one of the leading chefs in the world.

Debes has proven his culinary prowess on numerous occasions, participating only last fall in Frankfurt, Germany, at the 9th Olympic Cooking Exposition.

Matched against the best cooks in the world, Debes and the other members of this, the second United States team to participate in the eight-day exposition, captured top honors, with each member winning the coveted gold medal.

Financed by the American Culinary Federation and other cooking organizations, the trip for the American entry cost $10,000, sending to Frankfurt top chefs from all over the nation, including Pittsburgh, Chicago and San Francisco.

Each nation brought and prepared its national dish at the exposition. "Live," or on the spot, cooking was necessary. No food could be prepared before the cooks reached the hall, which Debes described as being similar to the Cow Palace.

Separate kitchens were set up for six nations to prepare their national foods, which were sold to the public. The US team prepared two menus, one featuring roast beef, the other turkey.

Both menus included an avocado and pear salad, and large baked potatoes. Debes revealed that much of the food brought over by the US was completely unknown to the other nations.

The size of the food, Debes said, completely astounded the Europeans. Olives as big as eggs, potatoes the size of watermelons, and 30 pound turkeys amazed the other nations. In all, 3,000 pounds of food were used by the American team.

Six of the eight days were taken up in preparing meals. During this time the teams were under the watchful eyes of 12 judges. On the fifth day the American team prepared a cold buffet. Once again the food was unknown to the Europeans.

Commenting on the other entries, Debes noted that there was no artistry employed by most of the other nations in preparing their food, and, in fact, some of the food looked unappetizing.

Debes then displayed his gold medal. It is a large round disk with the words "Cercheur de Cloche," or Federation of Cooks, inscribed on the front. On the reverse side it states, International Culinary Exposition, Frankfurt, 1956, 30 September to 7 October.

English names for the days of the week come from Norse-mythology by way of Anglo-Saxon and for that reason are often similar to the Roman names, which the Teutonic tribes adapted.

PAUL DEBES, executive chef at the St. Francis Hotel and gold medal winning member of the American team at last year's international Culinary Exposition held in Frankfurt Germany, checks notes after an interview with Guardsman Reporter Denny Delman.

Over-Active Drama Student Plays Command Performance At Request Of Police, Has Time Of His Life

By Ray Davis

Drama student George Hubbard, who played the part of "Blick," the sadistic head of the San Francisco Vice Squad, in the final performance of William Saroyan's The Time Of Your Life, in the college's little theater on Saturday, February 9, was pacing his way home through Golden Gate Park.

The show was over, the accolades had been accepted, now home to a warm and welcome bed . . .

A police car slid slowly past him. Out of the window a cop bawled intelligently, "Hey punk, where d'ya think y're going?" Hubbard hurried innocently over to the now stationary car anticipating an offer of a ride home from a kind cop.

"Whadaya doin' here?" the cop asked. Hubbard, quite taken aback by the policeman's aggressiveness and faulty diction, recounted his recent activities in a timid, apprehensive voice. "Yeah, yeah. Let's see your identification," the suspicious officer ordered.

Hubbard searched his pockets. Disaster — he was still wearing the screamingly-loud checked suit which he had used in the play and had unwittingly left his wallet at home. He explained this to the cop. "Get in," was the sharp and only reply.

On arrival at the Ninth Avenue Precinct, the police commenced to question him more thoroughly; each succeeding question followed by increasingly nervous answers did nothing to allay the desk-sergeant's suspicions. Following his confused inability to remember his telephone number, the police, despite his protestations, booked him on a vagrancy charge and transferred him to the city prison.

Once there, he was hurriedly fingerprinted, photographed, and tentatively identified as one "Happy Jackson," a felon whom he resembled, and then flung into the "Drunk Tank," in that order. Here, Hubbard's acting ability made him many friends, and the drunks were delighted to make the initial acquaintance of such distinguished characters as Hamlet, Julius Caesar, Marc Antony, etc.

He was followed on stage by an evangelist who succeeded in converting three drunks; a wife-beater, and a fellow vagrant, before Hubbard was called to the desk to be informed that his distraught mother, after calling the only morgue, all the hospitals, and several police stations, was on her way to supply his bail money.

Next day in court, Hubbard explained the misunderstanding to the judge, who was only too pleased to dismiss the ludicrous charges which the over-keen police had preferred against him. He was once again a free man.

Hubbard's retrospective comment seems to summarize these disturbing events best. He says, "I'll never try out again for the part of a cop. I wouldn't be convincing. I'm not that ingenuous."

A FADING ART is being revived. We too have noticed a certain TV commercial depicting a weatherbeaten, tatooed male who advocates smoking a filter-tipped brand of cigarette. The pitch is quite apparent. We must no longer consider smoking a filter cigarette the mark of femininity. But an interesting sidelight comes with an insider's report that the tatoo industry is flourishing since the advent of this advertisement.

Trackmen Demonstrate Strength In Practice; First Meet Set With Cal Frosh And Oakland At Berkeley

By George Grasso

City College trackmen, winners of last year's Big Eight dual meet championship, are now in training for their first conference meet of the current season, to be held against Oakland and the non-league Cal Frosh on Saturday, March 16, at Berkeley.

This year the team is under the direction of freshman coach, Lou Vasquez, formerly of Washington High School, who takes over from last season's coach, Roy Burkhead.

Burkhead's squad of last season has been mentioned by Vasquez as the finest team this college has yet produced, and Coach Vasquez is faced with the problem of rebuilding back to its former position or better.

Vasquez will be partially helped in his first college track assignment by the return of a few veterans who were instrumental in last year's winning team. Returning will be three top middle distance runners in Ron Anderson, Ken Richter, and Myron Zimmerman, all three of whom have been very tough to beat in either the 440, or the 880. These three will probably be teaming up in either the one mile or the two mile relay.

Zimmerman has previously recorded times of 49 flat in the quarter-mile, and 1:59 in the mile. This year he will be looking forward to breaking the 440 record of 48.9, and the 880 record of 1:57. Bob Guddee also returns and will be handling many of the hurdling and broadjumping assignments.

Most of the team strength, however, will depend on new comers, one of the most outstanding of whom is Wilford Gaspar. Gaspar distinguished himself at Polytechnic High School, and in Northern California, by jumping over a bar that rested horizontally 76½ inches off the ground. Besides high jumping 6-4½, he is also a capable 13-foot pole vaulter.

Hurdler James Thomas of Washington High has joined the team. Last year Thomas was a close runner-up in the AAA low hurdles championship. Also on hurdles will be Ray Herrik, who still holds a lightweight record at Polytechnic, John Cressa of Balboa, and Don Baeki, formerly of Mission High, and more recently of the Sixth Army.

Three new distance runners added this season are Stan Breed of South San Francisco, Eddie Chavez of Lowell, and Bob Hammond of Washington High.

In the sprinting department will be Don Masser of Lincoln, and Bob Roper of Riordan.

Pete Morgan, tops in the weight department right now, comes from Lincoln. Balboa gave the college the rest of its discus throwers and shot putters: Doug Neathery, Dick Ristow, and Mike Reid.

Dick Atkins will be on the broadjump, and Jim Juimaron and Steve Pickney will possibly be used as quarter-milers.

Coach Vasquez, who sends his team into action against Oakland and the Cal Frosh at Berkeley on March 16, looks for his hardest competition of the season against veteran-stocked Modesto, and much improved Santa Rosa and Sacramento.

AMS Basketball League Sign Ups Now Taking Place

Petitions for admission to the Associated Men Student basketball league are now being circulated to clubs, fraternities, and independent organizations, Bill Allen, AMS vice-president, announced recently.

The three leagues, Inter-Fraternity Council, Independent, and Hotel and Restaurant, will commence play early in March, Allen added. Each organization which intends to enter a team must have a petition filed with the president of the AMS. The only restriction is that all players must be AS members. On the petition, the names of all players must be listed, Allen stated, and only those who have signed up to play are eligible to participate.

An entrance fee of five dollars must also be paid, Mike Monteith, president of the AMS, said, which will go toward the awards dinner to be held May 22. At the dinner, the winners of each league will receive trophies from the AMS.

Last year's loop leaders were the Chinese Club, Independent League; and Zeta Psi Sigma, IFC. The H&R department, split into four teams by semester in the college, was won by team number one with a 7-0 record. The Chinese Club was presented an additional trophy signifying that they also had won decisive victories over the IFC and H&R League champs.

In connection with the fraternities, Monteith said, their pledges will be allowed to participate only after April 15, and they must also sign the fraternity's petition to play in the league.

Guddee Named Block President

With Bob Guddee as president, Block SF sponsor Bill Fischer recently released names of other officers for this semester. In addition, he announced the first meeting of the society for this Friday, March 1, during college hour in annex B, located below the men's gymnasium.

Many of this semester's events, such as the Block SF dance, to be held on March 29, will be discussed at this meeting, Fischer said.

Other newly elected officers include Roy Buckman, vice-president; Gene Craft, recording secretary; and Rich Martucci, sergeant-at-arms, Fischer revealed.

Golfers To Tee Off Saturday At Marin

City College's golf squad plays its first meet this Saturday, March 2, against the College of Marin at Kentfield.

The team is now composed of ten men, six newscomers, three holdovers from last year's third place club, and one veteran from 1955.

Seasoned clubbers are Frank Hubbell, number one man last year; Don McDowell, last season's number two man; Bob Zimmerman, fifth man last season; and Mike Evans, who, previous to a leave of absence in 1956, was number four man on the 1955 outfit.

The first-year men include Rich Rose, Larry Barr, John White, Wray Kimball, Everett Hintz, and Bob Chalstrom.

Rank of these men is undetermined, but a few intra-squad meets will give Coach Grover Klemmer a chance to formulate the team.

The Philadelphia Phillies have appeared in two World Series. They lost them both, winning only one game out of nine.

Modesto Crucial Friday

RAMBLINGS

By Lou Lucia

SAN FRANCISCO is ready, willing, and able to support a franchise of the National Basketball Association, or to the uninformed — a professional basketball team.

There can be many points to dispute in this first statement but we will try to list some of them according to sequence:

Ready: Unlike baseball owners who declare that our fair city cannot have a major league ball team until we have a suitable park—San Francisco has a ready made stand for a home team in the form of the Cow Palace, which could accommodate 14,000 fans, and has adequate parking space.

Willing: Charles L. Harney, construction mogul, has stated that he would finance the team, and Fred Scollari, a former pro basketballer, would act as general manager. Though the first letter to the league commissioner was refused, it places the bay city at the head of the list when the NBA decides to expand.

Able: San Francisco has but one major college team, the University of San Francisco Dons, and gymnasiums in the immediate vicinity (Stanford, California) cannot always house the desiring spectators. There is also the fact that professional football attendance here is consistently near the top of the major cities throughout the country. This leads to the theory that fans would welcome other top professional sports.

If the Golden Gate had a team in the circuit now an impressive array of stars might be playing here. Since players are drafted sectionally the following team could be considered: forwards, Kenny Sears (Santa Clara) and George Yardley (Stanford); center, Bill Russell (USF); guards Ron Tomsic (Stanford) and K. C. Jones (USF).

With these net wrinklers on one club it is doubtful any five others chosen from NBA teams could consistently trounce the aggregation. The coast will go on developing top flight players and it is a shame not to have them playing in the West but in the eastern leagues. This mythical Bay Area team will no doubt never come about but shows that this section could compete with any other in the country when considering basketball talent.

San Francisco is ready, willing, and able, and it is up to the commissioner and the NBA to decide on the expansion of the league.

Baseballers Meet State Tomorrow

San Francisco State will give the Ram baseballers their second big test tomorrow in a practice game to be held on State's field at 3:15 p.m., Coach Bill Fischer recently announced.

In their first game of the practice season on February 18, the Ram nine dropped a close game to Stanford by the score of 2-1. Fischer said that he wasn't too concerned with this loss, for it gave him a chance to try out a total of 16 ballplayers. He said that he was pleased with those in action.

Rams, Pirates Tied For Big 8 League Lead

Adding four wins between January 16 and February 1 to their previous two victories, the City College basketball team had a clean 6-0 record and were tied with Modesto for the league lead at the outset of this month.

Saturday, 15 — Invading the Comets with fine defensive play and red hot shooting, each man counting 24 points.

As was the case in many other tilts this season, the free throw shooting of the Rams proved the difference, with Mock hitting on 10 of 10 from the charity line, and Tealer sinking eight of nine free throw attempts.

High scoring men of the Contra Costa attack, forwards J. D. Banks and Liso Dixon, plus center Tyler Wilbon, were unable to find the mark consistently until the game was out of reach.

The Comets closed the margin to three points at the outset of play in the final half, but then City College soon built up a formidable 56-34 lead.

Rams downed West Contra Costa, 70-56, and the Pirates also held their perfect conference mark with a win over Sacramento.

Tealer and Mock once again provided the fireworks for the college [illegible] their scoring.

With Tealer's 19 rebounds asserting their dominance, the Rams coasted to the triumph, their fourth league win without a loss.

The college team then took a short-lived one-half game lead in the league [illegible] on January 29, beating Oakland decisively, 68-58, in a tilt on the losers' court.

A season high individual scoring mark of 29 points by center Doug North led the parade against Oakland, and Mock also chipped in 14 markers.

When the Rams defeated San Mateo, 68-61, on February 1 at the Bulldogs' court, and Modesto again preserved the first place tie by whipping Santa Rosa, 64-48, the next night, the stage was set for the lead-determining game between the top duet.

Tealer, Mock and North, with performances of 21, 19 and 15 points respectively, once more led the college attack which increased a narrow two-point halftime lead to seven digits at the finish.

Ram Victory Would End Big Eight League In Three Way Deadlock For Championship

By Lou Lucia

In order to gain a tie for the Big Eight championship the Rams will have to defeat the league-leading Modesto five on their home court this coming Friday night. (For results of the last meeting between these two teams see column at right.)

A Ram win would conclude the league play with West Contra Costa, Modesto, and the college team tied for the lead. However, stopping Modesto, and the main wheel in the cog—center Jim Thomas—will be no easy feat. Thomas connected for 38 points against Sacramento, and gives the Pirates valuable back-board control.

Vic DiGiovanni is the play-maker of the club, and another of the five New York imports on the team. Forwards Dick Miller (6'4") and Fred Nugent (6'5") add outside shooting and rebounding strength. Either Rey Maduro or Shelley Paimer will probably open at the other guard spot with DiGiovanni, and it may be noted that all of the Pirate five are capable of scoring in double figures.

The West Contra Costa quintet edged the City College cagers 57-50, on February 19 in San Pablo to tie the Rams for the second place position. The lead changed hands 11 times, and it was mostly the scoring punch of Liso Dixon, who clicked for 18 points, and the rebounding of Tyler Wilbon that accounted for the victory.

WCC moved out to a quick 10-2 lead but the Rams came back to take the intermission lead at 26-20, with Bob Tealer scoring half the SF total at this time.

Al Mock spear-headed the Ram attack in the second half, but it was seemingly a one-man effort as the other four players chipped in only eight points. Babe Ruth Williams hit on a jump shot to move the Comets ahead at 42-41. Then the pesky Dixon meshed another jump, and J. D. Banks hook shot paved the way for the victory. The Comets stalled out the last three minutes, and most of the remaining points came on foul shots.

Last Friday night, the Rams shellacked visiting Oakland, 66-49, at the men's gymnasium to remain tied for second place. The Rams led from the opening bucket to the final buzzer with only mild threats from the Thunderbirds. Midway through the second half when the score was 43-39, a lay-in by Mock, tip by Doug North, and two consecutive jump shots by Tealer broke the game wide open.

All of the starters on the college team hit in double figures: Tealer 15, Mal McCormiek 10, North 10, Rich Russell 11, and Mock 10.

An easy 66-46 victory over the Stockton Mustangs on the victims' home court on February 12 gave the Ram hoopsters a temporary half-game lead, but Modesto soundly trounced the Oakland five, 73-58, the following night to again share top spot with the college team.

Mock led the Ram assault on the Mustangs' basket by potting 19 points. Chief threat of the home team was Ed Davidson, who scored 17 markers.

Outscoring Sacramento, 68-59, at the men's gymnasium on February 15, the college quintet again remained tied with Modesto, as the Pirates edged San Mateo, 60-51, in a game in which 50 personal fouls were called.

Basketball Team Falls To Modesto, Drubs Santa Rosa

City College surrendered the Big Eight first place lead to the Modesto Pirates, 51-48, in a game at the men's gymnasium on February 5, but while rebounding to down Santa Rosa, 55-45, the following Friday, the Rams again tied for the lead as the Bucs lost, 52-44, to West Contra Costa.

Guard Vic DiGiovanni was the big man for the winners, exhibiting fine floor play and come-through shooting by sinking the winning bucket.

Modesto held the lead through almost the entire contest, as the Rams could get their noses out in front only three times. That third time came with 30 seconds left in the tilt on a Bob Tealer field goal to give the locals an apparent 48-47 come-from-behind victory.

But City College had not counted on the cluteh play of DiGiovanni, who put away a ten-foot jumper with 15 seconds to go. A foul to Rey Maduro provided the visitors with the two extra free throws they needed to cinch the win.

Modesto, after leading 26-25 at the half, went into the game's last six minutes with that one-point lead, but Rich Russell hit on a 15-foot one-hander to put the Rams in front for the second time, 45-44, but the Pirates went ahead by three markers, 47-45, with 5:20 left.

Then, with DiGiovanni the key man, Modesto Head Coach Leon Lafaille called for ball control tactics, and his New York-born player, one of many on the squad, gave a fine dribbling exhibition to use up many valuable minutes.

Events proceeded to build up to the double-climax, the apparent game-winning shot by Tealer closely followed by the actual clutch fielder by DiGiovanni, who played the entire second half with four fouls, but never did pick up the fifth and final one, much to the disappointment of City College fans.

Tealer was high point man for the game with 22, followed by center Jim Thomas of Modesto with 16, and DiGiovanni, with his 11 valuable points.

City College again moved into a first place tie with Modesto as the Rams completely overwhelmed Santa Rosa at the men's gymnasium on February 8, while the Pirates lost to West Contra Costa.

Five minutes into the first half, Tealer swished a foul shot to put the Rams ahead 14-13, and from then on the Santa Rosa five couldn't close the gap. By half time the Rams led by eight points, and with a full eight minutes left in the game were out in front by 16 digits.

Coach Sid Phelan substituted liberally during the last minutes of the game. Ray Waters' shots helped to bring the Santa Rosa five closer, but it was not enough to scare the home team.

Waters hit for 15 markers, while teammate Forrest Ammons contributed 13 to lead the point producers. The Rams were paced by game captain Rich Russell's and center Doug North's 12 points apiece.

Other films to be shown here every Friday during college hour in room S138 will be highlighted by the color production, Our Mr. Sun. Because of the outstanding nature of this film, the complete audio-visual schedule was held up until the exact date for its showing could be ascertained, Devlin added.

AS President Lists Spring Semester Cabinet Officers

By Jerry Redford

As the Associated Student President takes office each semester, at the top of his list of duties is the appointment of his cabinet, which meets twice weekly with the Student Council.

This semester, President Bob Varni has made 12 appointments of his own and accepted the appointments that are made by other groups with cabinet seat status.

Eugenia Lary was the first appointee, serving as secretary of the Associated Students. The corresponding secretary is Anne Smith. The Finance Chairman is Brower Dimond. Serving a second semester as AS card sales chairman is Dwane Shippey.

The duty of the Parliamentarian is to give decisions on the correctness of sessions of council in accordance with Robert's Rules of Order. This year's Parliamentarian is Phil Malnick. Filling the job of Election Commissioner is Hugh Aanonsen, whose duty it is to supervise all elections here.

The Campus Affairs Coordinator will be George Galban. The State Information Service officer is Louise von Emster, and Hiram Kaakua is the Junior Chamber of Commerce member.

The office of Men's Athletic Commissioner has been filled by Bob Tealer. Taking care of awards to members of the AS is the Awards Chairman, Lon Earnshaw, and the Sergeant-of-Arms is Frank Carroll.

Eight other offices of the President's Cabinet are elected by their respective groups, and are approved by the President and Council.

The Rally Commissioner and the Yell Leader are elected by the Rally Committee. This year's Rally Commissioner is Tillie Gandert, but at press time the Yell Leader had not been named. The Club Activities Board President is Bob Wendt. The Inter-Fraternity and Sorority Councils are coordinating boards for their respective groups also. Their Presidents are Bill Driscoll and Bev Schroth respectively.

The Recreation Association Chairman is Jeanne Krieg, serving her second term in that post. The Campus Police chief is Bob Fuller.

Chairman of the Publication Board is Elmer Gentry, and Publicity Chairman is Kaj Kristoffersen.

Monteith Names AMS Officers, Lists 2 Veeps

In disclosing the names of his officers, Mike Monteith, Associated Men Student president, recently announced that AMS will meet every Tuesday at 11 a.m. in Bungalow 1.

Further announcing that it was necessary for two students to hold vice-president seats in order to accomplish all the work ahead in the spring semester, Monteith followed with the appointments of Bill Allen and Chuck Zanardi to these positions.

Harold Diamond, recording secretary; Joe Saporita, secretary, and Art Paul, treasurer, will also assist in planning the activities.

CAB Day, Dance Slated March 8

Club Activities Day is scheduled to be held on Friday, March 8, during college hour, 10:40 to 11:00 a.m., Bob Wendt, Club Activities Board president, announced last week.

The program will begin during college hour and continue throughout the day, terminating with a dance at Smith Hall from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight.

Meanwhile, in order that the CAB may best serve the various organizations this semester, each organization is expected to meet certain requirements, Wendt stated. A permanent representative to the CAB or a proxy must be in attendance at the next board meeting next Tuesday, March 5.

Duplicate petitions or charters must be completed and correctly filled out and submitted by 2 p.m. tomorrow.

Petitions for club charters may be turned in directly to the CAB by its representative, or to Dean Ralph Hillsman's office, S148, or to the CAB mailbox in B2, near Smith Hall. Failure to comply with either regulation entails loss of on-campus status, which can be appealed to the Student Council.

Switchboard Operator Finds New 'Home'

Room S169 has become the new "home" for the college telephone switchboard, and its operator for 15 years is Marie Kenison, pictured at right in the former booth.

This operator's booth, by the main entrance of the Science Building, had been in use since the college first opened.

A change had to be made in location, according to Mrs. Kenison, because the operator's booth was becoming central headquarters where mail would come in, people would ask for information, and in general there would be so much confusion that the operator almost had to have two heads and four hands to take care of the rush.

Plans are being made to put a receptionist in the old booth to sort mail, answer questions and handle other general duties, Mrs. Kenison added.

Varni Transcript Proposal Brought Before Council

By Dick Moore

A proposal to revise the college's official transcripts to include a more detailed record of work done in student government by Associated Student officers was presented to Student Council by AS President Bob Varni last week.

Outlining the proposal's desirabilities, Varni remarked that student officers, by this plan, could have official recognition by other schools and employers for their achievements in student and community leadership.

Urging the council to back the plan, Varni asked that a committee be formed to look into the proposal's possibilities and to report to the council its findings. Appointed to head the committee was Freshman Councilman Richard Daffner.

Transcripts now include units and grades in the major in community leadership for student officers and other students who wish to follow and are active in leadership and community affairs. Designation on the individual's transcript of offices held will denote actual achievement in the area of student government.

Council members also heard a report from Campus Police Chief Robert Ford who said that after next Monday, March 4, all students must have a parking permit to legally park on the campus. There were 1,610 citations issued by Campus Police last year, Ford said. The permits may be secured at the Campus Police office in Room C-120.

Main budgets to be passed by council for the spring semester are those of the controller's office for $628.50 and the Freshman Class request for $580.00.

Other budgets passed include the following: Dean Mary Golding, $25.00; Dean of Men, $25.00; Administration, $100.00; and a partial budget of $100.00 for the Freshman Ball.

Fraternity Council Sets March 6 For Smoker

Tentatively scheduled on the social calendar is an Inter-Fraternity Council Smoker on Wednesday night, March 6, according to Bill Driscoll, IFC president.

Driscoll has not revealed any plans for the event and was undecided on a program for the evening.

Forestry School Applications Due

Students who plan to transfer to the University of California, School of Forestry, Fall 1957, as juniors should send to the Director of Admissions, University of California, Berkeley 4, for an application blank for admission to the university, according to Waddington Blair, counsellor here.

They should request also an application blank for admission to the School of Forestry, he added, and both applications must be filed with the Director of Admissions before Friday, March 15.

To enter this fall, these students take a field practice course this summer, since this course must be completed prior to undertaking the junior year work in Forestry.

The application required for entry into this course may be obtained from the School of Forestry, 243 Forestry Building, University of California.

Semi-Annual Inter-Fraternity Smoker Tonight In Men's Gym To Initiate Rushing Activities

Inter-Fraternity Council will present its eighth consecutive men's smoker tonight at 8 p.m. in the men's gymnasium, Bill Driscoll, IFC president, recently announced.

All men students are invited to the smoker, he said, to meet members of the college's nine fraternities. Each fraternity will have a display and a sign-up sheet, which students may sign if they are interested in being rushed by that fraternity. Members will be on hand to explain specific functions of their fraternity and will answer any questions, Driscoll said.

Entertainment includes a basketball game put on by members of the fraternities, the possibility of a faculty quartet, and an outstanding combo, composed of members of the Alpha Phi Epsilon fraternity, according to Driscoll.

Refreshments will be served by members of Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity.

Scheduled speakers will be Edwin C. Browne, former dean of men here; Bill Fischer, Block SF sponsor and baseball coach, and Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities. Driscoll also hinted that there will be a special award made to last year's IFC President Jim Buckley.

It is Driscoll's hope that this will be the most successful smoker ever. The point that he stressed was that all men who attend the smoker and are considering pledging a fraternity sign up for three or four separate organizations before making a final choice as to the fraternity they will pledge.

"There is no obligation to a man who signs up for a fraternity," Driscoll said. "It is only a way of giving the fraternity a chance to make personal contacts with the possible pledge before making their final decision."

The nine fraternities here and their presidents are Beta Phi Beta, Jim Ryan; Alpha Kappa Rho, Bonar Russell; Lambda Phi, Ernie Schnurrtfeil; Alpha Sigma Delta, Dick Kramner; Tau Chi Sigma, Jack Larkey; Alpha Phi Epsilon, Archie Briggs; Zeta Phi Sigma, Ed Salais; Gamma Phi Ypsilon, Bob Rodriquez; Phi Beta Delta, Don Worral, and Beta Tau, George Iveliech.

Other officers of the IFC are Ralph Kirk, vice-president; Briggs, secretary, and Bob King, treasurer.

AWS Sponsors 5 Part Workshop At Government Meet

A workshop will be the contribution of the Associated Women Students at the Regional meeting of the Northern California Student Government Association to be held on Saturday, March 16, in San Jose Junior College, according to Debbie Rudser, AWS president.

A suggested outline for the AWS workshop has been already submitted by Miss Rudser to the AWS presidents of 16 two-year colleges in Northern California.

This outline is divided into five main divisions: AWS and Orientation of New Students, AWS Activities, Stimulating Interest and Participation in AWS, Finance, and reports on the conference of the Intercollegiate Association of Women Students, held at the University of Nevada last November.

One of the sub-topics to be considered in this workshop, Miss Rudser said, will be the Big-Little Sister program that is functioning here this semester.

This program consists of giving guidance to the new women students in planning their schedules of classes, thus saving counselors' and advisers' time during registration days. It also helps new students become acquainted with the college, Miss Rudser added.

Four social hours will be held by the AWS as part of the Big-Little Sister program scheduled to begin on Friday, March 15, with Darlene Enfield as chairman.

To each of these social hours 50 big sisters and 50 little sisters will be invited. The purpose of these meetings is to get the big and little sisters together so that they become better acquainted and thus develop a more solid friendship. A program entitled Personality Plus will be presented at each session, Miss Rudser further added.

Day Enrollment Tops Fall Figure

Official enrollment figures of the college for this semester show a total of 6,492 students, of which 1,213 are registered in the evening session, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

Final totals computed show an increase of 37 students in the day division, and a decrease of 54 students in the evening division, compared with the fall enrollment which had a total registration of 6,519, with 1,277 in the evening classes.

Class statistics show the Sophomore enrollment at 2,644 and the Freshman class trailing closely with 2,635. Another aspect of the spring enrollment is that there are only 1,511 women students compared to the total registration of 3,768 men.

Budget Requests Exceed Income; Need $4000 Cut

Budget requests which were turned in two weeks ago from 39 campus organizations came to $26,273.96, according to Brower Dimond, Associated Student Finance Committee Chairman.

Income for this semester is estimated at $22,000 by Dimond. In releasing this figure, he said he expects to receive $10,000 from the student book store, $8,000 from student card sales, $2,000 from vending machines, $1,000 from athletic events, and $1,000 more from miscellaneous income.

Dimond emphasized that he is hoping student card sales will exceed $8,000, because the additional income would be more than welcome. Also, because of the success of the basketball team this semester, it is hoped that funds received from athletic events will exceed $1,000.

Because there must be a $1,500 undistributed fund to work with during the semester, Dimond must cut his budget to $20,500, thus shearing off $5,773.96.

This semester Dimond's problems have been made more complicated because three new groups have requested budget allotments. Budget requests have come in for the handbook which will be ready next semester, for expenses for a United Nations meeting conference, and expenses for Forum magazine, a college publication.

Budget requests were submitted to Dimond two weeks ago, and he and a committee composed of Linda McArdle and Chuck Zenardi reviewed them. After their approval, the budgets go to Student Council for final action.

AGS Membership Qualifications Listed; Honor Students Granted Early Privileges At Registration

Students having a grade average of B or higher who wish to join Alpha Gamma Sigma, college honor society, can consult William Richardson, the group sponsor, in S-143G in the near future.

To achieve the status of a semesterly membership, students must first obtain a minimum of 42 grade points, with no grade lower than a C. Physical education is excluded and does not count toward the grade point average.

Permanent membership is open to those who have been in the organization for three out of four semesters, and maintained a grade point average of 3.3 or higher. This may also be granted to students who have held a grade point average of 3.5 or more in all lower division work, even though such students have not met the other requirements for permanent membership, Richardson explained.

Life members of the California Scholarship Federation may become associates of Alpha Gamma Sigma upon entering the college. "This semester, we received only 11 applications from gold-seal bearers and we urge any new student who holds this honor to inquire about the advantages of associate membership," Richardson said.

"All members have the advantage of early registration," Richardson added, "and they perform many services, such as the proposed coaching service, which will be held for one hour a week for students in math, chemistry, physics, history, and English."

President of the organization is Barbara Zook, a dental assistant major; Faith Bunting, vice-president, and James Stettler is secretary-treasurer.

Development of a better understanding between models and photographers is the main purpose of the photographic modeling course here, according to Charles Lamp, photographic instructor.

Besides the actual practice that both models and photographers will acquire, the course will be highlighted by interesting guest lectures scheduled as follows;

Imparting of Practical Knowledge and Experience by Professional Models, by Clara Ledig; Psychological Approach to Expression, by Henry Leff, instructor here; and Working to a Layout, by Emmett Smith, also an instructor here.

There will also be a lecture by a member of a model agency and, tentatively, one by an expert hair stylist, Lamp added.

By the end of the semester the model is expected to have a vast repertoire of poses and expressions, as well as self-confidence and a better understanding of photographic modeling.

The photographer acquires experience in the principles of photo composition and in the appropriate way of posing a model, Lamp said.

The model is presented with a portfolio of her best poses at the end of the course.

With an enrollment of 11 models and 11 photographers, the class meets on Tuesdays from 12 to 1, having in addition a two-hour laboratory.

35 Campus Organizations Will Participate In Friday's Club Activities Board Day Program

By Jacquie Waite

More than 35 clubs will set up exhibits this Friday during college hour at the semi-annual Club Activities Board day, which will be climaxed by a dance Friday night, according to Bob Wendt, CAB chairman.

Exhibits will be set up between Cloud Hall and the Science building to acquaint both new and returning students with the various approved campus organizations and to give the members of the organizations a chance to explain the functions and activities of the group.

In the event of rain, the affair will be held in the men's gymnasium.

Wendt asked that all clubs try to get plaques representing their clubs made so they may be put up as decorations around Smith Hall during the dance. These plaques are put up permanently above the Rampurium and are arranged on a first come, first served basis.

Dancing will be to the music of Sal Carson and his five-piece band in Smith Hall from 9 to 12 p.m. Admission is by Associated Student card, but a student must also have his registration card with him.

If a student has a registration card only the cost will be $1.00. Guest bids are also $1.00 and should be picked up ahead of time in Dean Mary Golding's office.

During the evening, winners of this semester's Associated Women Students, Associated Men Students AS card sales contest will be announced.

Assisting Wendt with preparations for CAB day are Dave Taylor, vice-president; Soledad Camacho, recording secretary; Matsuyo Izumi, corresponding secretary; Vern Huth, parliamentarian; and George Galban, sergeant-at-arms.

Wendt stated that four new offices are being established at the present time. The office of secretariat, a person who will work closely with the clubs, gets information from them and sends out bulletins to the various clubs. This is the most important office being set up, Wendt emphasized.

Others are a cafeteria committee which will organize different clubs to help maintain the cleanliness of the cafeteria, an athletic committee which will make announcements of all athletic events at the college and try to promote interest in them, and a poster committee to review posters and make sure they are accurate and are placed in proper places.

Special Election Next Week Faces Probable Delay

An amendment election, originally scheduled for next Wednesday, March 13, faces postponement for at least a week, according to Hugh Aanonsen, election commissioner.

Whether the election is postponed hinges on action of the Student Council, which reviews all amendments to be put on the ballot in one session.

According to the Associated Student constitution, a list of the amendments to be presented to the voters must be posted in public places one week prior to the election.

In order to meet this requirement, Aanonsen stated that the Constitution Committee and its chairman, George Galvin, would have to have submitted all proposed amendments to Student Council yesterday and have them passed during the one session.

Confirming the fact that there will be an election within the month, Aanonsen has asked for aid from students in operating the polling areas.

Aanonsen stated that he could be reached either through the AS office or through Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities.

Religious Lecture Here On Monday

Sponsored by the college's Christian Science Organization, a free public leeture on the need for practical religion will be presented on Monday, March 11, by lecturer Sylvia N. Poling, according to Gordon Beal, chairman of the group's lecture committee.

A member of the Christian Science Board of Lecturership, Miss Poling will address the college group and the general public in the Golden West YMCA at 333 Eucalyptus Drive, at 8 p.m. Her subject will be Christian Science: The Way to Holiness and Health.

The leeture is being sponsored by the organization in connection with the group's aims to help students and members in the academic world, Beal stated.

Blood Bank Pledges Material For Drive

Irwin Memorial Blood Bank will furnish 12 beds, a staff, and refreshments for blood donors on March 26 and 27, Phil Malnick, chairman of the current campus blood drive, recently announced.

Alpha Phi Omega fraternity will provide coffee, and Irwin Memorial will provide fruit juice, cookies and doughnuts. Members of the fraternity will serve the refreshments, he added.

Minimum goal of the drive, Malnick again stressed, is set at 300 pints of blood.

Two Events Mark May AMS Dates

Two of the outstanding social events of the spring semester at the college, according to Mike Monteith, Associated Men Student president, will take place during the month of May.

Honoring the students' parents and tentatively scheduled for May 8, Dad's Night and the Associated Student smoker will be held at the men's gymnasium. Besides refreshments, the AMS will provide the audience with the college's boxing finals and a blindman boxing match staged by the Inter-Fraternity Council. All the Associated Students' fathers will receive invitations for the event, Monteith said.

On May 17, at the Cow Palace arena with a Western theme, Monteith announced, the college's traditional May Festival will be presented.

A parade, leaving from the campus, is officially to open the May festivities, featuring display booths, dancing, and climaxing the celebration, a King and Queen coronation.

Lucky Is He Whose Psychic, Monetary Incomes Balance

THIS YEAR, more than three million young American men and women will be attending colleges and universities.

Most of them believe themselves to be mature and certain of what their life work will be. Yet, within a few years following graduation, many will find that they have made a grave mistake in choosing their principal course of study.

How is it that they were unable to pick a suitable field for themselves when they first began college? A great many factors enter in, but perhaps the principal reason is that they let materialistic values guide them in their selection.

From the time Americans are born, they are steadily being bombarded with materialism in all forms, and from all directions. Parents, too, make their contribution by carefully and constantly impressing upon them the importance and value of money.

By the time young men and women are ready to enter college, they are thoroughly convinced that the wisest course for them to follow is a field that will promise a lucrative income upon graduation. This, they reason, will insure them not only a good income, but a happy, secure future.

The idea of picking a field simply because it is suitable to their individual needs and interests seldom enters their monetarily-indoctrinated minds, or, if it does happen to creep in, it is hurriedly discarded.

If, by pure chance, they happen also to enjoy the course they have chosen—fine! If not, it doesn't really matter. After all—doesn't money make up for everything?

These same persons are genuinely baffled later by their lack of enthusiasm and success in their chosen high-income fields, once they have them. Most of them eventually change their field and find something they enjoy more—even though it may pay a much lower salary.

Many of the stubborn ones refuse to admit they were wrong. They stay on with their well-paying jobs, usually becoming more bitter and cynical about life in general as the years pass.

By nature, man needs many different outlets for self-expression. He is also much happier at his employment if he is able to express himself satisfactorily.

Psychologists call the enjoyment man receives from his work his "psychic income." The salary received is known as his "monetary income." If both these incomes are high, a person is lucky indeed. Unfortunately, this is seldom the case. There is a critical choice that has to be made.

As we see it, each prospective college student would do well to discover for what he is best suited and interested in before making his choice of a life's work.

From Races To Cabbages To Waves

New Reservoir Surface To House Outdoor Sports

When the Walrus told the Carpenter, "The time has come to speak of many things . . . of cabbages and kings," he might have been referring to the early history of the west campus.

Once the location of a race track, any manner of which may be referred to as the sport of kings, it enjoyed a certain amount of popularity, but all good things must come to an end, and it was given up for more useful purposes. Many a gambler's eyes were wet for days when the old race track was turned into, of all things, a vegetable garden known as the "Cabbage Patch."

So the Walrus' speech was correct except for the minor detail of being backwards. Walruses often have this trouble. But hasn't many a king lost some cabbage at the track?

Some time later the "Cabbage Patch" was given up, and the Public Utility Commission gained possession of the land with the idea of building on it. But when a paper-hanger from across the ocean with a funny hair-comb and ideas to match decided that he was destined to rule the world, the land was used as a training base for the Waves.

After it was proved that the fellow with the hairdomb was a better paper-hanger than a dictator, the Waves had no more use for the land and surrendered it and its buildings, with the consent of the PUC, to the college.

The terra firma owned by the PUC was leased to the college at a nominal fee with the understanding that when the PUC decided to build, the college would evacuate. The time came, the college left. the PUC started to level the land and dig, and for a while it made Mayor Christopher's "Mole Hall" look ridiculous.

Now the west campus is a thing of the past, like the outdoor circus, and it is being replaced by a double reservoir which will be underground. When it is completed, in about two years, the surface will be used for such activities as tennis, volleyball, and other similar outdoor sports.

Two years from now the old west campus will be just a memory, and its rich history will only be known by a few historians who will trace the origin of what a Walrus once told a Carpenter in the tale which occurred "through the looking glass."

The wife who drives from the back seat isn't any worse than the husband who cooks from the dining room table.

Tale Of Magellan

Natives Slapped, Saved, Secured By Benevolents

By Ray Davis

March 6, 1521 — exactly 436 years ago today. A sailing ship, pushing gently forward by a lazy tropical breeze, drifted anxiously into Umatac Bay, a fine natural harbor of the island which is now called Guam.

Disease and death had seriously depleted the numbers of the ship's crew, but the longing for land and laughter, good food and new faces which had conjured up mutinous and murderous intentions in the minds of the men, was at once dissipated by the sight of this tropical paradise; and a mighty cheer carried the treasonous thoughts away on the wind.

The Captain Smiled

Ferdinand Magellan, the ship's captain, not unaware of the danger that he had faced hitherto, smiled happily for the first time in many months, his dream of circumnavigating the globe, though still a dream, remained a possibility.

Guam's natives, their friendly disposition rivaling the sunny charm of the mother isle, scurried out "en masse" in their quaint coracles to welcome Magellan and his mercenaries to their island.

The members of the crew, anxious to impress the uneducated aborignals with the Spanish interpretation of European civilization, immediately commenced to ransack the villages for food, stores and valuables, in the name of Spain and the need for survival.

Guamanians Prove Ingenuity

Though the Guamanians were unhappy about this, they felt that perhaps it was their duty to copy these European cultural methods, which they readily understood, and so while the Spaniards were ashore systematically looting the isle, they swarmed aboard the ship and equally systematically unloaded the vessel of its wealth, proving all the while their ingenuity at adopting foreign customs.

Magellan, greatly disturbed by this presumption, retaliated by sending a task force ashore to discipline the natives (a disciplinary measure which cost the population 50 lives in dead and dying) and promptly named the whole group of islands the "Ladrones," which is Spanish for "thieves."

Soon after this episode Magellan left the "Ladrones" to continue on his epic journey around the world, and the Guamanians were not even a little sorry to see the adventurers leave.

Blissful in their ignorance, they once again resumed their happy-go-lucky pastimes of hunting and fishing, surfing and sun-bathing, not anticipating any further demonstration of the curiosities of civilization.

They were soon to learn, however, that once the mighty Spanish Empire had its colonial teeth into a territory it didn't easily let go.

After many similar visits from vessels containing crews of a like inclination to Magellan's, in the late 17th Century they were subjected to the supreme insult of an attempt by a group of Jesuits priests, accompanied by a strong, armed detachment, who set about Christianizing the natives in spite of their violent disapprobation.

No "No" For Answer

Jesuits in those wild and woolly days refused to take "no" for an answer, and these people were going to "become Christians or by G— they would all wind up in Hell, and soon."

The zealous Jesuits, therefore, backed by the armed might of 17th Century Spain, decided that they would either "gather these wayward black sheep into the flock or exterminate them in the attempt"; and this is what very nearly happened before the Guamanians finally succumbed to Christianity.

There followed a century under Spanish domination in which time the islanders got to understand and appreciate the Christian dogmas, the peculiarities and idiosyncrasies of civilized people, and, under the lazy influence of the tropical climate, the freedom from want, and a regular chew of their favorite narcotic, the betel nut, they even forgot the horrors which had been perpetrated on them a hundred years previously.

In 1898, as a result of the Spanish-American War, Guam was taken by the United States, and the islanders, having learned their lesson the hard way when being converted, decided to "come quietly," and soon became Americanized.

The United States made Guam an

Foresight Chevalier's Paris To Highlight TV Tonight

By Carol Harris

FOR those persons who are color television fiends, NBC has two special color programs planned.

Maurice Chevalier's Paris, to be presented tonight at 8 p.m., is a semi-documentary view of Paris. No one is better qualified to interpret Paris life than Chevalier.

Charles Boyer and Katherine Cornell will star in There Shall Be No Night on the Hallmark Hall of Fame on Sunday, March 17. The locale of the Robert Sherwood Pulitzer Prize winning play has been switched for reasons of timeliness.

Since world attention has recently been focused on Hungary, setting for the play is changed to that locale.

With such notable actors as Boyer and Miss Cornel and with a timely background, a rare opportunity is offered to enjoy the television adaptation of a great play.

During the past few months, television networks have been competing with one another for the "Let's Frustrate the Public" award of the year. They have succeeded admirably.

They are accomplishing this by pitting outstanding shows against each other. For the viewing public, this can lead to psychological disturbances, including nervous breakdowns. From the producer's viewpoint, it causes migraine headaches over low audience ratings.

Yet, the networks persist in this nonsensical practice. One result has been the coming discontinuance of an outstanding show, Noah's Ark.

Although a little too maudlin in spots, the show is good clean viewing for the entire family. So a worthwhile production like this is put in the slot against Wyatt Earp, which ranks as one of the most popular shows in the nation. Naturally, Earp rang the death knell for Noah.

A move has been made toward shifting shows and has met with dire consequences. Danny Thomas was moved to a different time slot because of the beating he was taking from Burns and Allen. The bright boys of the company decided to put him opposite Climax! which boasts one of the largest nation-wide ratings. Thomas' ratings dropped even lower.

Future Police Study Crime Detection

Students Gain Required Experience Necessary For Professional Jobs

Before a student can become proficient in the law enforcing agencies so greatly ballyhooed by television, it is necessary that he gain knowledge and experience in criminology techniques.

In teaching students the art of crime detection and prevention, criminology instructors here work to prepare students for immediate service and for eventual responsible professional positions in law agencies engaged in the administration of criminal justice.

CRIMINOLOGY majors here qualify for ticket-writing careers as shown above.

The method of operation insofar as teaching methods are concerned is relatively simple, namely to take the criminology student through every phase of enforcement procedure.

In a step by step account of the curriculum, the student first receives a basic introductory course, which explores problems involved in law enforcement and corrections, then surveys individual qualification, placement and success in the field.

Police procedure, including photographic methods, follows the introductory course. This is the section of criminal detection vividly underplayed on Dragnet and completely overdone on The Lineup.

Probably the least heeded by the public, yet most important to the same, is the traffic problem. In order to cope with the zany antics of motorists, the criminology student must learn the application of educational, engineering, and enforcement methods to traffic problems, plus analysis of the problems of traffic flow, parking and congestion.

Equally important to crime detection is the cause of crime, its prevention and possible correction. The course involves the orientation of the survey for causes of juvenile delinquency and adult crime and delves into methods of crime prevention and current practices in correctional treatment.

Personal identification is undoubtedly the most involved process of criminal investigation, yet the methods employed result with almost fantastic accuracy in the pinpointing of "one in a million."

Instruction in this segment of detection involves a study of the identification of persons living and dead, fingerprint methods, Bertillonage or anthropological description, and sight recognition.

At this point it must be confessed that the preceding information is fed to the criminology student in one year and covers only half of his training.

Study of criminal law and court procedure is necessary to any law officer. The legal relation of the police function to the prosecuting function, the jurisdiction, and finally the administration of justice is an important section in criminal analysis.

Police planning and administration in the way of organization, coupled with police statistics and methods of combatting crime and vice through criminal investigation, round out the classroom learning of a future officer.

Individual experience as a member of the Campus Police here, which is set up as a subsidiary of the San Francisco Police Department, actually winds up a student's two-year training program.

During this final period the student comes in contact with firearms with stress laid on markmanship and in meeting the requirements for police use.

Shots At Random

DURING the course of some extensive research performed here last week, a 15-year-old article was discovered which pointed out a complete reversal of form in student-cafeteria relations.

The old article lamented, "Our cafeteria won't be able to operate for the rest of the semester if students keep taking cups, silverware and dishes with them."

Now the cafeteria mourns, "Our tables are so cluttered with cutlery and cups that we can hardly operate because students don't bus their used utensils."

Three All-League Vets Return To Raise Ram Hopes For Second Consecutive Big Eight Pennant

With three All Big-Eight League veterans from last year's championship squad as a nucleus, Coach Bill Fischer is currently juggling his line-up in order to find a starting nine for the Rams' first Big Eight double-header against Santa Rosa on Saturday, March 16, at Santa Rosa.

Returning baseballers include first team selections Bob Bandettini and Roger Ferrari, Blair LeMire was a second team choice.

Top Ram Veteran Ferrari Returns To Bolster Team

One of the veterans returning from last season's City College championship baseball team is Roger Ferrari, a clutch hitting, smooth fielding first baseman.

Ferrari was one of the standouts on Coach Bill Fischer's club that grabbed the Big Eight Conference title, and went on to the finals of the Northern California championship. The hustling first sacker hit at a .280 mark, and was a reliable fielder around first base.

He also played in last year's Examiner All-Star game and turned in a fine performance, singling in three out of four trips to the plate. For this outstanding game, Ferrari was selected to play for the United States All-Stars against the New York City All-Stars in the annual Hearst classic at the Polo Grounds. Ferrari went hitless in two times at bat, and his team suffered a 7 to 2 loss at the hands of the New Yorkers.

In Ferrari's opinion, the ballplayers from the West are a little better than the eastern players. The main reason for the difference, Ferrari points out, is that the eastern part of the country has more rain and snow, therefore the players can't get outdoors to practice as much as the westerners.

Bandettini's ability stemmed from relief pitching, winning four games without a loss, to steady hitting and bolstering the outfield with his centerfield play. (Details on Ferrari may be found in the column to the left.)

LeMire cavorted at shortstop, and wielded a heavy bat, ending the season with a .465 average. Observers believed LeMire to be the top shortstop in the league, even though the coaches' post-season votes placed him on the second team—at third base, no less.

Another returnee is Tom Roper, who played on the 1954 Ram squad. Outstanding newcomers mentioned by Fischer include Dick Demarco and Bryan Lyttle, first basemen; Frank Brinkley and Gene Russo, second basemen; Diek Madaglia and Ray Bowers, shortstops; and pitchers Bill Flanigan, Jim Datzman, and Larry Beidon.

Inclement weather during the last few weeks has hampered practice to some extent. This week's games find the Rams playing at St. Mary's on Thursday, and meeting Alameda Air Station on Friday at Balboa field. A game is also scheduled for Saturday at Santa Clara.

Although the Rams lost their first game of the season to the Stanford Frosh by a 2-1 score, Fischer was impressed by the new players despite the loss, in which 16 men saw action. His early season games are "to give every man a chance of making the team, and not just winning."

First requirement of the coach is to regain the adequate pitching that led the team all the way to the Northern California Junior College play-offs. Two successive losses to Coalinga ruined Ram hopes for a chance at the California title.

Ram Netters To Play Sacramento

Opening its league play on March 8, the tennis team will travel to Sacramento for a Big Eight meet against the Panthers.

Although not as strong as in past years, the outlook for this year's team is very promising, according to Coach Roy Diederichsen. He hopes to encourage men with any tennis experience to try out for the team.

The team is currently composed of returning veterans Pete Schwartz, Bob Norwood, and Joe Henderson. Trying for vacant positions are newcomers Jim Howard, Jim Hollister, Jim Schaef, John Isaacs and Aron Tomil.

RAMBLINGS Play-Offs Could Aid Big Eight Hoopsters

By Lou Lucia

A PLAY-OFF system similar to the current plan used by the San Francisco High School Basketball League could prove advantageous to the Big Eight loop.

Before going into the arguments for the play-offs according to the best won and lost records, the team that led the play in the Round Robin (two games with each other team) gets a point for its effort. It must pick up one more point by beating the teams in the play-offs.

However, even the fourth place club may win the title by winning the play-offs and receiving the point that goes with it, and then beating the team that led the Round Robin. Two points are needed for a team to be named the official title holder.

The benefits of the system can be listed as the following:

First: All four colleges in the play-offs would benefit financially.

Second: It would actually decide which is the best team in the league. For instance, West Contra Costa lost to Modesto in its first effort, without the aid of J. D. Banks, high scoring Comet ace who was injured at the time. In the second game the tables were turned when Banks and teammates scored an impressive 52-44 win over the Pirate five.

This second point boils down to one major idea; a team with an injured player is weakened by his absence, especially for a crucial game or games. The play-off would allow the team to be able to come back against the team that defeated it.

Third: During the [illegible] season, City College, WCC, and Modesto were the only colleges with a chance for the title. The other teams were just jockeying for positions. The play-offs would build up interest in the lesser talented teams and again would aid financially.

If a college can't have a championship team, the next best thing is a "possible" winner. Though an upset is always possible, the fans regard the more lost than won teams as "dogmeat" and will not turn out for a loser.

Fourth: An extended schedule would give the fans more sport-viewing time, as there is a lapse between the end of the basketball and beginning of the baseball seasons.

Rams Enter State Tournament

Tealer, Mock Pace Basketballers To Big Eight Tie With Modesto Through 54-48 Final Tilt Victory

BULLETIN

Last Monday night's 63-54 victory over the Modesto Pirates at Sacramento Junior College Gymnasium gave the Rams the Big Eight title and allows the team to compete in the State Junior College Tournament to be held at San Jose starting tomorrow and ending Saturday. Stan Rosenberg paced the Rams in the championship game as he hit 15 points, while the loser's Jim Thomas scored 30. The college five will meet Pierce College in the opening round.

By Lou Lucia

City College gained a tie for the Big Eight Championship by defeating the Modesto Pirates, 54-48, at Modesto last Friday, before a crowd estimated at 1,400 fans. West Contra Costa dropped to third place by virtue of last week's loss to the Oakland Thunderbirds.

Al Mock's set shot, 2:50 into the second half, put the Rams into a 27-25 lead, which was never surrendered as the game progressed.

Playing before the partisan home town fans, the Rams started off very shaky. Bob Tealer's consistent long set shots settled the team, as the Rams finally caught up with the Modesto five at 11-11, and 13-13 with seven minutes left in the opening half.

Two free throws by Rich Russell again tied the game at 17-17, and Doug North hit on a set shot to give the Rams their first lead. The Pirates' Fred Nugent meshed three free throws and a jump shot to edge the home team ahead at 23-21.

With only one second to go in the half, Tealer took the ball at the end of the key and let fly with a jump shot. The ball went through the hoop, but the referees disagreed on whether or not the ball was in the air when the buzzer sounded. The basket was ruled good and the teams left the court with a 23-23 tie.

After Mock's important second half bucket, the Rams increased to a 39-28 lead. Such a margin against the classy Modesto team was short-lived as Jim Thomas almost single-handedly closed the gap to only four points.

Three-quarters of the game was gone when 6'9" North fouled out. This could have worked to a Modesto advantage, excepting Mal McCormiek's fine defense of Thomas and the surrounding taeties used by Stan Rosenberg and Russell. The Rams went into a semi-stall which forced the Modesto team to play their type of game, for the last 10:55.

Only eight points, (five by the Rams —three by the Pirates), were scored in the ensuing 5:40.

Vic DiGiovanni, who was held well in check by Mock, fouled out with 5:18 left and stock in the Rams went way up. The college team no longer half-stalled but went into a full delay of the game. The eight-point lead was retained almost until the game ended, mostly through the ball-handing and foul shooting efforts of Rosenberg and Russell.

Only three players reached double figures in the scoring column; Thomas 20, Tealer 18 and Mock 12. Thomas also was the top rebounder with 11. Tealer again trailed with nine rebounds.

Thomas looked the part of one of the most polished ball-players in the league, shooting only when he had a decent shot, and then usually making it. The same could be said of Tealer, who proved outstanding in the crucial contest.

An interesting aspect of the San Francisco-Modesto basketball games is the fact that neither team could win on its home court. In the pre-season Modesto Tourney the Rams beat the Pirates at home, the same as they did last Friday night. In between, Modesto took the measure of City College here, by a 51-48 ending.

New Cage Ruling May Weaken Loop

A sidelight to the recent City College-Modesto basketball clashes was the fact that a new out-of-state eligibility ruling which would affect all conference colleges may soon go into effect.

The ruling states that any out of state athletes wishing to compete in California two-year sports would have to establish one full year of residence before coming eligible for such competition.

In the past, Modesto in particular has built up numerous strong basketball and tennis teams with the use of non-resident talent, and this college would be most profoundly affected by the ruling.

It was further rumored that the Big Eight has many dissenting votes on this regulation, and may vote it down at the conference meeting in June. Principal objection reportedly is a belief that regardless of how out-of-staters may help one college more than another, restriction of same would serve only to weaken overall competition in the loop.

This season's Modesto basketball team had four top New Yorkers, center Jim Thomas, forward Shelly Palmer and guards Rey Maduro and Vic DiGiovanni.

Only three professional football teams have never entered the championship playoff, Pittsburgh, Baltimore and San Francisco.

Bob Tealer Makes Preparations For Cage Tournament

Bob Tealer, this semester's Men's Athletic Commissioner, is currently making plans for a basketball tournament which will be made up of teams from the clubs and fraternities at City College.

The games will be played on week nights in the men's gymnasium, and trophies will be awarded to the top teams.

Commissioner Tealer is quite a basketball player himself. The 21-year-old, 6'3" forward is one of the reasons why the City College Rams are currently one of the top teams in the Big Eight conference.

Tealer is one of the circuit's best rebounders and boasts a deadly jump shot that has made him one of the team's top scorers this season. He started playing basketball at Bret Harte grammar school, attended Portola Junior High and then went on to Mission High, where he was selected to the All-City quintet in his senior year.

Upon graduation from Mission in 1954, Tealer entered the University of California, where he was a standout on the 1955 freshman squad. Tealer entered City College last year, but he expects to return to the university next fall. An education major, he hopes someday to teach math or science in either a grammar or high school.

Ram Five Beats Bulldogs, Indians

City College added two victories to its basketball record by defeating San Mateo here, 67-59, on February 26, and a non-league triumph over the Stanford Frosh by 65-61 on February 23, at the loser's court.

San Mateo's Larry Blanchard took high point honors with 22, as Rich Russell led the home team with 17. With the score tied at 6-6 early in the game, Al Mock sank three consecutive buckets to give the Rams a lead they never surrendered. Mock scored 16 points, while Stan Rosenberg competed the quartet of point-leading guards by hitting 13.

Russell also led the scoring in the Stanford Frosh tiff with a total of 18 points. The Rams made an outstanding 33 of 41 free throw attempts—three more points than they scored by field goals—which helped to down the fast breaking Frosh squad.

Former Ram Ace Signs Bonus Pact

By Nick Peters

Stan Johnson, former Ram baseball ace, recently signed a Chicago White Sox contract for a reported $4,000 bonus. Johnson, an outfielder, was signed by Dario Lodigiani, ex-infielder for the Seals, Athletics, and White Sox, now the chief Bay Area scout for the Chisox.

At the college in 1955 Johnson performed superbly and subsequently was voted to the Big Eight Conference All-Star team as centerfielder. During that season Stan also pitched for the college nine, winning four games while losing none. Bill Fischer, City College baseball mentor, credits Stan's fine clutch pitching as the reason for his team's success in 1955.

A left-handed swinger, he was unparalleled as a hitter at the college—batting .483, and tying for the RBI leadership with 15.

Following his banner season here, he matriculated at U.S.F., not playing baseball for the Dons, but instead playing for the Klamath Falls entry in an independent league and batting a robust .392 under the tutorship of Dino Restelli, former Seal and Pirate outfielder.

The White Sox, under terms of contract, optioned Johnson to the Colorado Springs Sky Sox of the Class A Western League. When asked what he thought of Johnson's chances of making a name for himself in pro ball, Coach Fischer replied, "if he lives up to his potential and applies himself, he's a cinch to go a long way in baseball, because he can run, field, and hit exceptionally well."

Kaakua Tells Council Plans For Conducting College Part In Miss San Francisco Quest

With the announcement that the San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce now has its 1957 Miss San Francisco contest plans under way, Hiram Kaakua, college representative of the Junior Chamber, last week told members of the Student Council that he planned on having three women students from the college participate in the contest.

"At least one social event is planned here in connection with the contest," Kaakua said.

Council members were notified of Election Committee plans for a special Constitutional Amendment Election, tentatively scheduled for Wednesday, March 13, by committee head Hugh Aanonsen. Letters have been sent to all campus organizations requesting them to file requests for any amendments to the constitution they feel are needed, Aanonsen said.

In presenting his committee's report, Aanonsen stressed "the importance of constantly considering the need for revision in the constitution in order to insure its effectiveness and benefit to the Associated Students."

Before being included on the ballot, all recommended amendments must be passed by a two-thirds vote of the council. Any AS member may recommend and petition for an amendment, Aanonsen added.

Finance Chairman Brower Dimond presented five more budget proposals to the council for approval and informed council members that "this semester's total AS budget will be operating on $5,000 less than the budget for fall, 1956."

Those budgets passed by council were as follows: Little Theater, $1,000; Recreation Association, $442; golf, $327.50; intra-mural sports, $300, and physical education, $350.

Student Council has so far approved budgets of 14 organizations and will be expected to consider 17 more before all budget business is complete, Dimond said. "I hope to have the budget balanced by this week," he added.

Main requests for AS funds that have yet to be considered by council include those of the Campus Police and the Rally Committee.

In other council business, AS Vice-President Metta Weddleton appointed an AS Scholarship Committee to handle the business of providing for the distribution of the new $125 awards obtained from AS funds.

Veteran Enrollment Here Reaches 1400

Approximately 1,400 students are attending the college this semester under the Public Law 550, Robin L. Dunn, veterans counselor for the college, said last week.

This rush of veterans to attend the college under their service benefits began soon after the Korean war, reached its peak during the spring semester of 1956 with 1,600 men, and has been decreasing ever since, Dunn added.

Another fact Dunn stressed was the importance of veterans watching their attendance records at college.

Presidio Clinician Visits Dentistry Students

Outline Of New Acrylic Process Shown To Class

By Kaj Kristoffersen

Mrs. Mavis Bailey, assistant to Colonel Clare T. Budge, dental officer at the Presidio Post Clinic, visited the dental assisting class here last week.

Her purpose in visiting the college was to demonstrate to dental assisting students how to make acrylic trays for false teeth.

Before outlining the process, Mrs. Bailey pointed out that the plastic-like acrylic material has increased in popularity during the past 10 years, primarily because it can't crack or break. For this reason, it is rapidly replacing the baseplate material previously used.

First step in the process is to take impressions of the mouth. From these impressions, an acrylic tray is made. A bite rim is then moulded on the tray and, finally, the false teeth are set into the rim.

Porcelain teeth are still in general usage, she indicated, because it is found that chewing gum and similar materials will stick to acrylic teeth.

Following the demonstration, Ruth Inskipp, dental assisting instructor here, addressed her class.

Summarizing the crucial need for dental assistants, Mrs. Inskipp reviewed the fact that an increase both in population and the number of dentists practicing in the state has correspondingly provided openings for trained young women.

"This college is the only school in the city," she declared, "which is recommended by both the San Francisco Dental Association and the American Dental Assistants Association."

Referring to an article from Jobs In California Magazine, "Another factor in the continuing demand for dental assistants is the comparatively rapid turnover. Because dental assistants usually are attractive, alert young women with excellent psychological adjustment and pleasant personalities, they usually are among the first to marry.

"Pay is entirely dependent upon the young woman. An alert girl with initiative and the desire to apply herself can find unlimited opportunity.

"As additional advantages, managing a dentist's office provides a professional social status and pleasant surroundings in which to work. These advantages also tend to increase the opportunities of the field.

"The work requires versatility and application, however, and is not easy. To succeed, a young woman must be able to receive patients, to manage the business side of the dentist's practice and keep the office books in addition to laboratory work and duties in the operating rooms," Mrs. Inskipp quoted.

Practical application of the techniques outlined by Mrs. Bailey brought the class period to a close with each student making an acrylic plate.

Placement Office Starts Summer Job Disbursement; Amori Seeking Skilled Workers To Fill Openings

Applications for summer employment in a wide range and variety of jobs are now being processed by the placement office here, Joseph Amori, placement director, announced recently.

Job applicants are requested to report to the placement office immediately in S-188. All applicants must complete the following information on their application form: personal data sheets, three rating sheets, and must make appointments for personal interviews, Amori said.

Resorts, recreational camps, government activities, heavy construction firms, travel agencies, and steamship lines offer excellent opportunities for summer jobs to those who are qualified.

Qualifications center around the physical aspects, intellectual factors, emotional stability, and social balance. Experienced personnel are preferred to beginners in all lines of endeavor, Amori stated.

In addition, students majoring in mathematics, physics, and chemistry with a grade of A or B will have an excellent opportunity for government jobs in the Bay Area. General aptitude tests will be given to all applicants in these categories. The salaries range from $285 to $350 per month, Amori added.

Engineering majors, especially those in Civil Engineering, are being recruited by both government and private agencies for highway construction and private industry for extensive construction projects in various parts of the state of California.

These jobs pay a maximum of $300 to $350 per month plus allowance for subsistence and traveling expenses. These applicants will be tested and must present personal data sheets and evaluation blanks from their counselor or from their departmental head.

Qualified men and women applicants who are majoring in the social sciences, education, physical education and recreation fields have a large assortment of jobs to pick from in summer camps, both public and private, throughout the entire Pacific Coast area.

Applicants with swimming, sports, dramatic, musical, photographic, and recreational skills are especially needed. Older and mature students with experience will find these areas lucrative for them, since top management positions pay from $350 to $450 per month. Inexperienced personnel receive approximately $100 per month plus board and lodging.

Recreation Association Discloses Spring Plans

Among activities scheduled by the Recreation Association in the near future are a conference in Los Angeles, March 8, 9 and 10; a fencing playday at Balboa High School on March 15; basketball playdays in Santa Rosa on March 9 and 16; and an archery, badminton, and tennis playday at College of Marin on April 6.

Recreation Association council members for the present semester are Jean Krieg, president; Beverly Wilson, vice-president; Marjorie Saba, secretary, and Carol Goldenberg, treasurer.

There are few persons with courage enough to admit that they haven't got it.

Counseling Dates Open Next Week

Students here who wish to receive early registration numbers, and make appointments with counselors to plan a program for the fall semester, are advised to apply for appointments on Wednesday, March 13, at 8 a.m. in the reserve reading room of the library, Waddington Blair of the counseling department announced this week.

Those applying for appointments are requested to form a line at the north entrance of the library. At this time, forms will be distributed to students, who fill in the hours they will be able to see their counselors.

Students will then proceed to the tables inside the reserve reading room that have their counselor's name cards on them. They will then be able to obtain appointments and file their forms.

Students will be assigned registration numbers according to the order in which forms are filed. The number will be retained by the student if he keeps his appointment.

Those making appointments after March 13 should inquire at the counseling office, S-160. Applications for appointments will be accepted during the remainder of the semester, Blair said.

important naval base from which it could keep a friendly eye on the Pacific. As American civilization progressed, so also did Guam's.

Schools were set up, a sanitary system installed, and as the years rolled along and the American military and civilian personnel increased on the island, refrigerators and rent-collectors, convertibles and even Cadillacs, appeared.

While the Guamanians welcomed these American innovations, the one that they did not welcome was the high-pressure "do the job and do it fast" method, which was also introduced.

A naturally indolent people, they had never felt the necessity to work, and though they were only too keen to own cameras and convertibles they were not prepared to be shaken out of their naturally lethargic attitude which they felt suited them best.

Following World War II, occupation by the Japanese, and a triumphant liberation by the American forces, they recommenced to agitate for American citizenship, feeling that, as their island was being used as a storage depot for nuclear warheads, and the tourist trade had been completely strangled by fantastic security measures, their claims were more than justified.

On August 1, 1950, the United States acceded to their demand and gave all Guamanians born after 1898 American status.

Today, many Guamanians come to America both to study and to work. Our own multi-national college of a course has its quota of them, eight in all.

San Francisco even distributes the Guam Daily News, but the people are still a little doubtful as to whether they wouldn't prefer betel nut to chewing gum, ox-drawn carts to Cadillacs, and their former natural indolence to the hectic scramble of streamlined, nickel-plated, Americanization.

Their philosophy is best summed up in the words of a Guamanian patriarch, "It's not that we're lazy, we're just tropical."

Student Leaders To Represent College In Regional Meet

Student officers representing the Associated Men Students, the Associated Women Students, and the sophomore and freshman classes will attend a regional meeting of the Northern California Student Government Association at San Jose Junior College this Saturday.

Eight separate workshops will divide the meeting into separate groups, Metta Weddleton, vice-president of the Associated Students, said. Their specific titles will be as follows: AMS, AWS, Finance, Athletics, Student Government, Clubs and Activities and Publicity.

This method of dividing conferences into workshops enables student officers attending to confer on similar problems which face them in their respective student government positions, Miss Weddleton added.

Acting as chairman for the AMS workshop will be Mike Monteith, president of the AMS here, who will have the job of planning its program. "Letters will be sent to colleges in the local area to gain suggestions for an agenda for the workshop," Monteith stated.

Also representing the AMS will be Vice-Presidents Chuck Zanordi and Bill Allen, Treasurer Art Paul, and Secretary Hal Dimond.

Other student officers of the college who will be present at the meeting are Debbie Rudser, president of the AWS; Gordon Beal, president of the sophomore class; Kathy Mulligan, president of the freshman class, and some student council members, Miss Weddleton stated.

AWS Starts New Social Program

With Personality Plus for a theme, the Associated Women Students will begin a series of four social hours this Friday during college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m., in S-315, according to Darlene Enfield, program chairman.

Highlighting the first affair will be guest speaker Connie Marvellais, graduate of the college, who is currently stylist at the Emporium and was previously at Joseph Magnin.

Invitations will be sent to 100 "Big" and "Little Sisters" for each of the social affairs. Miss Enfield stated that the purpose of these hours is to develop friendships.

Successive social hours have been scheduled for March 22, April 5 and April 12. Miss Enfield added that faculty members have also been invited to attend.

Veterans To Meet During College Hour

All veterans who are interested in forming a campus club are requested to meet in S-100 this Friday during college hour, Bob Varni, president of the Associated Students, announced last week.

Initial plans for organizing the club will be taken up, Varni said, adding that the nomination of officers will probably take place.

In a poll conducted here last semester, veterans that were polled were, by a 5 to 1 ratio, in favor of starting an organization of their own. Two students here, Tom Haller and Bob Ohlsen, are seeking to accomplish this end, Varni said.

All Sports Rally Honors Ram Cage Champions Friday

A tribute to all Spring sports will be given this coming Friday during college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m., at the men's gymnasium.

The occasion will be the All-Sports Rally developed by Rally Commissioner Tillie Gandert and Sponsor John Elworthy. Speakers will include Coaches Grover Klemmer, golf; Roy Diederichsen, tennis; Lou Vasquez, track, and Bill Fischer, baseball, giving short talks on their respective teams.

Entertainment will be provided by the college band, headed by Manager Bob Kallejian, Student Director Gary Smith, Secretary Carol Matson, Assistant Manager Lloyd Gomez, Assistant Student Director Herman Boxerbaum, Librarian Jacqueline Haney, and under the direction of Meyer Cahn.

Cheerleaders Carol Atkins, Audrey Bocek, Sue Hinkle, Portia Goodkind, and Anabelle Welch, plus a member from each sorority, will also entertain the audience.

Highlighting the program as a special feature will be the Ram cagers, champions of the Big Eight Conference. Coach Syd Phelan will introduce his squad individually to give the members "recognition for a job well done."

Basketballers Bob Teaier, Mal McCormick, Gary Merritt, Bill Wooten, Doug North, John Henry, Al Mock, Rich Russell, Stan Rosenberg, Rich De Conti, Jim O'Conner, and Al Vidal will all be in the spotlight during the program.

Miss Gandert remarked that the rally will be free and its main purpose is to emphasize the importance of Spring sports, which are usually lacking in attendance and general student spirit. In Elworthy's opinion it will be a rally "worth attending, considering the variety of entertainment for this Spring sports spectacular."

Darlene Reitz Leads AWS Card Sales Team To Victory For Second Trophy

Darlene Reitz received her trophy at the Club Activities Board dance last Friday for selling a total of 45 cards while leading the Associated Women Student team victory over the Associated Men Student ticket salesmen. It marked the second time that Miss Reitz has won the award.

This spring the AWS sold a total of 64 cards. John Kelly, of the men's group, won the A[illegible] trophy for selling 22 cards. But despite Kelly's contribution, the AMS sold only 41.

Besides Miss Reitz and Kelly, this semester's teams included for the AWS, Soledad Camacho, Pat Jones, Margie Saba, Anne Smith, Ellie Smith, and Paula Villa.

Selling cards for the AMS were Harold Dimond, Freddie Hicks, Joe Saporita, Arthur Paul, Bob Wendt and Chuck Zanardi.

In the eight semesters of AWS-AMS card sales competition, each group has now won four times.

Associated Student card sales, although greater than last spring's totals, has not yet reached the record of 2,400 set during the fall of 1956.

"Nevertheless, as of March 6, 1,820 cards have been sold," according to Dwane Shippey, AS card sales chairman. "This surpasses our attempted goal of $8,500 by $600, with a total of $9,100 received."

May Festival Theme Contest Sponsored By AMS Ends Wednesday

A Name-the-Theme contest for the May Festival is currently being sponsored by the Associated Men Students, according to Mike Monteith, AMS president.

"Themes must be appropriate for the parade, booths, and dance," Monteith stated.

Entries must be turned in to Dean Ralph Hillsman's office no later than 2 p.m. next Wednesday, March 20, with the time and date specified on them.

Judges for the contest are the officers of the AMS: Chuck Zanardi, vice-president; Harold Dimond, recording secretary; Art Paul, treasurer; Joe Saparita, corresponding secretary, and Monteith.

Giraudoux Play On Stage Here Friday

Dawn Roberts In Starring Role Of French Comedy

Curtain times for The Madwoman of Chaillot, a comedy-fantasy of the future, written by the Frenchman, Jean Giraudoux, will be at 8 p.m. this Friday and Saturday, March 15 and 16, according to Michael Griffin, drama instructor.

To be presented in the college's little theater, the play is a poetic and comic fable set in the twilight zone of the not-quite-true. Tickets for the performances may be obtained without charge upon presentation of an Associated Student card. A charge of $1.00 will be made to non-card holders, Griffin announced.

The plot concerns a group of dishonest promoters who plan to tear up Paris in order to unearth oil which a prospector supposedly has located in the neighborhood. Their plans come to the attention of The Madwoman of Chaillot, who is ostensibly abnormal in her mind but is soon shown to be the very essence of practical goodness and common sense.

Seeing through the scheme, she insists that the world is being turned into an unhappy place by those who are greedy for worldly goods and power. At a tea attended by other "mad" women of Paris, she brings together representatives of the "despoilers of the earth" and has them tried and condemned to extermination.

One by one, the culprits are lured by the scent of oil and the prospect of undreamed of riches into a bottomless pit which opens out of her cellar. This exodus of the wicked is accompanied by a triumph of joy, justice, and love.

Portraying the Madwoman and three "countesses" will be Dawn Roberts, Lin Cripps, Stephanie Koppe, and Melanie Mead. Pierre and Irma, portrayed by Leigh Guerra and Pat Dulcich, symbolize youthful, eternal love, Griffin announced as he listed the cast.

Also included in the cast will be Bob Phalen as the President, Nick Toomel as the Baron, Larry Bryggman as the broker, Dave Tipton as the prospector; Ron Allen, a sergeant on the beat; Louis Mayo, the waiter; George Cooney, the doorman, and vagabonds of Paris will be Mel Rasmussen as the

Blood Fund Donation Centers At AS Offices In Bungalow

Donation center for the City College Blood Fund drive scheduled from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. on Tuesday, March 26, and Wednesday, March 27, will be located in B-1 and B-2, Phil Malnick, chairman of the drive, announced last week.

Donors will register in the small office adjoining the Associated Student office in B-1. They will then be directed to the council chambers in B-2 where medical facilities are provided.

Giving support to the drive, the Faculty Association has agreed to transfer blood from the original Faculty Fund to the new account. Howard Schoon will represent the faculty and Malnick will represent the students.

For the drive, Irwin Memorial has requested that time schedules be posted on campus. Students wishing to contribute are requested to choose a time best suited to their class schedules and enter their names in the corresponding spaces provided.

These schedules will be relative, and students are not expected to arrive at the exact time specified. The schedules are only to act as a guide so the Irwin Memorial can provide the necessary equipment and send an adequate staff to process donors with maximum efficiency, Malnick added.

Faculty donations will be by appointment, Malnick stated, adding that Alpha Phi Omega fraternity will provide coffee and members of the fraternity will serve refreshments to all donors.

Contributors under 21 years of age must have written permission from their parents or guardians. These notes may be given at the door or mailed in to City College Blood Fund, City College of San Francisco, Ocean and Phelan Avenues, San Francisco 12, California.

CAB Sets Deadline Date For Filing Charter Petitions

Deadline for filing petitions with the Club Activities Board to secure an on-campus charter is tomorrow, Bob Wendt, CAB president, announced last week.

Petitions should be filed in duplicate and copies may be sent to the CAB box in B-1. Petitions must contain an up-to-date membership list, including the number of Associated Student members in the group, Wendt declared.

If an organization receives funds from the AS it must have 100 per cent AS membership. Organizations which do not receive funds from the AS must have an AS membership of 51 per cent, Wendt stated.

Organizations which have not submitted charter petitions by the original deadline of February 28, must pay a fine of one doliar to the student bank in order to be chartered.

Alpha Eta Tau, a Home Economic club, is the only new club to file a charter for on-campus recognition. Sigma Tau Sigma, which has been off-campus since last year, has indicated a desire to return, Wendt said.

Amendment Balloting Postponed Until May

Failure in the form of action, or the lack of it, in presenting amendments for the Associated Student Constitution caused Election Commissioner Hugh Aanonsen to postpone the proposed amendment election until the regular May elections.

Prior to the postponement, an election had been called for today. The election would have come off, as scheduled, Aanonsen said, had not the resignation of Constitution Committee Chairman Ginny Hase delayed action.

George Galvin, who replaced Miss Hase two weeks ago, was unable to bring to the Student Council any proposed amendments by last Tuesday.

Fall Pre-Registration Scheduling Opens Today

More than 2,000 students of the college are expected to sign up today in the reserve reading room of the library for counseling appointments and early registration numbers for the fall 1957 semester, according to Waddington Blair of the counseling department here.

Beginning tomorrow, students interested in making appointments should apply at the counseling office, Room S-160, Blair added.

Registration numbers assigned students at this time will be retained by the student if the counseling appointment is kept as scheduled.

Super Inch, PG&E Film, Here Friday

Super Inch, produced by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, will be the featured film during college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m., this Friday in Room S-136, according to Madison Devlin, audio visual aids instructor here.

Released by PG&E four years ago, Super Inch is the story of the laying of a 1,600-mile 34-inch pipe linking Northern California and the oil fields of Texas and New Mexico.

Shots showing the fabrication of the giant steel pipe, transporting its huge lengths by flat car from the Bay Area to the Mohave Desert, and problems in terrain, combined with humorous incidents on the desert highlight the film.

Veterans Organization Will Create New Interest In AS

IN A POLL taken here last semester, many veterans indicated they would be interested in forming a campus organization of their own.

This Friday during college hour, all interested persons will meet to initiate club plans and nominate officers.

Veterans have known a general disinterest in student organizations here in the past—mainly because of their age difference.

Since they are older, there is a tendency for them to feel that they will have little in common with the average 18 or 19 year old college group member.

Those who have been interested in joining a college organization usually balk at the thought of undergoing an initiation. Most veterans here are 23 or 24 years old, and, as a matter of pride, will not submit themselves to hazing and embarrassment by students who are four, or five years younger.

Since veterans comprise approximately 25 per cent of the total student enrollment here, they should be represented in the campus organizational picture.

By forming their own club, veterans can take an active part in student activities, and greatly benefit themselves and the college.

2nd Rate Spirit For 1st Rate Teams

THIS SEMESTER, as in the past, students here are displaying a distinct lack of spectator interest in their athletic teams.

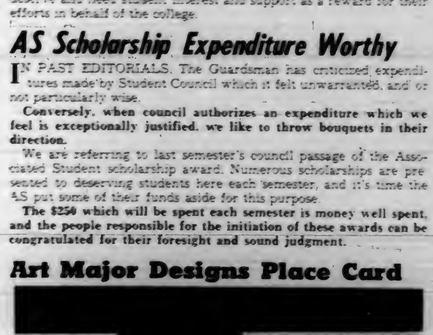
Considering the effort and enthusiasm put forth by team members, coaches, the Rally Committee, and all the other persons contributing their time, it seems a shame that more students don't show an interest.

Spectator apathy might be understandable if the college had second-rate teams, but, as is constantly proved each season, this certainly isn't the case.

At some of the home games here, visiting team rooter sections are nearly as well represented as our own.

Fine college teams, like those being turned out here each season, deserve and need student interest and support as a reward for their efforts in behalf of the college.

AS Scholarship Expenditure Worthy



IN PAST EDITORIALS, The Guardsman has criticized expenditures made by Student Council which it felt unwarranted, and/or not particularly wise.

Conversely, when council authorizes an expenditure which we feel is exceptionally justified, we like to throw bouquets in their direction.

We are referring to last semester's council passage of the Associated Student scholarship award. Numerous scholarships are presented to deserving students here each semester, and it's time the AS put some of their funds aside for this purpose.

The $250 which will be spent each semester is money well spent, and the people responsible for the initiation of these awards can be congratulated for their foresight and sound judgment.

Art Major Designs Place Card

A striking new place card has been designed by Jim Stettler for the benefit of City College students. This attractive yet simple tent-like card boasts an abstract design of the face of the Science Building and the Gold Seal of the college. The design, which is a combination of letterpress and engraving, is situated in the lower left-hand corner of the card.

The place card may be used for meetings of the Associated Women Students, sorority teas and fashion shows, and all other functions of the college.

A major in commercial art, Stettler is the creator of this and many new ideas in the field of art. To him, art is nothing new. He designed a poster for the May Festival last year and numerous posters for Proposition A during the recent bond election.

Presently, Stettler is designing a cover for Forum, the literary magazine published annually by students of the college.

Following his graduation in June, Stettler, a member of Alpha Gamma Sigma, plans to make advertising art his career.

More Men Seek Secretarial Title

Eleven Register In Business Course, Offer Employers Advantages Of Ability To Travel, Handle Crises

Members of the masculine gender here seem to be trying to get back what once rightfully belonged to the male sex . . . the title of secretary.

With many of the American men fighting in World War I, the American female established for herself equal rights, and the secretarial position is just one of the many captured and retained by the weaker sex.

Up until this semester, this secretarial women's paradise had not been invaded by the men of the college, but the spring enrollment shows 11 men registered in the pre-secretarial course, Business 80A.

The reason for previously low enrollment of men in the shorthand classes is easily explained. For, although men equal women as secretaries and sometimes even surpass them, women seem to possess a superior quality of patience.

It is not too rare in New York to see male secretaries in big offices. The male can offer advantages to the employer of being able to travel, not quitting to marry or have a family, and the ability to deal with more circumstances than can the women.

Tragedy Triumphs On Producer's Showcase

MUSIC lovers are given the opportunity to view a major symphony orchestra at work when they turn their television dials to Channel 9 each Friday night at 8:30.

At that hour, KQED presents Prelude: San Francisco Symphony. The program, the inner works of a symphony orchestra, features the music musicians, and instruments of the symphony in addition to guest artists. Earl Murray, associate conductor of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, acts in the capacity of commentator.

Unfortunately, March 29 is the terminating date for this series. Final programs will be based on romantic and contemporary music and the subject of conducting. Guest conductor Enrique Jorda, composer Darius Milhaud, violinist David Abel, and pianist David del Tredici.

When Shakespeare penned Romeo and Juliet a few hundred years ago, little did he dream that one day more than a million people would be able to witness a single performance.

Thanks to the medium of television, this did happen on Producer's Showcase recently. The outcome was an emotional and moving portrayal of the tragedy of young love.

Although slightly cut for the TV version, Romeo and Juliet lost none of the original beautiful qualities of its prose. The balcony and death scenes are as emotion-packed today as when they were first written.

Members of the Old Vic repertory company of England were the players in this traditional performance of Shakespeare's tragedy. A moving and flawless interpretation of the lovely but doomed Juliet was given by Claire Bloom. Miss Bloom did not attempt, as do many of Shakespeare's heroines, to give an overly-dramatic performance in an effort to keep the attention focused on a single character.

John Neville's Romeo was not quite on a level with Miss Bloom's Juliet. He appeared to be a trifle stilted in the delivery of his lines. During some of the love scenes, he had all the warmth of a wet fish on dry land. For the most part, however, his performance was admirable as the young and dashing lover.

From the viewer's point of view, the fact that some of the men, particularly Mercutio, were at times inarticulate detracted from the enjoyment. During the opening brawl scene, it was impossible to construe in the entirety everything which was said, although the gist of it could be retained.

Many persons may contend that the entire production was too mannerly and self-conscious. This mannerly type of acting is a welcome change from the underplaying of Dragnet and the slurred guttural acting of such "realistic" characters as Marlon Brando and James Dean.

On the whole, the costuming was beautiful, the direction was excellent, and the acting was of the highest caliber any theater here or abroad has to offer. Romeo and Juliet will undoubtedly be one of the television highlights of 1957.

Magnificent Shades Of 'Marty' And His Ilk

Stagnant Greetings Jam Merry-Go-Round Wheels

By Ray Davis

These United States were founded on a reaction to stimuli directly leading to a continuous evolution in all phases of community, economic and intellectual growth.

Increasingly, more numerous changes, varying from the infinitesimal to the cataclysmic, are still taking place on this hectic American merry-go-round. They range from cancer research to happiness pills, I Like Elvis buttons to the study of nuclear fusion.

Even our vocabulary is continuously being added to or subtracted from; a word is added to describe some hitherto undiscovered phenomena, another is dropped because it is considered archaic. But wait, do we perceive conservative thinkers sprinkled among our limited audience sorrowfully shaking their sparsely decorated heads, and mutton-chop whiskers?

Fellow conservatives, hope may linger yet, for there is one time honored institution which at the time of going to press has not been eaten into by the termites of time.

The institution to which we refer is, of course, the indiscriminate method we use to greet our friends, relatives, acquaintances and creditors. (It only applies to the latter when they can't be avoided.)

Who among us, when dragging his way up that final precipitous hill to an S o'clock class after a long weekend of skiing or a lost weekend of Khayamic carousing, has not met some member of the stay-at-home intelligentsia bustling brightly by him and yelling happily in his confused ear, "Hi there pal, how are you?"

True to form, you will turn a reluctant network of red and grey—surrounding a blob of fire which stands in place of an eye—on the rare creature who has just addressed you. Angry maledictions will be choked with an effort in the throat. You will murmur a weakly pathetic, "Fine, how are you?" as he goes bounding gaily by up to class.

No matter what the circumstances are or however recent your last contact was with the person addressing or being addressed, the greeting almost invariably goes something like this as you cough and sputter sympathetically over each other.

John Doe: "How are you?"

A. N. Other: "Just fine, how are you?"

John Doe: "Oh, just fine."

What originality! What fluency!! What stagnation!!!

Another equally insipid method of greeting which seems equally permanent, especially among the male members of the species, runs something like this and can be repeated at periodic intervals during the course of the day.

John Doe: "What's doing?"

A. N. Other: "Aw, nothing, what's doing with you?"

Then peculiarly enough there quite often follows a lengthy and detailed discourse on "nothing much." Magnificent shades of "Marty" and his ilk.

A fitting and tragically funny ending to this treatise on durability and change may best be described by a meeting between an acquaintance of ours and a friend he was visiting in the hospital who had just been seriously injured in an automobile accident. On entering his friend's room, he inquired sympathetically, "Hi, John, how——?" John replied, constant to the last, "Fine, thanks, Bill. How are you?"

The very next day John died.

Shots At Ramdom

BOLSTERING our nearly depleted reserves at the local blood bank is a project which approaches a new high in humanity and civic-mindedness here.

Committee members and all advocates of the set-up which provides for the accommodation of blood donors on campus deserve congratulations for their efforts thus far.

Also worthy of recognition is the admirable discretion employed in publicizing the current drive. While red-lettered "blood" signs are posted in conspicuous locations almost everywhere on campus, one area suffers a complete absence of blood drive publicity.

Amid the applause of the timid one week, and the finicky, our cafeteria remains bloodless.

ANTHROPOLOGICAL NOTE: Instructor Kenneth Hobbs confides that a sure-fire cure for boredom exists at the city zoo. Here, he says, we may view one of the greatest impromptu performances on earth by simply observing the antics of "primates who come to watch the antics of primates."

LATEST HIGHLIGHT in the life of "that nice average American," Elvis Presley, concerns his correspondence with Selective Service officialdom. Elvis, it seems, no longer signs off letters to the draft board with "Truly Yours." Even he realizes the inanity in over-emphasizing an accepted fact.

WHAT TRUTH LIES in the rumor that an exceptionally noisy chemistry class here received a CO2 blast from the fire extinguisher when the duo created interrupted their telephoning instructor?
